a. Thruout the drive there shall be concentration points as for example a week devoted to New Jersey, another to Section 1, etc. When concentrating upon a given territory the campaigns should be directed to appeal to the industry concentrated in that territory and special literature published as for example Sec. 1, will have a special appeal to the Printing trades, the Waterfront, the Jewelry Workers, Section 2 a special appeal to Needle Trades Workers, etc.

In these concentrated weeks The DAILY WORKER will carry material dealing with the local manuelpal problems and the particular industry in the section. The sections should pay for a quantity of DAILY WORKERS to be distributed free in the shops, the union meetings, and from house to house distribution of the works of Comrade Ruthenberg. His writings and pamphlets should be properly organized and thruout the drive the pamphlet, "WHAT THE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY STANDS FOR AND WHY EVERY WORKER SHOULD JOIN," is to be distributed.

Special leaflets dealing with the Party campaigns on which the drive is based are to be distributed.

All leaflets are to have an appeal for membership and an appeal for The DAILY WORKER CIRCULATION.

9. The winning back of the old members must be given a great deal of effort and energy. This is to be accomplished by visiting committees organized by the sub-sections and the nuclei and by special appeals thru the press.

10. The District Executive Committee will give a large picture of Comrade Ruthenberg to the section that in proportion to its size will secure the largest number of new members. The picture will hang in the headquarters of the section that wins the prize.

Give Prizes.

The District Executive Committee will also give other prizes to individual members who will excel in the drive. These prizes will be most likely the collected works of Comrade Ruthenberg. Detailed announcements will be published later.

The District Executive Committee will put its main energies in the Ruthenberg Drive for the next few weeks. In this way we may make good the will of Comrade Ruthenberg embodied in his last words, "LET'S FIGHT ON AND BUILD THE PARTY!" in an effort to overcome the great loss to our Party and the American workingclass.

The District Executive Committee calls upon membership to rally in full strength behind the drive, to achieve the aims outlined above.

The Disintegration of the Socialist Party

By DAVID KVITKO
Article V

IN the motley crowd of reactionaries, liquidators, adherents of "watch your step," and "every dog has his day" theories, the position of L. B. Budenz (the editor of the "Labor Age") in the Socialist Party is a very peculiar one. The reason is that his standpoint is a proletarian one. One wonders what kinship is there between him and the socialist party, which according to his own characteristic, is "middle-class."

WITHOUT suspecting it Budenz speaks a language of a semi-conscious, near-communist. That is what he says in his criticism of the socialist party: "Lost in the mazes of parliamentarism, it has all long neglected the obvious fact that the primary struggle of the American workers for control of industry is still on the industrial field, rather than in the halls of Congress, and probably always will be . . ."

IT may be of interest to Budenz to learn that at the beginning of the Communist movement its syndicalist wing criticised the parliamentarism of the socialist party in a similar manner. It is not important for us now to analyze Budenz's confused notions. What we wonder is how can such a view live in close proximity to a party for which parliamentarism is an idol? How can these following words appear in a paper whose chief editor is Mr. Oneal? "The call to the socialist party is to build up the trade unions, to carry ahead the fight of the trade unions, to peer into the fields where unionism does not exist. It should confine itself to the economic fight against the capitalist system—expressed through the trade unions and through the consequent wide-spread educational activities, which go hand and hand with this idea."

DOES not Budenz know that the trade union bureaucrats with the help of the socialist party persecute the left wing exactly for such activity? To organise the unorganized, to work in the unions—this is the militant slogan of the Workers (Communist Party! For this activity are its members hunted by the A. F. of L. and the S. P. hounds. Is it possible that the editor of "The Labor Age" does not know it?

WE already saw that Budenz criticizes the parliamentarism of the socialist party, yet he is not altogether opposed to political activity. He is for a . . . labor party. In the labor party, he says, the socialist groups can very successfully serve on the educational field as the independent labor party of Great Britain. There they should support the following program:

"1. Extension of unionism, as the chief hope of the workers.

2. Socialization of industry, with workers' control, as the full fruition of the workers' hopes.

3. No compromise with war or economic imperialism, and the necessity for extending international cooperation between the labor movements of the world.

4. The need for a labor party, as auxiliary to these efforts—largely to solidify the objective of the workers."

EVEN if Budenz' information about the Communist movement in the United States is third rate, he would have to acknowledge that his plan is taken from the Workers (Communist) Party, and though it is copied very badly, nevertheless it is borrowed from the "damned" Communists. The question here, to be sure, is not about a copyright, but about that naivete of Budenz when he thinks it possible to cheat the old birds, that is that such a program could be acceptable by the socialist party only for the reason that he would call it socialist and not Communist. "But," it will be objected, "nothing is here said about dictatorship and Sovietism." True, but Budenz advises to speak the "American language," and, therefore, he avoids those "terrible" words. Well, and what is the meaning of such words as "socialization of industry, with workers' control as the full fruition of the workers' hopes," or "extension of unionism, as the chief hope of the workers?" How can such phrases be interpreted as "nothing will convince the worker of the inefficiency of the capitalist system, so far as he is concerned, more than the voice of some one standing shoulder to shoulder with him in his immediate fight?" Or such criticism as "They did not really wish to soil their hands by too much contact with the honest-to-God workers?" Budenz "is careful." He pleads "not for the capture of the unions by certain socialists or radical groups or leaders—a policy doomed to complete defeat—but for penetration of the unions by a radical philosophy, based on a sympathetic desire to attain victory for the workers, now and in the future."

IF Budenz were a more diligent reader of Communist literature and keener observer of the left wing tactics, he would understand that the aim of the left wing is not to "capture," but to "penetrate." To capture control in the unions, brother Budenz, is possible only by force in the interests of a minority or gang (and this purpose is being pursued now by the right wing union smashers), but to "penetrate" means through correct tactics and constant "consultation to shoulder" with the masses (as the left wing is doing) to win over the majority of the members and with the help of true representatives of the workers to work in the interests of the rank and file, exposing the treacherous leaders and their gang.

BUDENZ' advice to be a realist, that is to endeavor to size up the situation in a given industry and to take the struggle in accordance with such correct estimate is Communist strategy.

THIS is Leninism, brother Budenz. A Leninist is not afraid to "soil his hands" by the contact with the masses in their daily struggles. The Leninist program is to go into the unions, to help to build them, to organise the unorganized, yet never forgetting the ultimate goal of the movement. Leninism throws out the slogan of building of a "labor party," yet does not regard parliamentarism as the ultimate aim, but only as a weapon in the hands of the toiling masses.

BETWEEN the views of a Russell who advises forgetting socialism and following the footsteps of the A. F. of L. bureaucrats, of a Hillquit to whom parliamentary action is the only hope of the socialist party, and that of Budenz, who almost turns his back on political activity, there is such a distance that the socialist party, which has dwindled into a handful of people, will never be in a position to cover. Of course, it is possible to prolong the agony of the

The Death Sentence

"Chicago," With a Wide Grin, Says That American Courts Have a Fatal Sickness

Reviewed by HARBOR ALLEN

It is late in the year to praise Maurine Watkins' "Chicago" (produced by Sam H. Harris at the Music Box). But the critic for The DAILY WORKER doesn't get tickets as easily as the critic for the New York Times. No good at crashing the gate, he sometimes has to buy his way in.

In spite of having to buy my way into "Chicago," I think it's a good play. Together with a hilarious audience, I snickered and laughed and roared and smirked and slapped my knees. "Chicago" is the best comedy I've seen for years.

It's the kind of play that I personally, get soft about. It isn't a great play: too ephemeral, too noisy, too limited, too repetitious. But it has elements of a first-rate working class satire. It starts with a bang—literally, a revolver shot. It is full of action. It is not afraid of horseplay or slapstick humor. It is simple. It has suspense and a stout story. It goes in for crowds and the unashamed places where life is boisterous, real and kicking. It's material is drawn from the tabloids. Its speech is the speech of the people. From the first minute—when Roxy Hart kills her lover—to the last when she thanks "all youse guys of the jury" for acquitting her—the story is the old one you read once a month in the Graphic. Didn't the Greeks use the people's stories for their dramas? So does Maurine Watkins.

A Tabloid Beach

But "Chicago" is not all just belly laughter. It has a target which it hits not only with gusto but with dead aim. No scholar in ten volumes could do so much to convince the people that our courts are circuses, our judges and prosecutors publicity seekers, our cops hoohs, our lawyers highway robbers, our moralists humhugs, our jails bedlams, our public officials crooks. Under Miss Watkins' laugh is a snarl. Under her horseplay is the conviction that justice is sort of drunken debauch for the tabloids.

We revolutionists ought to get a lot of courage out of watching the crowds puck "Chicago." Ten years ago Miss Watkins would have been lynched for questioning the sanctity of American courts. Today even the hardened Broadwayite laughs with her. Who respects the courts today? Who thinks American justice is anything more than a farce today? And who can doubt, when he sees not only "Chicago," but the audiences of "Chicago," that our government is so rotten, so rotting, so full apart that it has to laugh it itself; is ready to hang itself with senile glee.

A Very Sick Patient

Go see "Chicago." Go early for tickets: the scalpers snatch up the good ones. Go and convince yourself that all the whole worm-eaten structure of capitalism needs is a good push to topple it over into junk and kindling. Another war, another ten years, another twenty. "Chicago" is one of the doctors pronouncing the death sentence. "Chicago" says the patient has spinal meningitis, locomotor ataxia, and softening of the brain: nothing on God's earth can dying, but this only helping to poison the atmosphere for the remaining members. But to save the socialist party, to restore it to its former status, who but a fool can believe it? It is high time to let the dead bury their dead, Brother Budenz, to put aside prejudices and to remember that there is a choice between the progressive forces with the Workers (Communist) Party as the leader, and the reactionary, alliance of the master class, A. F. of L. flunkeys and discredited socialist party politicians. The S. P. as a party is doomed.

BROADWAY BRIEFS

"Queen High" will celebrate the end of the first year at the Ambassador Theatre tonight.

Francis Edwards Faragoh, author of "Pinwheel", which just closed at the Neighborhood Playhouse, has collaborated with Irene Lewisohn in a number which is to be a feature of the bill of Lyric Drama which opens next Tuesday.

Marjorie Gateson has been engaged for the part of Gwendolyn in "Tangles," the musical version of Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest." Flavia Arcaro will play Lady Bracknell.

"Hearts Are Trumps," a comedy from the French of Felix Gandera will be presented by Henry Baron at the Morosco Theatre next Tuesday night. The cast includes Frank Morgan, Vivian Martin and C. H. Croker-King.

Lynn Riggs, the author of "Big Lake," which the American Laboratory Theatre has in rehearsal for production in April, is the author of "Sump'n Like Wings," an Oklahoma play announced by the Actors' Theatre last year but as yet unproduced.

Ernest Vajda, author of "Fata Morgana" and "The Crown Prince, will address the European history classes of Columbia University this afternoon. Vajda is planning a trip to California to engage in moving picture work.

"Pogrom," is the new title for "The Message," which opens next Monday night at the Bronx Opera House prior to showing on Broadway theatres. Howard Lang and Elisabeth Spencer head the cast.

Hal Forde will play a leading part in the forthcoming musical version of "The Importance of Being Earnest." The production is now in rehearsal.

ANTONOFSKY PUT IN THE TOMBS JAIL THRU FRAME UP

Sigman, Rosalsky Imprison Militant

Louis Antonofsky, of local 1 is in the Tombs today, another victim of a right wing frame-up. His three small children are wondering why their father doesn't come home from work.

Antonofsky was an active picket during the recent cloakmakers' strike, but even Judge Otto Rosalsky did not hold him for a jail term when an employer charged him with malicious mischief. In January, Antonofsky was put on probation for three years. He went to work in the Meyer Hauser shop at 55 West 17 street, and reported regularly to Judge Rosalsky.

Some weeks later, on February 28, Antonofsky was the victim of a framed up attempt by right wing sympathizers to put him back in jail. He was accused of beating up Morris Katz, a worker from Reisman Rothman and Bieber, who at first stated that he could not recognize his assailants, but later "identified" three men known to be sympathetic to the Joint Board, including Antonofsky and Aaron Wortuns, who had been attacked the previous day by gangsters.

Wouldn't Hear Evidence.

That the charges against him were a frame-up is proved by the fact that he was at work in the Meyer Hauser shop at the time of the alleged assault upon Katz, as is shown by his time card. In spite of this irrefutable evidence, Judge Otto Rosalsky before whom he appeared for his regular report on Monday, refused to hear any defence, and committed him to jail, with the statement "A man who is on probation should keep out of trouble."

On Tuesday morning his employer appeared to testify in his behalf, as well as a number of workers from the shop, all of whom knew that he had been working overtime in the shop at the time of the assault. Judge Rosalsky again refused to hear any testimony, and recommitted Antonofsky to the Tombs until Friday.

To Starve Families.

Louis Hyman, manager of the Joint Board, is commenting on the case, pointed out that Judge Rosalsky had resorted to similar tactics in the cases of Oscar Newman and Max Gorenstein, whom he kept in jail for nearly three weeks by postponing sentence before they were finally released on probation. "Judge Rosalsky evidently intends to deprive this man of his chance of making a living for his family by this kind of tactic," he said. "This is just another example of how this judge is prejudiced to such an extent as to be unfit to act in such cases. That Antonofsky was the victim of a frame-up would have been established in ten minutes, and he could have gone free to continue his honest work by which he supports his family. Instead, Rosalsky has seen heartlessly put him into jail, and evidently intends to keep him there for an indefinite period, though all the while, his employer and his fellow workers are ready to testify to his innocence."

Raise Fund.

An out-of-town campaign for funds with which to carry on defense for the sixteen imprisoned cloak makers and seven furriers who were victims of the recent strikes, will be opened in Philadelphia Wednesday evening at a great mass meeting of workers. Louis Hyman, manager of the Joint Board of Cloak and Dressmakers' Unions, and Ben Gold, manager of the Furriers Joint Board, will be the principal speakers.

Mass meetings have also been arranged in Cleveland, for the coming Sunday, and for Boston on Tuesday, April 5.

In New York there will be a mass meeting of women workers on Wednesday, April 6, in halls to be announced later.

Suspend College Girls.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., March 30.—Secrecy veiled the suspension of at least eight young women from the New Jersey college for women here today for infractions of college rules.

Violations for which girl students may be suspended include "excessive social engagements, unauthorized auto rides, smoking and leaving the campus without permission."

Nancy Watches Hubby.

LONDON, March 30.—Lady Nancy Astor is not a lady of leisure. "I have a husband and that is a full time job," Lady Astor told an educational meeting at Bristol, explaining that between her family and her parliamentary duties she had about ten minutes a day for relaxation.

MINNEAPOLIS, March 30.—Protests against the brutal slaughter of Chinese at Nanking by British and American marines will be consolidated with the celebration of the capture of Shanghai by the Nationalist Army being staged here Friday by the "Conference Against Intervention in Mexico, Nicaragua and China."

The meeting, originally scheduled for Saturday, had to be changed for Friday, S. A. Stockwell will speak on "The Growth of American Imperialism"; Ole Hallie of the "Mid-west Student" will speak on "Recent Industrial Developments in China"; Carl Skoglund will discuss the political significance of recent events. A Chinese speaker will also talk on the situation.

The meeting will be held at the Farmer-Labor headquarters, 243 W. Broadway.

NEWS NOTES FROM NEW JERSEY

PASSAIC, N. J., March 30.—On Friday evening at Kenters' Hall the chauffeurs and helpers held a mass meeting for the purpose of talking over working conditions in Passaic county. They listened to their organizers Tracey and Conlon from Hudson county on conditions in their respective localities.

Next week the bosses will be presented the demands of the union and the fellow-workers were urged to line up all the unorganized chauffeurs and to stick together no matter what emergency arises in the near future. All non-union men are urged to join the organization so that the workers can show a solid front against the bosses.

Port Committee Efforts Politician.

TRENTON, N. J.—Last year the port authority committee came in for a strong slamming from New Jersey trade unionists when they were charged with favoring non-union contractors with contracts. The committee headed by former governor George S. Silzer of New Jersey has the whip in its power, at present, the spending of millions of dollars of the state's money. They have in their jurisdiction the awarding of contracts to contractors for the construction of all bridges across the Hudson that will unite Jersey with New York.

A bill has been introduced and passed in the Jersey legislature giving Governor Moore power to veto any measure that the port authority may pass upon.

New York and Governor Smith promise to test the constitutionality of the bill if Moore signs it, which means that Governor Moore is a rague lieutenant. Mayor Hague of Jersey City is the state committee member of the democratic party. He is also a booster for Governor Moore of New Jersey as a candidate for the democratic nomination. This means a division in the ranks of the democratic politicians who have national influence.

But the awarding of contracts and the spending of millions of dollars by the port committee means much more to the workers of New Jersey. It means that if the contracts are awarded to Jersey engineers that local workers and trade unionists will find employment.

Against Polish Terror.

NEWARK N. J.—On Sunday April 3rd there will be a mass meeting to protest against the terror and atrocities committed in Poland against class conscious workers. The meeting will be held in the Ukrainian Hall at 57 Beacon St. There will be speakers in English, Polish, Russian, etc. Admission is free and workers are urged to attend.

First class machinists out of work can secure employment at the Curriers Engineering Co., Frelinghuysen Ave., Newark. Wages run at 90 cents per hour for the first four weeks then at the rate of a dollar an hour. Members of the machinists' union are preferred.

500 More Workers Laid Off.

ELIZABETH, N. J., — 500 more employes of the Bayway Plant owned by the Standard Oil Co., will be discharged Friday. Reorganization is the excuse given by the company officials. But men who know conditions in the plant credit it to the new process in the manufacture of gasoline. The maintenance depeetment is to be eliminated entirely. This layoff will reduce the number of workers to about 2,500. This means that half of the men have been fired since the first of the year. The new process in manufacture of the oil will net millions of dollars in profits for the company but unemployment and starvation for the workers.

Awarded $10,500.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., March 30.—A jury sitting before supreme court Justice Frank L. Young here today awarded Mrs. Rose Pike, of Yonkers, five hundred damages and her husband $10,000 damages in a suit brought by the couple against the Yonkers Railroad Company as the result of injuries suffered by the woman in an accident on one of the company's trolley cars on March 25, 1925.

WOLL'S DENIAL OF PEACE RUMORS SHOWS REACTIONARIES SQUABBLING

The attempt of the president of the International Fur Workers' Union, Oliver Rothenstein, to create trouble between the independent fur manufacturers and the New York Furriers Joint Board, was revealed in a letter which this right wing official sent yesterday to notify independent firms that the Joint Board has no right to deal with and in behalf of the International Fur Workers' Union."

Tries to Make Trouble.

In addition to giving official notice of the "dissolution" of the Joint Board this letter ends with a paragraph saying, "You undoubtedly have deposited some form of security with the former Joint Board.

We shall be glad to cooperate with you in securing the return of this sum and see that it is redeposited in a safe place and under the proper authorities.

Scheme Will Fail.

This deliberate attempt to make trouble is sure to meet with defeat, the Joint Board believes, because the season is just beginning and the manufacturers will not want to have any labor difficulties just now.

Joint Board Contracts.

"The letter sent by President Schachtman to the independent fur manufacturers has no significance whatsoever," said Ben Gold, manager of the New York Furriers Joint Board in commenting on this matter yesterday.

"The independent manufacturers have decided agreements with the Joint Board only, and the officers of the International have nothing at all to do with them. Neither had the A. F. of L. committee anything to do with these agreements.

Will Keep Contract.

"The securities of the independent manufacturers have been deposited with the Joint Board for the duration of our agreement for the purpose of assuring the maintenance of union conditions by the independent manufacturers. These securities are in the safe keeping of the New York Joint Board.

"We are positive that the manufacturers will maintain their contractual relations with the Joint Board regardless of Mr. Schachtman's letter. The manufacturers have begun to make samples, and it will not be conducive to their interests to allow themselves to be provoked into unnecessary trouble and difficulties, which the officers of the International are attempting to do."

New Judge on Woll Report.

Appointment of a city magistrate to conduct hearings on the so-called statements of bribe charges in connection with the fur workers strike of last year, will be made on Thursday as Chief Magistrate William McAdoo announced yesterday.

The District Attorney has named Assistent District Attorney Brothers to sit in on these hearings to discover whether there is any evidence of violation of the law.

Magistrate McAdoo is still considering details of the report of the fur strike compiled by the A. F. of L. Special Investigating Committee, which was handed to Mayor Walker and then turned over to the magistrate last Friday.

PHILADELPHIA HOLDS BIG PARADE TO FIGHT INTERVENTION IN CHINA

father and founder of the Nationalist Party, the Kuomintatar, Dr. Sun Yat Sen. Then, in a different tenor, he denounced American intervention in China, a policy, skillfully camouflaged under the declaration "open door" but easily susceptible to British foreign policy.

Sketching briefly and concisely the inhuman conditions under which the Chinese workers live, Bauer outlined the role of foreign imperialism, luring Green of the Young Workers Communist League, denounced on behalf of the young workers of Philadelphia that United States keep "Hands Off China."

In introducing the next speaker, P. S. Ho, chairman Ball explained: "Mr. Ho will address us in Chinese, but the language of Revolution is international. We shall understand."

Weisbord Speaks

Rising dramatically to the occasion, Albert Weisbord, youthful leader of the historic Passaic strike, painted in bold, vigorous and forceful touches the picture of China; the tincture of red in the rising sun of China; of the history-making and world creating struggle of the mighty Chinese nation against the strangling octupus of world imperialism; the mighty sweep of the Chinese masses, under the iron heel of foreign domination for more than a century. Clearly, precisely he showed the alignment of forces of the imperialists in China; the Standard Oil interests, etc.

"World imperialism has now brought into being destructive forces greater than the constructive forces it generates, and unless the workers of the world gain the mechanism and control of society, there is the greatest danger that the fabric of civilization will be smashed irreparably. The workers hold the future of society in their hands."

Most generous was the response to the appeal for a collection to defray the expenses of the meeting, the total being $362.00.

Growth of Nationalism

Sherman Chang, especially addressing himself to the Chinese students, told of the growth of the Nationalist consciousness of the Chinese nation.

The last speaker, Wm. Pickens, field secretary of the Association for Advancement of Colored People spoke of the growing restiveness of the oppressed colonial peoples of the world and their growing determination to throw off the yoke of world imperialism.

Before adjourning the following resolutions was entered unanimously:

To Resist Intervention

WHEREAS, After many years of subjugation to the imperialist powers of Great Britain, Japan, France, America, and other capitalist nations, the workers and peasants of China have organized an effective resistance to foreign domination, and have under the leadership of the Kuomintang, almost completely cut their country of the imperialists and their native agents, and

WHEREAS, The military and naval forces of imperialism have been utilized in a most infamous manner to drown in blood the heroic struggle of these Chinese workers and peasants, the shelling of Nanking and the consequent slaughter of thousands of Chinese being a case in point, and

Illegal Invasion

WHEREAS, The forces of American imperialism are among those who have illegally invaded China, in spite of the fact that the efficient Cantonese army is quite capable of keeping order and safeguarding life,

BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED by this assemblage: That we hail the victorious Kuomintang and the workers and peasants of China, and extend our fraternal greetings and wishes for their continued successes, and further Withdraw Forces!

THAT we demand that all foreign military and naval forces, including those of America, be immediately withdrawn from Chinese territory, and that the workers and peasants of China be left to forge out their own destiny, without the imposition of special privileges for foreigners.

DAILY WORKER CLUB OF LOS ANGELES TO HOLD A CONCERT SAT., APRIL 16TH

By ROSE KAPLAN
(Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 30.—The Daily Worker Builders' Club of Los Angeles announces to the world and in particular calls the attention of the bay district comrades that it has reorganized its forces and means business from now on.

Some time ago an article signed by "Alinola" a worker correspondent of San Francisco, appeared in the Daily Worker criticizing our best builders and throwing shady suggestions on the Sunny South such as "home town of Aimee McPherson." We wish to emphasize that Aimee McPherson is not a member of our club and though her application was suggested by some of our good friends the club unanimously has turned it down.

At our last meeting, March 14th, a committee of five was elected to arrange details for the International Workers' and Peasants' Concert and Entertainment to be held Saturday, April 16th at 8:00 p. m. at Forester's Hall, 251 South Olive Street. This will be something that Los Angeles has never seen before. Workers' and Peasants' struggles, feelings, and life expressed in songs, music and drama. Artists will appear in their national costume, music of different nations and this all for thirty-five cents.

Splendid Program

Comrade Rudolph Trebich and Douglas Robson, both members of the Club have volunteered to organize this splendid program. The concert will be the closing affair for the present Annual Lenin Drive. Besides other routine business of the meeting of March 14th, Comrade Fisher dwelt on the importance of the Correspondent's class and Paul C. Reiss reported on the progress of the present drive in the southern part of the state. Comrades and sympathizers willing to participate in the Correspondents' Class are asked to register with the Secretary Queen Silver at 922 West Second street or with the local representative, Paul C. Reiss.

Operators' President Says Bosses Will Lock Out Miners On April 1

CHICAGO, March 30.—Hugh Miller, president of the Illinois Mine Operators' Association, in legal with presidents of similar organizations elsewhere, stated today that in spite of the United Mine Workers Policy Committee offer to continue at work during negotiations, the operators would close down their mines on April 1. His organization is demanding a wage cut.

ROW ON "PURITY" NEW JOB NOW FOR McLAUGHLIN

Police Commissioner George V. McLaughlin is through. He announced his resignation yesterday, to take effect at once. The official reason given by the chief of the city's police force, which includes the strikebreaking corps known as the industrial squad, for leaving the "service" is that he has received a better paying job in the form of the vice-presidency of the Postal Telegraph Company.

The real basis for the present stir, however, is found in the fact that Tammany Hall is somewhat divided on the question as to whether or not it shall continue its policy of intimidating some of its own friends, like Alderman McGuiness of Brooklyn, who have been making some side money by staging gambling dens in the Tammany clubs throughout the city.

The faction which McLaughlin represented, in an effort to eradicate the traditional unsavory reputation which is associated with the name "Tammany Hall," embarked on a "purity" campaign which explains to a large extent also the present attacks on Broadway plays.

Saving "Al."

The local clinchings of the Tammany politicians has its national aspect in the program to put "Al" Smith across for president, who, they feel, has enough to overcome because of his Catholicism without having in addition to apologize for the roughhouse reputation of his party.

Under the regime of Commissioner McLaughlin, workers on strike were the victims of the most unprecedented kind of brutality and viciousness. This was especially true of the activities of the industrial squad, who with monotonous regularity staged savage attacks on various groups of strikers.

Heat Furriers.

The latest exploit carnival of brutalities of McLaughlin's pet contingent was displayed a week ago last Tuesday when, without the slightest provocation, the industrial squad went through the fur market and beat up hundreds of men and women. The attack was made with the active assistance of strikebreakers of the reactionary International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

CHICAGO ELECTION CAMPAIGN HAS EXPOSED CAPITALIST POLITICIANS

has become notoriously known. Gun play, killings, and kidnapings are usual events on election days. It may also be expected at this April 5 election. Stuffing or stealing of ballot boxes has for years been perpetrated on a grand scale. The Chicago registration for the 1926 primaries revealed election frauds to an extent of 218,517 names being stricken from the registration lists because of proven false entry.

The words "crime and politics" have become commonly associated. The leaders of the so-called crime rings are the handymen of political ringleaders. The gang-land elements now appear jubilant over "Big Bill" Thompson's lead. This calls to mind expenses made last summer by the "Better Government Association" in showing pictures of a banquet given by "Diamond Joe" Esposito attended by the Genna brothers and other gangland chiefs. Amongst the representatives of politics were senator Deneen, states attorney Crowe, and others. Chicago's annual crime bill has reached approximately $60,000,000. While the Chicago politicians of the old parties mutually accuse one another of crime association, the fact remains that the representatives of candidates of both parties upon the so-called crime elements, the gunmen gangs, for support in elections.

Are Fit Company

"Big Bill" Thompson, and states attorney Crowe are undeniably fit company. In the past, Thompson would sometimes refer to Crowe as "little rat," while Crowe's answer would be "a pugnant skunk." In his speeches of 1924 Thompson would often refer to Crowe, Barrett, and Brundage somewhat as follows: "Ladies and Gentlemen, any time you'll find that I am in the same political bed with Bobby Crowe, the Barrett brothers, Ed. Brundage, who was the cause of killing Governor Small's wife, the Chicago Tribune profiteering from Canadian free lands for their pulp paper, and Medill McCormick who voted for war, then you'll know that Bill Thompson has turned out to be a crook."

On the whole the Chicago political record has been mostly Democratic. The Democratic politicians mainly enjoying the fruits of the spoil. During the last term Bill Brennan, the big Democratic boss, has been the patronage dispenser of the local administration. Of recent years a new by-product of Chicago capitalist politics has been developed in the bipartisan alliance. Through such alliance with the Crowe-Barrett faction, the Democrats have been able to reenforce their weaker points, the Crowe-Barrett faction getting their part of the spoils.

Exposed Alliance

During the 1920 primary elections, Alderman Albert exposed some of the results of the bi-partisan alliance in the Sanitary District. The budget of the district had increased from approximately $19,000,000 the previous year to the sum of $32,000,000 in 1926. The payroll, he stated, was used to give jobs to political workers, friends, and relatives of the trustees and persons whose political influence are desired. The number employed in 1922 increased from 1,497 to 2,200 in 1926. Amongst many other charges, he also stated that excessive payments to "engineering experts" were found. A special reviewing board of engineers costing $302,367.28 in addition to the regular engineering payroll. The additional sum was used for political patronage.

"Good People"

Various groups, self-styled and otherwise, like the Better Government Association, the Municipal Voters League, and so-called "citizens committees" are now appealing to the voters to disregard political lines and vote for "good people" and "fit candidates." This is the usual practice, and leeds nowhere as far as the workers are concerned. The Cook County Wage Earners League, an aggregation of trade union officials, have rallied to the support of Crowe's candidate, "Big Bill" Thompson. Whatever program the contending candidates have to offer seems to have gotten lost in the shuffle. One thing, however, stands out decidely. None of them champion the interests of labor or offer any program which in any way corresponds with the needs of the organized labor movement or the large working class of the city. This phase of the election campaign will be dealt with in the next article.

Sinking Into Mud, Man Saved by his Colleagues

BAYONNE, N. J., March 30.—Frank Corcoran, 32, of Media, Pa., a workman employed on a dredge in the Newark Bay Channel here, narrowly escaped death today when he sank up to his shoulders in the mud which is being used in the construction of a new bulkhead.

Corcoran stepped off the stonework of the bulkhead onto the mud and immediately began sinking. Fellow workmen on the dredge layed planks around him and pulled him to safety only a minute before he would have sunk out of sight.

Borah Takes His Place with the Imperialist Foes of the Chinese Republic

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

AS the United States plunges toward actual war openly declared against China, the lip service friends of subject peoples rapidly fall away. This always takes place. The present situation, not only with regard to China, but also Mexico and Nicaragua, is no exception.

It will be remembered that prior to the world war, Newton D. Baker, of Cleveland, Ohio, had a reputation as a pacifist and liberal. Yet he became Woodrow Wilson's secretary of war, one of the worst jingoes of them all.

J. Mitchell Palmer, of Philadelphia, was a Quaker and pacifist, with a supposedly liberal twist of mind. But as Wilson's attorney general, he led a reign of terror, antedating the deposed Attorney General Daugherty as red baiter and radical hunter.

Now Senator William E. Borah joins the casualties including those turning against the Chinese masses. He strips himself of the last shreds of the anti-imperialist cloak that he has been wearing as a so-called friend of oppressed nations.

The stripping has been a gradual one for Borah. But it has, nevertheless, been effective.

He has continually urged the recognition of the Union of Soviet Republics. Recently when he was charged with having deserted his stand on this question, he reiterated his demand for the recognition of the Soviet Union. The crucial test, however, occurred when Samuel Gompers, the late president of the American Federation, an enemy of the Workers' Republic, challenged Borah's stand. The open clash came at hearings held by the senate foreign relations committee, of which Borah is chairman. At the crucial moment, when Borah was expected to make an aggressive fight, he suddenly adjourned the hearings. His militancy on this question has gradually faded.

Borah's failure to take a definite and aggressive stand against the open intervention in Nicaragua is of more recent date. In speeches delivered on Tuesday at Utica and Syracuse, New York, he revealed himself more than ever as drifting closer and closer to an open stand with the imperialists. On the Nicaraguan issue he said:

"I object to the Nicaraguan situation not so much because our marines are there to protect life, but because we recognized the wrong individual."

That is about as deep as Borah's differences with Imperialism go at the present time. Borah, in the same speech, declared that he had been campaigning for the republican party ever since the campaign for Blaine and Logan, way back in the last century, which means that he claims to have always been a good republican. Borah has been an upholder of the republican party during all the time that it has been the political spokesman of the developing American imperialist empire. Ho has never broken with it.

At Utica Borah declared that, "I think he (Cal Coolidge) is entitled to the nomination (for re-election as president in 1928) and can have it if he wants it." Borah knows Coolidge wants it.

The support Coolidge in the United States is to support this creature, Diaz, in Nicaragua, of the imperialism that keeps Coolidge in the White House. This exposes how sincere Borah is in lending lip service to Sacasa, the opponent of Diaz. This is the Borah that contents himself with a speech in the senate on the "legality" of dollar diplomacy's aggressions in Central America, as if robbery could be committed "legally."

Another shred of large proportions was torn from Borah's anti-imperialist cloak when he meekly surrendered to the administration in its refusal to permit him to go to Mexico with other members of the senate foreign relations committee and investigate conditions there for themselves.

Senator Borah at least made an effort to get into Hayti, forcing the local stool pigeons of the United States Kings to have him out. Not so, Senator Borah. At this time when Coolidge and Kellogg are trying to explain mysterious letters sent to the enemies of the Mexican workers, promising American aid and sympathy in support of any uprising against the Mexican government, Borah is upstate in New York making speeches that are favorable if anything to administration policies. The least that could be expected from Borah would be an immediate investigation of these letters and a strenuous demand that they be made public so that the workers and farmers of the nation could get a look at them and decide for themselves whether they are forgeries. But Borah has lost his zeal for open diplomacy. He winks both his eyes at secret, dollar diplomacy.

But it is in his latest statement on the Chinese situation, that Borah stands stark naked as an imperialist ally. No longer he parades as an anti-imperialist politician, as "the friend" of oppressed peoples and subject nations. Wall Street may be proud of the chairman of the senate foreign relations committee who says:

"The United States government is simply protecting the lives of its citizens there (in China); the government has gone no further and will continue to protect its citizens until the spirit of the revolution has passed away."

No protest here against the wanton murder of 7,000 defenseless men, women and children at Shanghai. No voice raised against the assassin's actual attack on the quiet village of Boas Bay, under the shallow pretense that they were the abodes of pirates. No indignation at the slaughter of workers in Shanghai, both by native Chinese exploiters and alien imperialist soldiers who now number approximately 20,000.

One American has met his death at Nanking. It is shown that his slayers were the Shantung allies of the United States, France and other nations that continue as invaders in China. But Borah has closed his eyes to the actual situation. He wears the goggles of Wall Street and beholds the situation in China as presented to him by the gifted propagandists of Dollar Diplomacy.

All that is necessary now is for J. Pierpont Morgan to step forward and pin Dollar Diplomacy's most famed decoration, "The Double-Cross of Gold," on Borah's breast, heaving with love and admiration at the achievements of the armed fists, the army and navy, in crucifying helpless peoples. Yet, even without this decoration, Borah is now branded.

What Russia is Doing About Homeless Children

By Our Own Moscow Correspondent, WILLIAM F. KRUSE.

There are two lines of activity directed towards coping with the problem of the not more than 128,000 homeless children, and the approximately 300,000 in homes and institutions of various sorts. One is in the hands of the state organs directly, and the other is conducted by various social organizations, by trade unions, by the Young Communist League, the Young Pioneers (Communist Children's Movement), and especially by a voluntary membership society of about two million members, the "Friends of the Children." All of the activities of all of these organs are of course closely interwoven and co-ordinated, for here certainly the state does not stand over and above the social organs of the working class.

Voluntary Workers.

It has already been pointed out that about 60 million roubles a year are spent in liquidating this post-war and post-famine evil. Most of this is furnished and spent by the various branches of the government. It may be well, though, to outline first the social units and their work in collaboration with the official agencies. The "Friends of the Children" is a great voluntary society of the type of "International Red Aid," "Society for Combatting Illiteracy," etc., in which the masses of Russian workers who are not Communist Party members, are actively engaged in political organizational life.

These members pay about 15 kopeks per month in dues, and thereby help maintain some of the children's homes, labor communes, night shelters, trade schools, etc.

In addition many trade unions are directly connected as "patrons" over certain homes, donating funds for special clothing, holidays, gymastic equipment, etc., and the children from these homes in turn frequently visit the union meetings, give little entertainment programs, etc. The railroad workers in particular have provided very extensively for the salvaging of the young "tramps" with whom they come into specially close contact.

The "Friends of the Children" publish a magazine, run lotteries to raise funds, and employ specially qualified agents who go about among the young waifs to seek to persuade them to abandon their vagabondage in favor of the social arrangements at their disposal. The Young Pioneers, children themselves, do very valuable work in getting hold of the younger waifs, in stopping cases of mistreatment of children in which event they teach the wronged child what its rights are and help him maintain them.

The constant friendly influence of the spic-and-span young Communist children is one of the most powerful means of drawing hundreds of children off the streets and hand in hand with their government the workers, young and old, are exerting all energy to cope with this big and complicated problem.

Activity of Soviet Government.

The programme for dealing with these youngsters was laid down in the 24th decree of the All-Russian Central Executive Committee of the Soviets on March 8th, 1926, and on the basis of this decree the following measures are now being pursued by the Soviet authorities:

1) Help the children get back to parents or relatives.

2) Place these children with working-class families, helping such families materially to care for them. (I have seen many such children now living as members of Russian families, and they share every advantage open to the children of that family).

3) Placing the children in institutions run by the "Department for the Protection of Mother and Child."

4) Placing the children in various children's institutions run directly by local government.

5) Placing them in hospitals and medical institutions.

6) Placing them in industrial and agricultural productive enterprises.

7) Material aid to children in their own homes.

8) Placing them in apprenticeship, trade schools, handicraft artels.

9) General state guardianship over all children so aided.

Spend Ten Times Over U. S.

At present the Soviet Government is spending 46 million roubles a year directly, to which must be added 9 million spent by individual unions, voluntary societies, etc.; and other millions on the medical basis which bring the total up to about 60 million roubles a year.

The present annual appropriation available to spend through the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, amounts to $1,240,000 provided it is matched by about an equal sum from the various states—less than one-tenth of what is being spent in the Soviet Union, and yet the whole appropriation is being used because some states refuse to participate.

When the Children's Bureau was first started, its appropriation amounted to $25,640—less than 1% of what is devoted to the same item by the Young Workers' republic. I have been able to find no record of appropriations for those 10,000 Porto-Rican "hacienda-slavery"—but plenty has been spent there on bullets for the U. S. Marines.

There are more than 3,000 children's homes, colonies, schools and other institutions, in which 17,327 teachers and attendants look after 236,081 children. 85% are children of peasants, workers 35% and soldiers and artisans 30%. (Commissariat of Education Weekly), while 3,000 are being given to 176,000 additional children.

During the next three years, according to government plans, a "Lenin Memorial Fund" of 100 million roubles will be devoted to the special task of wiping out the last traces of child homelessness. Since the problem of material guidance is the greatest, 890 new working communes are being planned with an equipment that is to cost 11 million roubles.

The Situation in Moscow.

The capitalist press charges that there is homeless army of 65,000 children in Moscow, with room in the institutions for only 2,410; that 8,023 were assigned to these institutions by the authorities and that half of these have escaped. Not a single one of these figures is anywhere near the truth.

Below we give a list of the institutions in the Moscow guberniia and the number of children harbored in them. I am told that there are not more than between 500 and 1,000 children, practically none of them native to Moscow, still uncared for on the streets, and they are being gathered one by one, not by the police, but by conscientious volunteer and professional workers among these children.

That official census taken recently will give us accurate data. In the year from October, 1925 to October, 1926, there were 2,640 dependent and 612 delinquent children placed into Moscow institutions, a total of 3,252.

Boys Will Run Away.

As far as runaways go, of course, there are runaways, but the number is nowhere near the indicated. And running-away does not mean here what it does in our reform schools in the states, climbing down leader pipes and over high walls studded with steel pickets and jagged broken glass bottles.

Thus far not a single one of the homes and other institutions looks the children in or takes any measures to hinder their going if they wish. An essential factor of the treatment these youngsters receive is to convince them that they are not being shut off from their fellow-workers, that they are not being kept against their will as though they were criminals.

Money For Clothes.

In one home I visited I found that all the boys, about 50, had been furnished with one sort or another outside the home and that they kept their wages (after paying very low board) to do with as they pleased. There were girls of 16 as well as might be supposed, for drink and dissipation,—the first possession the boys invested in was a pair of fina shiny now (polished), a cap of some fine and wide-pegged riding trousers now considered by the Russian youth as the acme of smart dressing. So punishment as a deterrent means the young vagabond holds out a little longer against the social influences that surround him and that are finally to envelop him as a useful member of proletarian society.

Discuss Compulsion.

This month the first home for "brezprizhorni" at which any compulsion is to be introduced will be opened in Moscow. This home will be particularly well equipped, with gymnasium, manual training school, specially qualified teachers, etc., to make it so attractive that if possible the boys (who have run away from other institutions in the past before being sent here) will not want to run away—but if they do want to they will be prevented.

This is arousing considerable discussion, A. V. Lunacharsky, Commissar of Education, being opposed to it. The fact that so mild a method, which so distantly resembles, the police method of dealing with the problem, should arouse opposition of this kind completely shows how impossible is this fairy tale of an Arctic exile, and all the other tales of "children's hard labor prisons."

In Moscow there are almost 200 institutions harboring about 25,000 children. About 80% of them came from regions of the guberniia during the great migration attending the war and famine.

The Teachers' Case

By JOSEPH KALAR.

Teachers are in absolute serfdom slavery. Their persistence, and generosity of spirit, in the face of successful repression, are ignored by the politicians who formulate the educational code. A teacher is a machine, a curious and humorous mechanical contrivance to enlighten the people in mathematics, history, geography, and the three R's. That he be able to perform his duties in a mechanical way is the first requisite, but God help him if he attempts to use his own head! God help him if he tries to do any real thinking! Good and Evil are words significance! He is only a machine, an automaton—and must perform as such, and if he steps outside of his immediate duties he is dealt with as we deal with a rusty machine, he is oiled back into shape, the oil in this case being threats.

In the first place teachers are not chosen for their real innate intelligence, for their originalities, for their ability to teach. Normal School Training is the mill from which all perfect teachers come! A County Superintendent of Schools in Minnesota sent a form latter to all of her dutiful sisters, and among other things, she said, "I had to get rid of the best teacher I had in the county because she didn't have the proper training (I. e. the proper scrap of paper)." Get that! The best teacher she had! And what is this wonderful normal school training that will convert the most sour of old maids into a perfect teacher? High talk about eyespan, curves, poetry study (no wonder all school children hate poetry!), technique, observation—stuff that has no more actual relation to teaching than Cal Coolidge has to intelligence. In other words a teacher that would frighten and revolt any child by the severity of her physiognomy, a teacher that looks upon children as brats, and very unruly brats, is yet a one hundred percent teacher because she has mastered (?) the purely mechanical aspects of education.

After graduating from a normal school a teacher is castrated of all original intelligence, all personality, all humanity. He is a machine.

In normal school he is forced to attend a period set aside for chapel. During this period he must join his voice with the rest in singing HOLY, HOLY, HOLY, and must sit mute and submissive through a tirade of pious vomit from some heavenly governor.

The scrap of paper he receives on graduation presumably fits him for the tedious moulding of the brats in his charge into his own image. And what is this image? Let me tell you, the poetry of Eddie Guest, Cal Coolidge, the States and Stripes, the close relationship between the president of the U. S. A. and God, white supremacy, national forgetfulness, the Saturday Evening Post, that is the image in which, O Worker, your child shall be moulded.

His slavery is now beginning to teach, to apparent to everyone except himself. He is told what to teach, how to live, how not to live, what to read, what to believe, what conduct is especially ordained by God! For years, however, he has no such as to tell his pupils that the World War was hardly fought for democracy, and that the Germans were not rapers of crippled children, he would go on the mat. Not so long ago during National Education Week he was even told to tell his pupils all about the Red Menace (sensationalistic definition), the Communist threat to religion, morals, etc.! That was National Education Week!

A very few teachers, possibly the only intelligent teacher I have yet met, once was so indiscreet as to read part of SMOKE and STEEL by Carl Sandburg to his pupils. Almost immediately a colossal caricature of worms in the body politic, and told them that he was reading indecent literature. She read an extract that presumably clinched her argument, and then said "There is a lot more dirty stuff here, but I couldn't read it before all of you."

We have the Anti-Evolution Bills. Science is a hated word among the plutocrats that control the educational system. New discoveries in the "spiritual" line of science are unclean. Such a century after they have become common property to everyone. In certain rural communities a teacher has to teach Sunday School (and most of them are glad to)—or get out.

All of the history she teaches is a subtle propaganda for race and class hatred. Many pupils, upon graduating, find themselves in possession of an inexplicable revulsion for the English people. Many they have but never seen a real Englishman, and yet they have that prejudice.

The teachers are expected to teach that the Bolsheviks are a menace to civilization, that they are aiming to destroy the very foundations of our government. Very well. But the teachers are not permitted to go into any detail concerning this chimerical foundation of our government, because if they did, the pupils would welcome the Red Menace!

A teacher is not rated according to ability or intelligence. There are those poor pitied teachers who possess only a second grade certificate, there is the middle class, or those possessing a first grade certificate, and the elite, the professional first class. I have known a teacher who had only a limited Second Grade (or Class) certificate, and yet she was a perfect, if not over intelligent, teacher. I have known another that belongs to the elite, and he is worthless. Yet the former receives $70 a month and the latter about $150.

When such importance is placed on a mere scrap of paper, is it any wonder that our children grow up into Babbitts, into lynchers of the I. W. W., burners of Negroes, into upholders of the very class that exploits and brutalizes them?

The very irony of it is that very few teachers care to teach evolution or know anything about it, very few teachers are class conscious, or intelligent. But what can you expect? To be able to teach they had to go through the whole educational cesspool, and very few people are able to get through the cesspool without retaining a little of the odor. By the time they had the scrap of paper that gave them legal rights to teach they had become willing, unconscious slaves of the politicians who run the educational system.

The Letter-Box

Remember Ruthenberg in Alabama.

Editor, Daily Worker:—I have read of the "passing on" of my friend and Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg. We have had many things in common—yes.

Both of us joined the socialist party the same time. Both of us were delegates of the old Robert Bandelier—at that time editor of the Cleveland Citizen—an idealist, a dreamer of the things to come. Many a time did we stand in wrapt attention listening to Max Hays explain his theories of socialism at the Sokol in Cleveland.

Soon young Ruthenberg (we called him Ruthy then) himself essayed the platform and often did I have the pleasure to introduce him to the audience from the box. I never became a speaker as so many of the boys did who "joined" at that time.

We met and had a good talk for the last time in some Jewish hall on E. 55th St., near Central Ave. in Cleveland—the tall, handsome, frail looking boy of 1909 had become a rather corpulent man. Among other things I remarked on his physical condition—he smiled that wry indulgent smile.

Fighting Flood and Famine in China to Save Millions

(By Nationalist News Agency).

HANKOW, China, Feb. 20 (By Mail)—It is not only enemy armies which the nationalist forces of China are fighting and defeating today. There is another, even greater enemy —flood and famine. Nationalist China is putting up defenses in Central China today that will cheat the floods on the Yangtze of ten million victims.

They came just in time last fall. Providentially, the peasants say. "One month later, and we should have been lost," the farmers tell you as they work feverishly under the supervision of the new Hupeh Dyke Commission of the Nationalist Government to repair the unprecedented breaks in the dykes caused by last year's torrents, which left the Yangtze dyke system in such a battered state that, it seemed, nothing but a miracle could prevent wholesale famine in 1927.

No Urging Needed

The Nationalist Government today is urging the peasants of Hupeh on, but their words are scarcely necessary. Seventy thousand peasants are working like mad men. They know, better than anyone can tell them, what is at stake. A chance of saving their homes and their very lives was offered them when the Kuomintang forces came last fall. They need no urging to help in the work of repairing the broken dykes.

Last year there was the worst flood Central China has seen in fifty years. The waters came raging down from the uplands, down the Yangtze and the Han, and the dykes, which for thirty years had been neglected by the various warlords who had held the region, broke in a score of places. Thousands of acres of farm land were under water. Crops were ruined. Hundreds died in the floods or, later, of starvation. And when in the early fall, the water subsided and the people came back to their land, they looked with dismay at the battered dykes, convinced that with the rising of the waters the next summer, nothing could save them.

No Help From Wu Pei-fu

There really seemed no hope for the peasants late last summer. To save Hupeh, repairs on a large scale, with organized labor and expert supervision were needed. It meant money, and the peasants were penniless.

Late last summer, Wu Pei-fu seemed secure in Hankow. And the peasants knew that they could look for help from him and his subordinate generals in the matter of dykes. Wu had watched last year's flood, as he had watched previous floods, without lifting a finger. All the money he could raise went into his armies. For years, the dykes had been neglected. It is no wonder, then, that the peasants look upon the coming of the Nationalist forces to Hankow as a miracle. It meant that immediately money and men were thrown into the battle against the coming of the floods. Actually, however, it was a part of the Nationalist plan. The Kuomintang knew in advance all about last year's breaks in the Yangtze dykes. They knew that disaster loomed ahead for the people of Hupeh and Hunan. This was one of the things which urged the armies on. Every day on the way, the leaders knew, meant one day lost on necessary work of repair. Ten million people were in danger of famine.

No Time Is Lost

When the Hankow region was finally taken last fall, no time was lost. Immediately a commission was formed, the Hupeh Dyke Commission, composed of the head of the Ministry of Communications, Mr. Sun Fe, the head of the Ministry Finance, Mr. T. V. Soong, and General Chang Tso-pin. There was a hasty survey of the damage from last year's flood, and a budget. Three and a half millions were needed immediately to mend the dykes sufficiently to prevent the flooding this year of half the province, including the Wuhan cities, Hankow, Hanyang and Hanyang. Mr. Soong raised the money, and the work began. The actual direction was placed in the hands of Mr. Wang Chi, a local Hupeh man, familiar with dyke problems. Under him were placed Chinese engineers. Recently, a foreign engineer, Mr. O. J. Todd, who has been in charge of engineering work for the International Famine Relief Commission, was employed as supervising engineer.

"It is a close race, this race against flood and famine," said Mr. Sun Fo in an interview yesterday, "but we believe we will win. We have started late, but we are working overtime. We must erect temporary barricades before high water comes. Half the province is at stake and the lives of ten million people."

The region that is to be saved is the rich rice-producing district along the Yangtze, above Hankow, and along the Han, the river that enters the Yangtze at Hankow, and that gives the city its name.

There are two places which are being given particular attention. Above the city on the Han, last year's torrents broke thru the dykes built thirty years ago by the Viceroy Chang Chi-tung. It is this break that threatens the city of Hankow. The second bad break is at the Chieh Wan Dyke, above Hankow on the Yangtze, where repairs, costing $622,000, are under way. Twenty thousand peasants are on the job at that point.

The "big" repair job this year will cost approximately three and a half millions. The work will be done by local, peasant labor, working at very low pay, twenty cents a day, known as food. It is because the peasants and villages know what is at stake that it is possible to do the repairs for three and a half millions. Mr. Sun explained yesterday. The flood last year left the dykes in an appalling condition. There are a score or more places that must be repaired.

70,000 Volunteers On The Job

But the call for lehor has had an immediate response. Seventy thousand volunteers are now working in frenzied haste, knowing that the time is short between now and the coming of the floods. Thirty thousand more are to be called. Mr. Sun Fo stated yesterday, and they will be gathered in a day.

"But even if we beat the floods, Hupeh will not be safe from the threat of famine," he stated. "These repairs are purely temporary makeshifts. The problem of floods along the Yangtze and the Han cannot be adequately solved until many times, three and a half millions are spent. It involves work on a gigantic scale, the regulation of the whole Yangtze river system.

"But the present repairs will give us a breathing spell. The dykes will be fixed so that they will hold until we can start work on the big plan. These repairs should have been done long ago. The situation has been becoming more and more acute. The peasants must fight it against what came just in time. This year would have meant a disaster on such a scale that it challenges comprehension."

Floods Due to Neglect

When asked the cause of the disastrous flood of last year, Mr. Sun Fo said that it was partly the unusual torrent of water that came down from the uplands, but it was partly due to neglect. Nothing has been done on these important dykes for years, except feed tinkering by the desperate peasants. Adequate repairs meant money and organization, and all the money and organization of the country went into the Nationalist armies.

"This apparently meant nothing to the warlords," said Mr. Sun Fo, "But it means a great deal to the Kuomintang. The situation last year was known of the flood on the Yangtze, we knew that unless rapid repairs were undertaken, nothing on earth could save Hupeh and Hunan this year. Flood is a more implacable enemy then an army."

"This is a part of the fighting front of National China," he concluded. "To the east and the north, we are ridding China of the curse of militarism. Here on the Yangtze, we are fighting to hold the devastating floods at bay."

Michael Gold's 'Fiesta' Has In Hortense Alden Actress Worthy of It

"Fiesta" the drama of Mexico by Michael Gold, and the third production of the New Playwrights Theatre, boasts an unusually large and interesting cast. Notable among the younger players in it, is Hortense Alden, who enacts the role of Guadaloupe, a young orphan, a victim of the Mexican revolution.

Miss Alden has had a long and varied experience among the recent productions in which she has appeared are "Creolea" with Richard Bennett, "Ghosts," by the Actor's Theatre, "Arabesque" with Alison Bel Geddes presentation, and numerous roles with the Theatre Guild.

Although Miss Alden accepts the production of the Communist play of "Fiesta," in real life, she is by her own confession, a "rapid feminist."

"I am very happy," she admits, "to be living in a generation, in which women have come into their own. That is as much true of the commercial world as it is in the realm of arts. Certainly on the stage, the triumphs of women have been so numerous and so great that they have far eclipsed those of the men. And in recent years, some of the outstanding hits have been written by women.

"Woman, also, have contributed the large audiences for the more intelligent and thoughtful plays. They do not come to theatres with prepared, bored attitudes, and are appreciative of the new and the stirring."

"Fiesta" in which she will appear, opens at the 52nd Street Theatre. The DAILY WORKER has bought out the house for the week of April 11. Tickets are now on sale at the local office, 108 East 14th Street, Phone Stuyvesant 8584.

England Blackmails China Over Nanking

Not Content With Bombarding, Asks U. S. and Japan To Help Her Extort Money

SHANGHAI, March 31.—Following are the most important developments in the Chinese situation today:

1.—Great Britain, supported by Japan, is about to deliver demands for reparations for the Nanking affair. An urgent invitation has been given to the United States to join in such a demand. A new crisis may follow such diplomatic moves.

2.—Chinese supporters of the Nationalist movement are reported to be not disposed to make any deals with the powers.

3.—The British cabinet, apparently expecting rejection of such demands, is reported to be prepared to take other more drastic steps.

4.—In Shanghai the situation is comparatively quiet.

5.—Nationalist troops continue to advance along the Shanghai-Tientsin railway. Positions recently won in the Yangtse valley are being consolidated, new recruits drilled, and the soldiers rested for the march to Peking

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE truth of the maxim that true words are often spoken in jest was again demonstrated when two lads in a delivery wagon who witnessed Henry Ford and his flivver going over an embankment informed the police that they feared the occupant of the unfortunate gas wagon was a bandit. The thousands of workers that are exploited by Ford will surely agree that the lads were not mistaken.

THE tremendous power wielded by Ford is shown by the fact that news of the accident did not seep out until three days afterwards. There is rumor that the automobile magnate was accompanied by a person of the opposite sex. This rumor died an early, and we fear an unnatural death. No sooner did the newspaper get wind of the mishap than they began to develop sensations. Hearst's hirelings were quick to discover that an attempt was made on Ford's life. The New York World correspondent called attention to the fact that the employes of the Ford Motor Company in Detroit are publishing a paper "attacking Ford."

THE Ford Worker, the paper referred to, is a shop bulletin published by radical employes who want to organize the auto workers into a labor union. The paper tells the workers how they are being exploited by the billionaire boss. This propaganda is extremely distasteful to Ford and his strategists may think this is a good time to transform an accident into a "plot" and fasten it on his exploited slaves.

Matthew is president of the Sportsmanship Brotherhood and no doubt when he is not busy acting as an employers' stooligeon against the progressives in the trade unions he is busy "spreading the ideas of real sportsmanship within the ranks of amateur athletes." Americans Want to Stay.

E. D. Price, Consul at Foochow, sent word the situation there was quiet. "Of the 112 Americans in the consulate district, about 20 will not leave their stations in the interior," he reported.

All Americans in the outlying districts around Swatow are being concentrated except six catholic priests in the kaying district, according to a dispatch from Consul C. B. Chamberlain. The priests have been urged to withdraw, he said.

Nationalists Advance.

The advance of the People's army toward Shantung province has caused great anxiety among the American residents at Tsinan, far in the interior, and directly in the path of the retreating Shantung troops who were "defending" Shanghai a short time ago, but now are fleeing in a demoralized condition into their home district.

Consul Swaney has appealed to the northern war lords for special trains, but has been notified that all available rolling stock is being used for troop movements. Such Americans as do not care to face the hostility of the Shantung troops, angry at being defeated and feeling that the foreign powers have duped them into attacking the Nationalist armies, will have to get out as they can.

Not Sure of Ground.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—On receipt of news thru Admiral Williams that he has been acting in concert with the British and French military and naval officers there, President Coolidge immediately decided to take up the matter with the cabinet the first thing tomorrow morning.

This is considered by observers to indicate dissatisfaction with the way in which British imperialism has been able to make use of American armed forces in China to serve its own ends, meanwhile turning aside upon the United States some of the onus of the Nanking massacre and others, which were ruining British trade in the Orient.

Attacks U. S. Chinese Policy

JERSEY CITY, N. J., March 31.—A bitter attack upon the policy of the foreign powers in China and a defense of the Nationalist movement sweeping that country was voiced this afternoon by Dr. James M. Yard, executive secretary of the Western Sihai Union, in a speech before the annual Newark Methodist Episcopal Church conference here.

2,000 Families Rescued.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 31.—Two thousand families, made homeless by the flood waters of White River, have been rescued.

CHANG KAI-SHEK URGED KOUMINTANG MEMBERS TO SUPPORT LEADERSHIP OF CENTRAL COMMITTEE

HANKOW, March. The conference of the Executive Committee of the Kuo Min Tang was opened. A declaration of Chiang Kai-Shek was published which stressed the necessity of the subordination of individuals to the program of the Ku Min Tang. Chiang Kai-Shek appealed to all party members to support the Central Executive Committee in order that the leadership of the party affairs could be centralized.

As the national telegraph agency reports, the rumors, which appeared in the last few days in the press, on internal conflicts in the Kuo Min Tang, were refuted by the party leaders and it is reported in the respective circles that at the present session of the Central Committee a strengthening of the authority of the party and the consolidation of the party forces were achieved. The session of March 12th has adopted an extremely important decision on the re-establishment of the War Council which will have the control on all war affairs. One of the most important questions which was discussed in the session, was that of the necessary abolition of extraordinary measures and the re-establishment of the normal party organization.

Turkmeinstan Workers In Big Popular Fiesta On Second Anniversary

ASHABAD, Turkmelnstan, Mar. 31.—The toilers of Turkmelnstan have just celebrated the second anniversary of the founding of their republic and the inauguration of the second congress of Soviets. The celebration acquired the dimensions of a big popular festival. The foundation of the first textile and silk mills in Turkmeinstan was officially laid at this celebration.

LINSON, MUN HEY EDITOR, RAPS AT NANKING MURDER

U. S. Shelled City to Aid Standard Oil

By ART SHIELDS
(Federated Press)

Huang Linson, editor of the Chinese Nationalist Daily, published at 16 Pell Street, New York, gives the Federated Press a very different version of the Nanking bombardment than the stories told in the ordinary newspapers. His newspaper is the official New York organ of the Kuo-Min-Tang, or Nationalist party, which rules southern China.

Report 20,000 Killed.

His latest cable from the Nationalist government estimates that 20,000 Chinese were slain in the firing from British and American warships. The foreigners' shells fell into the center of the commercial district of Nanking, on one side of the river, and into the residential district of Pukow on the other side.

Linson points out that the shelling began some time before Dr. Williams, the American missionary, was shot. This is admitted in the dispatches of some of the American correspondents.

Protect Standard Bill.

The Chinese editor asks why America should have taken such a step when all the other great powers, except Great Britain, are remaining comparatively neutral. No French, Japanese, German or Russian explosives were dropped into Nanking, though citizens of all big European powers were there.

Standard Oil—Rockefeller interests—are one of the big American stakes in China, he says. American imperialism goes along with the American foreign investments.

Appeal To U. S. Workers.

Linson asks American workers to heed an appeal the Chinese trade unions have sent to the labor movements of the world. They believe the cause of the Nationalist government is the cause of labor. They explain that the movement is not an anti-foreign movement. It is a movement for the right of the Chinese to rule themselves.

Moore, A Vicious Liar.

"The newspapers are telling many lies about China," said the editor in parting. "Frederick Moore, correspondent of the New York Times, is the worst of the liars. His atrocity stories are vicious falsehoods. And he makes the ridiculous statements that there are no educated Chinese except a few students from abroad. He does not like Chinese, so he writes, not from the facts but from his feelings."

Moore's deportation was demanded in a cable that a mass meeting of 200 Chinese students at Columbia sent to General Chiang Kai Shek, Nationalist leader.

Appropriate $250,000 For Fire Safety

ALBANY, N. Y., March 31.—Gov. Smith today signed the Hewitt bill, appropriating $250,000 for fire prevention and safety measures at state hospitals and state and charitable institutions. For the last three years the lawmakers have annually appropriated $1,000,000 for this work.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 31.—Governor Smith today had approved the Westall bill appropriating $250,000 to build a connecting link between the Bronx River Parkway and the Peekskill-Bear Mountain Bridge.

Start Big Chase For "Plotters Who Hit Ford"

Sapiro Admits Wished World Wide Farm Organization

DETROIT, March 31.—While the cross examination of Aaron Sapiro, suing Henry Ford for a million dollars for libel, went on in the federal court here, the police department and private detectives agencies made every effort to give the impression that Ford was nearly assassinated.

An army of Ford's secret service, private detectives and police of a half dozen Michigan cities are searching for two men and a Studebaker touring car. Occupants of the Studebaker are said to have deliberately attempted to drive Ford into the River Rouge but failing in that, rammed his Ford coupe, in which the automobile king rode alone, off a boulevard near his estate and sped away as the car tumbled down an embankment.

Ford Not Struck?

The Studebaker story contradicts an earlier account given by two boys, Ernest Wilhelmi and Carl Machiwitz, who said they saw Ford, with some one else in the car, drive off the embankment by accident, no pursuing automobile being in evidence.

Under Ford's express orders, all news of the incident was suppressed for several days.

Can't Testify.

Ford, who was expected to testify this week, is saved by this affair from any such humiliating experience as he had when he'd sung a news paper for libel, some time ago.

On that occasion, on the witness stand he showed abysmal ignorance of ordinary historical events and other matters suitable to the knowledge of a sixth grade grammar school pupil.

It is not expected now that he will take the stand. His physicians, who first stated his injuries to be very slight, now issue graver bulletins. The fact is that the auto king is spitting blood, may have internal injuries, and is threatened with pneumonia.

Red Cross Examines.

Meanwhile, in the court room, Sapiro endures a cross examination himself, conducted by Ford's noted counsel. This has already brought out the fact that the ultimate goal of Aaron Sapiro, co-called cooperative king,

BANK BOSSES OF HANKOW KNUCKLE TO THE WORKERS

Nationalist Govt. Helps Labor to Organize

The great improvement in the conditions of the Chinese working class due to the Nationalist revolution is shown by the demands made by the bank clerks of Shanghai on their employers, demands which the bosses were forced to listen respectfully to. As in Russia the government bayonetz were on the side of the workers.

Under the old regime the Chinese bank clerks received $30 monthly. When the Nationalist regime took over the government bank clerks unionized and presented the following demands:

Monthly salaries of $67.50;

Monthly living allowances of $17.50;

All clothing to be furnished by the employers;

An extra monthly allowance of $10 for married men;

Three months extra pay whenever the books were balanced;

A month's extra pay at the end of June and December;

The bank to contribute ten per cent of the employes' salary annually to a pension fund, and to guarantee the interest on this fund;

A yearly bonus of 3 per cent of the bank's annual profits to be divided among the employes;

A present of $100 to be made to each employe whenever a death or marriage occurs in his family;

The union's approval to be necessary for dismissal of any employe;

The doors of the bank to be closed only with consent of the employes and if closed the employes to be given a year's salary

May Expel Armour's Big Grain Corporation From Wheat Pit For Swindle

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 31.—A demand that the Armour Grain Company be suspended from the Chicago Board of Trade, that guilty officials of the Chicago Board of Trade be removed from office and punished and that a committee be named to prepare bills to forbid speculation the grain trade in Illinois was made in the state senate today in two resolutions offered by Senator Kessinger of Aurora.

A public arbitor recently found the Armour brothers grain corporation guilty of gross frauds. They put the Grain Dealers, Inc., a cooperative, out of business with a $3,000,000 swindle, according to the arbitor.

BENITO'S PAWN, ZOGU, READY TO RUN FROM FOES

Many Death Sentences, But Revolt Certain

BELGRADE, March 31.—Premier Zogu of Albania has made preparations for flight in the event of a revolution, which daily becomes more probable, according to Tirana reports published by the semi-official newspaper Vreme.

These despatches state that Zogu's house in Tirana is a warren of underground passages communicating with other houses which he has purchased. He is said to have purchased a fleet of automobiles and whenever he appears in public his car is surrounded by six other's making it difficult to determine which car he rides in.

Rich Landlord.

Zogu is a representative of the rich, oppressive landlords of Albania. He is bitterly hated by a majority of the inhabitants of the country, and several months ago made a treaty with Mussolini by which he practically sells his country to Italy, in return for Italian government's promise to maintain him in power over it by armed force.

It was the possibility of Jugo Slavian assistance to a revolt against Zogu, which caused Italy a pretext for the recent ultimatum to Belgrade. Jugo Slavia has never recognized the "Treaty of Tirana" by which Italy is placed in this favored position in Albania.

Savage Sentences.

SCUTARI, March 31.—Fifteen persons have been sentenced to death and 321 given prison sentences as the result of trials held here against those charged with responsibility for the revolution last November against Premier Zogu of Albania.

Fourteen persons who fled the country have been sentenced to death in absentia.

There are some fears that these stiff sentences may re-awaken the mountain tribes to revolt.

British Shipping Firms Drive For Repeal Of Australia Labor Laws

MELBOURNE Australia (By Mail) (FP)—Pressure is being brought to bear by British shipping companies upon the anti-Labor federal government in Australia to amend the Navigation Act which prevents overseas companies from trading on the Australian coast unless they observe the same conditions, pay the same wages, and provide the same accomodation and food to crews as the Australian coastal companies do.

Labor members in the federal parliament are working to prevent this move to sabotage the Navigation Act. They demand that the law which says that the Australian conducted by Australian companies and under working conditions and with Australian crews, shall remain unaltered.

WOODMERE, N. Y., March 31.—Alexandar H. Franklin, 42 years old, was found dead in the cellar of his home on Woodmere Boulevard here today by his wife. Franklin was hanging from a cellar beam by a piece of sash-cord. He was dead when a physician arrived. The death was reported as a suicide by the police.

Operators Demand Men Take Less Pay

Work Stops In Central Competitive Field; Outlying Districts Stay At Work

CHICAGO, March 31.—All was in readiness today for suspension of soft coal mining at midnight tonight in the central competitive field, embracing western Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio and Indiana.

Some 150,000 members of the United Mine Workers' Union and virtually all of the bituminous coal mines in the area will be affected by the suspension, which follows the expiration of the Jacksonville wage scale.

The union wants a new contract providing substantially the same basic pay as the Jacksonville agreement—$7.50 a day or a proportionate amount to miners working on a tonnage basis.

The coal operators demand a $2 a day reduction of the miners' already low wages. This would really be a much greater cut than appears at first sight, for the miners do not really get regular work at $7.50 a day. They work piece work at rates intended to approximate in earning power the $7.50 wage, but which seldom does so, because active and intelligent superintendents and mine managers know how to trick the miners into doing a lot of work for nothing —"dead work" it is called, and only equal vigilance on the part of the union officials, and equal readiness to defend the men's rights as is shown by the employers' bosses in defense of profits, will maintain the nominal wage schedule.

Reduces Income

Lately, during the administration of Frank Farrington in District 12 (Illinois) of the union, and under his successors, this vigilance in the defense of miners' wages is not shown.

There is also the prevalence of unemployment, caused by the short working day, to cut down the miners' average income, and the fact that frequently smaller companies go out of business and leave their men unpaid, afterwards to start operations again under another contract, means loss to the miners.

May Last All Summer

Rice Miller, president of the Coal Operators' Association of Illinois, declared today there was slight hope for a last-minute agreement as the operators expected the union to enter a conference with the understanding that lower wages would be accepted.

Miller declared today the Illinois operators were not expecting to import strikebreakers.

The early spring and presence of large stocks of coal above ground were factors in support of the belief that the suspension might extend at least well into the summer.

Could Produce More

Illinois, one of the greatest bituminous coal producing states in the Union, turned out 65,000,000 tons last year.

"We could have produced double that amount," said Miller, "but we can't sell that much in competition with non-union West Virginia and Kentucky fields the wage scales of which are some $2 a day less than ours."

MEXICO, BRITAIN AGREE TO SETTLE FOR REVOLT LOSS

Mixed Commission Will Pass On Claims

LONDON, March 31.—The Mexican government has agreed to pay British subjects for losses incurred during the revolutions between November 1910 and May, 1920, according to a statement issued by the British foreign office yesterday.

British claims, both direct and indirect, will be submitted to a commission composed of one Mexican, one Englishman and one "neutral."

The Mexican government will not only be compelled to compensate British subjects for losses incurred in a series of revolutions from 1910 to 1920, but also for "losses caused by brigands."

Chicago Federation Of Labor Protests Private Property in Radio Wave

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Blame for chaos in radio reception was laid at the door of broadcasters today by Francis St. Austalli of Des Moines, president of the Iowa state listeners association.

M. Nockels, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, which operates station WCFL, said: "Labor is opposed in principle and practice to property rights on the air, maintaining that this new medium of communication must be developed and utilized for the benefit of the public and not as a source of profit for corporations, private or political interests." He declared that the right to broadcast should be determined by the listener—the consumer—who should pay for what he gets.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 31.—The Mastick bill, providing 19½-hour working week for women in industry was approved today by Governor Smith.

BRAZEN CORRUPTION FEATURES CHI ELECTION; THOMPSON FOUGHT LABOR

Article II.

By ARNE SWABECK.

CHICAGO—Brazen corruption has become the axiom of Chicago Republican and Democratic politics. Its tentacles are spread through the whole strata of trade union officialdom. The connection between capitalist politics and trade union bureaucrats is becoming ever more complete, despite the distinct anti-labor record of both parties and their various administrations. These officials are ardently pursuing the A. F. of L. policy of rewarding friends and punishing enemies, as usual it works out this way. Some of their friends are in the Republican party and others in the Democratic party and the rewarding becomes quite general. Most of them, however, are now scrambling to support "Big Bill" Thompson.

Thompson, l'alse-Smasher.

John Fitzpatrick has announced he will take the stump for Dever, while Oscar Nelson is campaigning for Thompson, altho before the 1926 primaries he was reported to be on the Democratic party slate committee. It is entirely forgotten that Bill Thompson during the time of his administration was placed on the Chicago Federation of Labor unfair list as a result of the dispute in which he favored the Yellow Taxi Company against the union taxis.

It is now being charged that Thompson's administration failed to act in 1919 during the Chicago race riots provoked by the Chicago meat packers in an effort to destroy the unions. One

Locking Out 150,000 Miners to Cut Pay

Operators Express Determination to Drive Union Men Down to Non-Union Wage Scale

some operators were negotiating for temporary wage agreements to prevent a shut down of their mines pending final settlement of the wage controversy President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers refused today to discuss the crisis in the bituminous coal industry which will come at midnight tonight with the expiration of the Jacksonville wage agreement.

Up To Operators

"I have already said all there's to be said," Lewis stated. He referred to his earlier statement in which he pointed out that under the new policy of the union there need be no suspension of coal mining while discussions regarding a new wage scale for the central competitive field were under way.

"The union's policy can be summed up in this phrase," Lewis had said. "While we're talking this pay matter over let's not fight."

The union's policy enables every operator to continue mining at the old scale pending the final settlement of the wage dispute, according to Lewis.

Will Stop Work

PITTSBURGH, March 31.—A cessation of work in the coal fields here appears inevitable, Phillip Murray, international vice president of the United Mine Workers, declared today on the eve of the scheduled suspension.

Murray's statement was the first acknowledgment by an official that virtually all hope of any action to forestall a suspension had been abandoned. Heretofore, the Lewis administration had maintained tactful silence.

Will Keep Order

"Union leaders have called upon their people to maintain the best of order," Murray added. "We urge the miners to be peaceable and to have lawful respect for constituted authorities."

Coal operators here maintained silence as to their plans. The Pittsburgh Producers Association, through which they spoke as a unit during the 1922 strike, has been dissolved, leaving the union mine operators without an official spokesman in the region.

As the union's first move in the scheduled suspension, Murray announced he had filled with the Pittsburgh Council of Churches, specific charges of alleged immoral conditions in mining camps of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, which operates eighteen mines on the open shop plan.

Southern Illinois Fields Quit.

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., March 31.—Bituminous miners in the southern Illinois coal fields went down into the pits today for what apparently was the last day of work for an indefinite period.

In the counties of Franklin, Williamson and Saline alone, more than 28,000 men will lay down their tools tonight.

Already many of the collieries in the field have shut down. Notices have been published at other mines of the suspension starting tonight. Chief among these in this immediate section is the Old Ben Coal Corporation which notified its men in seven mines operated in Franklin and Williamson counties to remove their tools and personal effects. -The New Orient, largest mine in the world, already has ceased.

Iowa Conference.

DES MOINES, Iowa, March 31.—A last minute effort to avert a shutdown of Iowa mines, employing about 13,000 men, was to be made today by Governor John Hammill, who has called a conference of miners' representatives and mine operators.

50,000 MOSCOW WORKERS PROTEST NANKING BLOOD BATH BY AMERICA

(Special Cable To The DAILY WORKER.)

MOSCOW, March 31.—The news of the bombardment of Nanking provoked utmost indignation among the Moscow proletariat.

In the square before the Communist International headquarters large crowds assembled all day and held meetings of protest. The demonstrations were participated in by over 50,000 workers, traffic in all neighboring streets being interrupted.

Relief Conference.

At a conference of the International Society to Relieve Revolutionary Workers meeting in Moscow heard a pointed note that despite the two and a half years of the societies' activities mass organizations of the society have been created in 12 countries. The society consists of over 6,000,000 members and supports 60,000 political prisoners and 100,000 members of their families.

The conference passed a resolution thanking the British delegation of the society which investigated the white terror in Poland. The committee consisted of labor party members: Beckett, Shepard and Horraban, who made an unbiased investigation of the terror and class justice of Pilsudsky's government. On a suggestion of the Polish delegation to the conference a special resolution was passed protesting against the acts of violence practiced by Polish fascism.

Bessarabia Protests.

Numerous meetings organized by the Society of Bessacabians held here protested against the ratification of the Bessarabian protocol by Stnly Kolaroff, Marty, Fatayanin and others spoke. Resolutions were unanimously adopted condemning new acts of hostile to the Soviet Union, and Bessarabia. Also voted message of greeting to the national revolutionary army of China and the third conference of the Soviets of the Soldavian Soviet Republic, which opened today.

COOLIDGE PUTS HAYNES IN JOB FOR DRY VOTES

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Congressional politicians see in President Coolidge's appointment of Roy A. Haynes, anti-saloon leaguer, as prohibition commissioner, a desire to stand on the dry platform, as republican nominee for a third term in the presidency.

It is pointed out that Coolidge defied Mellon, a thing he very seldom does, in this appointment. Mellon is U. O. Pennington, as commissioner.

Farmers Desert Vermonter.

Coolidge has also sent his man Hilles on a scouting expedition thru the middle west, and is reported to have been shocked at the report made of serious cooling of the farmers towards the present administration, and the bare-faced attempts made by Senator Frank Lowden to capitalize his support of the McNary-Haugen farm bill, in opposition to Coolidge, who vetoed it. Lowden is said to have an alliance with Col. Theodore Roosevelt of New York, to bring the easterners his way, and intends to run for president.

Better Marketing

SEATTLE (FP) March 31.—Apple growers and shippers of the northwest, under the lead of the local Chamber of Commarce, are launching an organization scheme for the better marketing of this product. It is planned to sign up not less than 75 per cent. of the growers and an equal number of shippers upon an agreed uniform selling system.

Reichstag Includes the Dawes Plan Obligations In Its Budget Planning

BERLIN, March 31. The Reichstag today voted to include within the German budget the financial obligations due under the Dawes plan.

Deputy Deffauer, a Centrist, in a speech to the Reichstag, declared Germany need never repent placing confidence in the Dawes commission.

Speakers of all parties in the Reichstag, debating the budget, pleaded for a downward revision of the Dawes plan declaring that Germany was only able to pay last year because it received $600,000,000 from foreign loans.

New South Wales Law Blocks Greedy Owners

SYDNEY, Australia, (By Mail).—During 1926, the Fair Rents' Court in New South Wales established by a labor government some years ago, dealt with 1831 applications for reductions in rents. The reductions in rents made by the court ranged from a rental of $4.12 per week for dwellings and 24 cents to $13.32 for shops. The existence of the court had a restraining influence on landlords generally, since landlords knew that if they charged excessive rentals, the tenants would appeal to the court for reductions. Where a reduction is made, the landlord is not allowed to dispossess a tenant for 12 months following the court's decision, nor can he seek increased rent from an incoming tenant.

BERLIN, March 18.—(By Mail) The following motion was laid before the Prussian Diet by the Communist fraction and accepted by the Diet for debate:

"The Hungarian Bethlen government is carrying on an unceasing brutal and bloody struggle for the destruction of the Hungarian working class movement. The Bethlen government is using and has used mass arrests, tortures and maltreatment of defenseless prisoners, years of hard labor, and drum-head executions in order to intimidate the Hungarian working class and to prevent it carrying on any struggle for the improvement of its economic situation or the acquisition of political rights.

"In the last few days it has become known that the Hungarian government has once again made numerous arrests amongst the workers simply because the arrested belong to the perfectly legal left-wing Socialist Workers Party or attempted to form an organization of left-wing workers side by side with this legal party. The sum total of the accusations brought against them is that they have held educational courses.

Get Confessions By Torture.

"The Budapest police authorities have announced that of the 76 arrested left-wing socialist and Communist workers, 58 will be placed before an extraordinary court which according to Hungarian law can pass the sentence—the sentence of death. The arrested workers have been horribly maltreated, their features beaten beyond recognition. Lenard and hair dragged out by the roots and their bodies beaten bloody in order to extract confessions from them. These facts are not in any way denied by the Hungarian police.

"These terrible acts of the Hungarian government represent a recrudescence of the worst times of mediaeval barbarism. These acts are the results of a fanatical persecuting passion against the organized Hungarian working class whose economic situation is the worst of any country in Europe. All connection with this government leads to a co-responsibility for these acts of terror.

Urge Protest

"Therefore the Prussian Diet decides to instruct the Prussian cabinet. 1. To abolish the agreement made between the Prussian State and the Bethlen government though its educational minister Count Kerkenberg for a German-Hungarian Educational Co-operation and to abolish the Hungarian Chair established in the Berlin University as a consequence of this agreement.

2. To inform the Hungarian government that these measures are an expression of the protest of the Prussian Diet and the Prussian cabinet at the acts of terror practised upon the Hungarian working class."

Kellogg Resignation Rumors Continue; He Denies Will Go West

WASHINGTON, March 31. - A report published in a morning newspaper that Secretary of State Kellogg is planning to take a long vacation in California, to be followed by his resignation from the cabinet, was denied today by Kellogg.

The secretary said he was not going to California, but about the everrecurring report of his early retirement from the cabinet "because of ill health" he was not so emphatic, although he has consistently denied previous reports of this sort.

Despite the denials, however, it would not surprise Kellogg's colleagues here if he retires by July 1.

Opposes Hoarding of National Resources

WASHINGTON, (FP) March 31.—Natural resources should not be hoarded by any nation, but should be fairly allocated among all nations, says the People's Reconstruction League, through its executive secretary, Benjamin C. Marsh, in a statement asking that a world conference on this subject be called by the United States. He quotes Roosevelt and Wilson in endorsement of this principle, and says the late war was fought to afford to all peoples their fair share of the use or raw materials.

Sacco's Appeal For A New Trial Denied By Capital Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, March 31. - Harry P. Sacco's motion for a new trial, following his conviction for contempt of the senate, was denied today by Justice Hitz, in district supreme court.

The all-magnate's attorneys are now expected to appeal to the court of appeals, and if they lose there, eventually to the United States supreme court.

test did the next best thing. It issued a statement to the wage-earners of Chicago, in which the workers are informed that candidates, Dever, Thompson and Robertson are "grossly ignorant of the dominant parasitic purpose of the corrupt and corrupting practices and of the degrading results of the capitalist system of industry." It appears that those three innocents have reached the declining years of their lives without understanding of the system from which they receive the graft that enables them to live in luxury at the expense of the working class. Shame on the negligent socialists that have allowed three well-meaning but simple-minded millionaires to reach this stage of life without being at least offered socialist salvation thru the medium of a Sunday School.

THE Hearst correspondent in Shanghai has outdone his brothers of the Associated Press in lying about the Nationalist revolution. This last exhibit that the Nationalists attempted an advance on the Feench concession under cover of little children, which prevented the gallant and brave Americans from firing at them. They fire over them however. The truth of the matter is that the Nationalist soldiers are freely permitted to enter the French concession much to the chagrin of the British and American war lords who are trying hard to get the French to cooperate with them against the Chinese Nationalist government.

WHILE the French guards were entering peacefully, plasful Nationalist soldiers greased the pillars on the gates leading to the French concession, then unhinged the gates and carried them away. The French soldiers continued to secure the patronic American males and virtuous American females spent a night during which their most priceless possession, wealth and virtue, were in constant danger. Still nothing of an untoward nature happened, which shows how little danger confronts well-behaved foreigners in China.

SIR AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN threw a nifty fit of moral indignation in the house of commons over the alleged outrage committed by Nationalist troops in Nanking. Of course, the outrage was committed by the British and American troops. The Nationalist "outrage" was that they covered to cover up the mass murder perpetrated by the imperialists. If the labor members in the house of commons made any protest against Chamberlain's announced intention to pursue a "firm policy" in China the newspapers failed to mention it. The right wing leaders of the British labor party are imperialist to the core and are as anxious to hold the rich Yangtze Valley as Austen Chamberlain and Winston Churchill.

MR. HADEN GUEST, who quit the British labor party because of its official opposition to intervention in China, was given a sound trimming by the working class when he ran for his old seat as an independent constitutionalist. He had the support of the tories. Guest wanted to prove that the people were in favor of "defending their nationalist in China." The people seemed to know that what the government is defending in China is the investments of the imperialists and not the lives of British subjects. So they gave Guest the "bird."

WITH Senator Borah supporting Calvin Coolidge for reelection and defending the intellectual pigmy's policy in China and Latin America, the nation is loand to give the genuine and ready windbag from Idaho a slap on the senatorial wrist. Villard is easily satisfied but there is a limit to his fortitude. He has seen the league of nations acting suspiciously like a war department. He has heard Lord Robert Cecil, pacifist angel, speak or belligerently as a barroom hum. He has seen statesman after statesman talk peace and act war. But who would ever expect Senator Borah to defend the bombardment of Nanking. And this is what Borah does when he puts his okay on United States policy in China. Really, this is too much for Oswald for a week or so.

Bandits Escape

HARISON, Ark., March 31.—The three bandits who robbed the Nawton County Bank of $6,500, today had apparently made their escape from the net believed spread about them in the foothills near here by more than 100 possemen.

GENERAL PAI THREATENS BOYCOTT TO AVENGE NANKING SLAUGHTER

MOSCOW, March 31.—Bitterly assailing the imperialist powers for the Nanking bombardment and threatening a boycott in retaliation, General Pai Chung-hai, commanding the Nationalist forces at Shanghai, outlined Nationalist aims, policies and problems in an interview with the Pravda correspondent.

Blow to World Imperialism.

"The world today is divided into the camp of the imperialists and the camp of the anti-imperialists," he said. "The capture of Shanghai is a blow to imperialism and a step forward on the road to world revolution. We can only exercise active opposition to the united front of imperialism by the closest reliance upon cooperation with the wide masses of our countrymen and all peoples who treat us as equals. We firmly hope for support from the Soviet Union and are convinced of the development of our revolution.

Declaring that the support of the vast masses of China had alone made possible the victories of the Nationalist armies, Pai said, "We also know the imperialists hope for a rupture between the Nationalist armies and the popular masses. But that is impossible. Our basic principle is the union of the armed forces with the popular masses.

Union of Peasants, Workers

"Our problem," he continued, "is to deprive the imperialists of internal militarist support and then throw off their economic yoke. Our policy consists in the reinforcement of and union of the peasants, workers, tradesmen and soldiers.

"As regards foreign policy we do not intend at present to engage in open armed warfare with the Imperialists. Following the instructions of Sun Yat-Sen we do not expect to capture the concessions and the settlement of Shanghai by force.

Threatens Boycott

Threatening the boycott as a means of driving the imperialists out of China, General Pai said, "The Central Committee of the Kuomintang will work out a plan for the restoration of the concessions throughout China. If the imperialists refuse to satisfy our demands we shall compel them by means of economic boycott.

Discussing the Soviet relations with China, he pointed out that the "Chinese revolution forms a part of the front of world revolution. The imperialists are trying to break that front by lies and slander. Sun Yat Sen instructed us to cooperate with the communists who form part of the Kuomintang, and we shall not break the alliance with them.

"The English press in China spreading all kinds of lies on this subject, it ough to be suppressed, but, unfortunately that at present is impossible.

The Nationalist general thinks that China has not reached a sufficient stage of economic development to warrant the establishment of communism.

Denies Russian Control.

"The imperialist press," he concluded, "is now relying on two slogans—that the Kuomintang is controlled by Communists and that the Nationalist Army is controlled by Soviet advisers. This is not true. The Peking Government has foreign advisers, we have Soviet advisers. But that does not mean that our Government or army is under Soviet control."

Start Big Chase For the "Plotters Who Hit Henry Ford"

was the organization of all the farmers of the world into single selling groups to control the prices of each basic farm product.

Cotton alone was excepted from the world plan, Sapiro said, because "it was not feasible." He hoped however to get the producers of all other staple crops into the world farm organizations.

Lowden Implicated.

At the afternoon session Reed stressed the activities of the American wheat advisory committee, of which former governor Frank O. Lowden was chairman. He drew from Sapiro statements that Sears, Roebuck and Company, of which Rosenwald is the head, Baruch and himself had constituted as a fund raised by this committee. Reed asserted these funds were used to promote Sapiro cooperatives but the wheat king said most of the money was spent on a Kansas wheat cooperative. Objections by Sapiro's counsel halted further questioning about these funds, although Reed lodged a strong protest with the court.

Fee Chaser.

"This was a part of the promotion scheme employed by the gentleman to get work for himself and fees for himself," said Reed. "We have a right to learn how much time he put into his legal work for the two associations and whether his fees were extortionate. We feel they were so extortionate that he had no right to collect them in the first place and couldn't be damaged if he lost them."

Reed touched lightly on the cooperative situation in Kansas. Sapiro said he got $1,100 for making speeches in the sunflower state while the wheat farmers were trying to organize a cooperative. He added that he wrote the contract used by the Kansas wheat growers.

Big Pay From Bureau.

In Texas, Sapiro said he helped organize the cotton growers. His retainer is $400 a year, he added, his big earnings came from the Texas farm bureau. It was shown, which Sapiro scored a point when the court refused to allow Reed to inject the wheat king's gross fees into the case. Reed had obtained a memorandum which Sapiro used yesterday to give his net income between 1916 and 1927. The total was nearly $400,000.

Gross Fees A Million.

Reed discovered the memorandum also contained the gross fees received by Sapiro and his associates over the same period. He tried to get the sum into the record to prove his earlier statement that Sapiro had taken $1,000,000 from the farmers.

Sapiro said he had obtained $5,000,000 in loans for the cooperative wheat growers in Idaho, Washington, Oregon and Montana.

Reed then brought out that Sapiro quarrelled with the Idaho wheat growers over the size of his fee for having obtained a government loan for them. Sapiro asked $5,000 fee and $570 expenses but finally accepted $8,000 which the wheat growers were willing to pay.

"You had some controversy over that?" Reed snarled.

"No, not at all," Sapiro replied, apparently angry. "There was just a difference of opinion."

Gold Coast Apartments Hit By Janitor Strike; Ladies Must Open Cans

CHICAGO—(FP) — Unless the owner surrendecs, the 2-day siege and boycott of the exclusive gold coast apartment building will continue indefinitely.

It is all very annoying you know, but Mr. Martin who owns the building thought he had hired a 100 per cent. non-union janitor, but the janitor got converted and joined Local 1, the flat janitors branch of the Building Service Employes Intl. Union. He saved his soul but lost his job—temporarily. The union rushed to the rescue. It picketed the building. It enlisted the sympathy of the milk wagon drivers' union and of the grocery drivers' union. Other unions are ready to be mobilized in this practical demonstration of worker solidarity.

The silk-stockinged tenants in the building are bootlegging their own milk, rolling the peas home from the grocery with their tabla knives and stuffing N8. 2 cans of peaches into the pockets of their spring overcoats.

"AMERICAN IMPERIALISM LIKE A HYENA," SAYS PRAVDA ARTICLE

(Special Cable to The Daily Worker.)

MOSCOW, March 31.—Pravda publishes the following article by Edward Conzen entitled: "America in Anti-Chinese Imperialistic Front."

"The participation of the naval forces of American imperialism which were the first to fire in the criminal bombardment of Nanking will serve as a new lesson for those layers of the Chinese people which cherished illusions regarding the policy of the United States of America towards China, will stimulate fresh manifestation of the heroism of the millions of Chinese workers and peasants and the national revolutionary army.

Shows True Face.

"For the first time the most dangerous enemy of the Chinese people, the strongest among the rival robbers, shows its true face. Until now the United States government tried to cover its real aims with the leaf of hypocrisy.

"The English bourgeois press writes that America understood "too late" the Chinese "danger." However, this reminds one of the entrance into the world war when American imperialism, even though late did its criminal deed. American imperialism is among other depredators more like a hyena than a wolf.

"The imperialist war in China is being "Americanized." American militarists are dealing with the Chinese workers as they deal in their own country, with their own workers as in Ludlow, Colorado and other cities. Provocatory methods in the massacre at Nanking reminds us of the notorious provocations in regard to American revolutionary leaders.

Drive Out the Imperialists.

"More than ever must the Chinese workers and peasants exert all their efforts to drive out the imperialists from China. The Communist parties must do everything to explain to the workers in all countries the international importance of the appalling crime at Nanking.

"Through the infamous Nanking massacre and shooting, international imperialism forever puts itself in a pillory.

"The Nanking massacre make the situation clear, ghastly clear. Even the blind shall now see the real, true substance of the imperialist policy in China. The oppressors have now thrown off their masks and act with lifted helmets. Now it is clear that their policy is a policy of blood and iron. They acted through the bible and with missionaries baited the Chinese people with religious stunts just as merchants baited them with opium. They acted through dollars and capital. But now they are acting through the appalling means of machine guns and incendiary shells, destroying a whole city, murdering thousands of Chinese allegedly because some imperialistic agents were wounded, which is a trifle for modern cannibals.

Exposes United States.

"The Nanking massacre make the situation clear also because it thoroughly exposed the position of the United States. The latter had for a long time posed as a liberal well-wisher of the Chinese revolution, now after everyone sees the Anglo-American bloc in action it is easy to understand that America was but a wolf in sheep's skins which she now throws off in such a disgusting action. The country of George Washington and the declaration of independence is standing today before China in the shape of the rascal Williams who in torrents of blood drowns the independence of the Chinese people.

China Appeals to All.

"Nanking is loudly crying not only to China but to all the world. Imperialist civilization reeks with the plunge. Anglo-American warships bombard Nanking, but does that mean that they bombard the underrated faith in trashy civilization which the imperialists boast of before the masses? Where is the capitalistic "culture"? It is not materialized in destroying buildings in Nanking and in incendiary shells. Where is capitalistic "humanity"? It is covered with blood of the Chinese women and children. Where is the famed 'parliamentarism' of England, of the famed democracy of America? They are entirely in the wild beastly exploits of Anglo-American officers, in the orders of the rascal Williams, in the wild orgies of death, of the bloodily firing on infants from warships.

Hell Takes Toll.

"Where is the policy of 'non-interference' with internal affairs of China'? Is it in shooting to death peaceful Nanking citizens? 7,000 Chinese killed, such is the appalling result of the imperialist 'non-interference.'

"You henchmen of Chinese freedom. However hard you try you cannot bring it down. You shot to death thousands, but against you will arise still firmer legions of millions, hundreds of millions of Chinese. The Chinese revolution will conquer even if you were to mow its path with heaps of corpses. You 'bearers of culture.' Your infamous game will not remain hidden from the eyes of the international proletariat. It will rise to defend those, whom you burn alive, and will brand your crimes at Nanking, your record of atrocity, and will not forget your Nanking shame.

Socialist Defenders.

"International social democracy will try to white-wash your black deed, will try to wash your hands, but every honest proletarian will thrust in your face: 'Criminals, rascals, henchmen,' and will take measures against further bombardments both in China and in other countries.

"Know ye 'civilized' low band that ten million organized Soviet proletarians send you maledictions. Know ye that the blood in the veins of every Soviet worker, is boiling with indignation at the news of the Nanking firing. Still more firmly the workers of the Soviet Union shake hands with the suffering Chinese workers.

In World Pillory.

"The imperialists burnt Nanking, the imperialists outraged the Chinese people which is striving for the goal of liberty.

"The toilers of the world put them in the world pillory and send warm greeting to the toilers of Nanking, martyrs of the Chinese liberative movement. Louder than ever must sound the war cry of the world proletariat. 'Hands off China! Long live the great Chinese Revolution!'"

ECONOMIC MEET WILL NOT HAVE LABOR MEMBERS

Capitalism Has It Sowed Up

WASHINGTON (FP) March 31.—In the American delegation to the Economic Conference at Geneva, just announced by President Coolidge, wage-workers and farmers will have no representation. Requests by organized labor and the progressive organizations of farmers that they each be given a spokesman on this body were ignored. Of the five delegates, big business gets three and Herbert Hoover takes the other two.

Some months ago the suggestion was made by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to President Coolidge, that organized labor wanted to have recognition in the form of appointment of its representatives on federal commissions and delegations dealing with economic and industrial matters. When Coolidge decided to send five delegates to Genava to the economic conference called by the League of Nations, the test of Coolidge's attitude came.

Coolidge Says No.

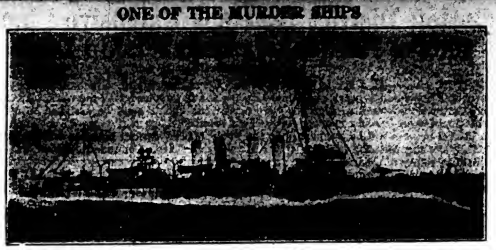
Secretary of Labor Davis was approached by a third party, who showed him that it would be to Coolidge's credit if a trade union official and a leader of the organized farmers were appointed as two of the five delegates. Davis professed to be "all for it." He talked with A. F. of L. headquarters about the plan. Labor and farmer headquarters gained the impression that Coolidge was waiting for these elements to name their men. Word went to Davis that the A. F. of L. was ready to nominate a representative. No response. Davis seems to have failed to convince Coolidge. Possibly he failed even to try.

Henry N. Robinson, a Los Angeles bank president, who was on the American delegation to the labor-capital government conference in Paris at the close of the war which framed the constitution for the International Labor Office, is chairman of the new delegation. He likewise served on the American commission on war reparations which framed the Dawes Plan.

Norman H. Davis, who was assistant secretary of the treasury and also assistant secretary of state, and is now in Wall street, is the second delegate.

John W. O'Leary of Chicago, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and an extreme anti-labor propagandist, is the third.

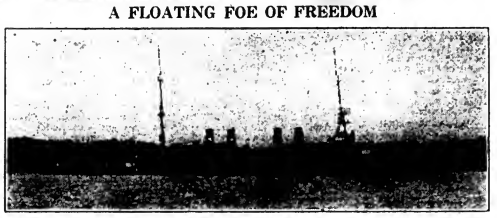
Alonzo A. Taylor, of Stanford University, former right-hand man to Hoover in relief administration in Europe, is the fourth.



For Big Business.

Dr. Julius Klein, director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce in the Department of Commerce, is the last delegate. Like Taylor, he reflects the views and banner of Hoover, to "American big business' struggle for the world market.

This conference will deal chiefly with trade barriers between nations. That means that it will try to reach an agreement for lowering tariff walls so that the nationalism which has run amuck in Europe since the war shall not be allowed to paralyze commerce and lead to new wars as a means of economic relief. The burden of these tariffs is borne by the workers and farmers in all countries. The A. F. of L. wanted representation on the American delegation in order that it might have a hand in restoring economic sanity to the continent. To the degree that prosperity returns to Europe, American economic conditions will be bettered, since American efficiency calls for wider foreign markets.



Coolidge and Hoover appear to have decided that an economic conference is beyond the mental depth of labor unionists and farmers, but that O'Leary of the Chamber of Commerce will know what is going on.

BORNO BOUNCED IF MARINES GO, STATES RAINEY

Declares Barring King Prevented Revolt

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Riot and bloodshed would have occurred in Haiti if Senator King (D) of Utah, had been permitted to land in that country, Rep. Henry T. Rainey (D) of Illinois, declared on his return here today from a visit to Haiti.

Rainey went on to explain that "if the American marines were withdrawn there would be a revolution in Haiti within twenty-four hours." He made it clear in his speech that he did not consider the presence of the marines in Haiti, thwarting the plain will of the people to rid themselves of Wall street's protege president Borno, as anything but good.

Haitians dissatisfied with the Borno regime and American occupation would have been encouraged by a visit of their champion, Senator King, to start trouble, according to Rainey.

"After senator King made his speech in the senate last winter, calling Borno a usurper, extra guards had to be placed around his palace to protect him from possible harm," said Rainey.

"I was told that threats to poison Borno had been made by so-called patriots after senator King's speech."

Polish Textile Labor Gets 3½ Cent Increase; Earn 38 Cents Per Day

WARSAW, March 31.—To end a strike involving nearly two hundred thousand textile workers, a court of arbitration has awarded skilled textile workers, now drawing from 30 to 90 cents a day, a five per cent wage increase. Employes receiving only 30 cents a day were granted a 12 per cent wage increase.

Even with the increase the majority of textile workers earn much less than the eighty cents a day which is considered the minimum subsistence wage for an income.

The court of arbitration was organized by Vice Premier Bartel to end the strike.

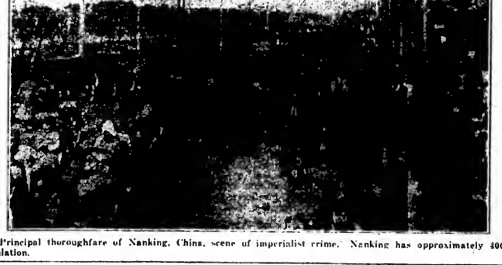
SENATOR EDGE ADVISES CANAL IN NICARAGUA

Ready To Make More Use of Latest Colony

WASHINGTON, March 31.—To expedite ocean traffic between the Atlantic and the Pacific Senator Edge (R) of New Jersey today urged the building of a new lock in the Panama Canal or the construction of a canal through Nicaragua for which "America already has the rights."



He discussed the proposals with President Coolidge, who agreed to submit them to government engineers for study. Edge said he would bring the matter to the attention of congress next winter.

"Within ten years the Panama Canal will have reached the capacity," Edge declared. "It would cost about $125,000,000 to build the lock which would expedite traffic."

He placed the cost of the Nicaraguan canal at between $500,000,000 and $1,000,000,000.

The Panama Canal is paying 67 per cent on the investment, he declared.

Fascist Papers Enter On New Row With Pope Bawl Out Paris Nuncio

ROME, March 31.—The papal nuncio of Paris was severely criticised in the newspaper Tevere today.

He was accused not only of supporting masonic and socialistic plotters against Italy but also of indorsing, by implication, the bitter attack of Leon Blum, French socialist, upon Mussolini and fascism. Blum had accused Mussolini of fomenting war in the Balkans.

The Tevere article has created a sensation in Rome. It practically charges that the nuncio's policy was inspired by high church authorities. The tone of the article indicates the growing friction that has developed between the Vatican and the Italian government.

STANDARD OIL BROKERS REPORT QUARTER BILLION PROFITS FROM JOHN D. GROUP

By LELAND OLDS. (Federated Press).

How oil workers and consumers of petroleum products are providing the Rockefeller Standard Oil dynasty with the income to carry out its far-reaching schemes for world domination is shown in a report on dividends compiled by Pforzheimer & Co. These Standard Oil brokers report that companies comprising the old Standard Oil group paid cash dividends for 1926 totaling $200,319,594.

The 1926 dividends exceed by about $47,000,000 or 30% the dividends paid in 1925 which at that time were a record. They are more than 3 times the dividends paid in 1914. They are about twice the capitalization of the old Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey. Practically all the subsequent capitalization of the Standard Oil group has been accomplished through stock dividends.

Always More.

Standard Oil cash dividends for the first quarter of 1927 were $56,333,060, compared with $40,580,317 the first quarter of 1926. This exceeds any first quarter since 1913. At that time normal dividends were swollen to $55,652,423 by a special disbursement of more than $28,000,000 by Standard Oil of N. J. on repayment of loans from former subsidiaries. It suggests that 1927 will exceed the extraordinary 1920 record in generosity to the wealthy owners.

The steadily increasing flow of cash dividends to Standard Oil owners, as compiled by Pforzheimer, is shown in the following table:

Standard Oil	Cash dividends
1912	$51,686,614
1913	107,795,361
1914	62,692,883
1915	62,401,204
1916	98,627,875
1917	99,957,923
1918	103,460,916
1919	103,901,477

Cash dividends paid by Standard Oil since 1911, the year of dissolution, have totaled $1,826,967,168. In addition there have been stock dividends to a total of nearly $1,500,000,000. The owners, primarily such families as the Rockefellers, Pratts and Mellons, have taken about $3,300,000,000 on a capitalization which in 1912 had a par value of less than $300,000,000. Their wealth has multiplied at least 11 times over at the expense of workers and consumers.

Stock Dividends.

The stock dividends declared by some of the constituent companies were extraordinary. Standard of Indiana leads with stock dividends of 2900% in 1912, 150% in 1920 and 100% in 1922. The aggregate addition to the holdings of the owners by these dividends was more than 14,000%. In the case of other companies the aggregate stock dividends have been: Continental Oil 1100%; Standard Oil of New York 600%; Atlantic Refining 900%; Ohio Oil 433%; Standard of New Jersey 400%; Prairie Oil 350% and Vacuum Oil 300%.

Standard Oil is a leading example of the tendency to inflate the claims of ownership in order to sustain monopoly profits at the expense of workers and consumers.

Sinclair Earnestly At Work to Avoid Prison

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Harry F. Sinclair's fight to avoid jail was resumed in the District Supreme Court today with the beginning of arguments on the wealthy oil magnate's motion for a new trial in the recently concluded contempt proceeding.

BUY THE DAILY WORKER AT THE NEWSSTANDS

The HOW of the Sustaining Fund

The appeal for the establishment of the Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund is meeting with an organized and enthusiastic response. Workers' organizations, labor and fraternal organizations, and Workers Party units are taking up seriously the task of laying the financial basis for the growth of a national labor organ. This is how it is done.

One comrade is selected by the organization to be the go-getter for the fund, The DAILY WORKER Agent, call him what you will. Each comrade makes out a pledge to pay a certain amount every week, according to his resources. In addition the organization, if it has a treasury of its own, should pass a motion to contribute a certain amount every month. The DAILY WORKER agent is the comrade responsible for the regular collection of this fund.

In this manner a broad subsidy is built which serves as a development fund to advertise the paper and as a means to enlist the services of new talent for the paper. The more substantial this fund, the greater are the possibilities before the paper. A bigger and better DAILY WORKER is the best assurance that the work which Comrade Ruthenberg has so ably begun, will be carried forward to success. LET'S FIGHT ON!

The Social Revolution Is On the March

The tremendous enthusiasm aroused among the Russian masses by the capture of Shanghai, the huge demonstrations thruout the length and breadth of the Soviet Union in protest against the Nanking massacre, the wholehearted support of the great and heroic struggle of the Chinese masses by the workers and peasants' government are things which world imperialism fears and hates.

The Soviet Union with its 150,000,000 people and China with its huge mass of 400,000,000 are a unit against imperialism—a mighty force which all the brutal strength of world reaction cannot defeat. It is the greatest force that the world has ever seen and it is organized. It does not move blindly but with powerful purpose and it gains strength daily.

It is easy to lose one's perspective as a result of the flood of lies, half-truths, distortions and inanities which the capitalist press pours forth and it is of the utmost importance that we understand, and never allow our understanding in this connection to be warped, that in no period of the world's history have such titanic social movements been under way. The rise of capitalism and the overthrow of feudalism was Punch and Judy show compared to the vast amphi-theatre where struggle the armies of the masses and their class enemies.

It is the social revolution on the march that shakes the foundations of imperialism today. Poisoned by the revisionism of the socialist bureaucracy, thinking only in terms of modern capitalist countries, the working class in Europe and America find it hard to believe that the masses in the so-called backward nations have taken the lead in the class struggle and are winning tremendous victories in the sector of imperialism's defenses hitherto considered impregnable.

What a satire on the reformist leadership of the workers and farmers of the West! While they wrangle here over methods of obtaining a few crumbs from the table of capitalism the masses of the East are taking over the storehouse from which capitalism's provisions come.

The major task of the Western working class is to perfect an unbreakable unity against the common enemy with the masses of the East and thereby sign the death warrant of world capitalism.

The Attack On the Miners Begins—Threat to Whole Labor Movement

The drive to destroy the United Mine Workers has begun.

By closing their mines and refusing to pay the union scale of wages the coal operators have challenged the whole American labor movement. From the start of the negotiations it has been evident that the coal barons were pursuing a rule or ruin policy. They are determined to force a wage cut, introduce such changes in working conditions as will tend to greatly lower production costs, tie up the union with efficiency schemes or—smash it into flinders and resurrect the feudalism which prevailed in the mining camps before the union was built by the untiring struggle and sacrifice of thousands of miners.

The fight of the miners is the fight of the whole labor movement. If the UMWA is defeated there will undoubtedly be launched a nationwide offensive against the other unions. It is impossible to overestimate the gravity of the situation and back of the miners must be rallied every ounce of strength the American labor movement has.

The miners face the kind of a fight that is hard to wage. There is no national strike with its dramatic power to arouse the miners themselves and other workers. The initiative has been left in the hands of the coal barons by the weakness of the official leadership of the union and it made damaging concessions, such as district agreements, before the lockout occurred. This has weakened the position of the union and makes it almost impossible for it to make the issue of a national agreement a rallying center for its struggle.

In the former union fields the strike will begin as a test of endurance. The immense quantity of coal in storage makes it possible for the coal companies to stop production without seriously affecting the market for at least two months. The mines will stay closed in certain sections for this period at least and then in all probability an attempt will be made to operate with strikebreakers.

If the union continues to allow the initiative to rest with the operators it faces certain defeat. It can take the offensive by launching an organization campaign in the non-union fields, declaring a strike in these areas and cutting down non-union coal production while at the same time extending the power of the union. The miners who are locked out and therefore idle can be utilised to good effect as organizers in non-union territory.

The miners will win in this struggle by smashing the most important weapon of the operators—the non-union fields. 100,000 miners organized in West Virginia and Kentucky in the next two months will bring the operators to terms. This is the program of the "Save the Union" bloc in the union for the present situation and it is the program that will win for the miners.

Two Hundred Finnish Workers Will Journey In Soviet Republics

LENINGRAD, March 31—In the middle of April there will arrive here a delegation of Finnish workers consisting of two hundred members, the first delegation of this year. They will stay in this city several days, and afterwards will visit other cities of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

State Troopers On Trial.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., March 31.—Thirteen state troopers today pleaded not guilty to charges of manslaughter in connection with the shooting of Miss Beatrice Meaney during a siege of the Meaney homestead at Jutland by troopers last December. Bail of $3,000 was fixed on each of the men named in the indictment.

No Extra Session.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 31.—Prospects of an extra session of the legislature to repass Governor Smith's constitutional executive budget proposal had waned considerably.

Boston District Develops Extensive Plans for the Ruthenberg Membership Drive

BOSTON, Mass.—At a special meeting of the Committee of 15, a sub-committee of five members was appointed to work out complete plans and to go ahead with the work. At the first meeting of this Sub-Committee decisions were made that quotas shall be assigned to all Party units on the basis of one new member for each old member.

A special bulletin will be established in the Party office. Special bulletins will be published periodically dealing with the question of the Membership Drive. Comrade R. Shohan was elected permanent secretary of the committee and all applications must be directed to him. Comrade S. D. Levine was elected chairman of the Drive Committee.

2,000 People to be Approached

It was decided that over 2,000 workers, sympathizers, readers of Party press should be approached and an attempt made to draw these people into the Party. Special sub-committees were appointed to take charge of work.

A trade union committee consisting of Nurdock, Zannerib and Zeligman was appointed to call special meetings of all Party trade union fractions and to concentrate on the Membership Drive in the trade unions. Comrade Nurdock was appointed secretary of this committee.

Women's Committee

Comrade Sarah Yellin was appointed secretary of the Women's Committee to lead the drive in the women organizations. Comrade Elsie Pulter and Finkelstein were placed on this committee.

Mass Agitation

A committee of five consisting of Puleo, Marks, Resnick, Shohan and Shklar were appointed to carry on agitation through mass meetings, open air meetings, factory meetings and neighborhood meetings. Comrade Puleo was appointed secretary of this committee.

For work among fraternal organizations a committee of five was appointed with Comrade S. H. Levine as secretary. Other members of the committee are Karas, Kutisker, Zelms, Whittier. To co-ordinate the work with the Y. W. I. Comrade Feurabend was elected to cooperate with the Y. W. I. on this work.

Instructions were sent out to all Party units and to all cities in the district to elect Membership Drive Committees with similar sub-divisions. The District Committee makes arrangements not only to get new members, but also to keep the old ones. For this purpose the Political Committee appointed a special membership committee assigned to examine new applicants and to assign them to the proper phase of the activities. District language organizers and bureaus are also active in this work. Lithuanian Bureau has called a special meeting and decided to cover all fraternal organizations and similar organizations in a concerted drive for membership. Lithuanian Bureau also issued an appeal for financial support for the Party so that they can assigned a special organizer to carry on this work.

Comrade Heino, editor of the Finnish paper reports that many successful meetings are being held all over the New England district. Russian and Ukrainian Bureaus plan special lectures in their respective languages as well as drive among fraternal organizations. Italians are negotiating for a paid organizer during the period of the drive. The Jewish Bureau is also making plans to meet all left wingers and fraternal organizations and Jewish unions. A special meeting of the Scandinavian Bureau is being called to consider the question of the drive and to reach a large number of Scandinavians in the district.

Armenian Bureau Active.

Armenian organizer informs the District Office that he will also call a special meeting of the Armenian Bureau for a drive for members among the Armenian workers, who hold prominent positions in the basic industries of this state. They plan to reach the workers of all the other nationalities, and held factory and mass meetings to carry on the work. Shop nuclei are particularly active in this work.

The Party is engaged in leading several important struggles and the workers will fight for better conditions under the leadership of the Party and will be asked to join the movement.

The whole district is humming with activity and it is expected that good results will be produced within a very short time. A proud tribute to Comrade Ruthenberg is being built in District No. 1.

"To Build Left Wing"

Furriers League of Philadelphia, Pa.—"Grief and pain has filled the heart of every class conscientious worker over the loss of our leader in the struggles against American imperialism and their agents in the labor movement.

"At the open grave of our leader we pledge to do our utmost to build a powerful left wing to fight under the banner of our dead comrade.

"His heroism of our leadership in many battles of the workers will always be an inspiration in the struggles that are ahead of us in the American labor movement."

Jewish Section Workers Party, Pittsburgh, Pa.—"The Jewish workers of Pittsburgh are shocked by the death of our Comrade Ruthenberg. May his death give us more inspiration to work harder for our ideal."

CAREFUL SCHOOLING FOR HOMELESS CHILDREN IN THE SOVIET UNION

The stale, but recurrent, yarns in the capitalist press of America and Europe about bad treatment of "swarms of homeless children" in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics are ably answered in a series of articles written especially for The DAILY WORKER by its Moscow correspondent. Below another of these articles is printed. Previous articles have told of the homeless children of other lands, the fact that the U. S. S. R. spends more for the care of its waifs, the product of long war and the blockade famine, than any other country does for its orphans.

Let the British Women's Trade Union Delegation tell of what they found to be the provision made for dependent and delinquent children in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

"(1) RECEIVING STATIONS. These are institutions for waifs who require immediate aid. They remain here until place is found for them in a home. There are separate homes for boys and for girls.

2) OBSERVATION AND DISTRIBUTION CENTRES. These are intended for the reception of abnormal and wayward children. The attendant-surgeries doctors, teachers, psychologists, who endeavor to ascertain the psychological and other peculiarities of the child, in order, in each case, to apply the most fitting method of treatment.

3) CHILDREN'S COMMISSIONS. Consisting of a teacher, as chairman, a representative of the authorities, a worker-judge), and a doctor who determines what special measure should be taken for the education of the wayward or abnormal child. This commission investigates the conditions under which the offense was committed, and looks into the living, school and working conditions of the child, reporting on the results of the measures applied in the case. (This court and its procedure was described in a preceding article of this series. WFK).

4) CHILDREN'S INSPECTORS. They are to watch over the youths in public places, and render them protection and aid when needed. (These are either field representatives of the Children's Commissions or of the "Friends of the Children" and are infrequently both. WFK).

5) HOMES FOR ABNORMAL CHILDREN. In the Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republics there are 152 schools for morally abnormal, 60 schools for feeble minded, 21 schools for the blind, and 43 for deaf-mute."

An interesting school following the two latter categories visited in Samara bears the name of our world-renown genius, Helen Keller. WFK).

Health of Homeless Children.

The capitalist press charges: "Practically all are confirmed alcoholics . . . one third are drug addicts, the government statistics show. . . . 35% are suffering from repulsive diseases." The government figures show no such thing, because it is not so. Of course there are many sick children among them, and the whole treatment is based upon the theory of removing all physical ailments that might stand in the way of their resuming a normal life as quickly as possible.

In Moscow government figures do show that 20.6% of all children taken in were ill. Anaemia heads the list with 7%, then retarded development 4.5%, mental defectives, 2.7%, drug addicts and alcoholics 2.8%, tuberculosis 2.2%, syphilitic 0.2%, others 1.4%. A physician on the commission told me, upon consulting his personal records, that of 4591 children examined during this direction, 112 had at one time or another used cocaine, but only 12 were to be considered pronounced addicts, and only 20 alcoholics.

Dope In America.

Even these minimum figures reflect no pleasant picture, and many are the special institutions in which they are cared for. Yet are dope-fiends and hop-heads unknown in America? Certainly not. Let our authority Fosdick, in his "American Police Systems" speak: "There is scarcely a city in the country where this insidious practice has not gained a foothold. It has recently been estimated that there are 300,000 persons addicted to the use of narcotic drugs in the city of New York alone." (Page 357, citing extensive authorities). Sub-normality is also a concommittant among such homeless types, the percentage running 33% and 25% respectively in two large series of "repeaters" studied in the Juvenile Detention Home in Chicago, while in another detention home 50% were found to have inherited physical defects, and 30% were feeble-minded.

As soon as a child either comes in off the streets, or else because it has gotten into trouble it is brought in, it is cleaned up and examined and treated physically. Every resource at the command of modern science is employed to win it for collaboration in proletarian society, and in the overwhelming mass of cases the effort is successful.

The III International School Home.

This is an old monastery, a part of which is used for public school purposes, another part for dormitories for about 150 "the preschool" and a third section as an observation station where for the first six months the children just after they have been picked up on the streets are kept for grading. They range in age from 8 to 15 and mix with other children only in the industrial school.

After the six months the normal children are sent to a public school, their absorption in the common life of the normal children being an essential factor of their reclamation. Those who fail to meet the normality tests at the end of the six months get another six months in he observation school or are sent into special institutions.

Wages In Trade Schools.

Those over ten work in the trade school, which in this case has four departments, metal work, woodworking, bookbinding and shoemaking. These shops are not abstract affairs, but in them the boys make things of actual use to the school and themselves. They are paid wages and have complete self administration. They remain here until they are 16, when work is provided for them and living quarters either in some work-ing class family or in a home such as that previously described.

Not far away down the Tverskaya is a shoemaker school where a similar lot of boys are learning to be shoemakers. Four hours a day in the shop and four hours in theoretical schooling is the rule. The boys have an excellent reputation in the shop and get good dinners at cut-rates in a nearby cooperative restaurant. Their wages begin at 16 rubles a month and they get a raise about every six months. They are trade union members as soon as they start in the shop-school, and special efforts are made to draw them into trade union life, which is very much more alive and many-sided in Russia than elsewhere.

This "self-administration" is no joke. I visited a Work Commune near Cheliabinsk, and it happened to be the night of the general meeting. Right to twelve year old boys and girls gave account of the stewardship over various departments—and they did it with a painstaking detail and a political aplomb that many an elder would envy. Half in joke I asked the 10 year old "Chief Farmer" how his crops were getting on and it took him ten minutes, in all gravity and expert knowledge, to tell me so. No adult farmer would have shown more interest and ability in coping with his work than this lad. This self-administration includes everything in the communes, and especially the food closet. The adult attendants get their supplies from the children's committee.

Workers Don't Dare to Buy Clothes They Sell

(By A Worker Correspondent)

In the service elevator of "Henri Bendel," a 57th Street specialty shop, which employs many hundred workers to sew and sell fine clothes to the idle rich, there hangs a sign which reads somewhat in the following manner:

"The employees of this store may not buy any gowns, wraps, or furs, or any other articles sold here, before, during, or after sales. Nor may they wear anything that is a copy or adaption of the clothes sold here. It is requested that none of our employees ask for special permission to buy. No one is to go to Mr. Henri Bendel and ask for his authority to waive this rule. It applies to every one employed here. No one is an exception."

Must Pay For Licking Fencer

LOS ANGELES, March 31.—Gerald de Merveuz, Hollywood fencing master, today stood victor in his personal damage suit against Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, motion picture producer. By a vote of 9 to 3, the jury awarded de Merveuz $500 of the $25,000 damages he sought for an alleged horsewhipping administered by the defendant.

DRAMA

Theatre Guild Company to Play in Chicago Next Season

The Theatre Guild players will play six weeks in Chicago next season, beginning September 26th at the Studebaker theatre. Contracts were signed late last week by Theatre Guild officials and the Repertoire Theatre Company, lessee of the Studebaker. While the company is playing in Chicago, the Guild will produce DuBose Heyward's play, "Porgy" at the Guild Theatre in New York. Under these arrangements, the acting company will not open its local season until early in November.

The arrangements with the Repertoire Theatre Company call for certain Guild productions with their original casts. The repertory will be sufficiently varied to allow all the Guild's players an opportunity to appear in at least one role in Chicago. Following the termination of the Theatre Guild arrangement of six weeks, the Repertoire Theatre will begin the production of certain plays already produced by the Guild in New York, to be played by their own company.

Broadway Briefs

"The Third Day," a play from the Czecho-slovakian, which A. H. Woods is bringing back from Europe is scheduled for early production.

There will be a special performance of "Pygmalion and Galatea" at Hampden's Theatre this afternoon under the sponsorship of the Westchester League of Women Voters.

There will be no less than six closings this Saturday—perhaps seven. The plays definitely listed are "Hallelujah," at the Moresco; "The Brothers Karamazov," at the Guild; "Earth," at the Grove Street Theatre; "Loud Speaker," at the Fifty-second Street, and "Menace," at the Comedy.

"The Garden of Eden," a drama which aroused considerable interest in artistic quarters, is scheduled for production by A. H. Woods and Arch Selwyn. Lowell Sherman, the understand, will play a leading role.

ANNE SCHMIDT

In "The Trumpet Shall Sound" at the American Laboratory Theatre, on East 58th Street.

"Dorothy and the Wizard in the Land of Oz," will be the newest offering of the Children's Saturday Morning Theatre, opening this Saturday at the Princess Theatre.

"Fog-Bound," by Hugh Stanislaus Stange will open tonight at the Belmont Theatre. Nance O'Neil, absent from Broadway for some time, is the star of the production.

Casting for "Machine-Wreckers," the play by Ernst Toller which is being produced by the Workers Drama League, has already begun. There are still a few choice parts that are still open and you are urged to come to the League Studio at 64 Washington Square South, this Friday evening and co-operate.

Music Notes

Reinald Werrenrath, baritone, will appear in recital at Carnegie Hall next Sunday evening.

Anna Duncan will give a dance program Sunday evening, April 24, at the Guild Theatre.

Dusolina Giannini will give an all-Italian program at Carnegie Hall on Saturday afternoon, April 24th.

MICHAEL GOLD'S "FIESTA" LIKE NO OTHER PLAY ABOUT MEXICO YOU EVER HAVE SEEN

While lies about Mexico, and the intrigues of Secretary Kellogg in his efforts to grab Mexican oil fill the front pages of the newspapers and the editorial columns of dailies and weeklies, DAILY WORKER readers are to have a chance to see a true picture of the Mexican people and they are turning from paternalism their peasant life in the production of and investing and freeing themselves land from the yoke of the past.

There has never been a Mexican play like "Fiesta," because Michael Gold is telling of the struggles of fellow workers and not writing as the he were an agent of the northern oil magnates. It is the sort of play the readers of The DAILY WORKER will surely want to see, and by going any night during the week of April 11th you will be giving the Daily a big financial boost.

Get your tickets now, for the demand is beginning already. Buy them at Jimmy Higgins Bookshop at the DAILY WORKER office, 108 East 14th street. Phone Stuyvesant 6384.

Mothers Ask Housing Relief; Surveys Prove Shortage Exists Here

The existence of the housing shortage is proved conclusively in the following article, and the subsequent one by The DAILY WORKER's housing investigator. Surveys, facts and figures are presented, all drawn from authoritative sources, none of which may be questioned.

By WILL DE KALB

There is one point around which the entire housing controversy revolves, that might as well be settled right now. That is, is there a housing shortage? Of course, the facts revealed in The DAILY WORKER's housing survey should be conclusive, but to clinch the matter, this writer will quote recognized authorities to prove the claim.

A survey made by the United States Bureau of Health made public recently states that there are 26,219,100 dwellings in the entire country. One fifth of these, the report shows, are in and about the state of New York. According to the statisticians, nowhere in the United States is there such a density of dwellings as there is in the vicinity of Greater New York.

Dwelling Survey.

As a matter of record, here are some of the figures.

New York & Vicinity..	5,476,000
New England	1,818,000
South	3,219,300
Elsewhere	15,706,800
United States	26,219,100

The figures show that the metropolitan area has more dwellings than any other section of the country. It has five times the number commanded by New England, double those in the south, and one third the number of dwellings in the rest of the country, giving it one fifth the number in the entire United States.

No Building Here.

It is more significant to note that the figures for New York have changed very little in the past five years, while the population has increased tremendously. This has placed the rent-payer in the clutches of the unscrupulous landlord. And has the rental figures in this newspaper's survey showed, the landlord has taken advantage of every opportunity.

Another survey, undertaken by the Department of Labor, showed that outside the New York area, one half of the dwellings in the United States, 13,426,400 to be exact, are owned by persons whose income is less than $2,000 a year. Thus, workers in the rest of the country, solve the housing problems by buying their own houses.

City Workers Handicapped.

In the cities, where the densely populated area, however, this is impossible. Plot of land, 40x100, that would be covered by a one-family house in other areas, must have support a house sheltering twenty and thirty families. So the workers in the congested areas must look elsewhere for a solution.

That the 5,000,000 dwellings in the metropolitan area, which includes New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania are inadequate to house the millions of people who live there is proved by countless surveys, petitions, and resolutions, made by independent and interested organizations.

Mothers Protest.

Not long ago the League of Mothers' Clubs of the United States Neighborhood Houses made a stirring protest to the New York legislature, appealing for assistance to curb the activities of rent-gouging landlords. In writing to former Senator James W. Wadsworth, who lost out in the last election when his open affiliation with the moneyed interests were exposed, Mrs. Mildred O. Schroder, president of the league, said:

"The greatest need and wish of the mothers of this city is to have better homes to live in, where they will not have to pay so much for rent that they have very little income left for other necessities. We implore you, we beseech you, to aid us in improving the terrible conditions in which so many of the women of New York live and work." Despite the fact that the league endorsed and fought for each new housing bill, the improvement they hoped for was not forthcoming. The landlords, you know, have a lobby like all other vested interests.

So the records run. In the next article, this discussion will be continued. One of the most important proofs of the existence of a housing shortage, and of the terrible living conditions in New York, is found in the report of A. F. Hinrichs, of the New York State Bureau of Housing and Regional Planning, to the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce. This will be printed in the following article.

The so-called "citizens committee" composed of bankers and manufacturers, immediately upon its formation, pursued the policy of importing scabs to the city to replace the organized building trades workers under protection of gunmen. During this whole period, the scabs enjoyed the protection of the city police as well.

The Chicago Street Car Men's Union in its official organ, The Union Leader, of Saturday, March 5th has the following to say regarding the Chicago elections in an appeal to its membership from which we quote in part.

Advocates Wage Cut.

"Surely none of you have forgotten the fare rate hearings of 1922, instituted by the Thompson administration as a political move to hoodwink the people in an attempt to establish a five cent fare. Special counsel was appointed by William Hale Thompson, then mayor, to prosecute this issue. A volume of evidence was introduced by counsel representing the Thompson administration affecting to show where economies could be introduced in the operation of the surface lines that would make a fare decrease possible. The bulk of this evidence was against the wages and labor conditions of the employes.

Numbers of employes who operated non-union concerns were placed on the stand by the city representatives to show the wages and conditions prevailing in their industries. A carefully selected list of the street railway systems of the country, nearly all of them non-union and not comparable with Chicago, was presented by the city representatives to show that inferior wages and labor conditions existed on those systems.

Immediately came a demand by the company that a wage cut of some 19 per cent, the elimination of the 8 hour day, an increase of hour spread and the loss of 20 per cent. of straight runs, must go into effect August 1, 1922. A strike was called and lasted for six days, with the result that the best settlement we could get was a reduction of 10 cents an hour to the 20,000 Amalgamated members in this city and the saving of our labor conditions.

William Hale Thompson was as much responsible for this reduction of wages and for the loss and inconvenience of a 6 day strike to the citizens of Chicago as any man connected with the political group that brought it about. Thompson was mayor of Chicago at this time. He caused the institution of the proceedings that resulted in the loss not to the companies, but to the car employes and their families. He appointed the special counsel that presented evidence as unfair and antagonistic to the employes as any union destroying corporation has ever presented in this country."

The present support enjoyed by the Democratic candidate, Mayor Dever, from the city silk stocking elements is enough indication to show that labor can expect as little from this party as from the Republican party.

Dever as Bad.

Only recently Mayor Dever had an opportunity to show where he stands in regards to the desires of organized labor. The Chicago Federation of Labor has definitely gone on record opposing the platoon system in the Chicago public schools as well as the junior high schools. Both schemes now being promulgated by the school board appointed by Mayor Dever. A few weeks ago the Federation adopted a resolution protesting strongly against the appointment in the Chicago Board of Education of Mrs. W. S. Hefferan showing clearly her anti-labor record. This had no effect on the mayor, she was appointed nevertheless. To the discomfort of the supporters of Bill Thompson it may be emphasized in this respect the Thompson administration was no better. The first term of office of Bill Thompson witnessed the carrying into effect of a wage cut of seven and one-half per cent for Chicago teachers.

Thompson & Crowe, Inc.

The election of William Hale Thompson for Mayor of Chicago will mean to make State's Attorney Crowe the political boss of the city. The unscrupulous use of the States Attorney's office on behalf of the employers in their fight to destroy the trade unions is a matter of record of which more will be said in the next article. Nevertheless the history of events carry sufficient evidence to prove the disastrous effects of the policy of rewarding friends and punishing enemies among the agents of privilege.

Missouri Cossack Bill Dies

JEFFERSON, Mo., (FP). — The Missouri State Federation of Labor succeeded in preventing the passage of the state police bill. The measure dies in committee.

SOCIALIST OUSTS MILITANT FROM JEWELRY UNION

Beardsley Expels His Opponent for Office

The depths to which the Beardsley clique in the Jewelry Workers' union will descend in their attempt to stifle the will of the membership is seen in its latest move, that of expelling from the union, Sam Nesin one of the leading progressive and candidates against Beardsley for organizer in the coming election.

Nesin has addressed a lotter to the members of the local but as yet the press sents his case. He points out that the reason given for his expulsion does not hold water.

It reads in part as follows:

"Having been a member before and worked at the bench first as an engraver and then at setting and now as jewelry clerk, which is still under the jurisdiction of the I. J. W. U. I felt that I was at least entitled to be a member as well as brother Beardsley who was not a member of the local when it was becoming organizor nor did he work at the bench at the time of his admittance. The same applies to Joseph D. Cannon. There is also Ruben Schwartz our dalegate to the United Hebrew Trados who was re-admitted into the local while not working at the bench and who is at present not working at any branch of the jewelry trade.

In spite of all these precedents I received the following letter of Feb. 8th, 1927:

Dear Sir and Brother:

You are hereby summoned to appear before the Executive Board of Local No. 1, I. J. W. U., on Tuesday, Feb. 8th, 1927, at 6 P. M., in Room 307a World Building, New York City.

Fraternally yours,
(Signed) S. E. Beardsley,
Org. Secy., Local 1.

I responded to this summons and asked if there were any charges against me.

No Charges.

Brother Williams informed me there were no charges but that the Executive Committee had a right to call a member and question him. After a great deal of questioning they asked me to leave and I later received the following letter:

To Samuel Nesin:

Dear Sir:

This is to notify you that the Executive Board of this local at their meeting held on Tuesday, Feb. 15th, 1927, in Room 307a, World Building, N. Y. C., by a unanimous vote declared your membership in local 1, I. J. W. U., null and void on the ground of misrepresentation in making application for membership and your own admission that you have worked as a salesman for the past ten years.

I remain, very truly yours,
S. E. Beardsley,
Org. Secy.

By order of the Executive Board.

Afraid of Election.

It is not March. Elections according to the constitution are to be held during the month of January. Many hasty and illegal actions have been taken by the administration. It is clear to me that the action taken in declaring my membership "null and void" at this time is not because of any misrepresentation but an effort by the present administration to intimidate seriously with a true expression of the membership in an honest election. It is fear of defeat that makes them frantic.

I appeal to you brothers for an opportunity to defend my membership as against the autocratic action of the Executive Board. The Executive Board had no right to act in violation of my constitutional rights in declaring my membership "null and void." The regular procedure of preferring charges and the membership electing a committee to investigate these charges was never complied with, and I request the right to appear before you to state my case and appeal from the decision of the Executive Board.

Fraternally yours,
Samuel Nesin.

BRUTAL TACTICS OF N. Y. POLICE CITED IN COURT

CAMBRIDGE, March 30. — The brutal third-degree methods of the New York police came in for a fierce attack today at the hands of Attorney George A. Douglas, in his formal argument to the jury in the trial of Peter McLaughlin, charged with the murder of James Ferneau in the famous Waltham "car barn" slaying.

Capt. Oscar F. Cary of the metropolitan homicide bureau was singled out by Douglas in his bitter accusations against the "confessional" tactics resorted to when McLaughlin was first arrested.

"Capt. Cary is known the world over for his third degree methods," said Douglas. "The look of ferocity on his countenance and his brutal methods have given him an international reputation," the attorney declared.

Sign Painters Will Go On Strike In Jersey Unless Men Reinstated

By PAUL STRUBEN
(Worker Correspondent)

JERSEY CITY, March 30.—Fearful of the increasing strength of the Sign Painters' Union, Local 1157, of Hudson county, the O'Mella Outdoor Advertising Co., has been discharging those of its employes known to be members of the union. At a shop meeting held last night, at which every worker in the firm's employ attended, it was unanimously decided to strike unless the company reinstated all discharged men at once.

The O'Mella Co., has a monopoly of national outdoor advertising in Hudson county. Tomorrow night a committee of the workers will present their demands at a meeting of the employers of commercial sign painters.

Jersey City Central Union Will Organize Hotels, Restaurants

JERSEY CITY, March 30.—Determination to begin the immediate organization of the 2,000 hotel, restaurant and lunch stand workers of Hudson County marked the meeting of Central Labor Union at its last Committees will be appointed in the very near future, and the program of unionizing these workers will be started with vigor. Assurances of support from the entire labor movement of Hudson County were received in this organizational work.

Jersey City Cab Men Strike.

JERSEY CITY, March 31.—22 taxi drivers employed by Mac's Taxi Co., and stationed at the West Shore Ferry, have been on strike here since Saturday. They are fighting for union recognition. The independent cabs, meanwhile, have been reaping a harvest thru increased business.

Bosses Get Injunction.

HACKENSACK, March 31.—Thru the aid of Merrit Lane of Newark and vice-chancellor Backes, two open shop and labor hating lawyers, the local unions of the Teamsters, Hoisting Engineers and Iron workers have been blocked in carrying on their attempts to unionize workers employed in building and supply firms in this city and vicinity.

An injunction restraining the union in its work was granted by Backes last February, and it has just been ordered continued, on the ground that the firms involved were losing business and that the workers were boycotting certain materials.

Re-Zoning Mask For High Fares.

NEWARK, March 31.—Representatives of the Public Service Corporation have been appearing before the Public Utilities commission of this state during the past two weeks and presenting arguments in favor of re-zoning and re-routing the busses and street cars in Essex county. This proposal is in reality a scheme for raising the busses on three lines.

At a recent hearing Percy Young, business manager of the company, admitted that if the re-zoning plan is not followed out the company would have to raise its fares. He frankly admitted that the reason for buying out the Independent busses was to establish a monopoly of transportation services. He also conceded that the Public Service Corporation was in favor of monopoly in the transit field.

Several times in the past the Public Utility Commission has been overruled by the U. S. Supreme Court when the local courts have ruled against the local corporation. They have succeeded, however, with the aid of their agents, in putting through the Paving Bill, which will take millions of dollars from the people of New Jersey. The re-zoning scheme is obviously in the same direction.

Lay Off Refinery Workers

BAYWAY, N. J., (FP).—Another 500 refinery workers have been laid off by Standard Oil, making about 2,000 since the first of the year.

This reduction in nearly half of the working force comes with the development of a new "cracking" process for gasoline. The new process requires fewer men.

Free Speech Symposium in Newark

"Free Speech, How Free Shall It Be?—Assembly, Press, Movies, Stage Education,"—this is the subject of a symposium that will be held at Krugers' Auditorium, Belmont and Springfield Aves., on Sunday evening, April 3.

Among the speakers are announced Arthur Garfield Hays, Florence L. Haines, Rev. Wm. S. Chase, Theresa Hepburn, Julia Marlowe and E. H. Sothern.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Senator Hiram Johnson (R) of California, called at the White House today and bade President Coolidge good-bye. An inquiring young reporter asked the Californian as he was leaving, whether he intended to be a candidate for the presidency next year.

"My young friend," replied Johnson, "I am the only member of the United States senate who had the germ, from whom it has been entirely eradicated."

BISHOP BROWN SPEAKS TO BIG ST. PAUL CROWD

He Wants All People To Do Work

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 31.—William Montgomery Brown, who spoke here at the Labor Temple, attracted one of the largest audiences that has ever assembled in the city during the last seven years. The assembly hall at the Labor Temple was packed.

His lecture "The Power of the Workers" was well received, those present listened very intently throughout, broken only by periodic applauses.

Trade unionists may differ with Bishop Brown in regard to religious beliefs, but it is certain that they O. Ked. his demand that the workers organise and that they use their organized power for bettering of their conditions.

All Do Useful Work

He said he looked forward to the time when all citizens would do some kind of useful work. He did not include the clergy in the orthodox churches as performing this function, and plainly stated that he himself as a clergyman had been during the many years past, only a parasite.

An invitation had been extended to him to preach in the Peoples' Church here, but on account of pressure from certain members of the congregation, the engagement was cancelled. According to statements in the daily press here, he had said that he was sadly out of place in an orthodox pulpit.

The members of the International Labor Defense, who made the arrangements for the lecture, wish to extend their thanks to those outside the organizations who by their cooperation helped to make this meeting a success.

PHILLY COMMENTS

Philadelphia, March 28.—The rutted, deteriorated streets of Philadelphia, long an eye-sore to pedestrians and a back-sore to motorists, are now up for investigation by a grand jury. The politician-contractors were too busy plucking juicy Sesquicentennial plums to pay attention to that other source of lucrative income—street paving.

Folwell Elected Mayor.

The capitalists of Philadelphia had a big blow-out last night in honor of the textile baron, N. T. Folwell, Mayor Kendrick was on hand, saying of the honored plute, "Mr. Folwell paved the way for my nomination and election." The workers of the Collingwood Mills, owned by this self-same Folwell, should remember these significant words when they again cast their ballots for a mayor.

DUBINSKY'S GANG IS FRAMING UP ON MARTIN FELTMAN

Arrest Innocent Cutter; Released on Bail

The policy of frame-up by which the reactionary officials of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union are attempting to intimidate the membership of the cloak and dressmakers' unions was continued yesterday with reprisals against Martin Feltman, member of Cutters' Local 10, who was arrested on a trumped-up charge brought by William Lubelski. He was accused of taking part in an assault at an hour when the time clock record of his shop shows he was at work.

Feltman has been an active worker in the union for the past seven years, and demonstrated his loyalty during the last strike in spite of the orders of David Dubinsky, czar of the cutters' local, which discouraged many cutters from picketing. Since the illegal expulsions of four locals of the International, Feltman has been openly and publicly threatened by Dubinsky because of his stand in favor of the Joint Board and the rights of the ousted members. Members of the Legal Committee, of the Joint Board, who have investigated his case declare it a clear case of frame-up in which Lubelski, the complainant, has been used by the Dubinsky gang to "get" the innocent cutter.

Out On Bail.

Feltman was released on $5,000 bail by Judge Silverman in the sixth district court, for a hearing on April 1.

Five pickets were arrested at the instigation of the Industrial squad as they were picketing the shop of Slavien and Kauffman, 227 West 36th street this morning. They were Sam Kugler, Mary Shore, Bertha Seid, Mary Leyne and Anna Greene. Police testified that one of the girls had shouted "scab" when the industrial squad brought up a scab to go to work in the shop, which was called on strike by the Joint Board because of the employers' refusal to recognize the business agents of the Joint Board. Members of the industrial squad demanded the arrest of the girls, police said. They were all released upon payment of a $2 fine by Judge Mekenneny in Jefferson Market Court.

Postpone Goretzky Case.

The case of Joseph Goretzky, manager of Local 35, before Judge Rosalsky in general sessions, has been postponed until April 8. The Sigman gang has been particularly anxious to incriminate Goretzky in some framed-up charge, since he is manager of Sigman's own local, the Pressers' No. 35, who have repudiated Sigmanism.

World Banditry Strives For Unity of Its Forces Against the Chinese People

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

FRANTIC efforts are being made by world greed to develop 100 per cent imperialist unity in the war on China.

It is recognized, especially in London and Washington, that only thru considered action is there any hope of defeating the growing military and political strength of the Nationalist government.

The reply of the Chinese revolution is that even the combined weapons of the profit nations will not keep China enslaved to the imperialists.

Great Britain and the United States join in taking the lead in this furious struggle that has developed into one of self defense for the international banditry.

Conditions are not the same today as they were when "The Powers" gove the Chinese people a blood bath as a result of the so-called Boxer Rebellion.

At that time the divisions within China, resulting in the weakness of the nation as a whole under the Manchu Dynasty, made it possible for the capitalist nations to indulge in the luxury of divisions among themselves.

England and Japan developed their alliance against the spread of the influence of Russian czarism. Japan's position was strengthened thru her victory over czarist Russia in 1904-5.

It was while her ally, Great Britain, was engaged in a life and death struggle with Germany on the European continent, that Japan presented her infamous "21 demands" upon China, the aim being to subject the young Chinese republic completely to her will.

That resulted in Japan leaning less than ever upon Great Britain in seeking plunder on the continent, especially in Manchuria and Korea.

Altho the so-called "open door" policy laid down by Secretary of State John Hay, for the United States, in 1898, resulted in raising this country somewhat in the esteem of the Chinese people, nevertheless, Hay's note was dictated by considerations based on the economic interests of the United States. This appears very plainly from the statement of W. W. Rockhill, a former United States minister to China.

After referring to the grabbing of Chinese territory and the extortion of "spheres of influence" by the European "Powers" and Japan, which marked the end of the last century, Rockhill explained the reason for the "Open Door" policy as follows:

"It became apparent to the United States that if it did not take proper measures to check the movement its trade would be wiped out, its religious and educational interests restricted, and its influence and prestige reduced to nought."

James H. Dolsen, in his book, "The Awakening of China," declares it should not be lost sight of also that this principle of the "Open Door," according to Overlach, "recognized vested rights and special interests within spheres of influence, as long as a certain amount of opportunity for others is preserved."

Dolsen points out:

"The ostensible result of the acceptance of the "Open Door" policy was to place the merchants and the industrialists of all countries upon an equal footing so far as plundering the Chinese was concerned."

T. V. Overlach says:

"That the motive of the foreigners was money-making or land-stealing the Chinese have fully discovered from an intercourse of over 100 years. They have also discovered that under the regime of extra-territoriality, of international settlements, leased territories, concessions, railway zones and control, Chinese sovereignty, and Chinese rights were disregarded at innumerable times and they found that the interests of the Chinese were never consulted, altho she had to pay the bills." ("Foreign Financial Control of China.")

But China has awakened. The Nationalist government of China is out to rid the country of imperialist robbery. This affects all the robbers, altho it may affect them differently.

The United States and Great Britain, the fattest and richest among the bandits, hang together closer than the rest. London and Washington consider plans for "cooperation" to stay in China, fearing that unless they get together they may both be kicked out.

It is pointed out that France and Japan stand a little aloof. French newspapers ridicule the fraudulent propaganda of lies being spewed forth by the capitalist press of the United States and England. They expose these lies, especially the repeated lies about the alleged "dangers" faced by "foreigners" in China.

There were Japanese warships to be sure before Nanking, along with those from this country and England. But they did not join in the murderous bombardment that claimed 7,000 lives.

Not that the profit takers of France and Japan are any the less hungry than those of the Anglo-American alliance. But they employ different methods to reach the same goal, and these methods create differences.

All workers can easily see that while the imperialists struggle to develop their unity, there is very little being done by the labor officialdom in the different countries to cement the solidarity of the working class in support of the Chinese revolution.

The Communist International and the Red International of Labor Unions sound the call for the employment of every means available to give aid to the struggle of the Chinese people.

But the Amsterdam Trade Union International is silent. The Second (Socialist) International is not heard from.

J. Ramsay MacDonald runs away from Great Britain, planning a tour of the United States during the crisis. J. H. Thomas, another laborite who wears the yellow stripes of reformism, also remains loyal "to king and country."

In the United States the William Greens and Matthew Walls spend their time waging war on the "left wing" in the trade union movement.

Surely it is a time for the masses of workers themselves to take inventory of their inaction while the Chinese workers are fighting and dying in the age-long struggle for the emancipation of all labor. It is no accident that today's fighting front of the revolutionary change thru which the world is passing, is to be found in China. It was a logical development. Let labor the world over, which includes the United States, rally all its strength to defend this front against the enemy of the international working class—world imperialism.

Economic Notes

By T. LOAF

A "REVOLT" is growing in Wall Street against the "shackling" of American bankers by the government in the business of foreign loans.

There exists notably an embargo on loans to those countries that have not yet settled with the U. S. Government the question of their indebtedness to this country. The ban refers chiefly to France where by refusing to sign the war debt agreement has deprived itself of the public loan market here. Of course, neither the State nor the Treasury departments could legally interfere with the placing of a French loan, if that course were taken by the bankers. But the "international bankers" know very well the value of working in perfect harmony with the Government that comes to their support any time there appears some danger of defaulting on paymants to these same bankers on the part of some hard pressed debtor.

As it is, it was Germany that secured about a third of the foreign loans floated in the American market during 1926, while France received nothing, the rest of the capital placed abroad going chiefly to Canada and Latin America. The whole of that capital reached in 1926 the tremendous sum of $1,354,824,670 and constituted like everything else in this country—with the notable exception of proletarian class consciousness—a "record" for the world.

This year the foreign loan situation looks somewhat different and less favorable for the "international bankers." The figures compiled by Moody's Investment Service show that the respective activity up to now is considerably below that of 1926. Moreover there is being noticeable according to the same authority "a steady decline in the quality of such loans."

We shall deal some other time with the reason for this turn of affairs. At present let us note that the bankers are pressing upon the Government to remove the ban on loans to France whose issues were in the past conspicuously absent from this market.

THAT despite Washington's ban France has been able to obtain money from the American bankers in an indirect way is a known fact. The bankers were buying abroad the "choice pieces" of French financing and locking the respective bonds in their vaults in anticipation of a change in the policy of the government.

But Wall Street is not satisfied with such indirect procedure. They demand a free investment market, a public offering of French securities, instead of buying them secretly. French stocks and investing the money themselves. They complain that the English and the French as well as the Dutch and the Germans are reaping now a gold harvest by getting the French loans that are yielding high interest rates. This at the time when in the American capital is yearning for profitable foreign investments and the New York Stock Exchange is taking steps to make Wall Street the only world money market of the world not only for bonds but also for stocks.

So Wall Street is picturing to the Government the danger of losing its financial leadership to London, its old London rival. The pressure is not without some effect, as witnessed by the recent announcement of Andrew Mellon that the Government had no objections to private offerings of French securities in this country. But the ban against public loans still remains, though the bankers are convinced that soon there will come an "adjustment" of this situation. It is not excluded that Mellon's desire to see his wife's daughter in Europe has something to do with this belief, as there are some other problems of international finance to which he will have to attend in Europe.

THE enormous financial change that followed the World War and made the United States the financial giant of the world has found this country—because of the rapidity of the change—in various ways unprepared to assume its new financial position. The country has notably turned from a comparatively minor holder of the world's gold supply to a possessor of almost half of the world gold reserves. The gold holdings of the United States stand now (March '27) at the enormous figure of $4,585,787,000 out of a total world supply estimated at $9,606,759,000, or approximately 48 per cent. This represents a credit base that calls all the time for inflation on the one hand and for an outlet to other countries with less gold on the other.

However it is not the gold question that we want to speak of now. It is the matter of financial supremacy of the New York Stock Exchange. Yon see, the New York Stock Exchange is still behind London as far as dealing in international securities and stocks is concerned. London quotes daily thousands of foreign bonds and stocks. We are far behind it. New York is now the money center of the world and occupies the place that England held before the war. In 1913 England lent to foreign borrowers the sum of $987,635,000, whereas in 1926 she was able to advance only $301,970,000 against the $1,354,000,000 lent by the United States.

But the laws of the State of New York on the one hand and the rules of the New York Stock Exchange on the other hamper at present the listing of shares of foreign companies. So it is proposed to change both, whereupon a veritable flood of foreign shares may be expected to invade the New York market. The industrial stocks of Germany and the European countries are already now in anticipation of this heavenly time, showing a considerable boom. "The urge of the public for profit will follow this flood of foreign securities on the local market may be imagined.

My Country Tis of Thee

By NAT KAPLAN.

The Reactionaries Canonize A Rebel

Although George Brandes was preeminently an aesthete whose most notable work was done in the fields of literature and criticism, the revolutionary turn of mind of the Danish Jew and world citizen finds expression in many of his comments. Were it not for his all-absorbing literary interests and a profound pessimism he might have been a political revolutionary. As it was his teachings were colored with a parlor-red tint.

And now, "liberal" rabbis and other leaders of American Jewish thought are attempting to adopt Brandes as one of their own. In one week three New York rabbis extolled his Jewishness. The man never denied his semitic origin—his name was George Morris Cohen Brandes—but it is established that he never attended a synagogue. And the "American Hebrew" of October 29, 1926 quoted him as saying: "Mine is the free-thinking point of view, not the Jewish attitude. My convictions are in accord with the concepts of Spinoza, who was reviled by the Christians and driven from the synagogue by the Jews. Thus, I feel myself to be a Jew only when abused as a Jew."

Unlike Spinoza who was upset sentimentally by a formal excommunication, it appears that Brandes made his self-willed separation clear.

In addition to his nonconformist stand with reference to religion, he was opposed to nationalism, asserting that "nationalism characterizes our present age. The nations have fallen into the stupid habit of praising themselves. Almost every nation thinks itself the first in the world. . ."

"The twentieth century has been a century of illusions. Europe entered it devoted to illusions. Our most famous men everywhere believed what they wanted to believe. Cecil Rhodes ever in England spread the doctrine that the instincts of humanity would produce world peace at will. Dostoevsky in Russia preached the doctrine of patience, while Tolstoi and Kropotkin announced their belief in the essential goodness of humanity. The people themselves had gone further. Good-will had been preached throughout Europe and America. As far as the masses of the people were concerned, all nations were peace-loving, even in 1914. To be dangerous, it was sufficient for them merely to be patriotic. Patriotism and world peace do not agree."

And now these "liberal" rabbis—oh rub impercably-clad shoulders with other American patriots patronize Brandes as one of their own. Which leads me to observe this with reference to my people—they will celebrate anyone who happens to be a Jew and attains fame. Today some of them are hailing Jesus as a Jewish teacher; the madly exalted Nazarene who proclaimed universal brotherhood, the poor beaten Jew who was framed by Pharisees like those who now admit Brandes, the rebel, into their ranks.

They are making a posthumous attempt to bring Brandes into the fold, the man who incurred the hatred of the ecclesiastes by opposing woman suffrage on the ground that by giving the vote to women the power of the clerical party would be increased because women attend church more often than men. They attempt to paint him as a religious man and Danish patriot while they forget that he was at one time driven from his homeland and consistently opposed to religion and nationalism.

That he went no further in his teachings may be explained by a statement he made to me at about this time: "I have given up all hope about the progress of mankind. I find that cruelty, hypocrisy and stupidity, instead of diminishing, have become unconquerable enemies which articles and books are fighting in vain. . ."

One wishes that he had made closer contact with the masses and thereby gained a stronger faith and a more courageous spirit to help him in his fight. This much is certain: Brandes was and is far removed from the types of manhood and of intellect represented by the Jewish "liberals" who attempt to call him one of their own.

SALT AND POETRY

By MARGARET GRAHAM.

THE train pulled into Artiomovsk at two in the morning. Artiomovsk means four things to us, at least in anticipation. It means a huge new industrial town with over half a million inhabitants, named after Artiom, the miner, for whom a gold statue had been erected in the center of the town. It means salt, for to one side of it lay the famous salt mines. It meant coal, for it was the gateway to Gorlovka and the coal mines of the Don Basin. It meant mud, for we had been warned that at this season of the year the road would be well nigh impassable and a visit to the salt mines dependent on the roads.

It was raining when we deposited our half dozen suit cases, typewriters and steamer rugs on the station platform. The cobbled streets showed gloomy puddles in the flickering light of the station lamps. We were tired and not in the mood for hotel hunting at two in the morning in the rain. The disreputable droshkys with their sagging mud guards offered the only solution to our problem, even though the prices asked for a trip to the only two hotels in town were exorbitant. After some maneuvering, we took the lowest bidder and were off.

The first hotel gave us a flat "no." They were full. Another rookie took us to the second—only to echo the same answer. In despair we found ourselves confronted with a huge pile of stone representing some strange uncouth giant keeping a lonely vigil in the center of a cobblestone court. It was a terrific sight. Futurism gone mad in memory of Artiom, the Miner. I suggested that we sleep behind him and try to find shelter beneath the square gray blocks which had somehow been thrown up in the form of a man. But he was useless for our purposes. We went back to the station.

It was three o'clock. Tea and sandwiches took another half hour. It looked like sitting up all night. We had plenty of company. Workers came and went as trains pulled in and out. From time to time the station master with his official cap carrying the emblem of his trade, appeared and disappeared. He was a friendly looking youngish man and not averse to conversation. After all we were Americans and not unwelcome. Finally we decided to take him into our confidence. He left for a few moments and returned with a nod. We followed him around the station platform and into his little two-room flat. He worked at night. We could have his bed. His wife and baby girl could get along in the other. It was all arranged very quietly and graciously. A mattress on the floor for one of us . . . two of us in the engineer's bed and the wife and child in the other. So at four we got to sleep.

By the following noon it had cleared and we had arranged with the Trade Union Committee for a trip to the salt mines. Then we would take the train for Gorlovka.

Fertile fields for all the world like our Middle West. Blue sky and golden sunshine, red soil and dappled cattle. Here and there a group of pottery chimneys. One of the machines struck a ditch in the road and all but capsized, but the chauffeur kept manfully on. We finally met again at the salt mine. It was named for Schebshenko, the Ukrainian poet.

Salt and poetry and the economics of production . . . what a strange people these Russian builders were! There were 9 salt mines in the section. All but three had been closed down and the three were producing as much as the nine had produced before the revolution. Machinery was the answer. They showed us the new machinery with glowing eyes . . . and even now it was only 50% mechanized. Yet they were able to export to Latvia, England and Switzerland.

We followed our guide to a square platform, were locked in and dropped 480 feet to the bottom of the mine. Set in a crystal corridor 90 feet high and almost as wide, the picture of the poet Schebshenko smiled at us under his fur cap. The walls, vaulted ceiling of salt crystals, reflecting the dim lights with a thousand polished surfaces . . . truly a palace for a poet.

Twelve hundred miners were at work in these huge corridors. The old workings, were being used as a theatre. In another place there were lunch tables . . . in another stables where mine ponies were born blind and died from never having seen the light of day.

Around a bend we saw lights set in the walls. Then a group figures emerged . . . and we called to them: "Greetinga from your American Brothers"; they came down curiously, faces shining in friendly welcome, three gaunt figures, each with his miner's lamp. . . . One stripped to the waist, gray beard and all, looked ghostly figure. He spoke to us for his companions. We grouped ourselves around him, watching his eager face. He spoke his words carefully, he was sending his message to his brothers so many miles away.

"Brothers," he said, "this is the story of the salt miners. . . . What I say you can believe. . . . I have been a salt miner 28 years . . . and I know what we have gained since the revolution. This is our mine now . . . we have machinery . . . we have shorter hours, only six underground . . . we have steady work . . . 22 days a month . . . we have one month's vacation with pay . . . and our own houses rent free . . . with light and heat. . . . We have our own clubs, and theatres and even our own gardens. . . . Our hospitals and nurseries for our children. . . . Tell our fellow workers in America these things. I greet them in the name of the Miners' Union of Artemlosk." We exchanged good wishes. . . . We shook hands. The three salt miners climbed back to their niches in the wall, drilling the holes for the fuses, mixing salt with poetry in the name of the Ukrainian poet Schebschenko, for the glory of the workers and peasants . . . mining salt to be sent to Latvia and Japan and Switzerland, knowing that these things were now theirs, sealed with the blood of their comrades—who fought and died for them in the glorious Revolution.

By stepping before it?
Climb on board with the crew
And control it?

Between the bridge and the river
Is room for repentance,
But hardly
If, when the boss bumps you off,
You refrain from bis ankles.
Better still:
Put your feet in the Factory
And, while learning to march
With the Masses,
Find a future that's well worth the living
And well worth the dying.
As the students of Russia discovered;
And China, before you.

They sweetened the soil
With their sweat,
And the fields of the future
With red blossoms blow
From their going.

ELMER GANTRY: SCOUNDREL.

Elmer Gantry, by Sinclair Lewis. Harcourt, Brace & Co. $2.

Had I been a religious preacher instead of a Communist and had a copy of Sinclair Lewis's latest shocker gotten into my hands and its contents into my head I believe I would jump into a nice clean sewer, wallow in the depths and think I was going thru a purifying process, or great would be my disgust with the clerical profession. Of course this is presuming that all preachers are not entirely devoid of a sense of decency and that their brains are capable of normal functioning after a period of years in the business of lying to themselves and to their customers.

"Elmer Gantry" is the story of a rotarian preacher, the kind that would make a successful insurance agent, quack doctor or travelling salesman. He could carry his liquor like half a dozen men; had a good memory for little things and his conscience was as elastic as a pair of rubber gloves. Here is "Elmer Gantry" in brief:

The scoundrel of the story is introduced to us in a state of blissful and boisterous intoxication in a Cato, Missouri, saloon, whence he and his pal Jim Lefferts sojourned for relief from the droughty wastes of Kansas. Both were students in a baptist college, the it can be said about Elmer that his studies chiefly consisted in learning the latest wrinkles in the art of seduction, the acquisition of fresh stocks of obscenities and occasional skinfuls of booze.

Elmer Gantry was designed for service in the baptist vineyard tho he felt more at home in front of a bottle or in the company of the ladies of pleasure who furnished him with fleeting solace when contemplation of a barren bible-pounding life drove him to despair.

Aided by his atheist roommate Jim Lefferts, Elmer long resisted all efforts to save him. But finally he was subdued by a giant Y. M. C. A. secretary who was about as spiritual as an army mule. This brute-man got Elmer by threatening to knock his block off unless he came to Jesus. Elmer had an inferiority complex and this soldier of militant christianity soon had him hitting the sawdust trail. Jim Lefferts, the man of intelligence lost out to the man of bone and beef in the struggle over the soul of Elmer Gantry. The fact was, Elmer had no soul. He was all appetite.

Next thing we see is Gantry delivering a lecture from a pulpit and plundering one of Robert Ingersoll's famous speeches for the occasion. It was the atheist Lefferts that suggested the sacrilege. It got the morons going and from then on Gantry was on the upward trail with the exception that his trials slips from grace when the flesh went down before the devil or the smellers of baptist deacons scented on Elmer's breath a strong odor of corn whiskey. Still, Elmer had a good pair of lungs, a glib tongue and carried his ignorance with greater sang froid than the deacons. He got by.

Elmer Gantry took to seductions as a duck takes to water. His first conquest was the daughter of the deacon of the first church to which Elmer was assigned. Lulu Bains fell to Elmer like quail to the wandering Israelites. But Elmer came near falling before old man Baina's shotgun after a spurned rustic lover of Lulu's, suspected that the spiritual activities of Mr. Gantry were going too far.

This little incident ended in a victory for the preacher, who maneuvered the rustic into a compromising position and won the deacon's apologies. It was a case of the survival of the fittest.

Elmer got his big chance in a city with 200,000 people. But while on his way to his post he ran into a saleeman who had a pint of Bourbon on the hip and the preacher went on a bat with everything thrown in, that lasted three days and was the means of getting him fired. He then turned his hand to selling farm implements and was a top notcher at the game. But the fire of soul-saving burned in his veins and when he had one look at Sharon Falconer, the pulchritudinous evangelist, the dead spit of Aimee McPherson, Elmer decided to save more souls, provided he could save Sharon from the respectable Oxonian Englishman, who taught her how to read and write.

Elmer won and lost. He won Sharon, saved many souls, advanced his salary and was doing big time when a fire burned the big tabernacle to the ground and Sharon Falconer with it.

After this Elmer had a few unpleasant experiences trying to make a living until he was given a church in Banjo Crossing and was invegled into marriage with the chief owners of the church, father and mother, found Elmer consoling their daughter one evening as they returned from a walk. Elmer cursed and went thru with it. From then on he advanced at a gallop until he reached the pinnacle of his career in Zenith where he lined up with the wealthiest people in the city, scorned vice, infidelity, free thought and general intelligence, was caught by a female blackmailer and almost ruined, was saved by a wealthy churchmember who put a detective on the female seducer's trail, who was compelled to sign a confession exonerating Elmer, in return for which she received her fare to a distant city. Elmer was cleared. The published story of the scandal was disbelieved and Elmer was received with thundering applause by his flock even as was Aimee MacPherson after her return from the little cottage in Carmel-by-the-sea.

This is a synopsis of the story and by no means a complete one. It is a book of 432 pages, with something worth reading in every line. It is the most powerful popular indictment of religion that was ever written on this continent. It will be a popular book because Sinclair Lewis knows his Lulus. Elmer Gantry is not the whole thing. He is the trained ram that Lewis uses to lead the clerical sheep to the slaughter. And what a slaughter there is! One reading of this book cannot but fail to make every layman in the midst of this aggregation of trained frauds would feel as comfortable on an ear of sweet corn in a barrel of cow dung. If this book has any weakness it is that Lewis proves his case only too well. It is a thesis and a novel jammed between two covers.

The author is refreshingly impartial in his treatment of all sects. There it a suggestion that the catholic church is a little bit more dignified but equally dishonest. Lewis knows the protestant factions better than the Roman opium joint so he only takes a couple of jabs at the pope's main graft.

Lewis makes it quite clear that the preachers from the bushwacking evangelists to the scented mummers in turned back collars are for the rich and against the poor with a few exceptions, so few that they barely prove the point. The characteristic of the novel "Elmer Gantry," I take it, is the reason why most of our allegedly liberal critics have gone thru this masterpiece with microscopes at rest looking for grammatical errors and stylistic flaws. Damn those literary nits! "Elmer Gantry" is a great book because it turns the searchlight in a masterly manner on one of the greatest cesspools in modern society.

The time will yet come when poisoning the minds of the people with religious dope will be considered as reprehensible an occupation as pimping is today. If future generations may not have entirely succeeded in wiping out the scourge and religious bootleggers may still ply their nefarious trade to underground addicts, instead of using the lash, a modern father may read chapters from "Elmer Gantry" to an erring son who may be drawn to the underground religious racket as adventure-seeking youths of long ago were drawn to the navy.

Every preacher and some ex-preachers in the United States are certain to see something of themselves in "Elmer Gantry." They will say that Elmer is not typical. Nobody but a person of ill-balanced judgment would conclude from a reading of the book that every clergyman's life is one darn seduction after another. What is obvious, however, is that the church business is a gigantic fraud, manned by the greatest collection of specialized hypocrites that ever lied themselves out of working for a living.

T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

IMPERIALISM GLORIFIED.

The New Korea, by Alleyene Ireland. E. P. Dutton Co. 1926.

In these days when even "liberals" speak disapprovingly of imperialism it is interesting to find a volume which has nothing but praise for the brutal rule of the Japanese in Korea. The reason for the author's admiration can be found in the introduction to the volume where he declares himself doubtful of the benefits of rule by the masses and in favor of "efficient" government by a "small group of trained officials" like that of Mussolini in Italy.

From this premise one can understand Mr. Ireland's enthusiasm for Japanese rule in Korea where there is government by terror and violence which has few equals outside of Italy and where a highly centralized machinery has been built up for the sole purpose of keeping the Korean masses enslaved. The author devotes the greater part of the volume to a description of this state machinery. He describes in considerable detail and with evident enthusiasm the Japanese colonial government, the law courts, and the prisons. But he fails to mention that this machinery is used to throttle public opinion and to prevent the Koreans from rebelling.

The remainder of the volume is devoted to the economic development of the country. Pages of statistics are given to show the growth of imports and exports, of manufacturing and banking, but nothing is said of the exploitation which produces this wealth. The misery of the mass of the workers and peasants and the growth of revolutionary sentiment among them are ignored.

WEST VIRGINIA NON-UNION MINERS TALK STRIKE

U. S. and Britain Split Over China

Report Coolidge Orders Admirals Not to Follow England Into War—NOW—to Save India

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Great Britain's efforts to drag the United States into a war to protect British investments in China appear at present to be doomed to failure.

President Coolidge, it was learned today, has instructed American officials in China that "it is as much their duty to resist involving the United States in a war with the Chinese people as it is to safeguard the lives and the property of American citizens."

Tricked By British.

Hoping to find in a united China a lucrative field for investment, finance capitalists have no intention of pulling British chestnuts out of the fire. They have been bringing pressure to bear upon the administration to take an independent attitude toward China.

Realizing that American officials and newspaper correspondents have been tricked by the British foreign office into yelping for a war to protect Hongkong and India, the administration has ordered its Chinese officials to stop the propaganda which has been flooding the Nationalist press.

Moore Bounced?

Those in close touch with the situation regard as significant the absence of any dispatch from Frederick Moore in this morning's New York Times. Moore, who is rabidly anti-Cantonese, has been feeding wild pro-war propaganda to the Times and the absence of his daily atrocity story coming on the eve of Coolidge's action is regarded as extremely significant.

England Moves Toward War.

LONDON, April 1. — Great Britain is rapidly moving towards open war on the Chinese Nationalist government. Whether she will succeed in dragging the United States and Japan into an openly hostile attitude looks doubtful.

The government's draft note to China, which was approved by the cabinet this afternoon, is understood to contain demands for "the punishment of those responsible for the Nanking outrages", "indemnity for the victims" and apologies to the "government whose consulates were looted and attacked."

Current Events

By I. A. LEFFLER

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT Jr., the three-million-dollar failure who started at the top in the newspaper business and soon found himself at the bottom, is on Hearst's payroll in the capacity of editorial writer for the piffle-magnate's tabloid at a juicy salary. In the Daily Mirror of March 29, Vanderbilt got excited over the "yellow peril", yellow Hearst's favorite theme. The ex-millionaire pictures "hordes" of "armed Orientals" sweeping down on the rest of the world and transforming peaceful valleys into lakes of gore.

THERE is no originality in Vanderbilt's dread. The Kaiser claimed to be one of its patenteers. Teddy Roosevelt often ground his teeth with satisfaction over the carcass. Vanderbilt was a lot of a liberal while running his own tabloids. But you don't have to scratch a liberal very deeply until you find a reactionary. What is worrying the imperialists and their literary hirelings today is not a yellow peril but a red peril.

The Daily Worker Greets The Freiheit on Its 5th Birtday

HAIL TO The Freiheit! The DAILY WORKER, the official organ of the Workers (Communist) Party, greets its brother organ in the Jewish language on its Fifth Birthday. The Freiheit has become a powerful weapon in the class struggle of the worker. It is an able and strong foe of the bureaucratic traitors in the Needle Trades Unions. Its anniversary celebration tonight at Madison Square Garden is a great event in the history of the labor press. Long live The Freiheit. Hail the victory of the workers! Hail Communism!

American Delegate To Geneva Quarrels With France Over Aviation

GENEVA, April 1.—The League of Nations preparatory disarmament conference today turned its attention to aviation, having adopted the first reading of a formula for a convention on land disarmament.

Hugh Gibson, American delegate, announced that the United States would oppose any attempt to link civil and military aviation in a disarmament scheme. He said the United States favored only the limitation of military air supplies, aviators and reserves.

"Military and civil aviation are closely connected," said M. Boncour, the French delegate." The situation of the country having no civil aviation must be taken into consideration."

Right Wing Fur Officials In With Bosses

Bosses Can't Make Workers Register, Say Progressives

All previous attempts to smash the New York Joint Board of the Furriers' Union having met with defeat, the Sepcial Reorganization Committee of the American Federation of Labor which was appointed to take full charge of driving the progressives from the union, has openly joined hands with the employers it was revealed yesterday in a letter sent out by the Associated Fur Manufacturers, Inc.

The president of this association, Samuel N. Samuels, advised his members that the board of directors had decided to ignore the leaders of the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union and recognize only the International Fur Workers' Union in matters that concern the union.

Natural Partners.

This announcement of a collaboration policy between the reactionary right wing forces and the bosses did not come as a surprise to members of the Joint Board. They knew the manufacturers association was carrying on negotiations with the rights, and they have prepared for some such development as this made public by Mr. Samuels.

S. Liebowitz, assistant manager of the Joint Board points out however that this decision was made not by the members of the manufacturers association but by the board of directors which acted without consulting its constituents.

Didn't Ask Members.

Liebowitz also recalls the fact that it was just a year ago this month, during the fur strike, that the manufacturers' association held secret negotiations with these same officials of the International Fur Workers'

Russian Workers Give $50,000 To Sufferers Of Nanking Shelling

MOSCOW, April 1.—The Red Trade Unions have sent $50,000 to China for the relief of those who suffered in the bombardment of Nanking by British and American warships.

Sigman Refuted By Liberal Committee

His Charges "Groundless" Says Secretary

In announcing yesterday the formation of the "Committee of One Hundred for the Defense of the Imprisoned Needle Trades Workers", which has opened headquarters at 22 East 17th street, New York, the secretary of the committee, Ann Washington Craton, characterized as "groundless" the charges made on Thursday by Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, when he accused members of the executive committee of the American Civil Liberties Union of joining a plot to raise funds for Communist propaganda purposes by associating themselves with this Defense Committee.

In two long letters addressed to the American Civil Liberties Union, and made public by him on Thursday, Sigman violently protested against members of the Civil Liberties Union joining with other liberals in an effort to raise funds for the relief and release of the imprisoned cloakmakers and furriers.

Committee Hadn't Even Met.

At the time of Sigman's attack, the committee had as yet made no public announcement of its formation; or of its purposes. Sigman did not know its personnel, nor even its official name.

First Meeting Monday.

In her announcement yesterday, Miss Craton states that the committee has not yet met officially, and no official action of any kind. It will hold its first meeting next Monday, when Frank P. Walsh, chief counsel for the defense of the imprisoned furriers and cloakmakers, and Joseph R. Brodsky, counsel for the furriers will speak.

Workers Must Be Freed.

"It is the committee's belief", says Miss Craton, on behalf of the Committee of One Hundred, "that the heavy sentences of these men must not be allowed to stand. Every effort must he made to free these men from prison cells, and to relieve their families. Defense and relief must also be provided for other active union workers, whose strike activities have placed them with the shadow of prison bars."

Liberal Committee.

The committee of One Hundred includes leading writers, artists, playwrights, attorneys, editors, ministers and men and women prominent in humanitarian movements. Among them are Forrest Bailey, Em Jo Basle, Sudan Brandeis, Bishop William M. Brown, Howard Brubaker, Arthur Calhoun, Dr. Allen Carpenter, Harry W. L. Dana, Anna N. Davis, Floyd Dell, John Dos Passos, W. E. B. Du Bois, Francis E. Faragoh, Sara Bard Field, Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, Lewis S. Gannett, Arthur Garfield Hays, John Haynes Holmes, Paxten Hibben, Henry T. Hunt, James Weldon Johnson, Freda Kirchwey, John Howard Lawson, Upton Sinclair, Harry Ward, Rev. Charles C. Webber, Dr. Robert Whitaker, Rev. Eliot White, Justine Wise, C. E. S. Wood, Charles W. Wood, and W. E. Woodward.

Sigman Fights Defense.

The following extracts from Sigman's letters to the American Civil Liberties Union show to what lengths he will go in his efforts to prevent the relief of those workers who are in jail for their strike activities."

"We beg of you to appreciate the

Frame-up Against The DAILY WORKER Editors Put Off to Thursday

The case against the editors and business manager of The Daily Worker, who were summoned to appear in the Third District City Magistrate's Court, Second Ave. and Second St., yesterday morning to answer to a charge of violating section 1141 of the penal code against the publication of "lewd, lecherous, lascivious, and disgusting matter," has been postponed until next Thursday.

A poem entitled "America" by David Gordan, which appeared in the magazine section of The Daily Worker of March 12, is responsible for the charge. Two members of the Bomb Squad who served the summons declared that the action was inspired by complaints coming from "a well-known patriotic society."

Aid For Passaic Jobless Asked By Unions

Employment Relief Urged At Joint Conference

PASSAIC, April 1.—Steps to relieve the grave situation caused by the continued unemployment of thousands of textile workers in this city and vicinity were urged at the conference held tonight at the textile union headquarters under the direction of a joint committee of the Trades and Labor Counell of Passaic and the District Council of the Textile Workers.

Due as directly to the present slump in the woolen industry, most of the time during the day and the night sifts have been abolished altogether, according to Gustave Deak, president of the district council. He reported that last week the Botany Worsted mills, one of the largest plants in the city, layed off 400 workers, and it is now likely that they may even shut down altogether.

Urges Action

Declaring that "the gravity of the situation calls for immediate action," the conference called for immediate assistance. It recommended that the city start construction and repair work at once.

At the conclusion of the meeting, after it was decided to call a larger conference for some night next week, with representatives of all organizations interested in this problem, Deak, on behalf of the District Council, issued the following statement:

Start Real Relief

"Last night's meeting was the first step in the movement initiated by the Passaic Central Labor Union and the United Textile Workers of America to start real relief for the thousands of unemployed workers in this city.

"The meeting was called in a hurry. In addition it was found necessary to change the place of meeting at the last minute. However, the interest shown by those present emphasized the importance of the problem. Our organization is, of course, the most concerned.

While the unemployment situation here affects many other workers, it is the textile workers who are suffering most because of the present slump in industry. Thousands of textile workers are unemployed, although their strike was settled several

Mellon Leads Drive To Cut Miners' Pay

Kansas Contract Not Signed; Ohio Operators Ask Conference; First Frame-up Occurs

INDIANAPOLIS, April 1.—Outstanding developments on the first day of the lockout of the miners of the central competitive coal field were: The reported decision of large numbers of the West Virginia miners to quit work, and try once more for a chance to organize themselves; the anti-union drive at Pittsburgh, in which the already non-union Pittsburgh Coal Co., largely owned by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, takes the lead, with the formerly union Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Co., of which Horace F. Baker is president, swinging in behind it, and locking out its union miners; the decision of Lee Hall, president of District No. 6, Ohio, to meet with the Ohio Operators' Association for a conference in Columbus, April 7, and the failure to put thru the temporary agreement between the union and the southwestern operators.

West Virginia Will Strike.

FAIRMONT, W. Va., April 1.—Suspension of work in the northern West Virginia coal fields, by supposedly non-union miners marked an important development in the walkout of union bituminous mine workers of the nation today.

The international representative of the United Mine Workers for the northern West Virginia field, issued a statement shortly before noon, in which he declared that 50 meetings were being held throughout District 31, in which 100,000 persons, miners and their families, were enthusiastically pledging their support to the stand of the United Mine Workers.

The West Virginia district was once strongly unionized, and the miners there are thoroly sick of non-union low wages, and bad conditions, especially of the cheating done by company weighmen, not controlled by any union check-weighmen.

Progressives Fought For Union.

While little attempt has been made to unionize this important territory by the regular organizers of the United Mine Workers, the progressive and militant elements in the miners' union have repeatedly called attention to it as the key position, and have never ceased to carry on such activity there as they could.

Much of the publicity of the Save The Union bloc in the last miners' international election was directed towards the organizing of the non-union fields, and West Virginia most of all.

Baker Attacks.

PITTSBURG, April 1.—The first shot in the campaign to destroy the miners' union in the bituminous coal fields of western Pennsylvania was fired today by Horace F. Baker, president of the Pittsburg Terminal Coal Company, largest union operator in

CUBANS PROTEST AS MACHADO GETS GRIP ON HIS JOB

HAVANA, April 1.—Widespread opposition has arisen throughout Cuba as the result of a report that a government commission has decided to report against constitutional reforms and pursue a law tending to continue the present administration in power without elections.

Students holding a protest meeting were attacked by the police, who charged they were disorderly. The students made a protest to President Machado against the police attack, but the president informed them he would not "tolerate any violence against any law of the nation."

Washington Expected It.

WASHINGTON, April 1 (FP).—State department officials showed neither surprise nor curiosity when they learned that President Machado of Cuba, whose supporters have killed or abducted hundreds of trade union officials in the past year, has caused his congress to postpone for four years the presidential election due in 1928. They professed to have no reports from Ambassador Crowder as to the reason for this violation of the constitution.

SLIGHT INCREASE IN TEACHERS PAY BY O. K.'d BILL

Governor Smith to Sign Dick-Rice Bill Today

Gov. Smith is today expected to sign the Dick-Rice bill which appropriates $16,500,000 for the public schools of the state. As originally drafted, the bill called for $18,000,000, but $2,000,000 of that sum was lopped off in order to avoid the necessity of ordering a tax on gasoline, serious opposition to which came from auto owners throughout the state.

$10,000,000 of the appropriation will be devoted to school buildings and the salary increases of teachers in this city. Despite the fact that it will be of comparatively slight aid to the thousands of New York teachers, it will nevertheless be welcomed as a "concession" on the part of state politicians in the legislature

3,600 PLUMBERS AND HELPERS ARE STRIKING HERE

Exceeding all expectations 3,600 plumbers and plumbers helpers, members of Plumbers' Union Local 1 and the American Association of Plumbers Helpers respectively, came out on strike yesterday morning completely tieing up that part of the building trades in the borough of Brooklyn.

Enthusiastic strie meeting were held yesterday. At a crowded meeting of the plumbers held yesterday afternoon at Lenruth Hall 157 Waverly Ave., Brooklyn, the assembled workers listened to speechs by the officials of the union. Last night the plumbers halpers held a jammed meeting at the Church of All Nations, 9 Second Ave., where they were addressed by C. F. Miller, president and James F. Walsh, organizer.

The demands of the plumbers are: $14 a day and a forty hour week while the helpers are fighting for $9 a day, forty hour week and recognition of their union.

CELEBRATE FREIHEIT'S 5TH YEAR AT MADISON SQUARE GARDEN TONIGHT

By MOISSAYE J. OLGIN.

THIS evening the workers of New York and vicinity gather to celebrate the fifth anniversary of the Jewish Daily Communist Freiheit, the first copy of which appeared on April 2, 1922. The very fact that a labor newspaper is marking its birthday by a meeting in the greatest hall in New York City speaks of the mass character and influence of the paper.

During those five years the Freiheit has become one of the most influential labor papers in this country.

GREW OUT OF WORKERS' NEEDS.

The Freiheit grew out of the economic needs of the great masses of the Jewish workers, mainly concentrated in the needle trades. The Jewish workers, trained both in the places of their birth and in this country in the spirit of socialism gradually awoke to the realization that they were saddled by a union bureaucracy no better than the bureaucracy of other unions. Tho professing adherance to the socialist party, the chiefs of the "Jewish" needle unions gradually abandoned their contact with the masses, adopted the class collaboration psychology, used their offices to perpetuate their own domination, and stifled every attempt at protest on the part of the rank and file workers. From leaders they became traitors of the working masses. This betrayal was fostered, defended and led by the "socialist" Jewish Daily Forward, which became the ideological and organizational center of all that is rotten, bourgeois and anti-proletarian in the labor movement. The rift between the prosperous, well-fed, well-clothed and secure "aristocracy" of the Jewish workers on the one hand and the mass of the exploited, underpaid and hounded rank and filers on the other hand, became wider and wider.

The Jewish workers, alert, sensitive, educated to the understanding of their class interests, began to chafe under the weight of self-satisfied leeches. Conditions where the union officials were placing all their hopes in arbitration machinery headed by representatives of the bourgeoisie, where the workers were shown one kind of a union agreement, whereas, secretly, the employers were granted much more freedom to exploit them (so-called supplementary agreements), where fights of the masses against the employers were looked upon with disfavor and the boss was considered the best aid of the union officials in maintaining the union organization—such conditions could not fail to arouse the workers. A general revolt followed.

Revolt Let By The Freiheit.

The revolt was led by the Freiheit. This is its chief contribution to the labor movement, but it is not the only one.

The Freiheit points the way for the labor press of this country in very many respects.

ZOLTAN SZANTO TO BE TRIED IN SPECIAL COURT

Fifty-two Workers Face Frame-up in Hungary

BUDAPEST, April 1.—In consequence of the decision of the Public Prosecutor, Zolton Szanto and his 52 comrades will be placed before an extraordinary court.

The decision of the Public Prosecutor in Budapest to place the arrested men before an extraordinary court was made at the request of the infamous Judge Moskolcsy. Miskolcsy was recently made Senate President of the Hungarian Royal Court of Appeal, nevertheless, the preparation of this process has been left in his reliable hands.

Today's March celebration of the Budapest workers before the monument of the great Hungarian poet of freedom, Petrofi, turned into a great mass demonstration. The masses shouted "Long live the Republic!" "Long live the Emigrauts!" etc. Mounted police attacked the demonstration in the most brutal manner and scattered the workers.

German Workers Protest

BERLIN, April 1.—The resolution of protest adopted on the 14th of March by the general membership meeting of the Berlin District of the Metal Workers Union against the persecution of workers in Hungary, reads as follows:

"The metal workers of Berlin organized in the Metal Workers Union represented by their general membership meeting express their deepest sympathy with the Hungarian working class persecuted by the bloody Horthy government.

"Filled with the greatest disgust at the almost unbelievable hypocrisy of the Bethlen clique the Berlin metal workers express their whole-hearted support of the Hungarian working class. Despite the temporary powerlessness of the Hungarian working class, the Berlin metal workers are convinced that in the near future the Hungarian workers will win their political, organizational and personal freedom.

"The Berlin metal workers expect the fullest support of the Amsterdam Trade Union International and hope that the workers of all countries affiliated to the International Federation of Trade Unions will create the necessary instruments for the successful struggle of the I. F. T. U. to free the international proletariat by building up and strengthening their own organizations."

The workers' council of the Berlin Elevated and Underground railways has sent the following telegram to the Hungarian Prime Minister Bethlen:

"We protest in the name of the 8,000 workers on the Berlin Elevated and Underground Railways against the persecution of the Hungarian working class. We demand that this persecution cease and also the brutal maltreatment of the prisoners. We protest against the exposed intention to declare martial law and we demand the release of all working class political prisoners."

Tramwaymen Resolution

A full membership meeting of the tramwaymen of Berlin which took place on the 16th March sent the following telegram of protest to the Hungarian government:

"We protest against the suppression of the socialist working class movement and demand freedom for all working class organizations and the release of all imprisoned socialists and communists."

A mass meeting of the workers of the Siemens Schuckert works (Werner Werk) took place in Siemens town yesterday evening. The meeting expressed its solidarity with the Chinese revolution and decided to send a telegram of protest to the Hungarian government against the brutal maltreatment of arrested workers in Hungary and against their trial before an extraordinary court. The telegram further demands the release of all the arrested workers. The meeting also decided to appeal to the workers of the Siemens-Schuckert works in Budapest to take action in the same spirit to obtain the release of the arrested socialists and communists.

New York Workers Protest.

Unions and other organizations of workers in New York are protesting and sending money to assist the defense in Hungary of the fifty-two workers ready for trial there.

Local 2090 of the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, which is a New York local with 7,000 members, has sent Count Bethlen a strong telegram, denouncing the frame-up.

District Council No. 2, which has jurisdiction over 15,000 members, of the Shoe Workers Protective Union sends a similar protest.

The League Against Horthyism, sends today from its New York headquarters $500 to Henri Barbusse at Paris, for use in the defense in Hungary.

The Auto workers local in Detroit, and United Mine Workers' locals in Orient and Zeigler, Ill., have sent protests, and are calling on other locals of their unions to do the same.

Wood's Supreme Court Confiscates Filipinos' Big State Enterprises

MANILA, April 1.—Banks, railroads and industrial corporations formerly controlled by the government, will hereafter be controlled by Governor-General Wood, according to a decision to be promulgated by the American-controlled Supreme Court tomorrow.

The Supreme Court, which is dominated by Governor-General Wood, has upheld his notorious order, retaining control of the government-owned enterprises, valued at over one hundred million dollars, out of the hands of the Filipinos.

Governor-General Wood has long coveted rich Filipino resources for American business men, whose interests he represents.

Another interesting proof of Hebrew duplicity pointed out by Frau Ludendorff is the changing of the name of Vaterland to Leviathan by the Jews, because Leviathan "is the fish with which Jehova will play after Jewish world domination has been established." Ludendorff expounded his wife's. It any wonder he lost the war?

THERE is a young man in the west, in Denver to be exact, who expects a foreign invasion. His name is Hanson and he is a captain in the Quartermaster Corps. Captain Hanson allowed himself to get excited over the Colorado Labor Advocate, the Labor College and a church where the pastor permits the airing of progressive views. The captain addressed a letter to the pastor of this church, a letter marked more by evidence of illiteracy than even by patriotism, but courage oozed thru its ungrammatical pores and the erring divine was warned that unless he stayed on the sawdust track the grocery store warriors would face his embattled church as fearlessly as they would defend the top of a Shanghai barricade. We suggest that the parson arm himself with a few over-ripe tomatoes and meet the Quartermaster here with his own weapons.

A RIOT between Hindoos and Moslems is reported by the Associated Press, from Kuracbi, British India. The cause of the latest riot is alleged to be a woman and three children, the story giving the impression that the row occurred over possession of the four humans. That good relations between the Moslems and Hindoos in India are sometimes strained because of religious differences is beyond doubt. But Great Britain is the chief instigator of those differences. Her stool-pigeons incite the two races against one another and while they quarrel the British imperialists rob and exploit both.

APPRECIATE THE DAILY WORKER

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 31, 1927.

The DAILY WORKER,
33 First Street,
New York City.

Dear Sirs: As constant readers of your paper, we learn that your news and comments upon the present situation in China are always reliable and frank. We realize that most of the other publications in this country are on a whole imperialistic. Their news and comments upon the Chinese revolution are not only unreliable but also very antagonistic and as such as for the last week or so, to stimulate the American public to a state of war upon China.

Due to the fact that we often missed one or two issues of your paper by getting it from the newsstand because it was sold out, we decided to get it directly from you. Therefore enclosing herewith please find a check of six dollars for a year of subscription of The DAILY WORKER.

We thank you, in closing, for your stand and sympathy on our struggle for freedom.

Very truly yours,
The Chinese Nationalists,

CHIANG KAI SHEK BLAMES RIOTS ON FOREIGN MILITARY PREPARATIONS

SHANGHAI, April 1.—The presence of foreign troops, foreign battleships and defense preparations in China are primarily responsible for the anti-foreign riots, according to Chiang Kai Shek, Nationalist general.

"It is an indisputable fact," he said, "that owing to the circumstances of court martial and the numerous defense measures of the foreigners, feeling between the Chinese populace and the Nationalist forces on the one hand and the foreign community on the other is growing more tense every day. Such a situation cannot long continue. I wish to call attention of the foreign settlement authorities to this serious state of affairs and I hope that measures may be taken to lessen the tension.

Scores Nanking Bombardment.

Scoring the imperialist powers for the bombardment of Nanking and assuring the powers that rioters would be punished, Chiang said, "No notice was given to our authorities before the bombardment. No time was allowed to take the necessary measures for the protection of foreign lives and property. No time was given to allow peaceable citizens to leave the city."

Indignity to China.

Reverting to the "defense measures in the foreign settlement, the Nationalist commander said, "The preparation measures of the settlement would be fitting to adopt toward savages and semi-civilized peoples in colonies. As a leader of the Nationalist forces, I regret this state of affairs, and feel that it is an indignity to the Nationalist movement. Since my arrival in Shanghai I have continually advised the Chinese people against mob violence and any damage to foreign lives and property.

Charlie Chaplin Is Invited To Work In The Soviet Union

MOSCOW, April 1. — Charlie Chaplin has been officially invited by the Soviet Union motion picture trust to come here and appear in local made pictures. The invitation says that it considers him "a victim of the pious hypocrisy of American public opinion."

The invitation was reported seeking work in many places in other lines, while others were enjoying a "holiday" for a while, before seeking work.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 1. — Eighteen to twenty thousand coal miners in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas suspended work today following failure yesterday to arrive at an agreement at a conference between representatives of southwest operators and miners.

Matt Floyd, representative of Oklahoma and Arkansas miners, said negotiations would continue. "I have no idea when there'll be an agreement in the southwest fields," Floyd said today, "but it is certain we cannot live on five dollars a day wages which the operators insist on us taking."

W. L. A. Johnson, for the operators, said there was a possibility of an agreement within two weeks as some progress was made at yesterday's conference on minor phrases of a new agreement.

months ago. The unemployment situation affects the workers in the building trades, the rubber industry and other fields.

"We suggested to the Central Labor Union the calling of last night's meeting and the initiating of steps looking towards relieving the unemployment situation. The gravity of the situation calls for immediate action. At last night's meeting we offered the suggestions that the city should start construction and repair work to alleviate conditions, that employment machinery should be set up, that unemployment relief should be organized, and that the child labor laws should be strictly enforced. These and other suggestions we offered were favorably received.

"Thousands of workers have been thrown into misery by the unemployment crisis in this city. These workers cannot be left to starve. They must be given aid. Something must be done at once to relieve their condition. Either work must be provided for them, or support must be given them by the city authorities and the community.

Glad of Larger Conference

"We are glad that the meeting last night decided to call a larger conference for some night next week, with representatives of all organizations interested in this problem. We call upon the trade union movement to support this effort toward solving the unemployment situation, and we urge upon all labor unions, workers' fraternal organizations and all friendly organizations to elect or appoint delegates for next week's conference, the date of which will be announced later through the press."

The Freiheit is a Communist paper. That means to say that in all its activities it is guided by a general idea, by the broadest and most comprehensive conception of the social forces that make history. At the same time, however, the Freiheit is penetrating every nook and corner of the life of the Jewish workers. Every event, however small on the surface, shedding light on every movement, explaining to the workers every detail of their interests, arousing them to action. In this constructive sense of the word, the Freiheit is probably the most popular of the Communist papers in this country.

The Freiheit is a Jewish paper. It speaks to one section of the working class, yet its interest embraces the labor movement as a whole in all its ramifications both in this country and abroad. Thus the Freiheit does not keep the workers confined to the limits of their organizations but it broadens their outlook and widens their horizon.

It Is A Fighting Paper.

The Freiheit is a fighting paper. It is not a paper of comment. It is not confined to opinions. It uses comment to arouse the workers. It spreads opinions among the masses in order to stimulate them to activities. It is, to use Lenin's words, a mass propagandist. It is, to use Lenin's words again, a mass organizer.

The splendid fight of the Joint Action Committee in 1925, the historic struggle of the Fur Workers' Union in 1926, the struggle of the Joint Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers' Union against the bureaucracy of the Sigman clique, the struggle against bourgeois domination in the Workmens' Circle, and a dozan other struggles would have been impossible without the Freiheit.

The Freiheit was placed by the course of events in a highly responsible, strategic position. It was against the left wing in the Needle Trades that the bureaucracy of the A. F. of L., hand in hand with the courts, the police, and the capitalist class as a whole, directed its fiercest attack. It was here in this sector of the left wing labor movement that they hoped to crush the spirit of revolt and to smother the movement of the workers for organization and and class struggle.

If this barrage of the traitors has proven a failure, if the left wing has not only stood its ground but is making progress, the credit for the line the Freiheit has had no mean share in these successes.

Struggle For The Labor Party.

The Freiheit is a political paper. It strives to draw the necessary political implications from the struggle of the workers. It interprets the life of the workers in the class struggle aspect, which is the political aspect. The Freiheit has participated in all the political movements of the left wing, including the struggle for a Labor Party and campaign activities.

The Freiheit is a Communist Party paper. It is not only permeating the movement with Communist ideas, Marxian ideology, but it is helping the Party to organize the vanguard of the working class into a well-disciplined force, to interlock with the working class and leading its struggles in the direction of overthrowing capitalism and establishing the Soviet system.

The Freiheit is a Jewish paper, which means that its activities are conducted in a specific national environment, where nationalistic bourgeois ideology is strong. The Freiheit was the first of the Jewish labor papers in this country to draw the class line also in national and cultural Jewish problems. Contrary to the old, now traitorous Forward which recognized only the "general culture of humanity" or "general Jewish culture," the Freiheit is spreading class consciousness that the nationalist idea is a bourgeois idea, that national culture is bourgeois culture, and that the working class must beware the dangers hiddan in the subtle poison of national ideology. The Freiheit is determinedly and drastically fighting class ideology also in the field of culture.

The Freiheit has become not only a center of economic and political life, but also a very influential cultural center. It has attracted a great number of radical writers, poets, dramatists who, not entirely identifying themselves with the working class, are willing to work in co-operation with the labor movement. Culturally isolated at the beginning, looked upon with mistrust and disdain, abused by the so-called cultural elements, the Freiheit gradually became, even in the eyes of outsiders, the most cultured and most vital paper. The Freiheit is not only a paper. It is a mass of workers hungry for education, clamoring for culture, grasping at the better things that life offers. It was this mass activity for things cultural that has broken the isolation of the Freiheit and made it a gathering point for every live cultural force.

Forward Formidable Opponent.

The success and the growth of the Freiheit is the more gratifying the greater the enemy it had to combat. The Jewish Daily Forward was the most formidable opponent. Rich, powerful, unscrupulous, reigning supreme both in the labor movement and among the petty bourgeoisie, the Forward at the beginning thought it would be sufficient to stamp its feet to exterminate the Freiheit. The fight against the Forward looked an even fight. For years the situation of the Freiheit was precarious. There were months when its very existence hung on a thread. Today the Forward is defeated. It has lost all its influence over the working masses. It is not able to fill a hall with rank and file workers, even when it uses all its machinery of advertising. It is utterly discredited, not only among the workers but among the thinking elements. It stands there, a picture of hatred, debasement, degradation. It witnesses how the Freiheit, a militant young Communist paper, dares celebrate its 5th anniversary in a hall that seats 20,000.

Mast Have English Language Press.

The Freiheit points the way for the workers of this country. The Freiheit is active only in one corner of the working class. The American working class, the English speaking working class, will have to follow suit. We must have English papers like the Freiheit, mass papers leading the struggle of the workers for a better future.

Long live the Freiheit!

Long live a powerful press of the working class in the English language!

Long live the class struggle of the workers!

Long live Communism!

I. L. D. to Defend Strike Victim This Morning In Coney Island Court

Rose Feamick will be arraigned this morning in the West 8th St. court, Coney Island, on a charge of disorderly conduct resulting from picketing the stores against which 600 Brooklyn clerks are now on strike.

She will be defended by a lawyer assigned by the International Labor Defense.

The strikers, who have been out nearly a month, are fighting for recognition of their union and for a 57-hour week. Heretofore, they have been working from 80 to 100 hours a week, with no Sundays or holidays off.

Many of the wives and sisters of the strikers are joining in the picketing, with the co-operation of the United Council of Working-class Housewives.

Right Wing Furriers Conspire With Bosses

Union and the American Federation of Labor and drew up the famous "eight-point agreement" which they planned to sign without consulting the members of the union or their representatives.

Will Can't Make Coats.

They were forced to give up that agreement when the members heard about it," said Liebowitz; "and they will be forced to abandon this new one. It looked as the the association's leaders had learned a lesson; but evidently they did not. As Gold said last year, the A. F. of L. officials cannot make fur coats and that is what the manufacturers are interested in. The same thing is true now."

Regular Conspiracy.

Mr. Samuels of the manufacturers' association assures his members that the A. F. of L. Special Committee will observe the terms of the existing agreement and there will be no trouble in the industry.

He indicates that this matter has been a subject of conference between the board of directors of the association and the right wing union-dissolvers ever since on March 7th and 8th, the International Fur Workers' Union wrote advising the association of the "dissolution" of the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union and the "suspension" of the four constituent locals, 1, 5, 10 and 15.

Police Failed.

Members of the Associated Fur Manufacturers Inc. are asked to employ only workers carrying cards issued by the right wing International officials. This is of course intended as a means of forcing registration since the efforts of the Industrial Squad, the police gangsters have been so unsuccessful in this direction.

In many quarters it is anticipated that the next step in the fight will be an injunction taken out by the manufacturers against the Joint Board.

Bosses Not Eager.

Many manufacturers yesterday were at a loss to understand just what was expected of them by the board of directors of the association, and there was a general tendency to let matters slide for a while and not to force the issue of registration.

Liebowitz stated that the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union had already made plans for just such a situation as has now developed and a meeting of the Joint Board this afternoon will authorize its officers to take action in the matter.

Workers For Joint Board

"This latest move will not help the A. F. of L. Committee any more than all its other tactics," said Liebowitz. "The fur workers are with the Joint Board. Even the Reorganization Committee knows that and that is why they are so desperate."

Does Not Want "Peaches."

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 1. Mayor Schwab directed Chief of Police Higgins this afternoon to "close any theatre in the city at which 'Peaches' Browning, deposed bride of Edward W. Browning, should attempt to appear. The mayor's action followed a report that "Peaches" was booked for a theatrical engagement here.

U. S. and Britain Split Over China

Cost Interferes.

After the British cabinet meeting ended today, it was indicated by members that the talk had been on the practical aspects of large scale war on the Chinese Nationalist.

The cost of such operations was the chief thing deterring them from issuing an immediato ultimatum, without waiting for promises of support from other countries.

Secretary Bridgeman, for the admiralty, pointed out to the cabinet that a blockade of the Yangtse and the chief Chinese ports would be more expensive.

Would Send Planes.

Sir Hugh Trenchard, of the air force, suggested short and swift action with an airplane bombardment of all the Cantonese military headquarters. This suggestion was also discarded.

Beyond approving tentative plans for the sending of additional forces to China, the cabinet adjourned without reaching any decision. Coolidge's note is said to have had a decidedly sobering effect.

Flushed with their recent successes, the Cantonese are pressing northward to Hankow to give battle to Marshal Chang Tso-lin, the Manchurian war lord, according to news received here from British consuls.

The fate of Peking and all northern China will depend upon the outcome of this new offensive, experts assert.

OPEN RECRUITING FOR RUTHENBERG MEMBERS IN N. Y.

Instructions to all nucleus on the carrying out of the Ruthenberg Membership Drive has been issued by the Organization Department of the New York District of the Workers (Communist) Party.

The outline that follows gives a definite outline on the methods to be followed by all units to help double the party membership as a tribute to Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, founder of the American Communist movement, who recently died.

At the present time when America is using its battleships and marines to oppress the nationalist revolutions in China and Nicaragua, and is plotting for a war with Mexico, new members are needed to help proceed with the important work before us.

The instructions issued by the organization department follows:

Mobilize Your Nucleus for the Ruthenberg Drive.

a. Hold a special meeting at which you will discuss the complete plan sent by the District Committee.

b. At that meeting make arrangements to get enough application cards so that every member is given a number of cards that he must have with him at all times.

c. Collect from every member 50 cents for which you will get from the District Office 20 pamphlets by Comrade Ruthenberg, "THE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY WHAT IT STANDS FOR AND WHY WORKERS SHOULD JOIN."

d. Discuss how to carry on the work in the shops, the unions, etc. Let every member give his experiences and opinions for the benefit of all the other comrades.

e. Tell every member to make a list of those workers in his shop, union, fraternal organization, etc., that he knows and that is sympathetic enough that he may be approached to join the party.

f. Make a list of those comrades that have not attended the meetings for some time and divide them among the comrades so that they are visited and brought back to the party.

g. See that every member is a reader of The DAILY WORKER.

Sustain The Daily.

h. Urge every comrade to pledge himself to sustain The DAILY WORKER by becoming a member of the sustaining fund. Let every member realize the habit of being responsible for the maintenance and building up of The DAILY WORKER, no matter how little he can.

i. See that the nucleus hold its educational meetings regularly and that sympathetic workers are brot to these meetings.

j. Get the habit of regular distribution of The DAILY WORKER and leaflets, literature, etc. Assign comrades definite territory to distribute so that you may know what party is being covered and be in a position to judge the results of our agitation.

Union Activity.

k. Check up on the membership and activity in the unions of every member. Also in the other mass organizations.

l. See that every official of the nucleus attends to his work.

m. SEE THAT EVERY COMRADE IN THE NUCLEUS IS GIVEN A DEFINITE TASK TO PERFORM

Call Ford Spies To Help Hunt 'Assailants'

Sapiro Admits Claimed to be Unselfish, But Got the Cash

DETROIT, April 1.—Altho Henry Ford has had himself moved from the hospital to his own home and is reported "resting easy," the farcical "search" for his reputed assailants continues, and the physicians' bulletins have just that touch of uncertainty and gravity which will probably enable Ford to avoid appearing on the witness stand in the million dollar suit against him by Aaron Sapiro.

Prosecutor Robert Toms announced today that the police could not find anything about the mysterious "assassins," and that he has asked the Ford secret service to aid him. The Ford spies are perfectly familiar with all the arts of frame-up and provocation.

Sapiro's Sordid Rise.

The meteoric career of Aaron Sapiro as leader of the American cooperative movement was given a sordid touch today during the cross-examination of the so-called wheat king by Senator James A. Reed, chief of Henry Ford's counsel. Before an interested jury in federal court Reed drew from Sapiro admissions that all his work in helping American farmers to organize cooperatives was well paid for and always by agreements entered before the wheat king began his activities.

Reed spent an hour delving into Sapiro's connection with the cooperative movement in Texas. For this work, Sapiro said he received $37,300 in the years 1922 to 1926. The fees were paid for speeches, organization work and legal activities for the Texas farm bureau federation.

Reed read Sapiro's ostensible purpose in Texas into the record but in sneering tones.

Sapiro had made this statement a feature of all his speeches to Texas farmers. It was: "I am not interested in money; I'm interested in raising the standard of living among farmers, in taking children out of the fields and putting them in schools; in taking women out of the fields and putting them in homes."

$19,000 For Little Work.

"You always got paid for it, didn't you," was Reed's scornful comment. Then the Missourian brought out the fact that Sapiro drew $37,000 from the Texas farmers in five years.

Sapiro testified he was paid approximately $19,000 for a "few days effort" in arranging government loans from the war finance corporation for ten of the cooperatives under his wing. This was brought out by Senator James A. Reed, chief of Henry Ford's counsel.

WOMEN MAY WORK 49½ HRS. A WEEK SAYS GOV. SMITH

Women May Work.

ALBANY, April 1.—Gov. Smith yesterday signed the so-called "compromise" 48-hour week bill for women. Coming as the result of 14 years of strenuous activity on the part of trade unionists, it is considered a very feeble concession to women workers.

While technically forbidding women to work more than 48 hours a week, the basis for evading the law is found to be in the loophole which grants employers 78 hours during the year in which their women workers may work, thus totalling an average of 49½ hours. This is provided for "emergency" and "rush" times.

Leaders in woman's trade union organizations point out that when even the American Federation of Labor is now demanding the basic 40-hour week, this law providing for a 49½ hour week for women hasn't even the semblance of a triumph, as it is being described by professional boosters of the Tammany governor.

POWER GRAB BILL VETOED BY SMITH; GOV. FAVORS G. E.

Mellon and Young Pull Strings in Fight

ALBANY, April 1.—Governor Smith vetoed the Republican power grab measure last night.

The republican bill which provided for a commission of five "to investigate" the water power situation and to report in 1928, was intended to delay action on water power until a governor more favorable to the Mellon interests sits in the governor's chair, Governor Smith favors the General Electric interests.

Smith Favors G. E.

With the Republican measure vetoed, the Miller Power Act, which contemplates private development of state power remains in force. The State Water Commission, which is controlled by Governor Smith can be depended upon to ignore the Miller Act.

Governor Smith favors "state development of water power." He would have the state develop New York's rich water power resources and would hand out the contracts to the General Electric Company for the distribution of the power to the public. Owen D. Young of the General Electric Company has been a prominent contributor to the Smith campaign fund and has been one of the most relentless boosters of the Smith-for-President campaign.

Committee of Hundred Says Sigman Falsifies

dangerous ground your organization is now treading. We shall be forced, naturally, to protect ourselves in every legitimate way against any move, no matter how well intended, which has for its end, either immediate or ultimate, a cynical perversion of true liberalism and the good and welfare of an organization like ours which, over sixteen years, has laboriously built up one of the most enlightened and most progressive institutions in the world of labor, only to have it nearly wrecked by a band of irresponsibles."

In his answering letter Mrs. Bailey stated that the American Civil Liberties Union "cannot undertake to hold itself responsible for any action on the part of its members when they act as individuals", and that those who have joined the committee "feel confident that due precautions will be taken to safeguard expenditures of funds collected" so that they shall not be "diverted to uses not comprehended in the original purpose of the committee".

To which Mr. Sigman replied, "We have your astounding letter of March 28th".

"Your assurance that none of them Civil Liberties members is officially connected with any other issues than just those involved in defense and relief of prisoners * * * is, not convincing, when the actions of your high officials must be inextrivably bound up with the gangsterism, fraud and corruption employed by these former leaders, who themselves conspired to imprison certain cloakmakers and then invoked the 'humanitarianism' of your members ostensibly to get them out of jail."

"We must advise the individual Civil Liberties members participating in this so-called "defense committee" to keep their hands off all cases of corrupted cloak and dress makers * * * who have appealed to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union for legal aid. The International can take care of its own, and regards it as a sheer impertinence for anyone not responsible connected with this organization to set up dele'ated committees and defense funds for these International members. * * * If the gentlemen associated with your organization care to take up with such blackguards, characters as Dubinsky, underworld characters and corruptions, in the name of humanity, they are welcome to do so"—Yours very truly, M. Sigman, president.

CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION DENOUNCES A I R CENSORSHIP

M. L. Ernst Returns From Hearing

Morris L. Earnest, of the Civil Liberties Union, returned last night from Washington where he appeared before the Federal Radio Commission. Warning that regulations must be adopted to guard against "a dangerous and insidious censorship of the air," Ernst sought a ruling which would give equal opportunity of speech to candidates representing minority political parties.

In citing a long list of censorship by New York broadcasters, the spokesman of the Civil Liberties Union declared that there is one station at which no protestant can talk on religion. "Others bar catholics," Ernst stated, while "certain political views may not be disseminated at some of the stations."

POLICE SWARM IN BUCHAREST WHILE KING NEARS END

Regents Tremble; Spies Harass Workers

BERLIN, April 1. All Rumania is in a state of excitement and suspense over the report of the approaching death of King Ferdinand. The king's days are numbered and according to the meagre news that could tonight get through the rigid censorship at Bucharest, the king has already lost consciousness. His death, it is said may come at any hour.

Police Are Thick

Extraordinary precautions are reported to have been taken by the police and military to suppress ruthlessly any manifestations hostile to the unpopular regency council consisting of a judge of the high court, the metropolitan of the orthodox church, and Prince Nicholas who is to rule for the five year old Crown Prince Michael, son of Prince Carol.

Parts of the Rumanian army have been mobilized and have been concentrated at the barracks in Bucharest.

Secret Police Also

With the famous Rumanian "organization" or secret state police working in a closely cooperative relationship, the belief prevails in Berlin court political circles that opposition as to the immediate regency council or future disorders will take place following the king's death.

The suspense and excitement in Bucharest is appealing to other Balkan countries and any suggestion of developments which might seriously affect the political conditions throughout the Balkans.

American and British Imperialist Rivalry Comes to the Fore in China

Imperialist rivalry between Great Britain and America is still a decisive factor in shaping official policy in China. This is the first conclusion to be drawn from the most definite statement ever made on foreign affairs by Coolidge.

The second conclusion is that the dominant finance capitalists of America have spoken and that Great Britain has failed in her efforts to secure joint action against China from her chief imperialist enemy. Wall Street has decided that it has more to lose than to gain by joining now with the other powers against the Chinese nation.

There will be columns of praise for Coolidge but it was not Coolidge who framed the policy. The great banks with their billions of liquid capital crying for investment were the interests which feared that an aggressive policy in China would result in a door being closed forever to American investments.

The British empire is fighting for its life. It is impossible to overestimate the damage suffered by British imperialism by its defeat in China and the effect of this upon the 330,000,000 inhabitants of China. In this desperate situation the British foreign office was undoubtedly willing to make almost any concession to secure American support. Failure to secure agreement in these circumstances means a sharpening of the struggle between Britain and America to the point where it is impossible for them to combine against the Chinese liberation movement. Similarly it means that the British-built ring around the Soviet Union does not include the United States as yet.

The Coolidge statement, however, is dangerous in that it may create the impression that nothing needs to be done in America in behalf of the Chinese liberation movement and that the danger of war on China has passed. Nothing could be further from the truth and not only is there a threat to China on the part of American imperialism but the evidence of the tenseness in the relations of America and Britain makes the menace of war between these two nations a practical issue for the American workingclass.

In the struggle for the preservation of their influence and investments in China there are all the ingredients for conflict on a world scale. As we have stated before in these columns, American battleships are in Chinese waters to impress Great Britain as well as to intimidate the Chinese masses.

The demands for the withdrawal of all armed forces from China and recognition of the People's Government must be given greater force since as long as they remain, there is the double threat of aggression against the Chinese national liberation movement and war between imperialist rivals which would drown millions of workers in their own blood.

The Right Wing Sinks Deeper in the Mire of Reaction

No day passes without additional evidence of the utter reaction of the right wing leaders in the needle trades coming to hand. Two recent developments show the Green-Woll-Sigman clique nestling snugly in the arms of the bosses and the agents of Tammany Hall government.

First comes the agreement with the fur bosses made by the American Federation of Labor against the left wing—an agreement whose basis is cooperation of right wing, industrial squad and gangsters to smash the New York Joint Board.

Second is the recent correspondence between Sigman and the Civil Liberties Union in which Sigman appears in the role of assistant prosecutor of the members of the International Ladies Garment Workers who have been indicted for picketing and other "crimes" in connection with the strike of the cloakmakers.

Sigman protests against certain members of the Civil Liberties Union, acting as individuals, who aided in the organization of the Committee of One Hundred for defense of these workers. Sigman calls workers who are trying to raise defense funds for the indicted unionists "blackguards, character assassins, underworld characters and corruptionists." He threatens the Civil Liberties Union with dire penalties if they do not take action against the men and women who have assisted in the defense work.

Nothing remains for the right wing leaders to round out their policy now except to move their headquarters into the Civic Federation offices (where Vice President Matthew Woll is already ensconced) put the industrial squad on the payroll as organizers for the "union" and devote all their time to jailing Communist and left wing workers.

The right wing has Tammanyized the section of the union it controls. Not only has it surrendered to the bosses but it has enlisted in the army of the bosses and is destroying the union in the needle trades.

The Miners' Fight is the Fight of Every American Worker

The Pittsburgh Coal Company and the Pittsburgh Terminal Company have put their mines on a non-union basis, mobilized their private armies of thugs and have declared their intention of fighting the United Mine Workers of America to a finish.

These two companies typify the true attitude of the coal barons toward the miners. Local conditions at present prevent the adoption of a similar policy in other coal fields but unless there is speedy and energetic organization work in the non-union fields operators in the central competitive field will soon be following the example of the two companies mentioned.

It is evident that just as in 1922 struggle in the Pittsburgh district will be fierce. This is a stronghold of the steel trust and the miners' union is a thorn in its side. It will try by every means to destroy all organization among the miners so that this territory may be completely under its control with no unions of any kind to dispute its domination.

In other districts—Ohio, Illinois and Indiana—the mines have been closed and as yet there has been no open attempt to duplicate the union-smashing tactics of the Pittsburgh companies. But as the strike continues there will be a series of such systematic attempts and it will be a great mistake if the miners are led to believe that shutdowns and starvation are the only weapons the operators will employ in what is primarily a nationwide effort to destroy the United Mine Workers of America as an effective instrument of the coal diggers. Even during the life of the Jacksonville agreement its provisions were openly violated by the operators.

They flaunted their contempt for the stipulated working conditions in the faces of the miners, they repudiated the whole agreement and went back to the non-union system as in West Virginia, they closed their mines in union territory as in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio and opened up mines in non-union sections. The operators made war on the union from the day the Jacksonville contract was signed. For three years they have been getting ready for the present drive on unionism.

There is one way for the union to meet and beat this offensive. It is to throw its full strength into an organization campaign in the decisive non-union sections. Many of these miners are former union men who were starved out of the central competitive field and will respond to appeal of the union. The miners who have never belonged to the union understand that once the union is smashed their wages and working conditions will suffer. The job can be done.

The government has stated that it will not interfere in coal dispute but this means nothing except that it believes that the union will be beaten. As the militancy of the miners increases and if substantial gains are made in the non-union fields, the government will side openly with the coal barons as it did in previous strikes. For this reason it is necessary that the labor movement as a whole be prepared to put the maximum pressure on state and national governments to prevent the use of the governmental machinery against the miners.

The fate of American labor is bound up with that of the United Mine Workers. If it is defeated there will be no hesitation on the part of the capitalists in attacking the unions all along the line.

The fight of the miners is the fight of every worker in the United States.

The Freiheit Has Proved Value of Press to Labor in Its Struggle for Power

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the Freiheit (Freedom), our Jewish Communist daily, celebrates its Fifth Anniversary.

It is a time of congratulation for the thinking workers, speaking all languages, in the whole American labor movement,—that such a staunch fighter of the working class has come triumphantly thru five years of ceaseless battle in the cause of toil. The future looks bright, with new successes awaiting The Freiheit in its efforts to win greater masses of workers for their own class fight leading the way to labor's complete emancipation.

Recent events have shown that The Freiheit is not only the standard bearer of the militant workers who speak and read the Jewish language. It fights, and fights brilliantly on one sector of the American working class front against capitalism, an important and necessary sector that has helped strengthen the spirit and morale of labor's entire army.

As the mouthpiece of the Jewish workers who constitute a large and able part of the left wing in the needle trades unions, The Freiheit incurs alike the enmity of Abraham Cahon, of The Forward, the yellow Socialist organ; of Morris Signan, head of the reaction in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, with other betrayers of the Jewish workers, as well as William Green, president, Matthew Woll, vice president, and other officials of the American Federation of Labor, whose prime task is to keep the workers loyal to capitalist interests, seeking to turn their faces against their own struggle.

The Freiheit came into existence shortly after the organization of the Workers (Communist) Party.

It was established by the joint forces of the Jewish Federation that had withdrawn from the Socialist Party the previous summer, in 1921, and the Jewish Section of the Communist Party, that had been forced into an illegal existence by governmental persecution. They combined all the best elements among the revolutionary Jewish workers in this country.

This became very evident, and soon, with the barrage laid down against the left wing in the Jewish section of the American trade union movement by the Socialist "Daily Forward."

At first The Forward attacked the left wing and The Freiheit almost exclusively on the issue of the Soviet Union.

When the Freiheit and the left wing were urging every possible support of the Friends of Soviet Russia, that was raising relief funds in this country in aid of the famine stricken in the First Workers' Republic, the socialist "Forward" was doing everything possible in an effort to hamstring this effort, even to joining with the capitalist prosecutors in demanding an examination of the funds collected.

At that time the yellow leaders, still in control of the needle trades unions, saw the necessity of maintaining an English-language organ and threw great sums of money into the ever-empty treasury of The New York Call, the socialist daily, operated under the thumb of Abe Cahan.

Two big significant facts in this period were: (1) The drift of Jewish workers from The Forward to The Freiheit, and; (2) The failure of The Call to hold any support among English-language reading workers resulting in its suspension. These two facts were indications pointing to the growth of the left wing.

The left wing did grow in New York, against every obstacle that was raised against it, especially the gangster methods employed to intimidate the rank and file.

This growth, rapid as it was, could not have been achieved without The Freiheit. It was The Freiheit that kept great masses of workers informed daily as to every phase of the struggle in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the Furriers' Union, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, the copmakers and other needle trades unions, not reached by the Freiheit and other left wing publications, the reaction was sure to maintain a foothold. The lack of information on the part of the workers as to the militant viewpoint in the left wing struggle gave strength to Cahan and Hillquit, Schlesinger and Sigman, Kaufman and Schachtman. The loss of our Italian daily was especially felt, and very severely.

The Freiheit was a great power in achieving the triumph of the Joint Action Committee of the I. L. G. W. U., in 1925, and in the following year it was a tower of strength in the strike of the Furriers' Union.

In the conventions of the American Federation of Labor, the needle trades reactionaries had gone over completely, first to the Gompers' machine, and later to the Green regime, that continued to respond to the policies of the arrogant American imperialism.

It was in this period that the Freiheit, that suffered repeatedly thru various financial crises, nevertheless, won an ever-increasing support from the workers, shown by the gradual and rapid increase in the number of its readers. It truly developed into a mass-organ of the Jewish speaking workers.

The time quickly arrived, however, that showed the struggle of the Jewish needle workers could not be isolated from the bigger stream including all American organized labor. Militancy in the needle trades became the concern of the whole A. F. of L. reaction.

At the Detroit convention of the A. F. of L., last October, after Henry Ford had announced the inauguration of his so-called five-day week, the labor officialdom cited the victory of the New York furriers to show a bona fide five-day week had been won by workers thru the exercise of their own economic power. But at the same time the New York Joint Board of the Furriers' Union became the object of a vicious attack by the labor reaction. That attack continues.

Armed with the Freiheit, however, the workers are doubly armed in their struggle. In a multitude of centers, in all sections of the nation, the spark of class effort kept glowing by revolutionary Jewish speaking workers, communicates its inspiration to English speaking toilers.

Thus on its fifth anniversary it is possible to hail the Freiheit, not only as a weapon of the Jewish workers, but as an instrument of all American labor, striving in common with all other foreign and English-language left wing and Communist publications to win the workers for militant trade unionism, for independent political action in the field of the class struggle.

The Freiheit is, therefore, truly an organ of Communism. Hail the Freiheit as it faces its sixth year promising greater struggles, greater victories. Hail Communism.

Textile Barons Scowl When Churches Appeal To Their Conscience

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (FP).—Southern textile barons, speaking through David Clark, editor of the Southern Textile Bulletin and director of their campaign to defeat the child labor amendment, have promptly shown their resentment at the moral plea addressed to them by Protestant clergy that they abolish their mill villages and establish just and humane industrial relations with their workers.

This plea was delivered by Bishop Cannon of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and was signed by Protestant Episopal and Baptist bishops and ministers in all the southern states. While no minister in any textile town signed the document, it was known that ministers in these towns were privately urging that the appeal to the consciences of southern employers be attempted.

Clark's answer to the clergymen's indictment of industrial autocracy is that it is really philanthropy!

New England textile mills are losing ground, while northern capital is being invested in southern textile development, due to the absence of labor laws and the supply of illiterate cheap labor from the southern mountain sections. Union organizers have made little progress.

China.—For generations missionaries have been propagandizing in China for Christian obscurantism. Under the protection of imperialist guns they intrenched themselves to preach western capitalist "morals" and "justice." They went forth in every direction as advance agents for British, American, German and French investors. But the respectable citizens in this and other lands saw nothing wrong in such foreign intrusions, such outside propaganda. The "liberal" papers did not editorialize piously about "outside interference." On the contrary, the missionaries were held up as types of spiritual pioneers, Christian heroes, what not. Even the machinations of the diplomatic corps in Peking, and the officially deputized commercial drummers in Shanghai and Canton and Nanking and a hundred other Chinese cities, failed to elicit a protest. But suddenly a horrified shout has gone up in the best circles against "propaganda" and "foreign interference" in China. It is the "Soviet" and "Bolshevik" brand, of course, that has aroused the righteous indignation. Ministers and newspaper editors—curiously forgetful of their own propagandizing missionaries—now "deplore Communist influence" in China. Boiled down to essentials, their central objection seems to be that Communist leaflets have accomplished more in several years than missionary tracts did in several generations.

Politics a la Passaic.—A note on the niceties of politics in the town known for its textile strike is contributed by Irving Freeman of Passaic. He writes: "Commissioner Preiskel, popularly known as Commissioner Pretzel, is out for re-election on his record of hysterical behavior in the early days of the Passaic strike. At a meeting of his henchmen recently he announced that John Kelly would be his campaign manager, and that between his own Jewish name and Kelly's Irish label, he had the Hebrew and Irish votes in his vest pocket. But insurrection has broken out in the aforesaid vest pocket. The local unit of the Clan-Na-Gael, resolutioned in protest against this Jewish trick of appointing an Irish campaign manager." Given such exeellent ingredients—Jew, Irishman, and Commissioner Pretzel—any of our readers can easily construct his own joke, though we can't think of one at the moment.

THE MAGIC "SKIN."

(Inspired by murderous doings of the imperialists in China.)

The hide of a Yank is precious
It's worth ten thousand others
In this respect the Yankees
And the British are blood brothers.

The hide of a Yank is precious
But not in the land of his birth
It has a "Wall Street" value
In distant parts of the earth.

The hide of a Yank in danger
Is the much desired excuse
That "Wall Street's" flunkies grasp at
The devil-dogs to use.

The hide of a white marauder.
Or a Jesus peddling sap
Is stretched by bandit nations
To spread out on the map.

EXCERPTS FROM OUR OWN PEPPY DIARY.

March 25.—All day at our scrivening but at eventide (heighho!) to hear J. Brophy and P. Hapgood at the Cafe Boulevard, whereat a Committee for Democracy in Industry acted as host. Brophy held forth so quietly and courteously (even of his foes) that it did strain the imagination to picture him as a labor agitator. The socialists, albeit a few months ago they supported Brophy, were conspicuously absent, fearing mayhap to rouse the displeasure of His Highness J. Lewis and lesser lights among the latest allies of the New Leader. P. Hapgood won the hearts of all the ladies at one fell swoop, and did tell of a beating received at the miners' convention in so joyous and sprightly a fashion that none doubted he enjoys such physical exercise. Whenafter the majority of the diners did repair (mostly uninvited) to the abode of a Rumanian where we settled many things, such as politics and art, but chiefly did we settle neat Swiss cheese and caviar sandwiches, washed down alas! by coffee only.

March 26.—Did foregather with a group of scriveners, artists and miscellaneous persons at the abode of E. Royce to consider ways and means of building The DAILY WORKER. Too many of those invited did inconsiderately accept the invitation, thereby making the gathering unwieldy. Yet we did listen to speeches and join in public-spirited resolutions. If but half of those who promised should inconsiderately come through, 'twill take all the time of J. L. Engdahl, W. F. Dunne, S. Garlin, etc. to stem the flood of contributions.

On the very eve of the mine strike, two coal mine disasters have taken their toll of workers' lives. In Illinois eight miners were burned to death. In Pennsylvania four more were killed in an explosion, and several hundred others escaped death by the narrowest margin. These tragedies go far to explain the fighting spirit of the coal miners. Where mortal danger is their daily share, a West Virginia mine war or the prospect of starvation in a lost strike does not frighten them. Despite the deliberate efforts of the Lewis gang to botch the strike, the rank and file may be expected to show their old mettle.

Study Refugee Problem

SOFIA, Bulgaria, April 1.—John Barton Payne, accompanied by his wife and red cross officials, arrived here today to make a study of the refugee problem. The matter is demanding immediate attention as there are some 20,000 refugee families here, who ever since driven from Greece, have suffered privations and are now in dire need. King Boris received Payne and his party in audience.

Arrest George R. Dale.

MUNCIE, Ind., April 1.—George R. Dale, editor of the weekly Post-Democrat, was arrested here today on a grand jury indictment charging him with criminally libelling Circuit Judge Clarence W. WEST VIRGINIA NON-UNION MINERS TALK STRIKE

U. S. and Britain Split Over China

Report Coolidge Orders Admirals Not to Follow England Into War—NOW—to Save India

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Great Britain's efforts to drag the United States into a war to protect British investments in China appear at present to be doomed to failure.

President Coolidge, it was learned today, has instructed American officials in China that "it is as much their duty to resist involving the United States in a war with the Chinese people as it is to safeguard the lives and the property of American citizens."

Tricked By British.

Hoping to find in a united China a lucrative field for investment, finance capitalists have no intention of pulling British chestnuts out of the fire. They have been bringing pressure to bear upon the administration to take an independent attitude toward China.

Realizing that American officials and newspaper correspondents have been tricked by the British foreign office into yelping for a war to protect Hongkong and India, the administration has ordered its Chinese officials to stop the propaganda which has been flooding the Nationalist press.

Moore Bounced?

Those in close touch with the situation regard as significant the absence of any dispatch from Frederick Moore in this morning's New York Times. Moore, who is a rabidly anti-Cantonese, has been sending wild propaganda to the Times and the absence of his daily atrocity story coming on the eve of Coolidge's action is regarded as extremely significant.

England Moves Toward War.

LONDON, April 1. — Great Britain is rapidly moving towards open war on the Chinese Nationalist government. Whether she will succeed in dragging the United States and Japan into an openly hostile attitude looks doubtful.

The government's draft note to China, which was approved by the cabinet this afternoon, is understood to contain demands for "the punishment of those responsible for the Nanking outrages", "indemnity for the victims" and apologies to the "government whose consulates were looted and attacked."

Blockade Ports.

War measures will be taken if the British demands are refused by the Nationalists, cabinet members intimated.

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT III., the three-million-dollar failure who started at the top, the newspaper business and soon found himself at the bottom, is on Hearst's payroll in the capacity of editorial writer for the piffle-magnate's tailoid at a juicy salary. In the Daily Mirror of March 29, Vanderbilt got excited over the "yellow peril", yellow Hearst's favorite theme. The ex-millionaire pictures "hordes" of "cruel Orientals" sweeping down on the rest of the world and transforming peaceful valleys into lakes of gore.

THERE is no originality in Vanderbilt's dream. The Kaiser claimed to be one of its patentees. Teddy Roosevelt often ground his teeth with satisfaction over the carcass. Vanderbilt was a bit of a liberal while running his own tabloids. But you don't have to scratch a liberal very deeply until you find a reactionary. What is worrying the imperialists and their literary hirelings today is not a yellow peril but a red peril. They are afraid that the exploited masses of the world will rise in their might and take back what they have been robbed of. We admit this is a serious matter—for the imperialists.

The Daily Worker Greets The Freiheit on Its 5th Birtday

HAIL TO The Freiheit! The DAILY WORKER, the official organ of the Workers (Communist) Party, greets its brother organ in the Jewish language on its Fifth Birthday. The Freiheit has become a powerful weapon in the class struggle of the worker. It is an able and strong foe of the bureaucratic traitors in the Needle Trades Unions. Its anniversary celebration tonight at Madison Sqaure Garden is a geat event in the history of the labor press. Long live The Freiheit. Hail the victory of the workers! Hail Communism!

Civil Liberties Head Defies Sigman; Legal Aid Meeting Monday

"I will not be bulldozed by Mr. Sigman."

This is reply given him by Forrest Bailey, director of the Civil Liberties Union, to the angry objection made against members of the executive committee of the union serving on the "Committee of 100," formed for the purpose of aiding in the defense of garment workers framed up as a result of strike activity.

In spite of the fact that the emergency committee has made no public announcement of its objects, and does not hold its first meeting until next Monday, the reactionary official of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union has already impugned the sincerity of its members.

Right Wing Fur Officials In With Bosses

Bosses Can't Make Workers Register, Say Progressives

All previous attempts to smash the New York Joint Board of the Furriers' Union having met with defeat, the Sepcial Reorganization Committee of the American Federation of Labor which was appointed to take full charge of driving the progressives from the union, has openly joined hands with the employers it was revealed yesterday in a letter sent out by the Associated Fur Manufacturers, Inc.

The president of this association, Samuel N. Samuels, advised his members that the board of directors had decided to ignore the leaders of the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union and recognize only the International Fur Workers' Union in matters that concern the union.

Natural Partners.

This announcement of a collaboration policy between the reactionary right wing forces and the bosses did not come as a surprise to members of the Joint Board. They knew the manufacturers association was carrying on negotiations with the rights, and they have prepared for some such development as this made public by Mr. Samuels.

S. Liebowitz, assistant manager of the Joint Board points out however that this decision was made not by the members of the manufacturers association but by the board of directors which acted without consulting its constituents.

Didn't Ask Members.

Liebowitz also recalls the fact that it was just a year ago this month, during the fur strike, that the manufacturers' association held secret negotiations with these same officials of the International Fur Workers'

Call Ford Spies To Help Hunt 'Assailants'

Sapiro Admits Claimed to be Unselfish, But Got the Cash

DETROIT, April 1.—Altho Henry Ford has had himself moved from the hospital to his own home and is reported "resting easy," the farcical "search" for his reputed assailants continues, and the physicians' bulletins have lost that touch of uncertainty and gravity which will probably enable Ford to avoid appearing on the witness stand in the million dollar suit against him by Aaron Sapiro.

Prosecutor Robert Toms announced today that the police could not find anything about the mysterious "assassins," and that he has asked the Ford secret service to aid him. The Ford spies are perfectly familiar with all the arts of frame-up and provocation

Sapiro's Sordid Rise.

The meteoric career of Aaron Sapiro as leader of the American cooperative movement was given a sordid touch today during the cross-examination of the so-called wheat king by Senator James A. Reed, chief of Henry Ford's counsel. Before an interested jury in federal court Reed drew from Sapiro admissions that all his work in helping American farmers to organize cooperatives was well paid for and always by agreements entered before the wheat king began his activities.

Reed spent an hour delving into Sapiro's connection with the cooperative movement in Texas. For this work, Sapiro said he received $37,300 in the years 1922 to 1926. The fees were paid for speeches, organization work and legal activities for the Texas farm bureau federation.

Reed read Sapiro's ostensible purpose in Texas into the record but in sneering tones.

Sapiro had made this statement a feature of all his speeches to Texas farmers. It was: "I am not interested in money; I'm interested in raising the standard of living among farmers, in taking children out of the fields and putting them in schools; in taking women out of the fields and putting them in homes."

$19,000 For Little Work.

"You always got paid for it, didn't you," Sen Reed's scornful comment. Then the Missourian brought out the fact that Snpiro drew $37,000 from the Texas farmers in five years.

Sapiro testified he was paid approximately $19,500 for a "few days effort" in arranging government loans from the war finance corporation for ten of the cooperatives under his wing. This was brought out by Senator James A. Reed, chief of Henry Ford's counsel.

The loans were arranged in a "few days," Sapiro said, during which he "ran down from New York to Washington to carry on the negotiations" with officials of the war finance corporation. All the loans were negotiated at the same time. Then he told of receiving between $18,250 and $19,500 for his efforts.

Frame-up Against The DAILY WORKER Editors Put Off to Thursday

The case against the editors and business manager of The Daily Worker, who were summoned to appear in the Third District City Magistrate's Court, Second Ave. and Second St., yesterday morning to answer to a charge of violating section 1141 of the penal code against the publication of "lewd, lecherous, lascivious, and disgusting matter," has been postponed until next Thursday.

A poem entitled "America" by Ilavid Gordan, which appeared in the magazine section of The Daily Worker of March 12, is responsible for the charge. Two members of the Bomb Squad who served the summons declared that the action was inspired by complaints coming from "a well-known patriotic society."

Aid For Passaic Jobless Asked By Unions

Employment Relief Urged At Joint Conference

PASSAIC, April 1.—Steps to relieve the grave situation caused by the continued unemployment of thousands of textile workers in this city and vicinity were urged at the conference held tonight at the textile union headquarters under the direction of a joint committee of the Trades and Labor Council of Passaic and the District Council of the Textile Workers.

Due indirectly to the present slump in the woolen industry, most of the time during the day and the night sifts have been abolished altogether, according to Gustave Deak, president of the district council. He reported that last week the Botany Worsted mills, one of the largest plants in the city, layed off 400 workers, and it is now likely that they may evan shut down altogether.

Urges Action

Declaring that "the gravity of the situation calls for immediate action," the conference called for immediate assistance. It recommended that the city start constructiou and repair work at once; that employment machinery be set up; that unemployment relief be organized; and that child labor laws be strictly enforced.

At the conclusion of the meeting, after it was decided to call a larger conference for some night next week, with representatives of all organizations interested in this problem, Deak, on behalf of the District Council, issued the following statement:

Start Real Relief

"Last night's meeting was the first step in the movement initiated by the Passaic Central Labor Union and the United Textile Workers of America to start real relief for the thousands of unemployed workers in this city.

"The meeting was called in a hurry. In addition it was found necessary to change the place of meeting at the last minute. However, the interest shown by those present emphasized the importance of the problem. Our organization is, of course, the most concerned.

While the unemployment situation here affects many other workers, it is the textile workers who are suffering most because of the present slump in industry. Thousands of textile workers are unemployed, although their strike was settled several

Kansas Contract Not Signed; Ohio Operators Ask Conference; First Frame-up Occurs

INDIANAPOLIS, April 1.—Outstanding developments on the first day of the lockout of the miners of the central competitive coal field were: The reported decision of large numbers of the West Virginia miners to quit work, and try once more for a chance to organize themselves; the anti-union drive at Pittsburgh, in which the already non-union Pittsburgh Coal Co., largely owned by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, takes the lead, with the formerly union Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Co., of which Horace F. Baker is president, swinging in behind it, and locking out its union miners; the decision of Lee Hall, president of District No. 6, Ohio, to meet with the Ohio Operators' Association for a conference in Columbus, April 7, and the failure to put thru the temporary agreement between the union and the southwestern operators.

West Virginia Will Strike.

FAIRMONT, W. Va., April 1.—Suspension of work in the northern West Virginia coal fields, by supposedly non-union miners marked an important development in the walkout of union bituminous mine workers of the nation today.

The international representative of the United Mine Workers for the northern West Virginia field, issued a statement shortly before noon, in which he declared that 50 meetings were being held throughout District 31, in which 100,000 persons, miners and their families, were enthusiastically pledging their support to the stand of the United Mine Workers.

The West Virginia district was once strongly unionized, and the miners there are thoroly sick of non-union low wages, and bad conditions, especially of tha cheating done by company weighmen, not coutrolled by any union check-weighmen.

Progressives Fought For Union.

While little attempt has been made to unionize this important territory by the regular organizers of the United Mine Workers, the progressive and militant elements in the miners' union have repeatedly called attention to it as the key position, and have never ceased to carry on such activity there as they could.

Much of the publicity of the Save The Union bloc in the last miners' international convention was directed towards the organizing of the non-union fields, and West Virginia most of all.

CELEBRATE FREIHEIT'S 5TH YEAR AT MADISON SQUARE GARDEN TONIGHT

By MOISSAYE J. OLGIN.

THIS evening the workers of New York and vicinity gather to celebrate the fifth anniversary of the Jewish Daily Communist Freiheit, the first copy of which appeared on April 2, 1922. The very fact that a labor newspaper is marking its birthday by a meeting in the greatest hall in New York City speaks of the mass character and influence of the paper.

During those five years the Freiheit has become one of the most influential labor papers in this country.

GREW OUT OF WORKERS' NEEDS.

The Freiheit grew out of the economic needs of the great masses of the Jewish workers, mainly concentrated in the needle trades. The Jewish workers, trained both in the places of their birth and in this country in the spirit of socialism gradually awoke to the realization that they were saddled by a union bureaucracy no better than the bureaucracy of other unions. Tho professing adherance to the socialist party, the chiefs of the "Jewish" needle unions gradually abandoned their contact with the masses, adopted the class collaboration psychology, used their offices to perpetuate their own domination, and stifled every attempt at protest on the part of the rank and filo workers. From leaders they became traitors of the working masses. This betrayal was fostered, defended and led by the "socialist" Jewish Daily Forward, which became the ideological and organizational center of all that is rotten, bourgeois and anti-proletarian in the labor movement. The rift between the prosperous, well-fed, well-clothed and secure "aristocracy" of the Jewish workers on the one hand and the mass of the exploited, underpaid and hounded rank and filers on the other hand, became wider and wider.

The Jewish workers, alert, sensitive, educated to the understanding of their class interests, began to chafe under the weight of self-satisfied leeches. Conditions where the union officials were placing all their hopes in arbitration machinery headed by representatives of the bourgeoisie, where the workers were shown one kind of a union agreement, whereas, secretly, the employers were granted much more freedom to exploit them (so-called supplementary agreements), where fights of the masses against the employers were looked upon with disfavor and the boss was considered the best aid of the union officials in maintaining the union organization—such conditions could not fail to arouse the workers. A general revolt followed.

Revolt Let By The Freiheit.

The revolt was led by the Freiheit. This is its chief contribution to the labor movement, but it is not the only one.

The Freiheit points the way for the labor press of this country in very many respects.

CROWE, THOMPSON'S BOSS, HAS HORRIBLE ANTI-LABOR RECORD

Article III.

By ARNE SWABECK

The union smashing policies of States Attorney Crowe, "Big Bill" Thompson's political boss, was exposed by the Chicago Federation of Labor during the strike of the International Ladies' Garment Workers in 1924. A special committee of fifteen, appointed to investigate, reported as follows:

1. That State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe has openly and flagrantly permitted misuse of his office in the interests of the garment manufacturers of this city;

2. That his record in the present garment workers' strike is only one instance among many other instances of the misuse of his office in the interests of the manufacturers' and employers' associations;

3. That in adopting and following a brazen and militant policy against organized labor he has gone so far as virtually to turn over his office to the Employers' Association and to Dudley E. Taylor, their attorney;

4. That he has been derelict in the carrying out of his primary duties and functions as the prosecuting officer of crime;

5. That in spite of the fact that Cook county has appropriated more money yearly for the state's attorney's office in the past four years than ever before, crimes of a major nature, including murder, have been committed and have gone unpunished to an appalling extent;

6. That the platform upon which Mr. Robert E. Crowe stands for re-election in an unveiled threat to break the back of organized labor in Chicago, and that it is supported by the interests represented by the notorious "Wheat King" James Patten, and by Dudley E. Taylor the "injunction" attorney for the Garment Manufacturers' Association and for other employers' associations."

These few instances enumerated should be sufficient to prove to the workers that this corrupt policy of supporting one or another of the capitalist candidates has become a dismal failure. A real opportunity was at hand for the organized labor movement to act politically independent in the interest of labor. Its leadership failed to utilize it. In 1918 the Chicago labor movement took the initiative to lay the foundation for a labor party. By an overwhelming majority the trade unions went on record for it. Today, the Chicago trade union leadership has completely gone back on this policy. As a matter of fact, it is denouncing any efforts toward a labor party.

The Chicago workers have vital interests in these elections. A solution of which can never be expected from any of the candidatas in the field of their parties. That is proven distinctly by the records cited. The traction problem effects the workers vitally, the question of Chicago public schools,

ZOLTAN SZANTO TO BE TRIED IN SPECIAL COURT

Fifty-two Workers Face Frame-up in Hungary

BUDAPEST, April 1.—In consequence of the decision of the Public Prosecutor, Zolton Szanto and his 52 comrades will be placed before an extraordinary court.

The decision of the Public Prosecutor in Budapest to place the arrested men before an extraordinary court was made at the request of the infamous Judge Moskocsy. Moskocsy was recently made Senate President of the Hungarian Royal Court of Appeal, nevertheless, the preparation of this process has been left in his reliable hands.

Today's March celebration of the Budapest workers before the monument of the great Hungarian poet of freedom, Petrofi, turned into a great mass demonstration. The masses shouted "Long live the Republic!" "Long live the Emigrants!" etc. Mounted police attacked the demonstration in the most brutal manner and scattered the workers.

German Workers Protest

BERLIN, April 1.—The resolution of protest adopted on the 14th of March by the general membership meeting of the Berlin District of the Metal Workers Union against the persecution of workers in Hungary, reads as follows:

"The metal workers of Berlin organized in the Metal Workers Union represented by their general membership meeting express their deepest sympathy with the Hungarian working class persecuted by the bloody Horthy government.

"Filled with the greatest disgust at the almost unbelievable hypocrisy of the Bethlen clique the Berlin metal workers express their whole-hearted support of the Hungarian working class. Despite the temporary powerlessness of the Hungarian working class, the Berlin metal workers are convinced that in the near future the Hungarian workers will win their political, organizational and personal freedom.

"The Berlin metal workers expect the fullest support of the Amsterdam Trade Union International and hope that the workers of all countries affiliated to the International Federation of Trade Unions will create the necessary instruments for the successful struggle of the I. F. T. U. to free this international proletariat by building up and strengthening their own organizations."

The workers' council of the Berlin Elevated and Underground railways has sent the following telegram to the Hungarian Prime Minister Bethlen:

"We protest in the name of the 20,000 workers on the Elevated and Underground Railways against the persecution of the Hungarian working class. We demand that this persecution cease and also the brutal maltreatment of the prisoners. We protest against the expressed intention to declare martial law and we demand the release of all working class political prisoners."

Tramwaymen Resolution

A full membership meeting of the tramwaymen of Berlin which took place on the 16th March sent the following telegram of protest to the Hungarian government:

"We protest against the suppression of the socialist working class movement and demand freedom for all working class organizations and the release of all imprisoned socialists and communists."

A mass meeting of the workers of the Siemens Schuckert works (Werner Werks) took place in Siemens town yesterday evening. The meeting expressed its solidarity with the Chinese revolution and decided to send a telegram of protest to the Hungarian government against the brutal maltreatment of arrested workers in Hungary and against the trial before an extraordinary court. The telegram further demands the release of all the interned workers. The meeting also decided to appeal to the workers of the Siemens-Schuckert works in Budapest to take action in the same spirit and to obtain the release of the arrested socialists and communists.

New York Workers Protest.

Unions and other organizations of workers in New York are registering and sending money to assist the defence in Hungary of the fifty-two workers ready for trial there.

Local 2690 of the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, which is a New York local with 7,000 members, has sent Count Bethlen a strong telegram, denouncing the frame-up.

District Council No. 2, which has jurisdiction over 15,000 members, of the Shoe Workers Protective Union sends a similar protest.

The League Against Horthyism, sends today from its New York headquarters $500 to Henri Barbusse at Paris, for use in the defense in Hungary.

The Auto workers local in Detroit, and United Mine Workers' locals in Orient and Zeigler, Ill., have sent protests, and are calling on other locals of their unions to do the same.

According to the most recent act in the Kellogg comedy the alleged forger worked the Mexican situation three days and got three kinds of money for his pains. He is reported to have confessed to having sold forged documents to the oil interests, the catholic church and to the Calles government. Like St. Thomas who would not believe the story of the resurrection until he stuck his fingers into the five wounds of the resurrected, we are somewhat skeptical and would like to see this forger in the flesh or have the fact of his existence confirmed by some person more reliable than either Kellogg or any Washington correspondent of a capitalist paper whose political fiction we are accustomed to reading.

APPRECIATE THE DAILY WORKER

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 31, 1927.

The DAILY WORKER,
33 First Street,
New York City.

Dear Sirs: As constant readers of your paper, we learn that your news and comments upon the present situation in China are always reliable and frank. We realize that most of the other publications in this country are as a whole imperialistic. Their news and comments upon the Chinese revolution are not only unreliable but also very antagonistic and as such as for the last week or so, to stimulate the American public to a state of war upon China.

Due to the fact that we often missed one or two issues of your paper by getting it from the newsstand because it was sold out, we decided to get it directly from you. Therefore enclosing herewith please find a check of six dollars for a year's subscription to the DAILY WORKER.

We thank you, in closing, for your stand and sympathy on our struggle for freedom.

Very truly yours,

CHIANG KAI SHEK BLAMES RIOTS ON FOREIGN MILITARY PREPARATIONS

SHANGHAI, April 1.—The presence of foreign troops, foreign battleships and defense preparations in China are primarily responsible for the anti-foreign riots, according to Chiang Kai Shek, Nationalist general.

"It is an indisputable fact," he said, "that owing to the circumstances of court martial and the numerous defense measures of the foreigners, feeling between the Chinese populace and the Nationalist forces on the one hand and the foreign community on the other is growing more tense every day. Such a situation cannot long continue. I wish to call attention of the foreign settlement authorities to this serious state of affairs and I hope that measures may be taken to lessen the tension.

Scores Nanking Bombardment.

Scoring the imperialist powers for the bombardment of Nanking and assuring the powers that rioters would be punished, Chiang said, "No notice was given to our authorities before the bombardment. No time was allowed to take the necessary measures for the protection of foreign lives and property. No time was given to allow peaceable citizens to leave the city."

Indignity to China.

Reverting to the "defense measures in the foreign settlement, the Nationalist commander said, "The preposterous measures of the settlement would be fitting to adopt toward savages and semi-civilized peoples in colonies. As a leader of the Nationalist forces, I regret this state of affairs, and feel that it is an indignity to the Nationalist movement. Since my arrival in Shanghai I have continually advised the Chinese people against mob violence and any damage to foreign lives and property.

the district, who announced the mines would be operated with non-union labor.

The Pittsburg Terminal Coal Company posted the scale it was willing to pay, which is about $1 lower than terms of the Jacksonville wage scale.

While the Pittsburg Coal Co., which stands with the Pittsburg Terminal Coal as an enemy of unionism, boasted thru its executive vice-president, U. F. Loeber, that most of its men were "satisfied" and that not many of them have quit, and most of them will come out later.

Sheriffs Come Out.

With a small army of county sheriffs on duty members of the United Mine Workers of America gathered here today for mass meetings as the non unionists suspended work.

The meetings held to celebrate the 30th anniversary of the establishment of the eight-hour day fell coincidently with the first day of the nationwide suspension and Sheriff Robert H. Braun, taking a provocative attitude directed his men to "disperse any assemblage that threatened to become riotous."

Because today is a holiday in the union mines and tomorrow is a "short" day, the effect of the suspension call in the district will not be apparent until early next week, it was believed.

Vice President Phil Murray, placed by the Lewis administration of the United Mine Workers of America in direct charge of the situation, hurried from one group meeting to another. He scored the Pittsburg Coal Company, chief stumbling block to the mine workers in their efforts to unionize this district, charging the company was importing large numbers of guns into the non-union mining camps while the miners have not even thought of resorting to violence.

The first frame-up case against a union miner has already taken place, it was learned today, when Joseph Ferguson, 50, of Yukon, Pennsylvania. Ferguson is an active unionist, and will be held in jail because an explosion of dynamite took place in the town country at Wyano. The blast did no damage, and there is no evidence that Ferguson had anything to do with it.

COLUMBUS, O., April 1.—Negotiations for a settlement between Ohio bituminous miners and coal operators of the state of the wage controversy, which would permit resumption of work in the Ohio coal fields, marked the first day of the general suspension.

As miners throughout the various Ohio soft coal fields carried their tools from the mine, and prepared for a long cessation, Lee Hall, president of the District No. 6, United Mine Workers, announced from Cambridge, O., that he would accept an invitation sent by telegram from the session of the Ohio coal operators' association at Toledo, calling for a joint conference in Columbus April 7.

Stoppage Complete.

The suspension of work in the Ohio mines was general, reports here today indicated, only about 15 small auxiliary mines, supplying pottery plants or other industrial establishments in their immediate vicinity, continuing operation.

Anticipation of a long, bitter struggle in the mine districts was reflected in the reports of traveling salesmen, who declared merchants were buying on a "hand-to-mouth" basis, with much uncertainty as to future business conditions.

The miners were reported seeking work in many places in other lines, while others were enjoying a "holiday" for a while, before seeking work.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 1.—Eighteen to twenty thousand coal miners in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas suspended work today following failure yesterday to arrive at an agreement at a conference between representatives of southwest operators and miners.

Matt Elroy, representative of Oklahoma and Arkansas miners, said negotiations would continue. "I have no idea when there'll be an agreement in the southwest fields," Elroy said today, "but it is certain we cannot live on five dollars a day wages which the operators insist on us taking."

W. L. A Johnson, for the operators, said there was a possibility of an agreement within two weeks as some progress was made at yesterday's conference on minor phrases of a new agreement.

Charlie Chaplin Is Invited To Work In The Soviet Union

MOSCOW, April 1. — Charlie Chaplin has been officially invited by the Soviet Union motion picture trust to come here and appear in local made pictures. The invitation says that it considers him "a victim of the pious hypocrisy of American public opinion."

months ago. The unemployment situation affects the workers in the building trades, the rubber industry and other fields.

"We suggested to the Central Labor Union the calling of last night's meeting and the initiating of steps looking towards relieving the unemployment situation. The gravity of the situation calls for immediate action. At last night's meeting we offered the suggestions that the city should start construction and repair work to alleviate conditions, that employment machinery should be set up, that unemployment relief should be organized, and that the child labor laws should be strictly enforced. These and other suggestions we offered were favorably received.

"Thousands of workers have been thrown into misery by the unemployment crisis in this city. These workers cannot be left to starve. They must be given aid. Something must be done at once to relieve their condition. Either work must be provided for them, or support must be given them by the city authorities and the community.

Glad of Larger Conference

"We are glad that the meeting last night decided to call a larger conference for some night next week, with representatives of all organizations interested in this problem. We call upon the trade union movement to support this effort toward solving the unemployment situation, and we urge upon all labor unions, workers' fraternal organizations and all friendly organizations to elect or appoint delegates for next week's conference, the date of which will be announced later through the press."

The Freiheit is a Communist paper. That means to say that in all its activities it is guided by a general idea, by the broadest and most comprehensive conception of the social forces that make history. At the same time, however, the Freiheit is penetrating every nook and corner of the life of the Jewish workers, noting every event, however small on the surface, shedding light on every movement, explaining to the workers every detail of their interests, arousing them to action. In this constructive sense of the word, the Freiheit is probably the most popular of the Communist papers in this country.

The Freiheit is a Jewish paper. It speaks to one section of the working class, yet its interest embraces the labor movement as a whole in all its ramifications both in this country and abroad. Thus the Freiheit does not keep the workers confined to the narrow limits of nationalism but it broadens their outlook and widens their horizon.

It Is A Fighting Paper.

The Freihait is a fighting paper. It is not a paper of comment. It is not confined to opinions. It uses comment to arouse the workers. It spreads opinions among the masses in order to stimulate them to activities. It is, to use Lenin's words, a mass propagandist. It is, to use Lenin's words again, a mass organizer.

The splendid fight of the Joint Action Committee in 1925, the historic struggle of the Fur Workers' Union in 1926, the struggle of the Joint Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers Union against the bureaucracy of the Sigman clique, the struggle against bourgeois domination in the Workmens' Circle, and a dozen other struggles would have been impossible without the Freiheit.

The Freiheit was placed by the course of events in a highly responsible, strategic position. It was against the left wing in the Needle Trades that the bureaucracy of the A. F. of L., hand in hand with the courts, the police, and the capitalist class as a whole, directed its fiercest attack. It was here in this sector of the left wing labor movement that they hoped to crush the spirit of revolt and to smother the movement of the workers for organization and and class struggle.

If this harrage of the traitors has proven a failure, if the left wing has not only stood its ground but is making progress all along the line, tha Freiheit has had no mean share in these successes.

Struggle For The Labor Party.

The Freiheit is a political paper. It strives to draw the necessary political implications from the struggle of the workers. It interprets the life of the workers in the class struggle aspect, which is the political aspect. The Freiheit has participated in all the political movements of the working class, including the struggle for a Labor Party and campaign activities.

The Freiheit is a Communist Party paper. It is not only permeating the movement of the masses with Marxian ideology, but it is helping the Party to organize the vanguard of the working class into a well-disciplined party intertwined with the working class and leading its struggles in the direction of overthrowing capitalism and establishing the Soviet system.

The Freihait is a Jewish paper, which means that its activities are conducted in a specific national environment, where nationalist bourgeois ideology is strong. The Freiheit was the first of the Jewish labor papers in this country to draw the class line also in national and cultural Jewish problems. Contrary to the old, now traitorous Forward which recognised only the "general culture of humanity" and "general Jewish culture," the Freiheit is spreading the consciousness that the nationalist idea is a bourgeois idea, that national culture is bourgeois culture, and that the working class must beware the dangers hidden in the subtle poison of national ideology. The Freiheit is determinedly and dauntlessly fighting for a class ideology also in the field of culture.

The Freiheit has become not only a center of economic and political life, but also a very influential cultural center. It has attracted a great number of radical writers, poets, dramatists who, not entirely identifying themselves with the working class, are willing to work in cooperation with the labor movement. Culturally isolated at the beginning, Freiheit, inspite of the hatred and disdain, abused by the so-called cultural elements, the Freiheit gradually became, even in the eyes of outsiders, the center around which all cultural paper. The Freiheit is not only a paper. It is a mass of workers hungry for education, clamoring for culture, grasping at the better things of the mind. It was this mass avidity for things cultural that has broken the isolation of the Freiheit and made it a gathering point for every live cultural force.

Forward Formidable Opponent.

The success and the growth of the Freiheit is the more gratifying the greater the enemy it had to combat. The Jewish Daily Forward was the most formidable opponent. Rich, powerful, unscrupulous, reigning supreme both in the labor movement and among the petty bourgeoisie, the Forward at the beginning thought it would be sufficient to stamp its foot to exterminate the Freiheit. The fight against the Forward looked an uneven fight. For years the situation of the Freiheit was precarious. There were months when its very existence hung on a thread. Today the Forward is defeated. It has lost all its influence over the working masses. It is not able to fill a hall with rank and file workers, even when it uses all its machinery of advertising. It is utterly discredited, not only among the workers but among the thinking elements. It stands there, a picture of hatred, debasement, degradation. It witnesses how the Freiheit, a militant young Communist paper, dares celebrate its anniversary in a hall that seats 20,000.

Must Have English Language Press.

The Freihelt points the way for the workers of this country. The Freiheit is active only in one corner of the working class. The American working class, the English speaking working class, will have to follow suit. We must have English papers like the Freiheit, mass papers leading the struggle of the workers for a better Future.

Long live the Freiheit!

Long live a powerful press of the working class in the English language!

Long live the class struggle of the workers!

Long live Communism!

LEFTS IN I. A. M. MAKE READY FOR ELECTION FIGHT

Would Organize Auto Workers, Rap Wharton

CHICAGO, Ill., April 1. — For the pending election of international officers and delegates in the International Association of Machinists the machinists progressive group, a left wing grouping, has issued a program criticizing the Wharton administration for supporting the B. & O. cooperative plan and the Watson-Parker railroad act.

Support Labor Party

The group demands wage increases, an organization campaign particularly in the auto industry, amalgamation of craft unions, support of a labor party and a fight against injunctions, company unions, "class collaboration" and color bars in union membership. At present when machinists take the union obligation they pledge themselves never to oppose any but white persons for membership, the group asserts.

Pater Jensen of Chicago and A. T. McNamara of Baltimore are indorsed for American members on the executive council and J. McGovern of Montreal for Canadian member; Jac. Friedrick of Milwaukee for the law committee and J. Weydert and Wm. Waterworth of Chicago for A. F. of L. delegates.

Campaign For Old Age Pensions Starts In Penn. and New York

BETHLEHEM, Pa., April 1 (FP). —Bishop Ethelbert Talbot of the Protestant Episcopal Church at Bethlehem, has issued to the members of the advisory council of the American Association for Old Age Security, of which he is president, an appeal for the immediate financing of the drive to secure old age pension legislation in the several states.

"Never in the history of this nation," he says, "has the time been more propitious for this work than the present. Old age pension bills have been introduced this year in at least two score states and hard battles are being fought for them in a number of these."

Bishop Talbot appeals for the immediate raising of $10,000 to carry on the work of the association, and especially to insure favorable action in Pennsylvania and New York next winter through intelligent presentation of facts to the members of those legislatures. Massachusetts will be the scene of another important contest next January, to which the association will direct its energies.

ated. The majority favors a strict blockade of all Chinese ports, while the admiralty has recommended that the whole of the Yangtze River as far as Hankow be taken over. It is significant that Sir Hugh Trenchard and other members of the imperial defense committee were invited to attend the cabinet meeting.

Workers' Opposition.

The cabinet's action, coming on the heel of the exchequer's announcement of a $250,000,000 deficit in two years, and in the face of united opposition from the British workers indicates that the cabinet is in a desperate position.

More On Tientsin.

PEKING, April 1. — A Nationalist drive against Tientsin is anticipated here

Workers in Tientsin are restless and the capture of the city with their aid looks not unlikely.

Marshal Chang Tso Lin, northern war lord, formerly in the pay of the Japanese, is making efforts to secure a substantial subsidy from the British government. The spread of Nationalism in the north will take the Peking situation out of his hands, he says, unless he is subsidized by the British.

SHANGHAI, April 1. — The U. S. S. Isabel, with Admiral Hough aboard, is reported to have left Nanking for Hankow, where officials report "trouble may be expected next week."

Investigate Nanking Massacre.

HANKOW, April 1.—It is officially stated here that the Nationalist government will soon issue a statement regarding the Nanking incident, based upon the findings of a civil official inquiry now being conducted in Nanking. The wires between Hankow and Nanking have been out due to military operations. Reports of the incident are just coming through.

The military authorities at Nanking report that disorders last Thursday were caused by remnants of the defeated northerners and White Russian mercenaries in Chang Tsung Chang's army, who instigated attacks on the foreign consulates in order to involve the Nationalist forces with the foreign powers.

Few Foreigners Hurt.

The total foreign casualties were one American killed, two wounded; two British killed, two wounded; one Japanese killed, two wounded. The number of Chinese killed and wounded by the American and British gunboat bombardment is not yet certain.

In responsible Nationalist circles the evacuation of American nationals from the Yangtze region and elsewhere in China is regarded as a measure dictated by panic rather than by statesmanship.

GOLD SHOWS UP CRIMINAL RECORD OF ALEX FRIED, WOLL ORGANIZER

A sensation was caused in the fur market yesterday with the distribution of a leaflet by Ben Gold, general manager of the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union which exposes the criminal record of Alex Fried, one of the "favorites" of Matthew Woll and President William Green of the A. F. of L.

Revealing as it does the type of man who has been made general organizer of the International Fur Workers' special union which is supposed to replace the Joint Board, it is considered a smashing answer to the scurrilous attack upon the integrity of various leaders of the New York Joint Board of the Furriers' Union contained in a letter sent Wednesday to each member of the union by the reactionary Furriers' Reorganization Committee of the A. F. of L.

The leaflet which is now in the hands of every New York fur worker says:

Alex Fried—Big Alex—alias Reid
An International Organizer with Three Names

As general organizer of the International scab "union" of Shachtman, Winnick, Matthew Woll and McGrady, he calls himself "Brother" Alex Fried.

In the underworld, where he is an honorable member, he calls himself "Big Alex."

In the police department and in prison, this hero of ours is known by the name of "Reid."

Here is a page from the career of this International organizer of the scab "union":

Prison Record of Alex Fried, ALIAS REID

The organizer of the International and of the A. F. of L.

Oct. 18, 1912, arrested by Officer Corcoran in Boston, Mass., for breaking into a house and robbing it of valuable jewelry.

Dec. 16, 1912, Alex Fried, alias Reid, was convicted and sentenced to from 4 to 5 years in a Massachusetts State Prison, the Sing Sing of Massachusetts.

This is the representative of the American Federation of Labor! That's what we call an organizer of the International! The lefts are "no good"! The rights are "O. K."!

Well, fur workers, how do you like your representative,—your spokesman,—your benefactor?

This is the partner of President Green, President Schachtman, Matthew Woll, Hugh Frayne and Edward McGrady. His wants you to register in his "union."

He is going to recognize our union. He is talking of "honesty" and "clean unionism."

This "jewelry boy" and jail "bird" was appointed by President Green to reorganize the Furriers' Union.

Go back to prison! Go back to your old trade! The underworld is the place for you!

Thieves, criminals and degenerates have no place in a working class movement!

NEWARK FURRIERS CALL MEETING TO ACHIEVE PEACE

Don't Trust Schachtman But Ask Him to Meet Left Wing

Deploring the internal strife which threatens to destroy the International Fur Workers' Union, Fur Workers' Local 25 of Newark has called a mass meeting of workers for Saturday, April 2nd, in New Montgomery Hall (Prince and Montgomery Streets) at 1 p. m. and in the interest of peace has invited as speakers both Ben Gold, general manager of the New York Joint Board Furriers' Union and Oizer Schachtman, president of the International Fur Workers' Union.

"While we do not trust Schachtman or any of his associates" says Morris Langer, manager of Local 25, "we are prepared to forget their former treachery against the Newark local in our desire to save the union from the destruction which faces it if Schachtman and the reactionary officials of the American Federation of Labor continue their union-smashing campaign unchecked."

Tried Injunction.

The tactics of Schachtman and the other right wing leaders of the International Fur Workers' Union against those who are serving the interests of the workers are well known to Local 25. It was against this local that the International tried to take out an injunction, in its effort to throw out the regularly elected representatives and replace them with appointees who would serve the bureaucratic machine of the reactionaries.

The International officials were forced to withdraw this application for an injunction, and they were completely routed in their attempt to capture Local 25. While resentment at this procedure still lingers, the Newark local is willing to put aside its own grievances in an effort to establish peace in the union. It has therefore asked the representatives of both the left and right wings to address its mass meeting, where the present situation will be discussed, and the fur workers will mobilize "for the defense of their union and their union conditions."

All members of Local 54 are also invited to attend this meeting.

Paper Industry Develops

SEATTLE (FP) April 1. — The manufacture of pulp and paper is a fast developing industry in the Pacific northwest. In 1922 pulp production was 102,000 tons; by the end of 1927 when additions and new plants now being constructed are completed the production will be 275,000 tons. The northwest mills, due to low pulp cost, with tremendous timber resources, and low transportation costs, are now able to put pulp into New York markets for less money than can the pulp mills in the east.

Thus far the workers in this industry in this section are completely unorganized.

of tax dodging and of labor conditions in the city likewise.

The situation has finally come to a point where the Workers Party stands out as the only party fighting for the immediate interests of labor involved in these elections. For the need of public ownership with workers participation, in management of the Chicago transportation system. For public ownership of public utilities with workers' participation in management and service at cost. For labor representation on the Chicago Board of Education. For abolition of the platoon system and junior high. For immediate direction of the respective schools to be in the hands of teachers, councils co-operating with students' and parents' councils. For abolition of military training in public schools and re-establishment of vocational training under union control. For enforcement of the city law prohibiting child labor and city support for working class children when necessary. For the stopping of tax dodging and re-assessment of taxable properties so as to make the rich corporations pay their full share of taxes. For the unionization of all labor on the city pay-roll with wage increases necessary for a decent standard of living. For prohibition of entitled injunctions in labor disputes and for improvements in health and safety conditions in the factories, with a maximum work day of eight hours.

Although since the death of C. E. Ruthenberg, the Workers Party has no candidate in the field, it will continue to raise these issues, fight for their immediate solution, fight for the establishment of a labor party, and for doing away with the capitalist rule.

May Fight Over Radio Control Bill; Court Move Threatened By Foes

WASHINGTON, April 1. — Indications that the government may have a fight on its hands in federal courts to enforce regulations to be issued soon by the Federal Radio Commission, were seen today.

Opponents of the new radio law, adopted by the last congress, threaten to take their fight before the courts if they lose out in the hearings now being held by the new regulatory commission.

The claim was raised that the law is not sufficiently comprehensive to govern all phases of the radio industry and that some radio interests will suffer from regulations to be issued.

Will Can't Make Costs.

"They were forced to give up that agreement when the members heard about it," said Liebowitz; "and they will be forced to abandon this new one. It looked as the the association's leaders had learned a lesson; but evidently they did not. As Gold said last year, the A. F. of L. officials cannot make fur coats and that is what the manufacturers are interested in. The same thing is true now."

Regular Conspiracy.

Mr. Samuels of the manufacturers' association assures his members that the A. F. of L. Special Committee will observe the terms of the existing agreement and there will be no trouble in the industry.

He indicates that this matter has been a subject of conference between the board of directors of the association and the right wing union-dissolvers ever since, on March 7th and 8th, the International Fur Workers' Union wrote advising the association of the "dissolution" of the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union and the "suspension" of the four constituent locals, 1, 5, 10 and 15.

Police Failed.

Members of the Associated Fur Manufacturers Inc. are asked to employ only workers carrying cards issued by the right wing international officials. This is of course intended as a means of forcing registration since the efforts of the Industrial Squad, the police gangsters have been so unsuccessful in this direction.

In many quarters it is anticipated that the next step in the fight will be an injunction taken out by the manufacturers against the Joint Board.

Bosses Net Eager.

Many manufacturers yesterday were at a loss to understand just what was now developed and a meeting of the Joint Board this afternoon will authorize its officers to take action in the matter.

Workers For Joint Board

"This latest move will not help the A. F. of L. Committee any more than all its other tactics," said Liebowitz. "The fur workers are with the Joint Board. Even the Reorganization Committee knows that and that is why they are so desperate."

Forbid Strike Parade.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 1. — Parades of striking high school students through downtown streets will not be permitted, police headquarters announced today. Police have broken up one such parade, participated in by 125 students.

The students are striking in protest against the administration of Milton D. Proctor, of White Plains, N. Y., who is school superintendent.

DETROIT WORKERS PROTESTING THE SHELLING OF NANKING BY AMERICA

DETROIT, Mich., April 1.—Detroit workers are preparing a number of demonstrations against the ghastly shelling of Nanking and the threatened invasion in China by the British and American Imperialists.

The first conference of workers' organizations and organizations representing the oppressed people of the world was held on Thursday, March 31 by the local unit of Young Aria. The purpose of this conference was to organize the first huge demonstration.

The Workers (Communist) Party of Detroit was invited and sent delegates to the conference to participate in the first demonstration. The following are some of the organizations invited: The Kuomintang, Filipino Association of Detroit, Detroit Chinese Students Club, Friends Society, Detroit Federation of Labor, Gaoelic Club, Irish-American Republican League, Mexican Club, U. N. I. A., N. A. A. C. P., Working Class Women's Federation and a number of other organizations.

Women Conference.

In addition to the above conference which will arrange its demonstration within a very short time, the Detroit Working Class Women's Federation is calling a conference of all women's organizations for Sunday, April 10.

The District Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party will utilize the huge May Day celebration arranged for Sunday afternoon May 1, at the Arena Gardens, for a demonstration against the Imperialist invasion of China.

Arrangements are being made by the Workers Party to secure a speaker who has just arrived from China after a stay of six months.

The working class and the Labor Movement of Detroit will have an ample opportunity of getting first hand information on the Chinese situation and to protest against the outrageous actions of American Imperialism in China.

When the Gods Destroy The Mad, Pennsylvania Politicians Are Fated

By JOHN P. TROXELL.

HARRISBURG, Pa. (FP)—The Republican machine that controls Pennsylvania politics is furnishing another illustration of the saying: "Whom the Gods would destroy, they first make mad."

Public opinion all over the country was aroused by the wholesale fraud and corruption which prevailed during the May primary and the November election of last year. Even the people of Pennsylvania, although accustomed for decades to machine politics and all that goes with it, gagged at the spectacle of open bribery and fraudulent counting of votes which both Mellon and Vare machines perpetrated in the interest of their respective candidates. Realizing this fact, Governor Fisher offered to the legislature a program of election reforms aiming to make it more difficult to practice corruption at the polls, and to make it more possible for decent citizens to detect and prosecute such practices as have prevailed in the past.

State boss, W. L. Mellon, brother of Secretary A. W. Mellon, announced that this program was very acceptable to the Republican party. But the bills which embodied the program have been reported out of committee in such a mangled shape that they could hardly be recognized. Every ounce of meat had been plucked from the bones, leaving only a skeleton of the original program.

Our Heavy World

WASHINGTON, April 1. — The world weighs 6,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 tons!

This staggering figure was arrived at today by Dr. Paul R. Heyl of the Bureau of Standards. He hopes later to change the first four ciphers to definite figures.

Farm Prices Mean More Farm Poverty—U. S.

WASHINGTON, (FP). — General level of farm crop prices on Mar. 15 was 126 per cent of the pre-war level as compared with 127 per cent on Feb. 15 and 140 per cent on Mar. 15, a year ago, says the bureau of agricultural economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture. Last week the department sent out a renewed warning that farmers are planning to plant too much this year, with the prospective results of still lower prices.

Cotton is 24 per cent lower than a year ago, wheat 17 per cent, eggs 14 per cent, wool 10 per cent, sheep 3 per cent, chickens 3 per cent.

Farm products averaged a purchasing power, in terms of other commodities, for February, of 82 per cent of what they would buy in 1909-14. Last February they would buy 87 per cent.

Never was there more need of the expansion of our fighting organ, The DAILY WORKER. The fact that in this critical period The DAILY WORKER has been hailed to court by agents of the American Legion, the Keymen of America, the National Security League, the Daughters of the Revolution and other similar organizations, is no accident. It shows that American capitalism is fully conscious of its importance.

You are asked to help to build up The DAILY WORKER for the coming critical days. You are asked to contribute to the Ruthenberg Sustaining Fund to prepare for the coming struggle, and to insure the development of a bigger and more powerful weapon for the fight.

American and British Imperialist Rivalry Comes to the Fore in China

Imperialist rivalry between Great Britain and America is still a decisive factor in shaping official policy in China. This is the first conclusion to be drawn from the most definite statement ever made on foreign affairs by Coolidge.

The second conclusion is that the dominant finance capitalists of America have spoken and that Great Britain has failed in her efforts to secure joint action against China from her chief imperialist enemy. Wall Street has decided that it has more to lose than to gain by joining now with the other powers against the Chinese nation.

There will be columns of praise for Coolidge but it was not Coolidge who framed the policy. The great banks with their billions of liquid capital crying for investment were the interests which feared that an aggressive policy in China would result in a door being closed forever to American investments.

The British empire is fighting for its life. It is impossible to overestimate the damage suffered by British imperialism by its defeat in China and the effect of this upon the 330,000,000 inhabitants of China. In this desperate situation the British foreign office was undoubtedly willing to make almost any concession to secure American support. Failure to secure agreement in these circumstances means a sharpening of the struggle between Britain and America to the point where it is impossible for them to combine against the Chinese liberation movement. Similarly it means that the British-built ring around the Soviet Union does not include the United States as yet.

The Coolidge statement, however, is dangerous in that it may create the impression that nothing needs to be done in America in behalf of the Chinese liberation movement and that the danger of war on China has passed. Nothing could be further from the truth and not only is there a threat to China on the part of American imperialism but the evidence of the tenseness in the relations of America and Britain makes the menace of war between these two nations a practical issue for the American workingclass.

In the struggle for the preservation of their influence and investments in China there are all the ingredients for conflict on a world scale. As we have stated before in these columns, American battleships are in Chinese waters to impress Great Britain as well as to intimidate the Chinese masses.

The demands for the withdrawal of all armed forces from China and recognition of the People's Government must be given greater force since as long as they remain, there is the double threat of aggression against the Chinese national liberation movement and war between imperialist rivals which would drown millions of workers in their own blood.

The Right Wing Sinks Deeper in the Mire of Reaction

No day passes without additional evidence of the utter reaction of the right wing leaders in the needle trades coming to hand. Two recent developments show the Green-Woll-Sigman clique nestling snugly in the arms of the bosses and the agents of Tammany Hall government.

First comes the agreement with the fur bosses made by the American Federation of Labor against the left wing—an agreement whose basis is cooperation of right wing, industrial squad and gangsters to smash the New York Joint Board.

Second is the recent correspondence between Sigman and the Civil Liberties Union in which Sigman appears in the role of assistant prosecutor of the members of the International Ladies Garment Workers who have been indicted for picketing and other "crimes" in connection with the strike of the cloakmakers.

Sigman protests against certain members of the Civil Liberties Union, acting as individuals, who aided in the organization of the Committee of One Hundred for defense of these workers. Sigman calls workers who are trying to raise defense funds "for the indicted unionists "blackguards, character assassins, underworld characters and corruptionists." He threatens the Civil Liberties Union with dire penalties if they do not take action against the men and women who have assisted in the detense work.

Nothing remains for the right wing leaders to round out their policy now except to move their headquarters into the Civic Federation offices (where Vice President Matthew Woll is already ensconced) put the industrial squad on the payroll as organizers for the "union" and devote all their time to jailing Communist and left wing workers.

The right wing has Tammanyized the section of the union it controls. Not only has it surrendered to the bosses but it has enlisted in the army of the bosses and is destroying the union in the needle trades.

The Miners' Fight is the Fight of Every American Worker

The Pittsburgh Coal Company and the Pittsburgh Terminal Company have put their mines on a non-union basis, mobilized their private armies of thugs and have declared their intention of fighting the United Mine Workers of America to a finish.

These two companies typify the true attitude of the coal barons toward the miners. Local conditions at present prevent the adoption of a similar policy in other coal fields but unless there is speedy and energetic organization work in the non-union fields operators in the central competitive field will soon be following the example of the two companies mentioned.

It is evident that just as in 1922 struggle in the Pittsburgh district will be fierce. This is a stronghold of the steel trust and the miners' union is a thorn in its side. It will try by every means to destroy all organization among the miners so that this territory may be completely under its control with no unions of any kind to dispute its domination.

In other districts—Ohio, Illinois and Indiana—the mines have been closed and as yet there has been no open attempt to duplicate the union-smashing tactics of the Pittsburgh companies. But as the strike continues there will be a series of such systematic attempts and it will be a great mistake if the miners are led to believe that shutdowns and starvation are the only weapons the operators will employ in what is primarily a nationwide effort to destroy the United Mine Workers of America as an effective instrument of the coal diggers. Even during the life of the Jacksonville agreement its provisions were openly violated by the operators.

They flaunted their contempt for the stipulated working conditions in the faces of the miners, they repudiated the whole agreement and went back to the non-union system as in West Virginia, they closed their mines in union territory as in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio and opened up mines in non-union sections. The operators made war on the union from the day the Jacksonville contract was signed. For three years they have been getting ready for the present drive on unionism.

There is one way for the union to meet and beat this offensive. It is to throw its full strength into an organization campaign in the decisive non-union sections. Many of these miners are former union men who were starved out of the central competitive field and will respond to appeal of the union. The miners who have never belonged to the union understand that once the union is smashed their wages and working conditions will suffer. The job can be done.

The government has stated that it will not interfere in coal dispute but this means nothing except that it believes that the union will be beaten. As the militancy of the miners increases and if substantial gains are made in the non-union fields, the government will side openly with the coal barons as it did in previous strikes. For this reason it is necessary that the labor movement as a whole be prepared to put the maximum pressure on state and national governments to prevent the use of the governmental machinery against the miners.

The fate of American labor is bound up with that of the United Mine Workers. If it is defeated there will be no hesitation on the part of the capitalists in attacking the unions all along the line.

The fight of the miners is the fight of every worker in the United States.

The Freiheit Has Proved Value of Press to Labor in Its Struggle for Power

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the Freiheit (Freedom), our Jewish Communist daily, celebrates its Fifth Anniversary.

It is a time of congratulation for the thinking workers, speaking all languages, in the whole American labor movement,—that such a staunch fighter of the working class has come triumphantly thru five years of ceaseless battle in the cause of toil. The future looks bright, with new successes awaiting The Freiheit in its efforts to win greater masses of workers for their own class fight leading the way to labor's complete emancipation.

Recent events have shown that The Freiheit is not only the standard bearer of the militant workers who speak and read the Jewish language. It fights, and fights brilliantly on one sector of the American working class front against capitalism, an important and necessary sector that has helped strengthen the spirit and morale of labor's entire army.

As the mouthpiece of the Jewish workers who constitute a large and able part of the left wing in the needle trades unions, The Freiheit incurs alike the enmity of Abraham Cahan, of The Forward, the yellow Socialist organ; of Morris Sigman, head of the reaction in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, with other betrayers of the Jewish workars, as well as William Green, president, Matthew Woll, vice president, and other officials of the American Federation of Labor, whose prime task is to keep the workers loyal to capitalist interests, seeking to turn their faces against their own struggle.

The Freiheit came into existence shortly after the organization of the Workers (Communist) Party.

It was established by the joint forces of the Jewish Federation that had withdrawn from the Socialist Party the previous summer, in 1921, and the Jewish Section of the Communist Party, that had been forced into an illegal existence by governmental persecution. They combined all the best elements among the revolutionary Jewish workers in this country.

This became very evident, and soon, with the barrage laid down against the left wing in the Jewish section of the American trade union movement by the Socialist "Daily Forward."

At first The Forward attacked the left wing and The Freiheit almost exclusively on the issue of the Soviet Union.

When the Freiheit and the left wing were urging every possible support of the Friends of Soviet Russia, that was raising relief funds in this country in aid of the famine stricken in the First Workers' Republic, the socialist "Forward" was doing everything possible in an effort to hamstring this effort, even to joining with the capitalist prosecutors in demanding an examination of the funds collected.

At that time the yellow leaders, still in control of the needle trades unions, saw the necessity of maintaining the English-language organ and threw great sums of money into the establishment of the New York Call, the socialist daily, operated under the thumb of Abe Cahan.

Two significant facts in this period were: (1) The drift of Jewish workers from The Forward to The Freiheit, and, (2) The failure of The Call to hold any support among English-language reading workers resulting in its suspension. These two facts were indications pointing to the growth of the left wing.

The left wing did grow in New York, against every obstacle that was raised against it, especially the gangster methods employed to intimidate the rank and file.

This growth, rapid as it was, could not have been achieved without The Freiheit. It was The Freiheit that spent endless days and nights in battle for unity as to every phase of the struggle. In those locals of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the Furriers' Union, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, the capmakers and other needle trades unions, not reached by the Freiheit and other left wing publications, the reaction was sure to maintain a foothold. The lack of information on the part of the workers as to the militant viewpoint in the left wing struggle gave strength to Cahan and Hillquit, Schlesinger and Sigman, Kaufman and Schachtman. The loss of our Italian daily was especially felt, and very severely.

The Freiheit was a great power in achieving the triumph of the Joint Action Committee of the I. L. G. W. U., in 1925, and in the following year it was a tower of strength in the strike of the Furriers' Union.

In the conventions of the American Federation of Labor, the needle trades reactionaries had gone over completely, first to the Gompers' machine, and later to the Green regime, that continued to respond to the policies of the arrogant American imperialism.

It was in this period that the Freiheit, that suffered repeatedly thru various financial crises, nevertheless, won an ever-increasing support from the workers, shown by the gradual and rapid increase in the number of its readers. It truly developed into a mass organ of the Jewish speaking workers.

The time quickly arrived, however, that showed the struggle of the Jewish needle workers could not be isolated from the bigger stream including all American organized labor. Militancy in the needle trades became the concern of the whole A. F. of L. reaction.

At the Detroit convention of the A. F. of L., last October, after Henry Ford had announced the inauguration of his so-called five-day week, the labor officialdom cried the victory of the New York workers to show a bona fida five-day week had been won by workers thru the exercise of their own economic power. But at the same time the New York Joint Board of the Furriers' Union became the object of a vicious attack by the labor reaction. That attack continues.

Armed with the Freiheit, however, the workers are doubly armed in their struggle. In a multitude of centers, in all sections of the nation, the spark of class effort kept glowing by revolutionary Jewish speaking workers, communicates its inspiration to English speaking toilers.

Thus on its fifth anniversary it is possible to hail the Freiheit, not only as a weapon of the Jewish workers, but as an instrument of all American labor, striving in common with all other foreign and English-language left wing and Communist publications to win the workers for militant trade unionism, for independent political action in the field of the class struggle.

The Freiheit is, therefore, truly an organ of Communism. Hail the Freiheit as it faces its sixth year promising greater struggles, greater victories. Hail Communism.

Textile Barons Scowl When Churches Appeal To Their Conscience

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (FP).—Southern textile barons, speaking through David Clark, editor of the Southern Textile Bulletin and director of their campaign to defeat the child labor amendment, have promptly shown their resentment at the moral plea addressed to them by Protestant clergy that they abolish their mill villages and establish just and humane industrial relations with their workers.

This plea was delivered by Bishop Cannon of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and was signed by Protestant Episopal and Baptist bishops and ministers in all the southern states. While no minister in any textile town signed the document, it was known that ministers in these towns were privately urging that the appeal to the consciences of southern employers be attempted.

Clark's answer to the clergymen's indictment of industrial autocracy is that it is really philanthropy!

New England textile mills are losing ground, while northern capital is being invested in southern textile development, due to the absence of labor laws and the supply of illiterate cheap labor from the southern mountain sections. Union organizers have made little progress.

China.—For generations missionaries have been propagandizing in China for Christian obscurantism. Under the protection of imperialist guns they intrenched themselves to preach western capitalist "morals" and "justice." They went forth in every direction as advance agents for British, American, German and French investors. But the respectable citizens in this and other lands saw nothing wrong in such foreign intrusions, such outside propaganda. The "liberal" papers did not editorialize piously about "outside interference." On the contrary, the missionaries were held up as types of spiritual pioneers, Christian heroes, what not. Even the machinations of the diplomatic corps in Peking, and the officially deputized commercial drummers in Shanghai and Canton and Nanking and a hundred other Chinese cities, failed to elicit a protest. But suddenly a horrified shout has gone up in the best circles against "propaganda" and "foreign interference" in China. It is the "Soviet" and "Bolshevik" brand, of course, that has aroused the righteous indignation. Ministers and newspaper editors—curiously forgetful of their own propagandizing missionaries—now "deplore Communist influence" in China. Boiled down to essentials, their central objection seems to be that Communist leaflets have accomplished more in several years than missionary tracts did in several generations.

Politics a la Passaic.—A nota on the niceties of politics in the town known for its textile strike is contributed by Irving Freeman of Passaic. He writes: "Commissioner Preiskel, popularly known as Commissioner Pretzel, is out for re-election on his record of hysterical behavior in the early days of the Passaic strike. At a meeting of his henchmen recently he announced that John Kelly would be his campaign manager, and that between his own Jewish name and Kelly's Irish label, he had the Hebrew and Irish votes in his vest pocket. But insurrection has broken out in the aforesaid vest pocket. The local unit of the Clan-Na-Gael, revolutioned in protest against this Jewish trick of appointing an Irish campaign manager." Given such excellent ingredients—Jew, Irishman, and Commissioner Pretzel—any of our readers can easily construct his own joke, though we can't think of one at the moment.

THE MAGIC "SKIN."

(Inspired by murderous doings of the imperialists in China.)

The hide of a Yank is precious
It's worth ten thousand others
In this respect the Yankees
And the British are blood brothers.

The hide of a Yank is precious
But not in the land of his birth
It has a "Wall Street" value
In distant parts of the earth.

The hide of a Yank in danger
Is the much desired excuse
That "Wall Street's" flunkies grasp at
The devil-dogs to use.

The hide of a white marauder
Or a Jesus peddling sap
Is stretched by bandit nations
To spread out on the map.

EXCERPTS FROM OUR OWN PEPPY DIARY.

March 25.—All day at our scrivening but at eventide the gl-hol' to hear J. Brophy and P. Hapgood at the Cafe Boulevard, whereat a Committee for Democracy in Industry acted as host. Brophy held forth so quietly and courteously that even of his foes that it did strain the imagination to picture him as a labor agitator. The socialists, albeit a few months ago they supported Brophy, were conspicuously absent, fearing mayhap to rouse the displeasure of His Highness J. Lewis and lesser lights among the latest allies of the New Leader. P. Hapgood won the hearts of all the ladies at one fell swoop, and did tell of a beating received at the miners' convention in so joyous and sprightly a fashion that none doubted he enjoys such physical exercise. Whereafter the majority of the diners did repair (mostly uninvited) to the abode of a Russian where we settled many things, such as politics and art, but chiefly did we settle neat Swiss cheese and caviar sandwiches, washed down alas! by coffee only.

March 26.—Did foregather with a group of scriveners, artists and miscellaneous persons at the abode of E. Royce to consider ways and means of building The DAILY WORKER. Ton many of those invited did inconsiderately accept the invitation, thereby making the gathering unwieldy. Yet we did listen to speeches and join in public-spirited resolutions. If but half of those who promised should inconsiderately come through, 'twill take all the time of J. L. Engdahl, W. F. Dunne, S. Garlin, etc. to stem the flood of contributions.

On the very eve of the mine strike, two coal mine disasters have taken their toll of workers' lives. In Illinois eight miners were burned to death. In Pennsylvania four more were killed in an explosion, and several hundred others escaped death by the narrowest margin. These tragedies go far to explain the fighting spirit of the coal miners. Where mortal danger is their daily share, as Wess Virginia's mine war or the prospect of starvation in a bitter strike does not frighten them. Despite the deliberate efforts of the Lewis gang to botch the strike, the rank and file may be expected to show their old mettle.

Grace George in "Legend of Leonora" Fills Theatre With Incense of Refinement

Reviewed By HARBOR ALLEN.

Middle class entertainment reaches a high water mark of genteel frothiness in Sir James Barrie's "Legend of Leonora," revived with Grace George at the Rits Theatre. If you want to see this early Barrie play, be sure you wear your best clothes and your best diamonds. Your fingernails ought to be polished as highly as your shoes. Practice your laugh in advance, it mustn't be too loud. And take your Harvard accent with you, you'll need it. Grace George, whose husband, William Brady, spent a fortune to make her a star, is very refined. You must be refined too. The smell of refinement fills the Rits like incense.

Leonora is a poor—I'll come back to that—lady with every conceivable charm. She is coy and bold, a coquette and a mother, a feminist and a flirt. She has murdered a maid—very genteely, of course, by pushing him out of a train. He insisted on keeping the window open when her child had a cold.

Toothless Satire.

So Leonora is tried. The trial proves to be a toothless satire, a delicate, bloodless bit of spoofing. "Chicago" is also a play about a woman on trial for murder. But "Chicago" is a tiger clawing at the rotten meat of justice with hefty ripe. "The Legend of Leonora" is a pussy cat playing with a ball of yarn. A tame pussy at that. The jury, the judge, the lawyers, the witnesses are all charmed by Leonora. Her friends try to lie for her, but she won't let them. And she goes scot free.

For a poor lady, Leonora has in the last act a surprisingly ritzy home with elegant furniture and a big garden and a life-size hobby horse for her children and vases and flowers and oil paintings. You wonder whose idea of poverty that is. Never mind, it's in keeping with the play: amusing, witty at times, playful, never rude, never penetrating, never disturbing. Everything in it is so nice, everything turns out so nice. You can watch it without wrinkling your clothes or mussing your hair. If you are good middle class, you can leave the theatre mandlin with love for the dear old world and everybody in it.

EDITOR'S NOTES

By ALEX BITTELMAN

THE rapid industrialization of the south is undoubtedly one of the major developments in post-war American capitalism. This development is having far-reaching effects not only upon the south but upon the country as a whole. And yet the American labor movement has hardly begun to realize the meaning and significance of these developments for the working class of the United States.

Not so with the American capitalists. They are fully awake to the possibilities of the situation from the point of view of strengthening capitalism and weakening the labor movement. And they are making ample use of these possibilities as is seen in the coal strike situation and in many more factors of importance.

Discussing the present coal mining situation the capitalist press is deriving a good deal of comfort from the fact that the unionized coal area has steadily contracted while the non-union area has expanded. The opening up of coal mines in the south and the intensive development of the industry there was bound to affect very seriously the condition of the mine workers' union. But it is primarily the failure of the Lewis administration to concentrate on organising these new fields that is responsible for the fact that the shifting of coal mining to the south has worked altogether to the interests of the capitalists and against the workers. Because it does not at all follow that coal mining in the south must remain a non-union industry. That the coal barons are banking upon these new fields remaining non-union and are doing all in their power to resist unionization, is quite natural. But it is altogether unnatural, in fact, criminal when union leaders pursue the same line. And this is exactly what Lewis and his henchmen have been doing.

Despite, however, the criminal negligence of the Lewis machine to organize the unorganized miners, sentiment for organization among the southern miners is very strong. So much so that the first earnest effort to organize them will inevitably produce splendid results. And this is the time when such action is most urgently needed. All efforts of the union must be devoted towards that end. This is only by striking the southern coal mines along with the others that a national bituminous coal strike will become a reality. And it is only through a national bituminous strike that the miners will win.

THAT conditions in the south are over-ripe for successful union organization can be seen also from the attitude of the southern church. When prominent dignitaries of the Episcopal and Methodist churches of the south feel compelled to appeal to the capitalists for "better" relations with labor and for industrial peace in order to "avoid the waste and bitterness of industrial conflict," this is a sure sign of restlessness among the workers and of their becoming ready to assert themselves against the capitalists in an effective way. For it isn't the misery of the workers that is worrying the church dignitaries but the approach of struggle against this misery by the working masses themselves.

SUCH an appeal to the "industriel leaders of the south" was signed by about forty bishops and ministers representing every section of the south. The appeal calls for "friendly" cooperation of employers, employes, churches, educators and state officials "to improve social and economic conditions of southern industry." The things to be improved, according to the appeal, are: the isolation of population in the mill village; the long working week, extending in many industries even to fifty-five and sixty hours; a certain amount of the seven-day week, which still exists in some industries; the employment of women, and children between 14 and 16 at overlong periods of labor; low wage standards in some industries with consequent depressed standards of living and the general absence of labor representation in the factories.

THESE are the damnable conditions in the south which even the church is forced to recognize and speak about because of the approaching "danger" of industrial conflict. But this means nothing to Lewis of the miners' union, MacMahon of the textile workers and similar types in reactionary gangdom. To them these conditions are inventions of the Communists and progressive trade unionists which must be exterminated for the greater glory of the capitalists and their flunkeys in the labor movement. But how about the facts? How about these mill villages in the south?

THE churchmen are not very explicit in their appeal. But even they are forced to admit that "life in a mill village under company control is not

The Common Enemy

FROM COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

The following article is taken from The Communist International of February 28. The Communist International is the official organ of the Executive Committee of the C. I. The Chinese situation is the most important question facing the working class of the world today and every worker should be informed of its import. This article gives the viewpoint of the Executive Committee of the Communist International on the Chinese struggle and should be carefully studied by everybody who wants to be in a position to explain to his fellow workers what is taking place in China.—Ed.

THE Chinese revolution is occupying the centre of the historical stage at the present time, and around it forces are gathering for a mighty conflict between the international imperialist bourgeoisie and the international proletariat. The world bourgeoisie has mobilized all the social forces possible against the development of the revolution in China. The proletariat has only just managed to outline the fundamental path along which its activities should develop in support of the Chinese revolution, and in its defense against the military forces of imperialism from without, and against the compromising and wavering elements within. Only the most progressive section of the proletariat, represented by the Communist Party, has yet come forward as the organized force which clearly understands all the difficulties and dangers confronting the Chinese revolution. It is prepared, in spite of all obstacles, to lead the Chinese revolution as part of the world revolution, to final victory.

The complex and extremely important task of rallying the masses of the working class and of the oppressed nations for the struggle has still to be accomplished. This task should occupy the central attention of all the Sections of the Comintern, the Profintern, and all the trade unions. In order to mobilize all the reserves of the international revolutionary movement it is necessary to carry out, with the speed commensurate with the exceptional importance of the matter, the united front under the slogan of "Hands off China," while at the same time the Communist Parties must act independently and employ all forms of mass revolutionary struggle.

The mobilization of the reactionary forces against the Chinese people was carried out under the slogan of combating the "Bolshevik" menace, etc., etc., against the leading role played by the working class in the national revolutionary struggle. In so far as this aim of causing a split in the national revolutionary front, and of reducing the Right bourgeois wing to compromise with imperialism, is the common aim of all bourgeois governments and their compromising lackeys, we may say that the world bourgeoisie has established a united front in its attack upon revolutionary China. This front extends from the Pope of Rome, Pius XI., to the pope of reformism, Ramsay MacDonald. It is equipped not only with battleships, cruisers and aeroplane carriers, but with all other kinds of weapons from diplomatic cunning and falsehood to Liberal hypocrisy and Social Democratic treachery.

Needless to say, the internal conflict of appetites, conflicts of interest, rivalry and competition, caused first of all by the insatiable greed of the bourgeoisie of each country, continues incessantly within the imperialist camp. To these antagonisms must be added the differences as to the methods of struggle which each predatory imperialist considers most convenient to employ in the given circumstances and time, from the point of view of the geographical situation and its strategical and economic positions both in China and out of it. It would be a fatal mistake if the Chinese revolutionaries failed at each stage of the development of the revolution to watch closely the growing acuteness of these antagonisms, the play of conflicting imperialist passions, and to strive in their manoeuvring to utilize these differences in the enemy camp in its own interests. A branch in the imperialist front in China, where the interests of the imperialists are closely interwoven into a tight knot, has become possible because these interests conflict; but this knot, because it is tied so tightly, can only be cut by the sword of revolution. At all stages of the struggle the Chinese revolution must proceed along the following lines: (1) utilize the antagonisms among the predatory imperialists; (2) utilize the hypocritical declarations of the compromising leaders, who, owing to the pressure of the masses, are compelled to make promises to the national revolutionary movement.

At the same time, it would be a no less fatal mistake to assume that the antagonisms among the imperialists operate automatically by a spring that is wound up once and for all, and that these antagonisms will not be temporarily put into the background at a decisive moment by the common hatred of the imperialists towards their dangerous class enemy.

There are grounds for fearing that we are approaching a decisive moment such as this in China. It is imperative that all the forces of the revolution should be speedily prepared to meet this danger.

IN all probability the British bourgeoisie will continue for some time to play the part of the pioneers in the attack against the Chinese revolution. The general collapse of British capitalism, as well as the exceptional power of the blows which are being rained upon it by the victory of the revolution in Southern China, are the cause of the blind, frenzied aggression of the Baldwin government.

The powerful lever of covert intervention has already been torn out of the hands of British imperialism. Wu Pei-fu has been routed, Sun Chuan-fang is also on the eve of defeat. Not because they like it, did the British imperialists create a state of war not only in Shanghai but also in the capital of the British Empire. "Not only are the troops on the move," writes the "Daily Herald," in its issue on January 25, "but the war-drums are beating: war talk is beginning." Commenting on the newspaper report that the "scenes of Portsmouth barracks evoked memories of 1914," the "Daily Herald" exclaims "That is a true word."

What is the theatre of this forthcoming war like? "Formerly it may have been thought that the whole business will amount to defending a few streets. Now it appears that it is a matter of a front 21 miles long," writes one bourgeois newspaper, in pointing out that it will necessary to defend Shanghai. "But what is Shanghai?" asks another newspaper and replies, "It is a head, the loss of which will be irreparable, but for all that a head without a body is dead." "1914," consequently, does not apply to Shanghai, but at least to the whole of the Eastern Section of the Yangtse. J. H. Thomas was quite right when, in his speech at Newton Abbot, he declared: "I do not hesitate to say . . . I prefer a large army to be sent rather than a handful of soldiers." The British bourgeoisie has become so frenzied already that it will not hesitate to send a large army to China, and consequently is prepared to begin a serious war unless the British working class and the Chinese people put it in a strait jacket in time.

It would be entirely wrong to believe, however, that open violence is the only method British imperialism intends to employ in China. While troops are being despatched the British government is playing a complicated provocative game, with a view to splitting off certain of the leading groups of the revolutionary movement, and is converting them into a support for their rule in China. MacDonald with his feigned indignation against military intervention as a matter of fact is aiding and abetting it, is being used a a bait by the Baldwin government in order to decoy a certain section of the Kuomintang into its trap. Moreover, it is not Ramsay MacDonald alone that has been given the honorable part of a worm on the hook of intervention.

The "Manchester Guardian" and even the "Observer," are zealously angling for the national elements of the revolution, which are not infected with Bolshevism. "The irony is" writes the "Observer," of January 23, "that British policy in its substance entirely agrees with Mr. Chen. The real difficulty is that while Mr. Chen agrees with Sir Austen Chamberlain, they are both hampered by misinformed pressure from their supporters. Mr. Chen has to have his face before the 'bag and baggage' propagandists on whose political support he is dependent. Sir Austen has to contend with die-hard ignorance whose natural bend is towards the use of force." Is it necessary to add that all these intermediaries, bourgeois and reformists, guarantee Mr. Chen the complete liberation of Sir Austen from the influence of bad counsellors immediately he, Mr. Chen, breaks his compromising connection with the "propagandists?"

This game of double dealing has gone so far that on the height of the preparations that are being made for war, Ramsay MacDonald is trying to throw a golden bridge for the retreat of the government in the event of General Duncan having to repeat in Shanghai in 1927 the same ignominious manoeuvre that he was compelled to make in Odessa in 1919. "I observe," declares MacDonald in the "Daily Herald," on January 25, about the military preparations, "an air quite different from that of the foreign office communications, that I suspect that once again we are faced with the problem of whether, in circumstances such as those in which we now are, the military is to be the servant of the State, or the State the plaything of the military." Hence, it is quite possible that even after the sanguinary conflict has broken out MacDonald will desire to act the part of honest broker between the right wing of the national movement, if the latter proves to be sufficiently fortified to agree to make a treacherous deal with the British government (which, of course, will have no hand in the game of the military authorities and will remain as pure white as the Alpine snows).

You're Next!

THE tactics of American capitalism contain the elements of the same game, but in different proportions. Powerful American capital does not stand in need of artificially created privileges in order to maintain its domination in China on condition, of course, that bourgeois "law and order" is firmly established. This explains the "liberal" finger of American policy in China. Washington adopted a waiting policy with regard to the successes of the revolutionary movement, in the conviction that it will develop along capitalist lines. Wise Mr. Kellogg, in his official statement, described the policy, which is directed towards subjecting an economically weak country to the powerful pressure of American capital, as the United States having "no imperialist interest in China." If that is the case, then it has to be explained why the Washington government was the first to lead the alarm concerning the colonial conference that was to be held in Brussels, and called upon the Belgian government to prohibit it.

The European press is dazzled with the brilliance of American successes, and is urging their bourgeoisie to adopt the same "liberal" policy in China. The German press particularly is broadcasting these wise counsels, and is positively gloating at the sight of its neighbor's house burning. Even the French press is sufficiently imbued with hatred towards England to give her advice in the most friendly manner as to how to rest on a disheveled foot. Saucerwein, the journalist, commenting on the speech of Comrade Tang Ping-shan, writes in the "Matin"; "The Bolsheviks fear most of all politics of the American type, which strengthen the position of the right wing of the Kuomintang. The League of Nations must abandon excessive caution, and seek the means for avoiding a conflict which will be to the advantage only of the U. S. S. R." This wise counsellor, who recalls to mind the hero of the Russian story who danced at a funeral, fails to observe that the development of the Chinese revolution has reached a stage which is causing American imperialism to revise its "liberal" tactics and to call up infantry for a landing in Shanghai.

HELD OVER!

Owing to pressure on our space the second and last installment of proclamations issued by the Bolsheviki in the early days of the Russian revolution were unavoidably held over until next week.

DRAMA

The Revolutionary Motif in "Fiesta"

By ABEN KANDEL.

Virtually all of the material for "Fiesta," the drama of Mexico by Michael Gold, which opens at the 52nd Street Theatre, Wednesday, April 6, was obtained by the author during a roving trip through that turbulent country. Because he wove his pattern from the threads of the life around him, he retained so completely the color and texture of peon strivings and aspirations, and produced a naturalistic work of creative art. And through it runs a revolutionary motif, for he not only witnessed, but participated in the dawn of a new Mexico.

"I came into the country," said Gold, "during that transitional period between the rule of Carranza and Calles. The agrarian party was just beginning to show its strength. The peon was awakening. It was a tremendously interesting period in the history of Mexico. Peons, who for centuries had been no better than serfs, subjected to the tyranny of feudal barons, were just beginning to grow conscious of their rights and their power, were beginning to throw off the yoke which had kept them in poverty and ignorance for so long.

"This was not an easy thing to depict for the movement was not as clear, as a statement of it makes it seem. Leaders sprang up, would-be liberators of their people, some sincere and honestly motivated, full of the new idealism. But organizing the masses was not a simple thing to do.

"In Don Enrique, a character from "Fiesta," I try to show a little of Carranza, a leader and liberator, but confused by the conflict around him. Actuated by the finest of motives, he finds himself impeded by peon lethargy, ignorance, inability to grasp yet, this force of liberation.

"In his brother, a contrasted type, we have the feudal baron of Mexico, a petty tyrant, utterly selfish in all his motives, living only to gratify his own senses. He has no regard at all for peons, believing that they are not better than cattle, and no more likely to progress.

"In Chato, the young peon, I try to embody the hope of the new Mexico. He represents the awakening of the peon worker who glimpses the hope of the future, the chance for a better, freer life, for the rights that accrue to every individual, and for the end of these centuries of tyrannical rule.

"In the other characters, the ranch foreman, the sheriff, the judge, Guadalupe, and the other peon women, I try to show the effects of this slowly moving revolution, and its influence upon their lives.

"In Mexican peons were very much like the Russian peasant before the revolution. In some sections, they still ploughed in primitive fashion, just a stick driven by oxen. The recently organized Chorale Symphony Society will provide the choral ensemble.

New Lyric Bill at the Neighborhood Tuesday

The Neighborhood Playhouse will open its fifth production of the season, a bill of Lyric Drama, next Tuesday evening.

The program includes: A Commedia Dell' Arte, a broad comedy which was improvised and presented by Martinelli and his Italian comedians in 1689 and now re-enacted by the Neighborhood Playhouse Players. Amelia Defries, translated it into English and Ann MacDonald made the acting version. The music, arranged by Howard Barlow, is selected from composers of that period including D. and A. Scarlatti, Pergolese and Paisello.

Hungarian Folk Scenes arranged to the music of Bela Bartok's Dance Suite.

Dance designs for "The White Peacock" and Tone Pictures—two compositions of the American composer, Charles T. Griffes. The entire production is directed by Irene Lewisohn.

The players include: Albert Carroll, Otto Hulicius, Lily Lubell, Marc Loebell, Ian Maclaren, Dorothy Sands, Blanche Talmud and Paula Trueman, George Heller, Selma Leigh, La Verne Ellsworth and Sol Friedman.

Civic Repertory Theatre Planning Tour in May

Eva Le Gallienne and her Civic Repertory Players will make a five weeks' tour at the conclusion of the season at the 14th Street Theatre, opening in Washington, May 9. The tour will also include Baltimore, Philadelphia and Boston. The company will offer three of the current season's plays, "The Cradle Song," "La Locandiera" and "Three Sisters." A fourth play, perhaps "The Master Builder," is being considered.

Upon completion of the road tour the company will disband until next September, when it will resume at the 14th Street Playhouse.

Screen Notes

Universal is presenting a new production, "The Fourth Commandment," at Moss' Colony Theatre. This was written by Emilie Johnson, and the cast is headed by Mary Carr, Belle Bennett, Robert Agnew and Leigh Willard. A new Vitaphone program includes Mme. Schumann-Heink, who will be seen and heard for the first time.

"What Price Glory," the William Fox picturization of the noted stage play, celebrates its 250th performance at the Sam H. Harris Theatre Monday.

"Till of The Soil," a new French film, is the current screen feature at the Fifth Avenue Playhouse.

"The Price of Honor," based on Dorothy Howell's story will have its premiere at Moss' Broadway Theatre, beginning Monday. Dorothy Revier, Malcolm McGregor, William V. Mong and Gladys von Seyffertitz handle the chief roles.

"Monte Cristo," Dumas' famous novel, will be shown on the Cameo screen beginning this Sunday. The part of the Count is played by John Gilbert.

The Metro's production, "Tell it to the Marines" will be the screen feature at the Capitol, beginning today. Lon Chaney, William Haines and Eleanor Boardman play the leads.

The Hippodrome will show next week "The Monkey Talks." Olive Borden and Jacques Lerner are starred in the production.

Pioneers of America and Farmers' Children

THEY SAY — WE SAY

By IMA PIONEER.

Capitalist (bosses) newspapers say that the bad times are chasing the good foreign bosses and missionaries out of China.

We say that China belongs to the Chinese people and they have a perfect right to kick out all those who have oppressed them through religion and trade for many years.

Boy Scouts say that the Ruthenberg Young Comrade Drive will be a failure.

We, the children of the working class, say that the Boy Scouts don't know what they are talking about, and we're going to prove it by getting all our friends and classmates to subscribe to this drive.

OUR LETTER BOX

THAT'S THE SPIRIT!

Dear Comrades: Here is something that happened in our school. Two weeks before Washington's birthday our teacher said, "Let's give a play." All the children said, "All right." Then she said to me, "Catherine, will you be Bessie Ross sewing the first flag?" I said I would do no such thing because Washington was NOT our hero. But then she put some other girl in my place, but I didn't care.

Your comrade,
KATHERINE NAGY.

LIKE WASHINGTON DID.

Dear Comrades: In school, teacher always says that Washington was a brave and honest man. His men drove out the French, Germans and English. In those days America wanted to rule itself.

Now there is a man in China that wants to do the same thing as Washington did. He wanted to drive out the foreign people from China. The Chinese want to rule their own country. The rich people are sending soldiers to China to stop her from sending out the foreigners. The rich bosses say the ones China wants to kick out of her country. I think the soldiers that got to China to fight are bad men. Now the United States captured a city in China and are cutting the workers' heads off. These workers are something like Lenin and other great heroes. They want to free their country and do as they please.

Comradely yours,
YOLAN ENYEDY.

The Preacher Should Go To Work.

Dear Comrade: We live near a church. The preacher he goes from house to house. He tries to get lots of members. But he cannot do it. One time he went to one house and asked a man if he believes in God. The man said, no. Then the preacher kneeled down by the man and prayed three hours. Then the preacher asked the man if he believes in God. The man said, "How can I believe in God, if there isn't any." Then the preacher got angry and went home. But the preacher is afraid to come to our place because he knows we would not go. They have meetings every day in a church. The preacher hollers so loud that you could hear him about a half a mile away. He just scares the people, they begin to cry and pray. The people are crazy and bring him money. If the people would be smart enough they would not bring the money to the church and the preacher would have to go to work just the same as the workers and farmers do. I wish the preachers would be chased out of here or go to work, so they would make a floor school instead of a church. I am also going to try to get some new subscribers to the Young Comrade.—ANDY SENETA.

Dear Comrade Ruthenberg why did you leave us
To fight that battle by ourselves, alone?
It can't be true, the ranks they need your guidance,
They need you help to bring that ideal home,
They need your wisdom to help roll that boulder
Of brotherhood united in the strife
Against a class that murders and oppresses
The workers who are fighting for their lives.

You gave your life for freedom's cause
And we? We mourn our heavy loss.
As a Bolshevik you died
And as a Communist you cried
Comrades, FIGHT ON, you will win!
Yes, we'll fight on, we'll fight
We'll work and strive and labor till we win
We'll carry out the work you've started
The work you left off, we'll begin!

Capitalists and Workers' Children.

By JOSEPHINE DARGIS.

The workers make a living for the capitalists. But the capitalists pay no attention to the workers. Once I saw on the street a nice limousine with a chauffeur. In the car there was a beautiful dog looking out of the window. Out on the street was a forlorn boy with ragged clothes, shivering with cold selling papers. He looked at the limousine with a sad face saying to himself, "I wish I had a dog's life."

What's the truth about capitalists? We workers make the millions for the capitalists. They give the money for building horses, and bet thousands of dollars to see boxing. Compare the workers' children to the rich. The workers' child has for lunch only hard bread and butter. The rich have all kinds of dainties. Do they give the poor children anything? NO! When the poor children grow up they again make millions for those capitalists.

THE LITTLE GREY DOG

He considered for a moment, then cried happily, "Now I know, Hannah is just the right one for you. How could I forget her? Of course, she has a little boy, ..".

"I don't want him," the daughter interrupted. "My dear little son must not play with a dirty negro child. You can keep Hannah's son here."

"You are a good mother, my beloved child," said the rich man, moved, "You always think of your son. Good, Benjamin shall remain here and when you go back to the city tomorrow, I will give you Hannah to take along. I will immediately tell the overseer, so that he may tell her to be ready."

And the rich man called a servant and bade him bring the overseer.

Ah, what a sad night that was in the little hut of the Negroes. Poor Hannah hugged her little son close in her arms and cried as though her heart would break. Her husband Tom gazed at her with worried eyes and was so miserable that he could not say a word. Hannah kept looking anxiously toward the little window, trembling with the fear of seeing the first ray of light that meant that day was near, when she would leave her loved ones.

The little grey dog seemed to understand the grief of his friends, he nestled quite close to Hannah's coat, looking up at them with loving, clever eyes. Then Hannah cried loudly, "If they sell you, too, Tom, what will become of our poor child?" The little dog laid his paw on little Benjamin as though to say, "Don't fear, poor mother, I will take care of him."

Hannah noticed this, sobbingly patted the shaggy head of the dog, and said to him, "Guard my little boy, you good dog! We are all so helpless and deserted as you."

The following morning, poor Hannah, weeping bitterly, rode off with the young woman. Her family was not allowed to see her off, for Tom had to work in the field and Benjamin, like all the slaves was forbidden to come near the house of the rich man. (To Be Continued)

"The Beast"

By ALEX JACKINSON

I.

His face was moist with a warm perspiration which seemed to disturb him. Drops of sweat kept trickling continuously down his forehead which he wiped away with a soiled handkerchief. There was nothing unusual about his appearance, yet almost everybody who passed by eyed him curiously. He was a big fellow of reddish complexion. Thick arms, eorded by prominent veins dangled from a pair of sleeves attached to a blue jacket. His head, topped by a mishaped felt hat, was pulled tightly down almost covering his bushy eyebrows.

He stood silently on a well defined corner of 5th Avenue, gazing diffidently into a restaurant window. His eyes were focused upon an exhibition of food lying behind the blue stained pane. The luscious nutriment, invitingly displayed, aroused in him a strong desire to eat, for he was hungry and with thirty cents in his pocket. Thru the window he saw many small tables covered by white tablecloths and ornamented by brightly colored plates and fantastically labeled wine bottles. Around them sat grey-faced men leisurely smoking the profits of other men's toil and stench, eyebrowed women, all engaged in meaningless conversation. For it is in places such as these that plutocrats are born and imbibed in Bacchanalian rites. Waiters, clad in white aprons, hurried down the aisles. They carried silver trays of food, transmitting a flavored aroma which the hungry one unwillingly inhaled. Each breath aroused in him fresh pangs of hunger which he vainly tried to subdue. One of those smiles that ultimes serve as an expression of contempt flickered across his face.

Only the furtive glances of a policeman directing traffic in the gutter restrained him from crashing his heavy fist thru the window and making off with the enticingly arrayed victuals.

II.

It was dawn of a summer day when a slight wind, pregnant with a cool morning dew blowing from the North River, brewed gently into the open bedroom window of Steve McHugh's waterfront flat. The room was small and it seemed to absorb the incoming moisture as a sponge absorbs water, damping the four plastered walls from ceiling to floor.

In a nearby bed, a woman moved restlessly about under a dirty blanket. She raised her head and peered thru the window. Seeing that it was morning, she moved into a sitting position, and began shaking a man sleeping beside her.

"Get up, Steve" she drawled. "It's late."

Receiving no reply, her hands fell upon the heavy torso, and began shaking it violently.

"Come out. Time to get up," she repeated.

"All right, shut up! I heard ye the first time," replied a thick voice from beneath the covering. And a few seconds later, a stalwart figure, his face washed in cheap soap, stood beside the iron bed. He stretched his arms in sideward motion and yawned.

McHugh donned a pair of saggy trousers, and walked in his stocking feet to the window. In the distance, he saw the still waters of the North River flowing calmly on. A fleet of ships floated idly at anchor. Many of them, large and small crafts, all chained to each other and rotting hourly from disuse.

There was a strike of longshoremen going on in the harbor, and McHugh watched the tie-up of industry with a vague satisfaction, for he was one of the strikers. He kept peering into the calm of a busy street not yet arisen from its slumber, listening occasionally to the rumbling of a train rolling along the West Shore Railroad. His eyes were glued upon a familiar sight, Andrew B. Berry Shipping Co., which hung over a nearby pier.

His reverie was suddenly broken.

"I suppose you'll be wanting your breakfast served drawled his wife, entering from the kitchen. "Well, there ain't nothin' in the house to eat today." She stared idly at him as he allowed the words to sink into his head.

"I'll be gettin' my strike benefit tomorrow, so stop yer yowlin' or you'll be after walkin' the children."

"Strike benefit," she echoed. "And a lot o' good that'll do ye, with me own' the butcher as much." Here she lifted her apron and after wiping her wet hands, burst into a complaint about inability, to make ends meet to which McHugh had long since become accustomed. He understood vaguely that the complaint was justified, yet disliked to be reminded about it. His many thoughts turned to a giant puzzle which zig-zagged unevenly about. He picked up his hat laying on the table and left the house, russing inwardly the perfidy of his Saints.

For the first time in six weeks McHugh did not go down to the docks, for picket duty. Instead, he sauntered on this sumaer day unensily along streets strangely alien to him. For hours he trod the hot sidewalks, trying to rid himself of a troubled uneasiness. He stopped occasionally in his walks to gaze upon richly architectured dwellings which stood like unseen fences on both sides of the street. A multitude of freshly born reflections kept shadowboxing in his thoughts. Thus debating with himself the ironic incongruities of life, he reached that well known corner of Fifth Avenue

III.

Tired of the futile gazing into the unfriendly restaurant window, he slumped away walking north. To his left were a chain of stores into which he stopped to gaze. Behind the beaming displays of the Avenue shops he saw in one an assortment of oriental rugs, grotesquely designed and colored.

In a jewelry shop, lay behind a well polished panel of glass jewel studded bavliers to rest upon the breasts of modern Aphrodites. Golden bracelets carefully moulded for slender wrists. Sparkling diamond rings rounded for well manicured fingers and glass beads to be hung around powdered necks of perfumed inamorttas.

These things slowly unfolded a half forgotten message of slumbering class consciousness. He watched long lines of dazzling colored automobiles roll continuously in and out of his gaze. That, coupled with the exhibit of wealth sickened him.

"De silk crowds," as he termed the never ending procession of tailored puppets on dress parade.

"Look at em," he grumbled, "a pack of weak-kneed parasites that lives on buttermilk and me with the great strength that's in me without the price of a lousy meal." A new born ideology shook his massive frame.

Guests, carefully attired in the garb of their social rating and carefully elected from the society "blue book" gathered in the reception room of Andrew B. Berry's Fifth Avenue residence to witness the marriage of Senator Bruce Gordon being tied in holy matrimony this day to Audrey B. Berry the only daughter of the millionaire ship-owner.

Waxed figures of men, corpulent with six percent interest, and women richly gowned by the skill of other fingers stood with heads bowed, their faces beaming conspicuously in the pride of their "standing". They were listening to the Right Reverend Gustav Mason, Bishop of Arkansas, read the old Episcopal service with the word "obey" obligingly omitted.

The beautiful furnished reception room was transformed for this occasion into an indoor garden. The alter was completely covered by white lillies, bestermingled with feathery ferns, and bordered by strips of velvet. The ceiling and walls were bedecked by many orchids. On the left, a stairway leading to the blue room was fenced with tall baskets of pink blossoms which blended harmoniously with the scarlet rug. While inside the room stood large urns holding richly blooming ramblee roses, mixed with bunches of blue larkspurs.

The bride was attired in a wedding gown of D'Angleterre lace, imported from England. It was worn over a pink satin slip. The long train of lace hung loosely on the ground, the folds of which were hemmed with cream velvet. Around her neck sparkled a rare necklace of beautifully matched pearls, a gift from her father. A hugh bouquet of lillies of the valley fastened to her waist by silver threads completed her trousseau.

As the impressive ceremony ended, an orchestra seated on the balcony began playing Mendelssohn's Wedding March. The newlyweds, followed by their entourage walked arm in arm under a shower of rice and confetti. They were to leave that afternoon for a honeymoon trip to the Orient.

Outside people were gathered to pay silent homage to Mammon, the great god of money, who will soon bless the less fortunate children of commerce by a ten percent cut in wages. Long lines of curious waited anxiously for the much-heralded couple to leave.

Down the street McHugh came trodding aimlessly along. Seeing the crowd, he ventured close and addressing a spectator inquired.

"Say, what's goin' on here, Jack?"

"Oh, nothin' much. Just a guy gettin' married to Andrew Berry's daughter. Must be some big shot, I guess."

"Andrew Berry, did you say! queried McHugh. "I used to work for that louse.—Strikin' now; the fat slob tried to cut wages. So his gal's gettin' married, eh? Move over, will ye bud. I want to take a good peep at her."

Several minutes later the arched doors swung open and the bride and groom stepped slowly down the steps, followed by flower bedecked bridesmaids who fluttered behind her like so many tinted butterflies. Cries of admirations and applause broke out from the envious spectators.

As the bride approached her limousine, McHugh stepped directly in front of her, and made an awkward motion to bow. He lifted the cap from his head, allowing the corners of his mouth to screw up into a sardonic sneer.

"Hello bright eyes," he ejaculated.

The slender form of the one the remark was aimed at, stopped abruptly. Taken completely unawares she retreated and screamed frightenedly. The rugged features of her accoster startled and in turn frightened her. She had never met a type of the McHugh sort before.

"The brute -He—He frightened me," she panted, clutching her husband by the arm, who stepped forward, and raising a silver handled can held in the palm of his hand, deliberately struck McHugh a planeing blow in the face.

"Arrest that beggar, officer," he commanded to a policeman. McHugh reddened. Thick blood of a suppressed anger gushed to his face. A natural intuition automatically clenched his large fists.

"Where do you get that beggar stuff?" he retorted. "Say it again, and I'll knock your damned—."

Before he could finish his sentence, a pair of strong arms whisked him thru the crowds. He was led away by a blue coated guardian of the law. At the corner McHugh stopped.

"Come on, step along, you big bum, you're under arrest," growled the cop. McHugh cogitated awhile.

"I'm not goin' with you, officer. I haven't done nothin' and ain't goin'." He attempted to walk away, when seeing the varnished night stick raised in the air, his own arm reached out first, which sent the policeman reeling to the ground. A crowd of civilities quickly gathered to watch the odd spectacle. They looked upon the stranger in their midst with the curiosity of children gazing upon a circus attraction. Here was a real thrill for their bored senses. "A nut," someone ventured, which brought peals of satisfied laughter from the audience. Imbecilic grins grimaced the tranquility of their otherwise expressionless faces.

Two other policemen, attracted by the crowd, came running over just in time to see their comrade arising from his undesired seat. The trio charged around the bewildered McHugh, whose pent up fury was fast breaking loose. Strong arms pinned his hands in a vise-like grip. He gritted his teeth, and lunging forward, freed himself from their grasp. Instantaneously his right arm began swinging wildly. It struck one of the trio a glancing blow on the jaw, which felled him. McHugh turned to meet the attack of other fists when he felt the hat on his head being displaced by the thrust of a cold stick coming from behind. A shower of blows followed in rapid succession. Something warm trickled down his cheeks. He touched it. It was blood, and oozing from an opening near his temple. He felt himself rapidly losing consciousness. His knees sagged under the weight of his heavy body. Blindly, he still fought to ward off an attack, when a policeman, twisting his foot between his legs, gave it a malicious jerk, which tripped him.

McHugh plunged headlong onto the sidewalk, his head striking the hard asphalt with a rebounding thud. He made no effort to move. He couldn't. A strong desire to sleep overcame him. He forgot about the complaint of his woman—his hunger—the mocking crowds—everything faded from his thought into a dream upon arising.

THE GOLDEN CLOWN

There was a rich man lived in Dober Town,
And he was master of a thousand hands,
They spun his gold for him,
Their lives were sold for him,
Their loves were bound to him with bloody bands,
And those who knew him called him Mister Brown.

And he was not an ordinary man.
He had an education of a sort,
He called his mill-hands Slaves,
The females dirty whores,
And plumed himself on being a good sport,
And of his passions made profitable plan.

O, Brown was very rich, and very proud,
And prouder for a sorrow that he had,
A son that laughed all day,
A son whose witless way
Was death and devilment to wonder for the lad,
And he walked always with an unseen crowd.

The Golden Clown, the neighbors knew him all,
Knew him for golden through their own cold grime,
And more than Dober Town
Knew him for a Clown,
Born to the purple, and some there were believe
Had sung with him a madman's madrigal.

"Why is the world about me drab, and I
"An golden and a Clown upon a hill?
"Come out from Dober Town,
"I will you, I, your Clown,
"I who have laughter for a beast to kill."
And some there were who heard, and wondered why.

And one there was, a gardener, who came,
And found the Clown sprawl upon the lawn,
Now he had eyes for none,
Now he was quite alone,
Now without laughter, rigid in the dawn,
And none had heard him crying like a thane

Dying to find the slight loss ominous
To a poor Clown whose wit had gone with death
And as for Mister Brown,
Boss of Dober Town,
He's still a expert, though getting short of breath,
And days that happens to the run of us.

For a Workers' Theatre

By MOISSAYE OLGIN

"Why necessarily a workers' theatre? Why not a better theatre for all?"

The question has been raised wherever the theatre came up for discussion in so-called radical intellectual circles. The theatre as it exists is such a mockery at life's truth, art and human intelligence, that to demand the creation of a special class theatre seems an unealled for and therefore damaging division of forces. An adequate answer to this superficially convincing objection would involve an analysis of the class-psychology expressing the class position in society of the various factors to the process of wealth creation. While this may be a thankful task in itself—since the work of drawing the line of demarkation between the social classes in the realm of self-expression has hardly begun in the United States—the approach to the theatre question may be purely practical. The workingman does not go to the existing theatre. The most advanced and class-conscious workers who, in their cultural hunger, sometimes invade the private commercial theatre, are thoroughly disgusted with its fare, but then they are a very small fraction of the working class. The mass of workers goes to cheap vaudeville houses or to the cinema, but they are dead to the call of the "legitimate stage." The question reduces itself to this: Is it possible to create in a large industrial center a theatre which, while gratifying the thinking elements of the mill and shop, would irresistibly draw the rank and file of the working class, thus opening before them a world of new experiences?

We answer the question in the affirmative ("we" embraces here a group of educators doing cultural work among the masses). We proceed from the assumption that while the advanced workers despise the existing theatre for its commercialism, its mawkish pseudo-realism, its standardization, as well as for the lack of a content bearing significance for the working class spectator, the bulk of the workers disregard the theatre because they do not find in it anything of interest for themselves. To educate the working masses in the enjoyment of theatrical art is to give them a theatre in which they will find things attractive; absorbing, stirring, vital from their standpoint.

It is too easy to rest on the lazy assertion that the working masses have not yet grown to respond to theatrical art. As a matter of fact, there isn't a mass in the world that is incapable of enjoying theatrical art. The enjoyment of the theatre is widespread and primitive. The basic demand for it is universal. This demand is at present being satisfied by substitutes either poisonous or silly. We propose that a theatre be created which, applying art means, would find a way to the inmost soul of the working masses.

We do not blame the average worker for not heeding the theatres that exist. Of course, we are fully aware of the existence of "good" plays: those of Shakespeare for instance, once in a while, or those of Shaw, or some other "highbrow" author. But aside from the fact that a man of the masses cannot thrive long on such "heavy" meni (can we?) one must not forget that such performances are only oases in the midst of a vast theatrical desert all full of the sands of little incidents in the life of the propertied classes, presented in a polished conventionalized fashion for the after-dinner entertainment of the same propertied classes, or strewn with the bones of "high" tragedy mostly of an unreal and therefore unconvincing nature. Why should the structural iron workers be interested in the fact that a society lady is craving for a male friend to drink tea with while her husband is in his business office? Why should the bricklayer shed tears over the fate of a great bootlegger and master burglar losing both his fortune and the aristocratic girl he loves? What share can my neighbor, Jack the locksmith, have in the plight of the duchess who is wearing a paste diadem while her genuine jewels are in the pawnshop? What have my friends, the cloak, suit and skirtgakers, to do with this idle, empty, sated and unimaginative world of aimless gentlemen and perfumed ladies whose lives pass in peanut emotions and flat pleasures.

Now, my neighbor Jack is by no means stupid. He is the finest fellow of about thirty-eight. He is a union member of long standing and he loves to tell about strikes of former years. He has an instinctive dislike for the "boss," the "trust" and the "politician," though you would not class him among the conscious workers. He is of a rather modest bent of mind, and when one of the female middle-class inhabitants of the neighborhood passes by his shop window, he puckers his face into a malicious grimace. He is not a reader of books or papers, but he loves to talk to his shop mates, and is of a highly companionable nature. He is keen on "stories," "yarns," adventure, and this is what draws him to the "movies," which he has seen enough to consider of no importance. Can we not draw this Jack and a hundred thousand other Jacks and Maries and Sadies, more or less advanced, into a theatre which would both hold their attention and elevate them to a higher plane of mental life?

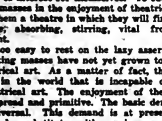
All depends upon what the theatre would offer:

1.—The first prerequisite is a theatre pulsating with the realities of life surrounding the worker, a theatre bold enough to look America in the face. It is characteristic of bourgeois art to shun cruel and crude realities, to gloss over conflicts. The theatre as it exists is therefore worlds apart from the robust colorful countenance of life. The theatre is the shadow of a ghost either of emotion or adventure. A workers' theatre must throb with the full and deep heart-beat of the world we live in, the country we are building, the historic epoch we are traversing.

Lazy objection will say: "Oh, you want a theatre of propaganda." We will reply with Lunacharsky: "God save us from a play which is a strike bulletin in five acts." We do not want a theatre which makes direct propaganda for this or that "cause." We do want a theatre that will make the worker a broader and more humane man and thereby enable him to be a better member of his class. We do not want propaganda, but we do not want shutting out everything that is not "love" or "sex appeal" among the bourgeoisie or its intellectual adjunct. We want to see a world which also includes the working masses, a world in which Gary, Ind., Lawrence, Mass., and Passaic, N. J., will take their legitimate place. We want a theatre that will discover America, its present big industrial heart, its rural toilers all over the land, its grandiose past (Wrstward! discovering and conquering a continent;) back to its origins in a dramatic, revolutionary mass upheaval. We wish America portrayed in a new theatre—America, beautiful and hideous, sweating and seeing visions, mean and full of enormous spiritual possibilities—and we want the toiler to occupy in that America the place that is his in the whole scheme of things.

2.—A second prerequisite is to present all this in a manner that will be comprehensible to the masses. The bourgeois theatre does not know simplicity. The bourgeois theatre is making up in elaborate phraseology what it misses in contents. The workers' theatre must proceed from the assumption that there is nothing in the life of human beings that cannot be made interesting to the masses.

We do not propose to sacrifice art to popularity. We propose to return art to the dignity of simplicity and truth. By giving to the masses such important and worthy things—not to the heart of the masses, and by remaining truly artistic, i. e., finding a form adequate to the material, we can attract hundreds of thousands, nay, millions, who at present feed on atrocious trash.



The question of the playwright for this new kind of drama presents the least difficulty, inasmuch as the theatre actually molds the dramatist, and the economic law of supply and demand is particularly applicable to the theatre realm, where there is an overpr=duction of playwrights. Given an actual demand, the new play will soon make its appearance.

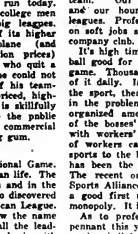
The Baseball Business

By WALT CARMON

Baseball is logically the Great American Game. There's good money in it. Who'll win the pennant this yek? The owners of the leading clubs in the American and National Leagues. The profit will be handsome. The attendance at the ball parks during the year will increase with a winning team. The World Series is a little gold mine. Last year's seven games had an attendance of 328,051 fans who paid a total admission of $1,207,864. That's money. Baseball is no small cock-roach business!



BEING a business, professional baseball is run by "business ethics." This doe not mean that pro baseball is necessarily crooked. It does get badly bent. In fact, gambling and general dishonesty have been part of baseball since its birth. From 1842, when the Washington Club of New York first organized a baseball team, until 1867, the game rapidly gained in popularity. But at the same time its bad features were already evident. One authority tells us: "In spite of its popularity the game acquired certain undesirable adjuncts. The betting and pool-selling evils became prominent and before long the game was in there disrepute. It was not only generally believed that matches were not played on their merits, but it was known the players themselves were not above selling contests. At that time many of the journals of the day foretold the speedy downfall of the sport."

That was over 60 years ago. Today we have bigger and better gamblers. The scandal of a few months ago and the scandal of the "Black Sox" of 1919, got more attention from the average worker than the scandal of Nicaragua or the scandal of American interference in China.

THE National League was organized in 1876. In 900 the American League was born. Today hundreds of professional and semi-pro organizations dot the country. Baseball is a flourishing business paying generous dividends. Recently the owners of the franchise of the New York Club refused an offer of 5 million for their interest. Babe Ruth (who lends his name to prison-made goods despite the protests of organized labor) is paid a salary of $210,000 for three years—greater than that received by the president of the United States. Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, each will draw over $50,000 for this season in which they will likely play less than a hundred games.

Being a big business now, baseball is put on a big business basis. Labor-hating Judge Landis is guiding its destiny. The ball parks are scab built and scab operated. Judge Landis, whose salary has just been raised to $65,000 a year, will see that they continue that way. Rowdyism on the playing field is being ruled out—it's bad business. The newspapers speak of the higher plane on which the game is run today. This applies to college and are in the big leagues. As a mark of its higher intellectual plane (and higher admission prices) the newspapers tell us of a roughneck who quit a team, because, unlike in the old days, he could not borrow a chew of tobacco from any of his teammates! Baseball has become a high-priced, high-paying, high-toned business indeed. It is skillfully advertised. It is cleverly kept before the public and is now a securely established commercial product as a Ford or Wrigley's chewing gum.

BASEBALL is rightly called the National Game. It is thoroughly woven into American life. The American youth plays it on the streets and in the schools. The boy who doesn't know who discovered America can tell you who led the American League. The man in the shop who does not know the name of the president, knows the names of all the leading major league ball players. High schools with good baseball teams attract pupils. The colleges that graduate successful major league ball players are regarded as real seats of learning.

Patriotic exercises at ball games on numerous occasions make baseball mighty good for the government and the politicians. So well has it worked in America, that in the imperialist invasion of our neighbors, the baseball bat has followed the bayonet and the bible. In the Philippines, Panama, Mexico and Cuba baseball is supplanting bull-fighting. Cubans have become so proficient at the game, a number of leading major leaguers are from Cuba.

The centuries-wise old church also knows the value of baseball. Church leagues are a feature of baseball interest in all cities.

IF organized labor has overlooked baseball, the boss has not. Every factory, where welfare fares well in lowering wages, has its ball club. A spirit is built up to support "our boys." A "family spirit" that breeds loyalty to the boss is bred thru the workers' interest in the sport. Wage slaves turn out in thousands (on their own time) on Saturday afternoons and Sundays to cheer for "our team." "Our team" helps us to forget our wages and our hours. Every city has its industrial leagues. Professional and semi-pro players are put on soft jobs so they can add to the glory of the company club. Baseball is good for the boss.

It's high time for organized labor to make baseball good for the workers. After all, it's a great game. Thousands play it, read about it and speak of it daily. Interest in the game, participation in the sport, these can be used to stimulate interest in the problems of labor. Labor leagues can be organized among workers' sports clubs. Control of the bosses' teams can be secured to ally them with workers' sports organizations. The interest of workers can be secured to support their own sports to the benefit of labor. Until now baseball has been the monopoly of the enemies of labor. The recent organization of a Workers' National Sports Alliance, involving thousands of workers, is a good first step to break this anti-labor sports monopoly. It is worthy of labor's support.

As to professional baseball—who will win the pennant this year? Ask me another. The answer is baseball business.

On the Screen

THE METROPOLIS.

Don't let anybody blarb you into believing "The Metropolis" is the greatest blah-blah that ever flickered. That's a lot of hooey. And so is most of the picture. But don't let anybody keep you away from it. It's worth a six-bit investment to see the settings, photography, imagination and artistry in the picture.

"The Metropolis" is not up to some other German pictures we have seen. It fizzles in the story it tells, in sequence and in artistic honesty. It only proves once again that all is not art that glitters in Europe. The story is "R. U. R." done over, devitalized and revamped to be less annoying to those who might get worried about revolution.

The background of "The Metropolis" is the future machine age. A giant intellect runs a society in whose cities workers live under-ground, mere cogs whose lives are broken in pulling levers and guarding machines. An upper super-class enjoys the product of their labor. Things go on exploitingly until a female lobbe-lounger, in the catacombs of the city, teaches the ideas of Christ which have been long forgotten. The son of the Giant Brain who runs the city falls in love with this future Aimee McPherson and when the slave workers revolt, they jointly save the machine civilization and bring about the unity of Brain and Brawn when the Giant Brain gracefully shakes hands with a foreman and actually admits workers are human beings. After which, we are led to believe, Capital and Labor live happy ever after. That's the kind of a mishmash this "bourgeois theatre is making up in elaborate phraseology what it misses in contents. The workers' theatre must proceed from the assumption that there is nothing in the life of human beings that cannot be made interesting to the masses. We do not propose to sacrifice art to popularity. We propose to return art to the dignity of simplicity and truth. By giving to the masses such important and worthy things—not to the heart of the masses, and by remaining truly artistic, i. e., finding a form adequate to the material, we can attract hundreds of thousands, nay, millions, who at present feed on atrocious trash.

THRU DARKEST AFRICA.

In the last few years a new type of film has rightly gained in popularity. Pictures like "Nanook of the North," "Grass," "Moana," "The Gorilla Hunt," have brought to us primitive human and animal life still existant in far corners of the globe. The habits, customs and the struggle for existence of primitive peoples have been set before our eyes in all their interest and color. Different stages of civilization are vividly contrasted. The popularity of these films are bringing many more into existence for early showing and many more won't be too many.

"Thru Darkest Africa"—in search of the White rhinoceros, is not the best of these pictures. It is abominably sub-titled in circus fashion. Its straining after effect in bombastic wording is annoying and distracting from the interest of the African life the picture presents. However, even the titles can't kill the picture and the not as great in interest as preceding films of this type, "Thru Darkest Africa" is well worth seeing.

If you are in New York (at the Cameo Theatre, "The Salon of the Cinema"—isn't that a wow?) there's an added interest in the showing of Chaplin's old classic "Shoulder Arms," on the same bill. It's as funny as ever it was and worth the second once-over.

WHAT OUR COMRADE WOULD ASK.

Shall we mouth a few speeches and turn and forget?
Is it honor enough that his ashes shall lie
Where the Red Flag of Freedom triumphant is set
O'er the walls of the Kremlin and streaming the sky?

Nay, not to our comrade the pomp of a grave,
The roaring of cannon, the rolling of drum,
The Red Flags of mourning, half-masted that wave
As he passes from battle to lie in the tomb.

Are honor if only reflection they be
Of the militant courage of them who acclaim,
In the every day battle of slaves to be free,
The strength and devotion that's linked with his name.

So speak of him proudly, and lay him low sadly,
And turn from his ashes to finish the task
Of upbuilding the party he suffered for gladly—
'Tis all of the honor he ever would ask!

the best training ground for citizenship in that it can not train residents for participation in government." Which means in frank language that life in a mill village is slavery for the workers, and nothing short of it. But these conditions are still waiting for an organizing campaign to bring the workers into the unions and to enable them to fight successfully against this regime of slavery.

THE sinister angle in this move of the southern churchmen is the attempt to induce the employers to organize company unions and by this to forestall the coming of real, genuine unionism into the southern mills. These churchmen complain of "the general absence of labor representation in the factories" and innocently advance the idea that "it would be helpful and desirable for employers to have a proper share in making and enforcing the regulations by which industrial plants are controlled."

UNDOUBTEDLY, the first real attempt at unionization of the south will make the employers very susceptible to the plea for company unions. And it is reasonably certain that the trade union reactionaries will seize upon such an opportunity to "cooperate" with the bosses to prevent the establishment of real unions by planting instead some acceptable to them modification of company unionism. But the workers must not be fooled by any such proposition. They must fight for the thing that they need, namely, militant unions to fight the employers and protect the workers.

IT is very essential that the nature of the development of the struggle of the miners be clearly understood. Hesitatim in prosecuting the struggle to its logical ends as to its scope, will only weaken the strikers and strengthen their enemies. The strike must be made a national bituminous strike. Only in a national strike can the miners bring all the resources of their power to bear in the struggle, and win the strike. Any lack of determination to extend the strike its full breadth, any hesitation in making the tie-up complete in the entire bituminous coal industry may prove fatal for the outcome of the strike. This angle of the situation no miner should lose sight of for a single moment. The slogan of the progressive and left wing elements in the miners' union must be made a reality. A NATIONAL BITUMINOUS STRIKE FOR A NATIONAL AGREEMENT.

FOR the successful outcome of the strike it is of decisive importance that the unorganized coal fields be struck as quickly and fully as possible. The coal barons and the capitalists generally are placing all their eggs in an attempt to supply of coal from these fields. The miners, too, must centre their attention on this point. All the resources of the union must therefore be concentrated on bringing out on strike the unorganized miners.

ANOTHER essential to be remembered is that the fate of the entire labor movement of America is bound up with the struggle of the miners. This will be a difficult struggle requiring the utmost concentration of effort. And it is a struggle that must and will be won if the American labor movement stands by the miners and does its full duty. The cause of the miners is the cause of the entire working class of the United States.

IN this struggle the miners will meet the combined opposition of employers and government assisted by hesitation and sabotage from the reactionary bureaucrats in the union. The government strike-breaker is sure to be on the job, as ever, to crush the resistance of the workers. But there is nothing insurmountable in the combined power of the capitalists and the government if the labor movement presents a united front in support of the miners and if the struggle is prosecuted with the necessary degree of determination and political understanding.

POLITICAL consciousness, an understanding of the role of capitalist governments in the class struggle, and readiness to engage in political struggle—these are the things that the miners will meet and will develop in the conflict. The movement for a Labor Party will thus receive added impetus. The struggle for the nationalization of the mines will be given more practical content and the labor movement as a whole is likely to make a considerable step forward in the direction of more class consciousness and more militancy.

THEY TALK OF LOVE.

They talk of love who never know
The suffering, the tears, the woe
Of them the dark earth falls upon
From hopeless dawn to hopeless dawn.
Of them the searing gas consumes
And seal alive in dripping tombs,
Or speak of love who do not care
What price is paid a millionaire!

MICRO-MOVIES:—Science is founding a new Hollywood under the lens of the microscope where the movie stars are all bacteria, living body cells, and red and white blood corpuscles, and their dramas are enacted not under the movie camera but under the micro-movie camera.

Many of the actions that take place in the microscopic realm are so slow that the changes cannot be observed by the eye. The micro-movie camera, however, can be set to take one picture through the microscope every five minutes, and the film can then be exhibited at ordinary speed (16 pictures per second). Under such conditions a change which takes place in the course of five minutes would be seen on the screen in about four seconds. This is exactly the reverse of the familiar "slow motion" picture where the pictures are photographed much faster than usual and then also run off at ordinary speed.

The camera can be adjusted for any speed of photography from one picture in five minutes to twenty pictures per second. The proper speed to be used depends partly upon the magnification employed. The method is already giving excellent results in the microscopic study of living processes.

DOUBLE STARS:—Many stars which seem to have nothing extraordinary about them when observed by the naked eye, are seen to be twins when looked at through a field glass or telescope. Sometimes the companion star is much smaller than the other so that it cannot be seen without the telescope; sometimes both twins are of equal size but are so close together that they appear as one to the unaided eye. Not all double stars are true doubles. Some are only "optical doubles", that is, the second star merely happens to be almost in exactly the same direction from us as the first star, but possibly billions of miles behind it and in reality has no direct relationship to it whatever. True doubles are actually real companions close to each other and revolving about the same center.

THE PARASITIC MALE:—Here's a little fish story. The female "angler fish" gets its name from the fact that it lives by fishing. A part of the fin on the back of the fish extends into a line with a little bulb on the end that acts as bait. But the male's method of getting food is stranger yet. The female is about four feet long—the male just four inches! The male while still quite young, takes a grip on the under side of the female with its jaw. The contact sets up a local change in the female, resulting in the extension of a number of blood vessels directly into the body of the male. The male need now no longer worry about a source of food, or even about eating at all. From now on he gets his food in just the same way as the young of a mammal do before birth—direct transfer of blood through connected blood-vessels. "He has now become a mere degenerate. His only mission in life is to fertilize the eggs". Those who have seen the film "Stark Love" may find the situation not absolutely unparalleled.

IN MEMORY OF SUN YAT SEN.

Out of the Morning Land
His voice went, and his hand
Touched flame about him, and a shout that rent
The flaccid shadows and brokers' battlement:
"Give over, give over, give over!
"I am the poor man's lover,
"I am the poor man's penny,
"Let him use me, there will be many
"To follow the furrow I've broken,
"To follow my death for a token.
"O, we who have life for a gift,
"Are we at ease to sift
"Our singing pain,
"Sun-swinging through the rain?
"Until the warders of the last release
"Blow seaward all the fog, shall no man cease!
"Until I, the poor man's lover,
"Have driven death to cover!"
And those who went the way of Sun Yat Sen
Had faith, and knew that love would come again.

U. S. LABOR INVITED TO PAN-PACIFIC CONGRESS

Six More Killed in Non-union Coal Mine

Two Hundred Thousand Involved as Lock-out Extends; More West Virginians Strike

WASHINGTON, Pa., April 3.—Six coal miners were killed and a number of others badly burned in a coaldust explosion in the Cokeburg mine of the non-union Ellsworth Collieries Co., yesterday. This is the third fatal accident almost coinciding with the drive against the union and the declaration of the great lockout in the central competitive fields.

Miners here take it as an ominous sign of the things to be expected thruout the entire American coal fields if the employers are successful in breaking the resistance of the union. All coal dust explosions are preventable, according to published statements of the U. S. Bureau of Mines, but there is a slight cost to the company involved, and only union organization has ever been able to force an employer to take the necessary precautions.

The Cokeburg mine was considered a very dangerous one. The Ellsworth company would have been guilty of the death of about four hundred men if it had not in other parts of the mine used some rockdust, the approved method of combatting disasters of this sort.

The dead miners are Frank Smith, Eastman White and Joseph Jordan, married, and Henry Kelley, William Gibson and Tony Hahotts, single.

The company has published, in an effort to excuse itself, the ridiculous story that the explosion was started by a miner trying to break a stick of dynamite by hammering it over a rock.

West Virginia Strike

About ninety per cent of the nonunion miners in the Clarksburg, West Virginia, region are out on strike. Because of the Sunday holiday, and because the strike is spreading from mine to mine, in the way of non-union strikes, the number striking in the other parts of the key West Virginia district is not known yet.

200,000 Involved

The number of men in the shutdown as a whole is now estimated at 200,000 or over. About fifty-thousand union miners of Kansas, Oklahoma and small southwestern fields were involved when the negotiations started before the strike by International President John Lewis failed. The contract proposed there was for a temporary agreement, similar to those in Wyoming and other outlying districts.

Would Cut to 85

Many thirty mine companies in Ohio have signed such agreements. The conference in which the Ohio Operators Association and President Lee Hall of District 6 of the U.M.W.A. have agreed, the operators now say, will discuss a lower wage, if it meets at all. S. H. Robbins, president of the operators' association today issued a statement that he would propose a basic wage of $5 per day, but did not expect the miners to accept it at this time.

Pittsburg Terminal Seah

PITTSBURGH, April 3.—With the miners and operators in Western Pennsylvania, the heart of the nation's bituminous coal producing area, further apart than ever, the stage was set today for a showdown in the wage controversy.

THE new police commissioner is a Tammany man. We have this on the authority of Mayor Walker, so there should be no doubt as to the gentleman's qualification for the post. Further assurance is given us by grand sheik Olvany's statement that Tammany has no intention of interfering with the police department, tho Mr. Olvany admits that the new commissioner is an organization man and the mayor tells us that his dues are paid up to date. Which makes us suspicious that there is something wrong since people usually explain to hide facts, rather than to confirm them.

STRANGE how people continue to believe the statements of capitalist politicians no matter how often they are bamboozled. Calvin Coolidge continues to insist that his government is playing a lone hand in China and that the only object of the presence of American warships and marines in Chinese ports is the protection of American nationals. Yet American commanders join with England in bombarding a Chinese city and the naval officers do not receive even a slap in the wrist from the administration. Less American jelly would suit the Coolidge administration and less lying is what the Chinese want.

THE soft coal miners in the central competitive fields have laid down their tools or rather hauled up their tools. The life has ebbed out of the Jacksonville agreement and the operators have refused to renew it or discuss its renewal with the union. John L. Lewis is suspiciously silent. The voice that thundered so consistently and eloquently against the progressives is now reduced to something less than a whisper. The charges made by the Communists that Lewis intended to betray the miners and wreck the union are now being borne out by events.

SIGMAN'S SABOTAGE OF WORKERS IN PRISON EXPOSED BY DEFENSE

While the Joint Defense and Relief Committee for Cloakmakers and Furriers has been busily engaged moving into operation plans to raise money for its work, Morris Sigman president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union seems to have been just as busily engaged with a campaign of slander, in a desperate attempt to destroy confidence in the committee and its work.

"Mr. Sigman is quite astute," said H. Robbins, chairman of the Joint Defense and Relief Committee for Cloakmakers and Furriers, "posing as the champion of the workers, his statements frequently deceive those not acquainted with the Sigman brand of hypocrisy.

Score In Jail.

"There are now more than a score of cloakmakers and furriers in jail. Others are in the tombs awaiting trial and sentence, and the number is growing. The first few cloakmakers were betrayed into the clutches of capitalist justice by Hyman Bushell, a Sigman hireling active as their attorney.

"In the midst of the trial, Mr. Bushell suddenly withdrew from the case, thereby making it appear that the men were guilty and for the first time giving the affair a serious aspect.

Serious Charges.

"It is important to note that in all these cases the defendants had been charged with very serious charges such as assault in the first and second degree, malicious mischief and in many cases had been indicted on all these counts.

"These defendants were charged with the commission of felonies which in the event of conviction mean possible long sentences. The defendants were lead to believe that if they were to accept pleas of guilty of simple assault, which is merely a misdemeanor, nominal punishment would be meted out, in small fines, etc.

U. S. JOINS INDEMNITY DRIVE AGAINST CHINA

Chiang Offers to Pay For Any Foreign Loss Nationalists Commit

SHANGHAI, April 3.—General Chiang Kai-shek today stated to the press that the Nationalist government would be willing to make complete recompense for all loss of foreign life and property in Nanking or elsewhere in China—if the Nationalist forces were proved in any way responsible for the loss.

In as much as there is evidence that all losses up to date were caused either by the foreign imperialist's bombardment or by the northern Chinese troops which are practically allies of the invaders, this was little satisfaction to those demanding "indemnities."

22,000 Workers Mass to Cheer The Freiheit

Unanimously Pass Resolution Against U. S. War on China

Resolutions vigorously denouncing the massacre of thousands of Chinese at Nanking and insisting that U. S. Government cease at once its unofficial war against the Chinese nationalists were unanimously adopted by the 22,000 workers who jammed Madison Square Garden Saturday night to celebrate the fifth jubilee of the establishment of "The Freiheit," Jewish Communist daily.

Meloch Epstein, Moissaye J. Olgin, Shnchno Epstein, M. Saltzman, Ben Lifshitz, general secretary of the Jewish section of the Workers (Communist) Party, and Louis Hyman, manager of the New York Joint Board of the cloak and dressmakers, joined in declaring that "The Freiheit" was engaged in fighting the battles, not only of the Jewish worker in America, but of all workers throughout the world.

A Fighting Organ

The speakers told of the organ of the fighting Jewish daily, and of the need which it fills in the labor of the movement of workers in America, and particularly in the industrial center of the east.

The establishment of The DAILY WORKER in New York was greeted at the celebration and hopes for its growth and usefulness to the workers in their daily struggle were expressed.

Greet Chinese Revolt.

The resolution on the present situation in China is as follows:

"Whereas the Chinese people under the leadership of the Chinese workers are engaged in a mighty struggle to throw off the chains of imperialist oppression and native tyranny, and

"Whereas our government has sent marines and battleships to China without having at war with that country, at the command of the bankers and imperialist investors in China, and our marines have participated in the shameful massacre of Nanking at the instigation of the Standard Oil Co. of New York (Socony) and other investors, and Now War Threatened.

"Whereas we are thereby threatened with a new world war of the imperialist powers against China and the Soviet Union;

"Therefore be it resolved by this meeting of 22,000 workers in Madison

Bogus 8-Hour Measure Debated In Reichstag

TOKIO, April 3.—Charged with attempting to organize a Nationalist movement in Korea, ninety-nine Koreans arrested in the red raids of last summer will be prosecuted by the Japanese courts.

More than 300 Koreans were arrested last June for alleged attempts to free Korea from Japan. Japan annexed Korea in 1910.

More Gunboats; More Marines Sent East

Consul Sends Report Contradicted by Chen

WASHINGTON, April 3.—That the United States may attempt to smash the Chinese nationalist movement appeared likely last night when the state department made public "conclusions" of John K. Davis, consul at Nanking, attacking the Nationalists and declaring them responsible for the Nanking "outrages."

1,500 Marines Sail.

In addition to the 1,550 marines sailing from San Diego this week, another 1,500 are being mobilized for service in China and regular army troops in Philippines and Hawaii are ready to sail for Shanghai at a moment's notice.

Davis's report comes on the heels of a vigorous denial by Eugene Chen, Nationalist Foreign Minister, that Nationalist troops had anything to do with the attack on foreigners at Nanking. The disorders were due to Shantungese and White Russian mercenaries, he said.

Demand Huge Indemnity.

That huge indemnities will be demanded by the United States from the Nationalists for the "outrages" committed by the Shantungese and the White Russians at Nanking, was clearly indicated in government circles. The administration is prepared to act upon the "conclusions" presented by Consul Davis.

Send 5,000 More Troops.

LONDON, April 3.—Great Britain moved closer than ever to open war on the Nationalist Government when the war department announced that five thousand more troops would be dispatched to China.

Whether or not the Foreign Office succeeds in "dragging the United States and Japan into an openly hostile attitude, the Cabinet is determined to fight the Nationalists. In a speech in which he bitterly attacked the Nationalist government, Neville Chamberlain, Minister of Health, urged Great Britain to demand that "such reparations as possible" be paid "for injuries done" in Nanking.

Wang Ching Wei To Shanghai.

Wang Ching Wei, the chairman of the Hankow executive, is reported to have arrived in Shanghai from Hankow for a conference with Chiang Kai Shek.

Japanese blockaders at Hankow are reported to have cleared with Chinese ports, after which residents of the Japanese concession in Hankow decided to leave.

It was stated at Aldershot tonight that the Second Scots guards and the first Northampton regiment, ordered to China, would sail from England on April eleventh.

In diplomatic circles, it was stated that exchanges were continuing between the United States, Great Britain and Japan, regarding the demands to be made for reparations arising out of the Nanking outrages and it is probable that a joint communication will be sent to the People's Government within a few days.

Clamor of War.

The die-hard press is clamoring for a blockade of Chinese ports.

Labor Has Part Of Its Disease Laws Passed

The labor movement did not succeed in getting a blanket occupational disease law through the New York legislature. The manufacturers' lobby proved too strong. Silicosis, "stone cutters' consumption"—and chemical poisoning of many different kinds, are among the injuries against which the worker is not protected under the law.

John M. O'Hanlon, secretary of the New York Federation of Labor, however, reports that the amended law slightly increases the list of accidents for which payments will be made. Loss of hearing in one ear now becomes compensable.

Issue Orders For Mobilization of Third Regiment of Marines

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Orders for the quick mobilization of a third regiment of U. S. marines at San Diego Calif., by the Navy Department were issued today as the Chinese situation became more acute.

The mobilization is to be complete by the end of next week. The marines are expected to sail then. With one regiment in Shanghai, another now en route to San Diego to embark Sunday, this will make the third regiment for far east duty.

Prepare Troops For Chicago's Poll Riots

Capitalist Politicians Incite to Election Violence

CHICAGO, April 3.—Troops are being held in readiness for the gangsterism and bloodshed which always attends an election in Chicago. Tension in the mayoralty campaign increased tonight as the city was flooded with a fresh deluge of inflammatory campaign literature and vitriolic speeches. The election is Tuesday. Rioting at the polls is foreshadowed by the belligerent attitude of rival capitalist party gunmen in half a doren wards.

Troops Ready.

Plans were forward tonight to throw troops into the city at the first indication of disorder.

Possibility of a clash between the militia and the police force was not overlooked by observers. The police are loyal to Mayor William E. Dever, democrat, who is being bitterly opposed by William Hale Thompson, republican. Governor Len Small and the higher officers of the militia support Thompson.

Distribute Machine Guns.

Machine guns were distributed among 105 squads of the police each. They will cruise through the danger zones in Devers and on motorcycles.

Try To Start Race War.

Thompson forces bitterly arraigned the Dever forces for injecting the race question into the campaign. Labor leaders told by Dever lieutenants that Thompson's election would mean Chicago flooded with Negroes to take their places in mills and factories.

Thousands of circulars were being distributed tonight containing a cartoon showing a train loaded with Ne-

Jury of 1,500 in Mock Trial Find Traitors Guilty

It didn't take the jury, comprising over 1,500 fur workers and their wives, very long time to determine the guilt of Dicer Schaebtman, J. Winnick, A. Sorkin, Isaac Wahl, and other officials of the reactionary International Fur Workers' Union tried on charges of betraying the interests of the workers and conspiring to destroy the fur workers' union.

Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union and Louis Hyman, of the Joint Board of the Cloakmakers' Union acted as prosecutors in the "mock trial" held yesterday afternoon at the New Star Casino, 107th St. and Lexington Ave.

The trial arranged without rehearsal by the shop chairmen's council was participated in by a large number of witnesses, who brought out the evidence against the officials of the International.

Proceeds from the affair will be devoted to assisting in the defense of cloakmakers and fur workers framed up on charges of assault in connection with the recent strike.

Australian, Chinese Unions Set Meeting

On May 1, in Canton, Delegates of Workers Discuss Imperialism, Make United Front

CHICAGO, April 3 (FP).—The Federated Press has received the following cable from Canton, China, inviting the American labor organizations to send delegates to the Pan-Pacific Labor Congress which opens under official Australian and Chinese labor auspices in Canton, May 1. The cable reads:

"The Trades Union Congress of the Commonwealth of Australia has authorized the All-China Federation of Labor to call a Pan-Pacific labor congress to meet at Canton May 1, 1927, under the joint official auspices of the two labor organizations. The trade union organizations of the United States are invited to send as many delegates as their resources permit.

"Invitations have also been sent to the labor bodies of Canada, Mexico, and the South American countries on the Pacific, the Philippines, Japan, Korea, India, Indonesia and to all European labor federations having connections with the Far East through colonial or other affiliations, including those of Great Britain, France, Holland and the Soviet Union.

Canvass Whole Field.

"The program arranged by the preparatory bureau, which has been working for a long time on the preliminary details of the conference, includes the bureau's report, the reports of delegates from the countries represented, the Pacific countries and the international trade union movement, labor and imperialism, international regulations regarding wages and hours, threats of war in the Pacific, labor and immigration problems, and closer relations between the labor movements of the Pacific countries.

Eastern Labor Movement.

"This congress assumes great importance because of the growth of the labor movement in the Far East following the success of the Chinese Nationalist cause and its emphasis upon trade union organization and the rising national movements in the countries of the East under European and American imperialist influence. The gathering menace of a world war in the Pacific and the interrelations of labor interests everywhere, lend cause of the international character of production and investment, add to the crucial nature of the conference.

"In the name of the Trades Union Congress of the Commonwealth of Australia and of the All-China Federation of Labor the labor organizations of America are invited to send delegates. Fraternal greetings."

The cablegram is signed by the preparatory bureau of the Pan-Pacific Labor Congress.

Rosalsky Plays With Case of Antonotsky

Keeps Him In Jail By Setting New Date For Hearing

That persecution has become a habit with Judge Otto Rosalsky of the State Supreme Court is shown unmistakably in his outrageous treatment of Louis Antonotsky, who was once again returned to the Tombs without a hearing on Friday and his case set to come up for the third time on April 8th. This means the innocent man will have been in prison for nearly two weeks without being allowed to speak one word in his own defense.

Antonotsky is one of the cloak strikers who was paroled by Judge Rosalsky three months ago and has to report to him at regular intervals. (In February 23rd. Antonotsky was one of three workers framed-up by a right wing sympathizers, Morris Kenz, who declared he had been attacked by these men.

Katz "Remembers."

Katz, when he first told his story, said he did not know who had attacked him. Later under the stimulating effect of the reactionary right wing's influence, he decided he remembered Antonofsky, and Aaron Wortuns, both workers who are loyal to the Joint Board of the cloak and dressmakers. At the hour when Katz

WORKERS' DELEGATION TO HANKOW DENOUNCES IMPERIALISTS' ATTACK

(Special Cable To The DAILY WORKER.)

HANKOW, China, April 3.—The International Workers' Delegation visiting here has just issued a proclamation to the workers of the world, calling upon them to prevent the imperialists from making war upon the Chinese people. It is as follows:

Danger Menaces Chinese People

To all labor and peasant organizations of the world: A great danger menaces the Chinese people. British imperialism is again preparing military intervention. Several places have been already bombarded by their battleships. By shameless provocations they are trying to drag the other imperialist powers to their side in order to achieve their aim of crushing the Chinese revolution. Their claim that Europeans were killed at Nanking by Nationalist troops is merely the pretext for military intervention and is an absolute lie.

The killings at Nanking were perpetrated by agent's provocateur subsidized by the imperialists and by defeated northern militarists. The truth is that British and American warships have bombarded Nanking, killing under the pretext for military intervention and is an absolute lie.

Criminal Policy of Imperialism.

The Nanking affair is but a further development of repeated provocations by British imperialists during the past few months in all parts of China for the purpose of justifying military intervention. After the odious massacres of Shanghai, Shameen Wansien, and Hankow, the latest at Nanking is but a shamful repetition of the criminal policy of imperialism in China. Armed imperialist Inter-

Briand "Takes Action" Against Communist For Pro-Chinese Addresses

PARIS, April 3.—Because Jacques Horist, Communist member of the Chamber of Deputies, has made pro-Nationalist speeches in Shanghai and Hankow, the French government has decided "to take action against him."

Foreign Minister Briand has already presented the Ministerial Council with reports of Doriot's speeches and alleged attempts to foment revolt in the Far East.

vention in China is pregnant with immense dangers not only for the Chinese people but also for humanity as a whole.

The armed intervention of British imperialism in China will be a signal for a new bloodbath, and a new world war. In these tragic circumstances, the Chinese people count on immediate action of the international proletariat to prevent armed intervention and its consequences.

During two months our delegation has visited hundreds of workers, peasants, merchants, students, and women's organizations as well as the

COOLIDGE EASING KELLOGG OUT OF JOB HE FAILS AT

Will Urge Incompetent to Take Little Trip

(By Our Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Although he denied today with characteristic bull-headedness and irritability the latest—and authoritative—information of his retirement, Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg is slated for the skids.

It is now positively known that President Coolidge is personally directing the foreign policy of the nation. Kellogg has been relegated to the position of mere office manager of the state department. Not only is Coolidge running the department, but he is calling to his assistance prominent republican leaders and in one instance a former secretary, Charles E. Hughes. This is bitter medicine to Kellogg, and despite his excited denials, makes it only the more certain that he is through.

Hughes Criticises.

From an absolutely reliable source it is learned that only a few days ago, Hughes spent practically an entire afternoon with Coolidge. It is understood that they went over the entire foreign policy field, particularly as related to Central America—Mexico and Nicaragua—and China.

Hughes is said to have severely arraigned Kellogg's incapacity, pointing out the utter demoralization of the personnel of the department, the many blunders that have marked Kellogg's regime, and the low state of the repute of the department since Kellogg took control.

Cautious Cal.

This last is said to be worrying Coolidge. He is not so much concerned with blunders, but when they begin to arouse bitter hostility and reach a point where dissatisfaction such as that centering about Kellogg has attained, he becomes alarmed. If there is anything Coolidge is fearful of, it is a bitter fight. And so to have such unquestioning republican institutions as the New York Herald-Tribune, the Washington Post, the Philadelphia Ledger, and such arch-reactionary journals as The New York Times, turn on his secretary of state and call him a liability is something that even Coolidge can understand.

His Usual Policy.

A month ago Kellogg with much gusto of concern over his health went off to a resort in North Carolina owned by a reactionary friend, former United States Senator Freylinghuysen. Up to his departure he had daily his 18 holes of golf and manifested no indication of ailment, other than his usual palsy. He returned after several weeks to announce that he was in great shape and rarin' to go.

Now it develops that he was not so good after all. It is said he tells associates that his health is in danger and that he has been advised to take a long trip to California.

And to clinch the story, it is understood, he adds that unless he finds complete restoration there he will have to give up his work as secretary of state. Now everyone knowing Kellogg, and particularly Mrs. Kellogg, knows that this must be gall and worm-wood to him. If there is anything in life they are relishing it is their official status.

Hates To Quit.

The only reason he would give it up is because he would have to do so. That this is the cause is now apparent to all here in Washington on the inside. In fact, bets are being plated that he will be out by September.

Of course Kellogg vehemently denies the California story, but as it comes from one whom he discussed it with, and in view of his reputation for truth-speaking and his own admissions about being perfectly willing to "lie about important things", his dissent need not be taken seriously.

The fact is Coolidge has become worried over the widespread bitter objection and hostility to Kellogg, and is determined to fire him. But being what he is, Coolidge must case him out without undue disturbance. He could never dismiss him the way Wilson fired his five cabinet officers. Not for Cautious Cal.

"Sick Man."

And so Mr. Kellogg will be urged to conserve his precious health and soon he will take a long journey. In fact it has already been said for Mr. Coolidge that he has been urging Kellogg for more than a year to take a vacation. It has also been said for the president—which is of greatest significance—that it was never contemplated by Coolidge to make Kellogg the permanent secretary. He has stayed three years, where it was only planned to keep him until a more desired secretary could be obtained.

Whatever the alibis, it is now clear that Kellogg is through, because Coolidge has become frightened at the ever-lasting stupidities and blunders resulting in an ever-mounting chorus of opposition. And if there is one thing Coolidge is concerned about it is opposition, and so he is now engaged in getting rid of Kellogg. Another man would fire him without further ado. But that is not the Coolidge way and so it will be some time yet before he rids himself of Kellogg.

PITTSBURGH COAL BOASTS THAT IT HAS ENLARGED ITS PRIVATE ARMY; MUCH NON-UNION PRODUCTION

(By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.)

Protected by the Pennsylvania state constabulary and a small private army, coal operators in the Pittsburgh district feel that they are sitting pretty. But to continue operations they have prepared to wage unconcealed class war.

Pittsburgh Coal, the big Mellon concern, boasts that it has added 60 gunmen to its private army bringing the roll of its class war mercenaries to over 160 men. Other companies have followed. Searchlights have been rigged up. Says The Wall Street Journal,

"Preparations by some of the coal operators in this district indicate their intention to resume production on an open shop basis soon after the strike on April 1. Ranks of the coal and iron police guards, paid by the operators, are being increased. Extensive installation of flood lights are being made."

Yet the owners of these concerns probably deny the existence of class war.

Union Tonnage Falls.

Figures compiled by G. C. Foedisch & Co., of Philadelphia show the approximate division of soft coal production east of the Mississippi river between union and non-union mines. According to these figures union mines produced 172,68,000 tons and non-union mines 335,772,000 tons in 1926, as follows:

Production in 1926.

Union Mines	Tons
Illinois	69,700,000
Indiana	22,839,000
Ohio	29,150,000
Pennsylvania (estimate)	51,000,000
Total union production	172,689,000

Non-Union Mines.

Alabama	22,256,000
Kentucky	63,330,000
Maryland	3,487,000
Pennsylvania (estimate)	100,000,000
Tennessee	5,897,000
Virginia	13,402,000
West Virginia	147,999,000
Total non-union production	335,772,000

South West Tonnage.

This takes care of all but about 70,000,000 tons of the country's total 1926 production of 508,290,000 tons. Business is figuring that non-union mines will continue to turn out 7,000,000 to 7,500,000 tons of soft coal a week unless the union can make the strike effective against important non-union operators. The country's consumption is ranging between 10,000,000 and 11,000,000 tons a week. There are probably 70,000,000 to 80,000,000 tons in storage.

Shift of Production.

The Foedisch figures show also how production has shifted to non-union states since 1918. Illinois produced 69,700,000 tons in 1926 compared with 89,291,105 in 1918, Indiana 22,839,000 compared with 30,678,634, Ohio 29,150,000 compared with 45,812,942 and Pennsylvania 151,119,000 compared with 178,556,741. The combined production of these predominantly union states has fallen from 344,333,424 tons in 1918 to 272,808,000 in 1926. West Virginia, on the other hand, has increased its production from 89,935,839 tons in 1918 to 147,999,000 in 1926, Kentucky from 21,611,713 to 63,330,000 and Virginia from 10,289,808 to 13,402,000. Combined these non-union states have increased their output from 131,737,360 tons in 1918 to 224,032,000 tons in 1926.

GRAFT CHARGES FORCE COOLIDGE TO RETURN OIL

Sinclair, Doheny Land Given Back to Navy

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The decision of the U. S. Supreme Court that the leasing of naval oil reserves to Doheny was "tainted" by corruption and the prosecution's contention in recent trials of Doheny and Fall that the Harding order turning over the reserves to the Department of the Interior was a step in the grab, has finally forced President Coolidge to revoke the Harding order and return the oil land to the navy. His decision is now made public.

In The Navy Now.

Henceforth, the chief executive has decreed, the two reserves, which were turned over to Edward L. Doheny and Harry F. Sinclair, oil millionaires, by former Secretary of the Interior Albert S. Fall, are to be managed by the Secretary of the Navy.

The executive order signed by the president was framed at a conference between Secretary of the Interior Work and Secretary of the Navy Wilbur.

The Hand of Fall.

The Harding order, testimony at the recent criminal trial of Doheny and Fall revealed, was signed by the then president at the request of Fall.

The government charged Fall's act was a part of his general effort to fraudulently turn over the nation's oil reserves to Doheny and Sinclair.

The California reserves were leased to Doheny following his famous "loan" of $100,000 to Fall in 1922. The Teapot Dome reserve was leased by Fall to Sinclair under conditions declared by the government to be as equally corrupt as those under which the Elk Hills reserve leases were made.

38 Arrested In Raid On Democratic Club

Despite the promises of democratic leaders to prevent gambling in political clubs throughout the city, largescale gambling goes merrily on.

Thirty-eight men were arrested Saturday night when the police broke up a dice game at the James Monroe Democratic Club, 1115 Cypress Ave., Ridgewood, Queens. Three patrol wagons were called to transport the club members to the police station, where their names were entered in the blotter.

Gambling raids on political clubs reached their climax several weeks ago, when Alderman Peter J. McGuiness of Greenpoint was caught in a gambling raid on a Williamsburg Democratic Club, where he had been conducting a profitable business in race-horse bookmaking.

Will Limit Radio Stations.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—It was virtually certain tonight that the federal radio commission will not widen the radio broadcasting wavehand so as to accommodate more stations.

At the first two sessions today of the commission's scheduled four-day conference, practically every branch of the industry protested against the broadcast band now extending from 200 to 550 meters.

ANTI-FASCISTS MEET AND CHEER CHINESE REVOLT

Speakers Tell How First Blackshirts Ended

Hearty cheers and applause for the Chinese Nationalist revolution and the Soviet Union featured yesterday afternoon's mass meeting of the Chrystie Street Branch of the Anti-fascist Alliance of North America held at the Church of All Nations, 9 Second Ave.

M. J. Olgin whipped the entire audience into enthusiasm when he told the crowd that it believes that fascism did not originate in Italy. That it came into existence in Russia in 1905 when the workers of that country attempted an overthrow of tzarism. He told of the general strike that started there on October 17, 1905, which resulted in the formation of the duma. Of the organization of the Union of the Russian People by the czarists, these, said Olgin, "were the original fascists."

Fascism Is International.

"Why was the Union of the Russian people formed?" continued Olgin. "Because a revolution had started in Russia and the czarists wanted to smother it. While they were successful in 1905 in suppressing the revolution, it remained for 1917. The workers of Russia then took a big iron broom and cleaned out the czarists. The Italians will some day do the same thing. Wherever will find a strong revolutionary movement we can expect to find fascism."

Grecht Tells of Decree.

Rebecca Grecht, active labor orator, told of the new decree of the fascist government that Italian workers, no matter where they are, will be subject to the rule of Mussolini. She recited how the rights of the Italian workers have been taken away from them, the suppressing of the bona fide trade union.

America Responsible.

She pointed out that America is to a great extent responsible for the continuation of Mussolini's rule. How the American bankers have loaned money to make it possible for him to continue in power and at the same time murder the most active fighters of the working class. She told of the "New Siberia," where the Italian exiles are sent. They are located on the islands of Farignanu, Elba, Tremiti and Maccalenza.

Deported To Death.

Sylvan A. Pollack of The DAILY WORKER, who presided, in opening the meeting told of the 14 Italian workers who had been deported from America to Italy during the last 12 months. Since they have left these shores, no word has been heard from any of them, which means that they have met death by Mussolini's henchmen. How the fascists in co-operation with the department of just of the country is now trying to send Ena Sormanti, one of the foremost anti-fascists in America to the same fate.

Pollack also pointed out the necessity of all workers to joining in the struggle against fascism, not only in Italy but wherever it shows its head.

Sormenti Speaks.

Enea Sormenti, editor of the Il Lavoratore, and Orlando Lenni, member of the New York District Committee of the Anti-fascist Alliance, addressed the meeting in Italian.

FORD CASE JUDGE WILL ASK JURORS TO SERVE GRATIS

Two Hundred Witnesses Yet, and No Money

DETROIT, Mich., April 3.—Complete uncertainty in many of its most important angles veils the Ford-Sapiro million dollar libel trial, which is verging on its fourth week in federal court here.

Total inability of counsel on both sides to tell how long the case may last is coupled with the declaration of officials of the eastern federal division of Michigan that funds for payment of the six men and six women on the jury will be exhausted in a few more weeks.

Congress Had Provider.

This is because congress in the closing moments of its short session failed to pass the second deficiency bill. Only about $2,000 for jurors' fees remains in the hands of marshal Frank Newton, and much of this is already owing, he said.

Aaron Sapiro, Chicago attorney and organizer of "co-operative" marketing of farm products who declares Henry Ford has libelled him in his Dearborn Independent, has been on the stand a full week and his cross examination will extend well into the coming week, says Senator James A. Reed, the Ford legal chief.

Two Hundred Witnesses.

Reed would not deny today that the case might run well into the summer. There are two hundred witnesses on both sides that may have to be called. William Henry Gallagher, chief counsel for Sapiro insisted today that he would make no predictions of the trial's length until more definite information as to the condition of Mr. Ford to appear on the stand is available to him. This will not be for another fortnight at least, all observers assert, and Ford may never appear in person but may elect to give his testimony by deposition, thus avoiding such public ridicule as he faced then his failure to answer simple questions in a previous trial.

Jury Unpaid.

Following Sapiro on the witness stand will be H. W. Roland, former editor of the Independent, who assigned Harry Bunn of California to write the anti-Semite articles. With this testimony and that of a few others the plaintiff's prima facie case will be completed.

Judge Tuttle and M. Raymond is expected Monday to take steps to find out whether the jury will serve gratis until more funds are available July 1.

Wood Made Czar Over Government Industry In the Philippines

MANILA, April 3.—The American-controlled insular supreme court has upheld Governor Wood's action abolishing the Board of Control, through which the government-owned corporations in the Philippines were run.

The decision places General Wood in control of $50,000,000 in government property and marks the success of the attempt of American capitalists to get "the government out of business." Philippine leaders indicated that the decision would be appealed to the supreme court.

The two members besides Governor Wood were Manuel Quezon and Manuel Roxas, Filipino leaders.

22,000,000 Cars In U. S.

WASHINGTON, April 3. — Twenty-two million motor vehicles were registered in the United States in 1926, an increase of 10.3 per cent or slightly more than 2,000,000 vehicles over the preceding year.

These figures were announced today based on reports just received from state registration agencies by the bureau of public roads of the U. S. department of agriculture.

Deny Chiang's Dismissal.

SHANGHAI, April 3.—Reports of the dismissal of Chiang Kai Shek were vigorously denied by T. V. Soong, Harvard graduate and Minister of Finance, who arrived here a few days ago. The efforts of the foreign imperialists to precipitate a split in the Kuomintang have been unsuccessful, he intimated.

While the Nationalist troops are preparing for their drive northwards, foreign warships, most of them American, continue to patrol the Yangtze River, and the Chinese coast from Canton to Tientsin.

Another Shanking Massacre?

The American gunboat Ashville has left for Tientsin where workers despite the execution of labor leaders by Chang Tso Lin may take action to aid the capture of the city by the Nationalists. The American Shanghai fleet was increased by the arrival of the Richmond and the Marblehead. The Cincinnati is expected Tuesday.

Conditions in the Chinese settlement in Shanghai are quiet, while the British authorities are conducting a reign of terror in the International settlement. Yesterday two companies of the British forces surrounded the offices of the Shanghai municipal council, not permitting any one to leave or enter, while police searched and questioned the occupants. It is understood that similar raids will be conducted every night until the International settlement is cleared of alleged "intimidators, spies and agitators."

Drive on Tientsin.

In the meantime the Nationalist troops are preparing for their drive on Tientsin, where they will probably come face to face with Chang Tso Lin, the Manchurian war lord. Chang has spent the whole of the past week in Peking interviewing the ministers of the foreign powers in an effort to obtain financial and other aid against the Nationalists.

The general strike at Hangchow, and the tie-up of the Shanghai-Hangchow railroad, has been ended by the order of the General Labor Union, following the granting of concessions.

The vernacular press of Monday is pressing the certainty of an anti-British strike and boycott in the near future, particularly on account of the "ruthless bombardment of Nanking."

American Bankers Give $100,000,000 to Help Polish White Terror

WARSAW, Poland, April 3.—The Polish government is negotiating for a $100,000,000 loan from a group of American bankers headed by the Banker Trust Company of New York and Blair and Company.

M. Monnet of Paris, representing the American bankers, arrived in Warsaw yesterday to continue the negotiations for a loan started by M. Felix Mlynarski and A. Krzyzanowski on their recent visit to the United States.

Kill Civil War Veteran.

BEVERLY, N. J., April 3.—Charles E. Clement, 73 years old, a civil war veteran and well known here, was struck and instantly killed by the crack "Nellie Bly" express train of the Pennsylvania railroad tonight. He was walking across the tracks at a crossing when hit.

Kill Farmer.

BUCHANAN, Mich., April 3.—An unidentified robber today killed Michael Zerbe, 85, prosperous farmer, by splitting open his skull while he slept and then turned on Mrs. Zerbe, 83, and inflicted probably fatal injuries.

WHITE RUSSIANS KILLED NANKING FOREIGNERS, GOVT. SURVEY SHOWS

SHANGHAI, April 3.—White Russians and Shantungese were entirely responsible for the attacks on foreigners at Nanking, according to the report of an official commission which has been investigating the situation, Eugene Chen, Nationalist foreign minister announced yesterday.

The complete text of Chen's statement follows:

White Russians Loot.

"A commission of inquiry investigating the late events at Nanking has seen preliminary reports which has established the outstanding fact that the disorders were the work of reactionary and counter-revolutionary elements, who, under the confused conditions following the defeat of the northern rebels and their white Russian mercenaries, instigated rebel remnants (many of whom took uniforms taken from Nationalist soldiers who had been previously captured), and local ruffians to attack and loot the foreigners.

Nationalists Restore Order.

"The British, American and Japanese consulates were attacked and a few foreign lives unfortunately were lost and some foreign property looted before order could be fully restored by the Nationalist forces under General Ching-chien, who entered Nanking on March 24 at 5:30 in the afternoon. Ching-chien ordered the execution of a number of those who attacked and looted foreigners. From four to six foreigners are reported killed and about six wounded during the disturbances.

"On the other hand, an estimate (which is under investigation) places the Chinese casualties resulting from the British and other consulates, and express deep regret for the foreign lives lost and the wounding of the British consul general and other foreigners, they have strongly to protest against the bombardment of Nanking, with its large civilian population, by British and American bunboats."

THE KUOMINTANG HAS SPEAKERS AT RUTHENBERG RECRUITING MEETINGS

CHICAGO, April 3—Reports of the Ruthenberg meetings held in various parts of the country are now being received at the national office of the Workers (Communist) Party.

Among the speakers at the meeting held in San Francisco have been the representative of the Central Executive Committee of the Kuomintang, of the United States, W. Fong, and Y. Chang representing the Society for the Advancement of Sun Yat Senism in America.

The Indian national party, the Hindu Gardar Party also co-operated.

Secure New Members.

New members are being taken in. Among the cities where meetings of a similar character were held were Los Angeles, Oakland, and San Jose.

In no section of the country has the Ruthenberg enrollment drawn a more international response than in the California district. Here particularly it was pointed out the role of the Workers (Communist) Party and its leader, Comrade Ruthenberg, in the struggle against imperialism.

The message from the Hindu Gardar Party read in part: "The oppressed nations of the world look upon the revolutionary workers of the world to assist them in freeing themselves from their oppressors, the imperialists. In the death of Comrade Ruthenberg we have lost a great friend who has always taken the side of the oppressed peoples. We know that his work in the revolutionary movement will inspire the members of the Workers (Communist) Party and that they will carry on to a successful conclusion the work which he started."

New Application Cards.

The new membership application cards of the Workers (Communist) Party are now ready. The District organizers can secure them from the National Office. They are printed on deep red cards and contain the party pledge for the Ruthenberg Recruiting Campaign. The membership application cards also contain the last words of Comrade Ruthenberg.

Reports from the various districts indicate that The DAILY WORKER and the membership recruiting drive are the central points aimed at in the Ruthenberg Enrollment Drive.

22,000 WORKERS MASS TO CHEER DAILY FREIHEIT

Pass Resolution Against U. S. War on China

Square Garden that we protest against the outrageous massacre at Nanking, and

"We demand the withdrawal of our battleships and marines from China. We send our fraternal greetings to the Central Council of Chinese Trade Unions, to the Kuomintang, and to the Communist Party of China. We declare our solidarity with the Chinese people in their struggle for freedom.

"Long Live the Chinese Revolution. "Hail the Coming Soviet Republic of China."

Value to Needle Workers.

This resolution was read by Bertram D. Wolfe, of the Workers School. Jay Lovestone, acting secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party spoke in behalf of the Central Executive Committee; and Ben Gitlow extended greetings from District 2 of the Party.

Both the speakers emphasized the value of a fighting paper like the Freiheit, and the other Communist papers of this country, in carrying on the battle of the workers in every field. That it was shown Pittsburgh menge value particularly in the struggle of the needle trades workers of New York and other large centers; and, as one of the speakers pointed out, its five years of service have meant five years of steady advance for the progressive labor forces.

The greetings from these prominent speakers formed "Part three" of a delightful musical program which was a fitting celebration of this gala occasion.

The Freiheit Gesangs Ferein opened with the International and a folk song, which was followed by a group of songs sung by the famous prima donna Rosa Rosina who was enthusiastically received by the great throng. She sang another group of songs after the speaking, and in two numbers was joined by Giacomo Rimini.

The last number on the program was the premier performance of Jacob Schaefer's musical setting of the great revolutionary poem by Alexander Block, "Twelve."

Schaefer who is responsible for building the magnificient chorus of workers and training them to sing not only simple folk songs but difficult classical music has written an important and impressive revolutionary composition. It should have been the central part of an evening's program in order to be carefully heard and appreciated.

Must Be Heard Again.

At Saturday's concert, the work was sung by the Freiheit Gesangs Ferein, with Giacomo Rimini and Sergei Radomsky as soloists; and fifty-five members of the New York Symphony Orchestra accompanying. Jacob Schaefer conducted. There were momants of great beauty and tremendous power in the composition, and the opening and the conclusion were particularly impressive. Radomsky's splendid singing added greatly to the performance, but the whole work must be heard again under more favorable circumstances to be appreciated fully.

However, it was not renowned soloists, chorus, speakers or orchestra, which made this jubilee so notable. It was the greeting from 22,000 workers, loyal friends of the Freiheit and the working class movement, filling Madison Square Garden from floor to roof, which was an inspiration. New York has never seen a more joyous celebration.

The opening gun of the Ruthenberg Recruiting Drive will be fired next Tuesday evening, April 5, at the general membership meeting of District 2 of the Workers (Communist) Party that will be held at the Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East Fourth St., eight p. m. sharp.

All party members must put aside all other affairs and be present at this meeting that will be the beginning of the greatest membership drive ever held in the history of the workers (Communist) Party. Any member who is absent will be put performing his Communist duty.

Hoping to see The DAILY WORKER on sale here in the near future.

BRITAIN APPEALS TO ALL ROBBER POWERS TO FOLLOW HER IN CHINA

(By a Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, April 3.—It has been reliably ascertained that Great Britain quite recently circularized Washington, Paris, Rome, Tokio and even Madrid, in an effort to effect a common policy in dealing with the Chinese problem.

With the exception of Rome, it is understood that the British received little satisfaction. Paris, Tokio and Madrid are understood to have rejected the proposal entirely. The United States, under the tremulous direction of Coolidge and Kellogg, were not altogether unsympathetic, although the British plan was not agreed to.

Britain's Old Game

Great Britain has been at work for months in an effort to unite other Great Powers with her in her "forceful stand" policy in China. Particularly has she been trite with regard to the United States. It is well known that the British are desperately eager to secure the cooperation of the United States. From one authoritative source it was declared that several weeks ago the British informed Kellogg that they would be willing to go any reasonable length to bring about a coalition of interests.

It was even stated that the British intimated that if the United States were willing to join in the proposal that England was willing to offer recognition to the Cantonese regime. Kellogg is said to have sheered off from this, because of his fraudulent idea of giving the impression that he was weakening in his wild opposition to what he calls Bolshevism.

The Fear of Nicaragua

Great Britain's eagerness to obtain the backing in China of the United States is said to explain the inexplicable conduct of the British in recklessly rushing a war-craft to Nicaragua some weeks ago, on the ground that its nationals there were in danger. Kellogg was in bed under at the time over his stupid, lying policy in Central America, and it is now contended that the English sent a warship there to bolster up his argument that foreigners were in danger.

"Easily Arranged"

At the time the incident occured, an insurgent Republican senator told a newspaperman that he had attended a social gathering at which he was informed by a "high English diplomatic officer" that "such little matters are always readily arranged between friendly governments."

It was openly charged at the time that Kellogg put the British had staged the episode as an accomodation to him after he had been proved a liar, in his charges of Communistic plotting in Central America, and was being hard pressed for a alibi for his insane policy.

No Official Action

Although the United States has on the face of things taken no official stand action with Great Britain in China, it is very apparent to insiders here, that the two reactionary governments had drifted into a position of closer cooperation during the last ten days. So far it has been a military matter rather than diplomacy, but there are strong evidences that under the crafty and skilful manipulation of the British statesmen aided by the international bankers, the Coolidge-Kellogg administration was being manipulated to the support of the British.

There was every indication, that as occurred in 1917, the United States was being subjected to an organized and deliberate campaign of forcing the nation to the support of the British against the "yellow peril." This may sound fantastic, but a scrutiny of the reactionary press any day will give indisputable evidence of this fact.

Sent Special Liar

The great newspapers who have their own correspondents carry bitterly anti-Cantonese stories. These accounts are so patently hostile that it is questionable if most of them are written from China. The New York Times for some, so far unexplained, reason dismissed its former Chinese correspondent, Millard, and substituted for him Frederick Moore, a former American counsellor to the Japanese. A check on his stories for a week proved him a liar for every day of the seven.

The day this dispatch is being written in Washington, the Times itself makes him out a liar by conflicting dispatches from its own correspondents.

As a matter of fact his stories are not news of events transpiring in the Chinese situation but "horror" stories of alleged "atrocities." They are deliberate distortions calculated to arouse racial resentment against the Cantonese.

A. P. Pro-British

The press associations are treating the matter as if it were some minor revolution in South America. The United Press has several men in China, its staff wholly inadequate to meet the demands of the situation. As a result much of its report is covered with alleged "horrors" and incoherent hearsay.

The Associated Press carries practically all British propaganda. Its chief correspondent is also head of the Reuter Service, the semi-official British news service.

The Reuter service devotes itself to broadcasting alleged atrocity stories and wild yarns. They dispatches are somewhat curbed for American consumption, but their import is sent through just the same.

The British are in a most desperate plight in China having suffered heavily in the Chinese boycott. They have greater interest than any other nation immediately concerned in Chinese developments. Downing Street is desperately anxious to relieve itself of the odium of its policy and is using every resource at its command to obtain secondary other nations and particularly the United States.

ORGANIZATION TO STOP COOLIDGE'S IMPERIAL SCHEME

Norris Honorary Head Of Nation-wide Group

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 3. Out of the nationwide protests against bullying of Latin America by the state department and the American navy has come a national organization, headed by Sen. Norris of Nebraska, progressive leader of congress, which will be devoted to blocking the program of imperialist aggression in this hemisphere.

Its title is the National Citizens' Committee on Relations with Latin America. It is voluntary, non-sectarian and non-partisan. Its four main principles are:

1. A square deal for all republics of the two Americas—for the least as well as the greatest.

2. Settlement of controversies, without force or coercion, but by arbitration in accordance with the policy specifically endorsed by the United States government in its adherence to the Hague convention 20 years ago.

3. Preservation and promotion of legitimate business by the restoration and development of friendly relations with these countries.

4. Non-intervention in the government and internal affairs of our Latin-American neighbors."

Impressive Committee.

While Senator Norris is honorary president of the organization, which intends to establish branches in every state, the active president is John F. Moore of Boston. The secretary is Forrest Green Johnston of Baltimore, who was prominent in the LaFollette presidential campaign. Members of the national committee include Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, Senator Wheeler of Montana, William Allen White, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Peter Witt of Cleveland, Dr. John A. Lapp of Chicago, Edward Keating of Washington, Mrs. Edward P. Costigan, Basil M. Manly and W. D. Jamieson of Washington, Elizabeth Gilman of Baltimore, Oswald Garrison Villard of The Nation, Representative J. Walton Moore of Virginia, Judge Julian W. Mack of Chicago, Senator Frazier of North Dakota, Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale, Zona Gale of Wisconsin, Prof. Tyrrell Williams of St. Louis, Carl Vrooman of Illinois, Norman Hapgood of New York, Presidents Neilson of Smith College and MacCracken of Vassar, Dr. Albert Putney of American University, Dr. John A. Latane of Johns Hopkins University, Dr. John Dewey of Columbia College, and Huston Thompson of Washington.

Against Gunboat Policy

"We believe", says the announcement issued by Moore, "that our present Latin-American policy as manifested in Nicaragua, Mexico and elsewhere is in violation of every sound American tradition. The continuation of this policy will cause the loss of Latin American markets vital to the prosperity of legitimate American business. It will inevitably arouse the hostility of millions of people in Mexico, Central America and South America and the West Indies who should be our friends. It will cause us to forfeit the respect of the world, and seriously impair our own self-respect.

"We seek to restore the good-will and friendly relations which have been sacrificed by a misguided and blundering policy of dollar diplomacy."

This Moore statement, emphasizing the commercial profit in fair dealing, is in contrast with the ideal-istic tone of Norris' declarations regarding the exploitation of the people of Latin America. Made by a Boston man to Calvin Coolidge, it is calculated to appeal to the instincts of the present administration.

Six More Killed in Non-union Coal Mine

Jeannette Coal Company preparatory were made to reopen the company's eight large mines as open shop mines as soon as such a possible after working under a union agreement for seven.

Homer J. Bailey, President of the firm posted a statement at each of his mines, informing the miners they could return to work at a scale approximately 25 lower than the Jacksonville scale.

Officers of the United Mine Workers have termed Baker's announcement "ridiculous." They said any attempt to reopen the Pittsburgh Terminal Company mines would be opposed by the union.

Smaller Concerns Sign

Just what effect the action of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Company, heretofore the largest union company in the district, in attacking the union will have on the smaller independent operators was not apparent today.

Vice President Phil Murray announced that the union already has signed temporary agreements with several Western Pennsylvania operators which will enable them to continue operations until a new permanent union agreement is reached. Murray hoped to be able to state later in the day how many companies had signed such agreements.

Sheriffs in Allegheny and Westmoreland counties have increased their force of deputies.

Union Holds Illinois

CHICAGO, April 3. In Illinois, where 72,000 men are employed, operators frankly declared they would get nowhere if they tried to run their mines on an open shop basis and had no intention of trying it.

Under the miners' qualification a state board has power to prevent mines from operating if they have no certificate.

Neither operators nor men were unduly concerned over the situation and it was generally believed that after a suitable interval a new conference would be called.

Disappointed Audience.

Spectators who fought for front row seats at the trial of the management and cast of the play "Seventh Heaven" at the alleged objectionable performance were disappointed yesterday when the court denied a motion by defense counsel that an actual performance of the show be given the jury.

The judge held there was no precedent for such a performance and that reading the manuscript in court would suffice.

prospect of seeing the United Mine Workers' Union going completely to smash. Lewis has done their work well. Frank Farrington, who sold out to the Illinois coal operators has a three year contract in his safe at a salary of $25,000 per. After all Farrington only strangled the Illinois Miners' Union. Lewis did the job on a national scale. There is no time to be lost if the union is to be saved from disaster. The left wing elements in the union must rally around the program and slogans of the Brophy ticket in the last election. The slogan, "Save The Union" must now be pasted on every miner's hat.

ONE of William Randolph Hearst's most notorious poison pen artists is dead. His name is George W. Hinman and a day seldom passed that did not witness his vicious attack from his pen on the working class. When Arthur Brisbane still retained some vestige of decency and his column sometimes carried a paragraph or two that distinguished him from the Elihu Root school of reactionary, Hinman balanced things up for "Yellow Willie" by outbursts against the workers on another section of the paper. We shed no tears over this corpse.

THERE is something rotten in the State of Washington, the only being a liberal I cannot get on a consolation out of the news item that Senator Wesley Jones of Washington clair has been denied a new trial and the fat boy faces a four-month jail term, in a "common jail" at that. However, that is one man, I will not like to be minus food between now and the date of Sinclair's entry into a "common jail".

MR. POSTGATE of London, assistant editor of Lansbury's Weekly, writhes thru two columns of The Advance in an effort to prove that the reason he left the Communist Party is because of their autocratic methods and their tendency to smother with abuse those who differ with them. His attitude as well as their itch to control outside organizations is considered un-Marxian by Mr. Postgate, tho in the same article he admits that Marx carried a load of vituperation which he used with abandon against his enemies that was the envy of his friends and a nightmare to his foes.

POSTGATE'S objections to the insistence of the Communist Party on obedience to party discipline on the part of its members, comes with bad grace from one who is assistant editor of an alleged radient periodical that is under the control of an individual, George Lansbury. The policy of this is determined by Lansbury and should Postgate step outside the limits of the elbow room allowed him by his paymaster he would be shown the open door, tho it is not likely that George would shower any more abuse on him that he does on the capitalists, George is too much of a christian for that.

THE ADVANCE correspondent agrees that the Communist position is fundamentally correct. How long will he concede this much? Walton Newbold, the renegade defender of the world oil interests, the protagonist of Anglo-American imperialism, believed in the fundamental correctness of the Communist position immediately after he quit the party, but he gradually eased himself out of this belief and went down the greased skid to the capitalist cesspool like a rotten head of cabbage. Mr. Postgate is irritated by the Communists' belief that only a disciplined mass Communist Party is qualified to lead the workers in the final struggle against imperialism. But unless one believes this he has no more right to be a member of a Communist Party than a millionaire has to be in a poor house.

60 CHINESE AND FILIPINO STUDENTS OF CHICAGO HOLD CONFERENCE IN AMERICA

CHICAGO, April 3. (UP)—Well armed shafts were fired at American imperialism from within its own western citadel when Chinese and Filipino students got into action at the international conference on Pan-Pacific relations. The conference was held at the University of Chicago March 26-27 under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. Sixty student delegates, eighty visitors, a dozen nationalities participated.

The object of the conference was to seek a basis for better relations among the people and nations of the Pacific area. Behind many underlying of the high things especially are making about American policy before along better relations the conference was a success. But in the moments breathings of the American delegates for brotherhood were expressed to soothe the exploited races it was in ignorance rather.

To Follow U. S.

Americans started off on the wrong foot immediately when a typical super-booster was named S. Hocking wisely told the East to become efficient and properly systematized like the United States of wanted to attain success. Other Americans took a strong preceding ions bent.

"You can't push the babe on us by staking it on the end of a pair of Uncle Sam's bayonet," was the brave answer. "It's your greed for big quick profits through enslaving our men, women and child labor that is causing the trouble in China. None of the oriental students displayed any sympathy with the machinegun missionary point of view.

Tells Filipino Grievance

Filipino students warmed the Chinese not to accept the United States as a friend or to depend on its honor in diplomatic or other dealings. The Filipinos disarmed and relied on American promises of independence. A Filipino delegate declared, "and we have probably lost our independence forever. Don't follow our example lay back sharp at the Yankee when he pretends to be a friend."

Students participating in the conference included Chinese, Japanese Korean, Filipino, Siberian, Negro, Canadian, Dutch and German besides Americans.

Try 99 Korean Leaders For Nationalist Plot

BERLIN, April 3. The fake eight hour measure forced on the Washington accord was the subject of a heated conference in the Reichstag yesterday.

The bill, which is meant to delude German workers, is so full of loopholes that it resembles a sieve, according to a labor report. It can be shoot by a term "like" great losses of business would be incurred by advertising the fact. Then an execution would be made and the workers could be compelled to toil more hours daily, it was pointed out.

A Communist leader pointed to American open-shop methods as the ideal for German industry to follow. "Henry Ford says the employer must divide his profits with the workers who make his production possible. Wages must be increased but never cut", said the speaker.

The trial of Henry H. Volk, former internal revenue agent and brother of former Congressman Lester D. Volk, who is charged with seeking a bribe from the president of the American Piano Co. for reducing the amount of the firm's income tax by $30,000, was continued in federal court yesterday.

WORKERS OF SOVIET UNION GIVE TRAINING TO HOMELESS CHILDREN

Below is printed the last article of a series on care of homeless children in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, and the lack of care such children receive in the capitalist countries. It was written by the special Moscow correspondent of The DAILY WORKER, as an answer to the recived campaign of horror tales being made now by the capitalist press.

A large number of homeless boys and girls are being trained for industry. One provision, in addition to these work schools and communes is that 10% of all apprenticeships are reserved for "bezprizhorni" from these homes. The vocational training is the biggest phase of the work.

From Peasant Families.

But just as Russia is predominantly agricultural, so more than 80%, some say more than 90% of these boys are of peasant origin. They cannot all be transplanted into industry, nor is it in all cases good for the child.

So boys may be sent as wards to reliable peasants, for whom it is made worth while to take good care of the boy. The lad need not stay with the peasant unless he is satisfied, he can always report back in his institution, in which case the peasant loses certain very worthwhile economic advantages. For instance, if the boy stays the peasant is freed from taxes for three years; he gets 50 roubles, an additional allotment of land, and free seeds on taking such a boy into his family; this land, seeds, etc. is to be out of the boy in rural life. Similarly, small artisans and other employers taking in such boys as apprentices are freed from state and local taxes, and in addition they need not pay the social insurance for them, this being covered from other sources.

Bring Back Tools.

One of the most interesting stories of this arrangement was told me by Hal Ware, an American farm expert who is heading the "American Reconstruction Farms" in North Ukiba. This is a big outfit of 20,000 acres and 100 workers, plus 80 "bezprizhorni" boys. They are no ordinary farm-laborers. 2 are working in the machine shop, 2 in the garage, 2 in the carpenter shop and the other 4 are still in school. They have a cottage of their own, and a Russian peasant woman keeps house for them.

Two of the ten decided to run away, stealing some tools as they went. Two weeks later a letter was received from them; they had been arrested and wanted to come back. The farm sent them money for their fare, and when an axial they brought back all they had stolen; a new difficulty arose, the other eight refused to readmit the black sheep. Finally one was taken back, he was misled it was said, but on the other they were adamant.

Farm Guarantees.

He had good stuff in him and was honestly eager to make good. The farm therefore paid his board with a family in the village, pledging a financial guarantee against any further theft on his part. It is very unlikely that there will be any call to make good. All ten are direct fruits of the famine and can tell the most harrowing tales in a most matter of fact way. All are orphans, famine orphans.

Special Funds.

A few words about the methods whereby the social funds are collected and this subject can be considered finished. The greatest part comes from the state budget. But some of it is raised by special taxes. For instance, if one goes into a restaurant about eight o'clock one sees all menu cards collected and others, containing many more, higher prices substituted. The difference is a tax for the bezprizhorni. The taxes on beer, on playing cards, and 50% of the tax on extra-profits of private concerns—all go this purpose. The stamp tax on certain pass is also devoted to this purpose.

But this is the state side. Many and varied are the social measures. The 15 kopeck a month dues have already been mentioned. Here is another. Every time a fellow worker dies in an enterprise there is a collection for flowers. Everyone chips in a rouble, or 50 kopeks at least. Several hundred, sometimes a thousand roubles are collected. Forty or fifty are spent for flowers, the rest for the bezprizhorni. We have a little lunch counter. Pastry very good pastry, too—the best in the world are the Russian pirozhnoye—are bought for 15 kopeks each and sold for 19 profit for the bezprizhorni. And so it goes!

Workers' State a Foster Parent

Yes, it is a problem, caring for those relatively few of our war and famine waifs that have not found their way into the comradely embrace of the social agencies of the workers and peasants' republic. It is no easy job this. But look at the capitalist papers, sold on the streets through the long winter nights by the starvelings of Hell's Kitchen and Limehouse—let no one such a vile outfit poke any finger at what is being done here. This is our problem. It will be taken care of. It is being taken care of. And this is such a gathering, a human understanding possible only from a proletarian state.

Intervention in China is Chief Topic in Imperialist Foreign Offices

The gravity of the Chinese situation can be guaged by the amount of space the capitalist press devotes to it. Not since the world war and the Russian revolution has there been such a tremendous flow of rumors, counter-rumors, statements, denials, speculation and inspired attempts to stampede the masses into a war mood.

Out of this welter of material several facts stand out. The first is that Great Britain, facing the loss of her power in China immediately and in the entire Asiatic sector eventually, has decided to stake all on an offensive against the Chinese masses. The dispatch of another brigade of troops with full auxiliary equipment to China is of much more significance than the public utterances of British diplomats as is also the proposal to blockade all Yangtse river ports.

The second fact is that Great Britain, having failed so far to get official American co-operation is leaning more toward Japan as evidenced by expressions of regret in the British press for the termination of the Anglo-Japanese alliance. The Morning Post, according to a New York Times dispatch, points out that the treaty was not renewed because of a desire to placate America but that the expected co-operation has not materialized.

The third fact is that the statement by Coolidge denying any intention of acting jointly with Great Britain has not ended British attempts to secure such action and the main effort seems now to be directed towards maneuvering for a joint investigation of the Nanking massacre which it is hoped in British quarters will result in a joint demand for reparations. According to the British plotters this would of necessity commit the United States to the next step which would be joint armed intervention.

Fourth, the Japanese press and public seem to be extremely suspicious of Britain's new cordiality and Japanese imperialism is still following what in diplomatic circles is called "a careful policy" towards China. The announcement that the Japanese government will try to convict 99 Korean leaders of preparing a nationalist revolution shows that the internal situation is acute. A Chinese boycott against Japan would in all probability precipitate a serious crisis which would severely shake if not overthrow the present regime.

Fifth, American policy in China is not yet definitely framed. The Coolidge statement undoubtedly indicates the main line American imperialism desires to pursue at present but conflict between various sections of the ruling class and the fact that the Chinese liberation movement takes on more and more the character of a social revolution and endangers the whole front of world imperialism is causing hesitation with the tendency, under the pressure of Great Britain, to more aggressive military action.

Sixth, it is now perfectly clear that the alliance between the Soviet Union and the People's Government of China, the most powerful bloc in the world today, causes all powers but Great Britain, whose chief desire is a joint offensive against the Soviet Union, to hesitate in hurling an open challenge to two governments representing 600,000,000 people--approximately one third of the world's population.

Seventh, the fact that the leadership of the Chinese liberation movement is now in the hands of the Communists and the left wing representing the labor unions and the revolutionary sections of the peasantry makes it impossible for the imperialist powers to carry out successfully the original scheme of recognizing a Chinese government composed of capitalist and middle class elements which was ready to compromise with imperialism. While still speaking hopefully of the possibility of a right wing crystallizing around Chang Kai Shek, sufficiently powerful to check the rise of the workers and peasants, it is also evident that even the press correspondents, when they express concern over the permeation of the rank and file of the army by Communist and left wing elements, are in fact extremely doubtful of the possibility of a serious split of the kind desired.

But all these currents and counter-currents finally flow into a whirlpool of imperialist intrigue where ultimately they will join and rush in one direction—against the Chinese masses, their revolution and against the workers' and peasants' government of the Soviet Union. Every imperialist power is an enemy of China. They are divided only on the method by which they can defeat and then plunder the Chinese masses.

It is the duty of the American working class to paralyse by every means possible the arms of the American ruling class. While the imperialists quarrel among themselves the workers and farmers can unite their forces to stop the war on their brothers in China, a war which, if it gains but little more impetus, will engulf the world's working class in its own blood.

Withdraw all battleships and troops from China! Recognize the People's government of China!

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE
Article I.

AMERICAN and British imperialism, with the attitude of Japan as yet uncertain, have turned in fury upon the Chinese national liberation movement.

From extreme provocation in the press the imperialist forces have rapidly moved toward open aggression and unfortified Chinese cities like Nanking have already been bombarded contrary to the accepted rules of warfare made by the imperialists themselves.

From a tone of paternal concern the American state department changed to bitter hostility and all available naval forces have been rushed to China.

WHAT caused this sudden change of policy which amounted to acceptance of the hostile British tary attitude and which allies the United States and Great Britain, and Japan to a certain extent, in war upon the Chinese liberation movement?

The antagonisms between Great Britain, Japan and the United States growing out of the struggle for the plundering of China are as keen as they ever were—keener in fact, for the victory of the People's armies and the consolidation of the People's Government narrows the possibilities for loot and intensifies the rivalries among the imperialist nations. Neither is the cause of the joint hostility of the imperialist powers to be found in the alleged threat to the lives of their nationals. Only the most naive persons believe that the United States sends some thirty warships to protect the lives of American citizens. As a matter of fact the show of military and naval forces has not operated to secure better treatment for Chinese. On the contrary, Like the recent press dispatches from Shanghai, the display of imperialist forces since the capture of Shanghai by the Chinese nationalists became a certainty is seen in the light of subsequent events to have been part of a deliberate policy of provocation.

THE cause for the change in American policy is to be found in the direction taken by the Chinese national liberation movement toward the establishment of a non-capitalist form of government in which are to be found representatives of the revolutionary masses and upon which the trade unions, the peasant organizations and the Chinese Communist Party representing the most conscious section of the working population exercise tremendous influence.

That the mass movement in China was outgrowing the confines of the nationalist struggle, that it had set for itself objectives which if obtained meant the beginning of the end of all forms of plundering of the Chinese masses has been apparent for some time. Ever since the fall of Wuchang and Hankow it has been plain that the Chinese labor movement would no longer permit its aims to be limited by the needs of the middle class nationalists.

WHATEVER differences of opinion have developed within the Kuomintang have centered around this one question i. e. where the control of the liberation movement is to be held—in the hands of the revolutionary workers, students and peasants or in the hands of the small business men, manufacturers, merchants, etc.

The imperialist press has interpreted these differences over policy in various ways. Sometimes it has said that the expulsion of Soviet Russian advisers was the bone of contention, sometimes it has stated that the matter at issue was the membership of Communists in the Kuomintang, sometimes it has pictured the disputes as merely a struggle between "moderate" and "extremist" sections. But always the real basis of the struggle has been that of the role of the working masses in the liberation movement and if the middle class elements have at times made the issue one of Communist affiliation or of orientation toward the Soviet Union it has been because in these two issues the fundamental difference on policy found expression.

THE rise of the Chinese trade union movement is the most significant and instructive phenomenon in the whole struggle of the Chinese people against imperialism and it is because capitalism appears in China primarily as imperialism that the labor movement has from the very first taken on a revolutionary character.

The theses of the second congress of the Communist International on the national and colonial question state:

"Foreign domination has obstructed the free development of the social forces therefore, its overthrow is the first step towards a revolution in the colonies. So to help overthrow the foreign rule in the colonies is not to endorse the nationalist aspirations of the native bourgeoisie, but to open the way to the smothered proletariat there."

THE nationalist revolution in China has indeed opened "the way to the smothered proletariat." It is the effectiveness with which the Chinese labor movement led by the Chinese Communist Party and the left wing of the Kuomintang has taken advantage of the opportunities presented by the struggle against imperialism that has caused the United States government to adopt a firmer policy. The general interests of world imperialism are becoming paramount in the face of a Chinese-working class and peasantry that drives toward a workers' and peasants' government.

Predominatly a peasant country (about nine-tenths of the population gaining its living directly from the soil) the Chinese revolution can be successful only if led by a party which organizes and liberates the peasantry, cements the alliance between the young but rapidly growing labor movement and the working rural population with the labor movement in the lead.

IN addition to the differences over the role of the labor movement in the revolution the struggle in the Kuomingtang between left and right wings over the question of the attitude to and role of the peasantry was of a major importance.

The recent conference of the Kuomingtang in Canton resulted in a victory for the left wing position and the adoption of a program designed to correct the mistakes—and worse of the right wing in respect to the labor movement and peasant questions.

THE right wing proposal to relieve the military leaders of political supervision was also defeated. The head of the Canton Central Labor Council was brought into the central executive committee of the Kuomingtang and the general hang Kai Shek in a public statement affirmed his decision to carry out the decisions of the conference and his loyalty to the decisions of Sun Yat Sen.

The imperialist press, up to the time the results of the conference were made public, was showing great friendliness for Chang Kai Shek and the grouping in the Kuomingtang that he represented—sections of the intelligentsia, merchants, traders, small bankers, well-to-do peasants, small landlords, etc.

Ruthenberg, The Fighter

The Passing of an American Pioneer

(Reprinted from the April Number of The Labor Defender)

By JAMES P. CANNON

The great outpouring of the masses for the memorial meetings bears testimony to the fact that the image of Ruthenberg is lightly fixed already today. It is quite probable that much greater honor will be given to Ruthenberg in the future. For Ruthenberg was a pioneer in the great social movement which has the future on its side, and history deals generously with pioneers.

Most of us who had the opportunity of working hand in hand with Comrade Ruthenberg through the many stormy years can pay an unprejudging tribute to those personal qualities which made him such an outstanding figure in the ranks of the American revolutionaries. He was steeled and strengthened by every test imposed upon him and remained a dauntless, unwavering fighter to the end. He died at his post in the prime of his powers, as befits a soldier.

Stand in Pride

We will not deny the shock of grief that his untimely death brought to every one of us, but just the same we could stand at his funeral with heads uplifted in pride that this man, who embodied so many of the highest qualities of scholar mankind, belonged to us.

We honor Ruthenberg for his long and valiant revolutionary record. I first met him in 1912 when he came to Akron to speak to the striking rubber workers. He was already then a prominent figure in the Socialist Party and his speech had the ring of militancy which denotes the irreconcilable enemy of capitalism. We sized him up then as a fighter and later knowledge of his character, born of the closest association in common work, only strengthened and confirmed the first impression and estimate. He was a fighter." These words came spontaneously to the lips of his comrades-in-arms in the first moment we heard of his passing. What tribute can be higher?

Serious Revolutionist

He was no fly-by-night dabbler with the idea of revolution. His record goes back for many years. The proletarian revolutionaries who fought on the side of Haywood remember with gratitude his support in the great battle which came to a climax in 1912. A consistent advocate of political action, he, nevertheless, was in those days fought against the current of reformist corruption in the Socialist Party and interpreted "politics" in the proletarian and revolutionary sense.

Fought the War

He fought the capitalist war. He carried the St. Louis Resolution against it into the public streets of Cleveland and attempted to organize the labor masses around it. The most prized picture of him which adorns this page is of Ruthenberg, the fighter in action, speaking against the war on the Public Square of Cleveland. He paid the price for his courage with a year's imprisonment in the Canton Workhouse, that same workhouse wherein whose shadow Debs made his historic speech. Ruthenberg, Wagenknecht and Baker, prisoners there at the time, drew the inspiration of that speech which rang 'round the world.

With Left Wing

On his release from prison, Ruthenberg identified himself with the Left Wing of the Socialist Party which was taking shape under the influence of the Russian revolution. He was the only one of the nationally prominent leaders of the Party to come with the Left Wing and remain consistently through all the vicissitudes of the struggle. He was a follower of the Communist International since the first day its banner was raised. His vision of a great revolutionary organization on an international scale unbowed by workers who languish in the prison hells of the masters. He was an enthusiastic supporter of the work of the I. L. D. in helping and defending persecuted workers regardless of their views or affiliations.

Those who knew him best knew him as, above all, a Party Man. He was all for the party. He regarded the revolutionary party of the workers as the highest instrument history creates for the liberation of the enslaved masses of the world. He attached the greatest significance to every action or decision of the party and set an example of discipline and responsibility in all his work.

Tireless Worker

He was a tireless worker for the party. His great energies were given unsparingly to its service. In the highest sense of the word it can be said he lived for the party. Yes, and died for it too. Far if he had spared himself a little and devoted even the minimum attention to his own health, there is no doubt that the fatal illness could have been warded off.

Ruthenberg was a soldier. He saw the cause for which he labored as a fighter to which one must bring the discipline and devotion of an army that never knows retreat. He was a fighter who had faith in his cause. He staked his hend on that cause and gave his life for it.

The America of today reeks with cynicism and corruption. The American of energy and talent are in the service of the oppressors. America is money-mad. Brains and ability are bought and sold—nothing is given away. Those who see higher values than personal material gain are regarded as fools in our insane American world. Such is the hallmark of our country.

Had Social Vision

Ruthenberg was an American who did not go that way. Money-mongering to him and the "success" which capitalism holds up before its lackeys meant even less. It was a mean, sordid thing to him. He was a fighter and the degraded state of the country and the suppressed misery of the oppressed meant he gave all his energies and talents without calculation or price. He lived a full and fruitful life of struggle and sacrifice for an imperishable ideal and died a soldier's death.

The America of today had no time for Ruthenberg. For this splendid character, this valiant soldier of the revolution, the masters of America had no praise. They covered him ignominiy. They hounded him from one prison to another. At the time of his death the Honorable Judges of the Supreme Court had his latest conviction under review. Capitalist America made Ruthenberg an outlaw and a convict.

Workers Knew Him

The American of Tomorrow will revise that judgment. That is already indicated by the attitude of the militant workers who are the vanguard of the future. Ruthenberg was a Pioneer who broke a new path. The Americans of tomorrow will travel that path and give their highest honors to the Pioneers who broke it. The name of Ruthenberg will have a distinguished place in the list

A Play About "Superior People"

"Mariners" Has Condescending Pity for the "Lower Class"

Reviewed By HARBOR ALLEN.

"Mariners," by Clemence Dane, which the Actars Theatre has produced with Pauline Lord at the Plymouth, is a windbag of a play written by a snob. It is ready to burst with a sense of its own importance. It is all blown up with "atmosphere." You can see the author licking her chops over her "fine old English home" and the fine old people in it and their fine old guests. She gnawn maudlin about her minister, himself a product of Oxford and the upper classes, naw miserably married to the daughter af an inn keeper. Terrible, this Shepherd of the Lord's elite, tied irrevocably to an ignoss a woman. See how she drags him down, ruins him, raba him of the woman who would be his equal, abuses him, kills him. Such are the lower classes!

Still Superior People.

But you can't be such a snab nowadays. It doesn't pay. So you must have a last act in which the gross woman repents, dies of grief on her husband's grave. You must have a scene in which your superior people in their fine old English home pause for n moment to comment on her fidelity, as they would praire a dog who grieved for his master. Yes, they feel sorry that they never went to see her, that they shut her out of their circle. But never for a moment do they doubt that they are superior dogs.

Perhaps I am unjust to Clemence Dane. No doubt she is trying to be "fair to both sides"—the old liberal bokum. But all the liberals, she fails. You can't be fair to both sides. You are, by birth and environment and desire and associations, either on one side or the other. Clemence Dane is on the other. At times she tries honestly to feel her way into the heart of the inn-keeper's daughter. She can't. She never gets farther than condescending pity. At bottom she's with the fine people in the fine old English home.

Civil Liberties Union Call for Workers

The Civil Liberties Union has issued a call for workers to fill the gap.

The work that Ruthenberg performed with such fidelity in his life time remains behind him. His example of courage, devotion and self-sacrifice stands as an asset of the movement as a whole. His tradition as a revolutionary fighter will be treasured by every section of the militant labor movement. The new generation of militants will be influenced by that tradition and will carefully safeguard it.

Let the current and dewaying capitalist society have those heroes who admire it—the dollar-chasing executives, the bloody-smeared generals, the lying, treacherous statesmen, our movement, which is the herald of the new order, claims proudly for its own the men of a different and immeasurably better type: the type of Ruthenberg.

HEARING TODAY FOR ARRESTED KULOK PICKETS

Labor Defense Appears In Two Strike Cases

The International Labor Defense of New York was called upon for help once again on Saturday when three workers, picketing the shop of M. Kulok at 29 Eldridge street, were arrested without cause and taken to the Clinton and Delancey street police station.

Those arrested were M. Levinson, N. Steinberg and Lizzie Podolsky. They were peacefully picketing the Kulok shop which came out on strike several weeks ago when several workers were fined, and one was taken off the job by the reactionary leaders of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, for attending a meeting of left wing needle trades workers.

Continue Striking.

One set of workers after another has struck in this shop because of this discrimination against their fellow workers, and the right wing forces of the Amalgamated have filled the shop with scab workers.

The three workers arrested on Saturday, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, were released on $500 bail each, for hearing this morning.

Defend Rose Pesnick.

On Saturday morning, the International Labor Defense appeared in the West 8th street court, Coney Island, to defend Rose Pesnick who was arrested while picketing one of the Monticello Dairy stores against which 600 clerks are on strike in Brooklyn.

Wanted 37-Hour Week.

After considerable effort on the part of the prosecution to send Rose Pesnick to the workhouse for her "crime" of picketing, she was finally given a fine of $10.

She and her fellow-strikers are fighting for recognition of their union, and for a 37-hour week in place of the 80 to 100-hour week which most of them now work.

PLAN GREAT BAZAAR FOR CLOAKMAKERS' DEFENSE; OUT OF TOWN CAMPAIGN OPENS

Preparations are now being made for the Joint Defense Bazaar to be held at the Star Casino on May 12, 13, 14 and 15.

A call has been sent out to the many friends of the defense requesting donations of articles for the affair. The committee is especially interested in shoes, dresses, caps, raincoats, hats, suitcases, bags, all sorts of men's and women's wear, vamping outfits, sweaters and hammocks.

Workers in the shops are called upon to organize committees to manufacture merchandise for the Bazaar.

Get Your Clothes Here.

It is planned to make this affair a great merchandising event. The hall will resemble a department store rather than a bazaar. The doors will be opened daily at 1 P. M. to those wishing to price merchandise. The ladies dress department will be situated in the rest room behind the balcony. There will be a men's straw hat department to open the season, etc., etc.

Every worker must plunge into the defense work to raise money for the defense and relief of the families of the prisoners.

Green, Woll, McGrady and Sigman are also appealing for money. They must have it for injunctions, to hire bands of gangsters to make war on the workers in the markets, and to pay for the persecutions thru which workers are thrown into jail.

To Fight Black Hundreds

The Black Hundreds are making their last effort to break the union and suppress every independent expression. They will get help from the bosses and other enemies of the workers.

Once for all we must teach the Blackhirts a lesson that they will never forget. They are a danger to the labor movement that must be wiped out. A strong defense protecting the workers when in need, is the rock on which the ship of the enemy will be wrecked.

Nothing must be left undone to make the Great Defense Bazaar such a tremendous success that in itself it will prove a gigantic protest against the union smashing bureaucracy.

Boston workers will be represented at the bazaar, it is reported, and other cities are asked to follow their example and arrange to have a booth.

Join hands with the defense. Help is needed now. Write or come to the office at 41 Union Square, Room 714, and find out what you can do to help.

Drive Starts.

A mass meeting of over 1,500 workers opened the out-of-town campaign for the New York Cloakmakers and Furriers Defense Fund on Wednesday night, when Louis Hyman, general manager of the New York Joint Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers, and Ben Gold, general manager of the New York Joint Board Furriers Union were the principal speakers.

More than five hundred dollars was received in the collection at the meeting, and the workers present pledged themselves to start an energetic drive for collections in shops and factories.

This Defense Fund is caring for the families of those in jail, and is employing legal aid to work for the release of those for workers and cloakmakers who have been penalized for their loyalty to the union during strikes.

Stage Fiesta.

On the appeal of the Defense Committee to various organizations, a group of members of Branch 35 of the Workmen's Circle have decided to help in the defense work.

They have engaged the New Playwrights' Theatre at 52nd Street & 8th Ave. for a showing on April 8th, of Michael Gold's new play "Fiesta." The income of this performance will go for the defense and relief of imprisoned cloakmakers and furriers. We ask other organizations to follow their example.

LOCKOUT TO ADD TO NUMBERS IN PLUMBER STRIKE

Employers and Workers Hold Meetings Tonight

The plumbers and plumbers helpers strike is increasing in importance, and either thru strike or lockout may become general thruout Greater New York by tomorrow.

The 3,600 plumbers and helpers who are out in Brooklyn will be joined soon by other thousands of men in the trade if the Master Plumbers' Association at its meeting tonight at the headquarters of the Brooklyn Masters' Association, 8 Nevins St., agrees to a general lock-out.

According to Jacob Stockinger Jr., head of the Queens Masters' Association, the plumbers of Queens are locked out, and will not be allowed to start work when they report this morning.

A meeting of the striking plumbers will be held tonight at Lenruth Hall 157 Waverly Ave., Brooklyn, while the helpers will hold a session at the Church of All Nations, 9 Second Ave.

Break In Bosses Ranks.

Thirty of the 100 members of the Master Plumbers' Association, of Brooklyn, employers of members of Local Union 1, Plumbers' Union, indicated yesterday their desire to settle differences with the plumbers, it became known at union headquarters. Lenruth Hall, Waverly and Myrtle avenues, Brooklyn, yesterday.

Thomas G. Oates, president of the union, declared that the plumbers are not ready to make any agreement with these men, until all the master plumbers consent to the $14 a day wage scale which the plumbers are now striking for an increase of $2 a day. The union is also asking a 40 hours a week, or five days a week instead of the 44 hour week, now in vogue.

Fight To The Finish.

"We will fight to the finish," Oates declared yesterday.

It was said at union headquarters that the master plumbers of Greater New York, are planning a general lockout of all union men employed by them throughout the five boroughs. Such action would throw 15,000 plumbers and helpers out of work, and would practically bring to a standstill all building operations in the five boroughs. At the offices of Brooklyn of the Master Plumbers' Association, 8 Nevins street, no official would discuss that.

SHELLING OF NANKING WILL BE PROTESTED AT A MASS MEETING FRIDAY, APRIL EIGHTH

To protest against the gunboat policy of the United States towards the Chinese Nationalist revolution, a mass meeting will be held Friday evening, April 8, at the Capitol Opera House under the auspices of the Hands Off China Committee, a delegated body representing trade unions, nationalist societies, labor fraternal organizations, political parties, etc.

All over the United States indignation against the attempt of the American government to suppress the Chinese revolution is heard.

Demonstrations Held.

In Philadelphia, Boston and elsewhere parades and monster demonstrations have already been held where in no uncertain terms the sympathy of the American masses for their struggling brothers and sisters in China was expressed.

In New York, largest city of the west coast of Wall St., where rule those responsible for the brutal murder of over 7,000 Chinese, men, women and children in a manner that matches the horrors of Hun terrors that was manufactured in 1917 against Germany, a mighty protest from the working masses is planned.

The meeting that will be held Friday, April 8 must speak in such a loud voice that the Chinese workers who are today in the shadow of the guns of our Imperialists at Shanghai will know that these are not representatives of American workers that their murdering of the Chinese canvers is opposed by the American working class. All workers must be present and join in the demonstration of protest.

List of Speakers.

The following speakers will address the meeting: Samuel Sha, The Kouminatang; S. N. Ghose, India Freedom Foundation; Richard B. Moore, American Negro Labor Congress; William F. Dunne, Workers (Communist) Party; Carl Weisberg, Liberal Club, C. N. Y.; Robert W. Dunn will preside. Others will be announced later.

Rosalsky Plays With Case of Antonofsky

says he was attacked, Wertums was sick in bed and Antonofsky was working in the shop of Meyer Hausser, 85 West 17th street.

Judge Wouldn't Listen.

When Antonofsky reported as usual to Judge Rosalsky early last week, the judge said, "Aha, you have been getting into trouble again; well back you go to jail." Without listening to a word of explanation, Judge Rosalsky sent him to the Tombs. He appeared in court for a hearing on Friday, and with him came his boss, Meyer Hauser, and several workers in the shop ready to testify that Antonofsky had been at work at the time Katz says he was attacked. Hauser even has a time card to prove his statement.

Postpone Case.

But Judge Rosalsky, knowing that the boss and the workers had come especially to help release Antonofsky, did not hear the case and postponed it again until April 8th. For a whole week longer Antonofsky is doomed to sit in the Tombs awaiting the pleasure of this notorious anti-Semitic anti-labor judge. The workers cannot keep on losing a day's work coming to court to testify; the boss will not repeatedly appear and waste his whole day trying to help Antonofsky. Judge Rosalsky knows this, and perhaps it accounts for his postponement system.

Sigman Behind Rosalsky.

It is reliably reported that this action of the judge is contrary to the recommendation of the probation officer who wants Antonofsky given a hearing and released. Judge Rosalsky is evidently determined to try to break down the morale of this innocent worker. Perhaps Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union has his eye on him because he has refused to make one of those frame-up confessions against the Joint Board leaders.

PROGRESSIVE FUR WORKERS SHOW UP ANOTHER REACTIONARY CHIEF

Another "Honorable Member" of the gang which supports the right wing reactionary officials of the International Fur Workers Union and the Special Reorganization Committee of the A. F. of L., was exposed to the fur workers on Saturday in a circular distributed in the fur market.

What Strike Aid.

The chairman of the "Furriers Reorganization Committee," H. Schlissel, is the subject of the leaflet which asks the question:

What did "Brother" Schlissel do during the 1926 strike? "Brother" Schlissel has undertaken to break the fur workers from the Communist dictatorship."

This man, "Brother" Schlissel, with Big Alex Fried, is another chief of the Long Island International scab "union." This new leader of the infamous Kaufman Old Guard proclaims himself the new Messiah of the Furriers Union.

Where has this Saint Schlissel been for the last ten years? He has not belonged to the Union; he has not paid any dues.

Where was "Brother" Schlissel during the 1920 strike? Why doesn't "Brother" Schlissel tell the fur workers that he did a little scabbing during a great part of the strike, under the excuse of being a foreman for the firm where he scabbed?

Did Schlissel have a union shop when he was in business?

Where was "Brother" Schlissel during our recent 1926 strike, when the fur workers had bled and hungered for seventeen weeks? What did "Brother" Schlissel do while the fur workers were striking and suffering?

Scabs, jailbirds, underworld heroes, these are the representatives of the new scab union of Schachtman, Winick, Matthew Woll, McGrady and Green.

What a pretty face this outfit of so called labor leaders has in the company of their "Honorable" associates!

These are the people who speak to the fur workers in the name of the best traditions of the American Federation of Labor—honesty, purity, and law and order. These are the people who call upon the fur workers to register with their scabbing crew.

WHAT HAVE THE FUR WORKERS TO SAY TO THIS SPECTACLE?

Joint Board Furriers Union,
B. Gold, Manager.

Banquet For Released.

In honor of the three fur workers who were released yesterday after serving sixty days following their arrest and conviction for their strike activities, a banquet was given by the fur workers in New Star Casino last night and several hundred workers were present to celebrate.

The workers who spent the past two months on Rikers Island are Max Forsky, Jack Pollack and A. Saches, and they were greeted enthusiastically by those who attended the banquet.

New York Socialists Ask "Hands Off China"

Withdrawal of American troops and ships from China, and the cessation of firing on Chinese cities was demanded in a resolution adopted on Saturday at a New York City convention of the socialist party.

The meeting also passed a resolution condemning the arrest and trial by court martial of sixty socialists in Lithuania, with accusations of their dispatches are facing the death penalty for their political activities.

ormous expense and trouble in fighting out the case which was now so badly prejudiced against them, they determined, under the circumstances, that the best way to settle the matter would be to plead guilty. The story of how they were double-crossed and given heavy sentences is now too well known to be repeated.

"The whole incident served to prejudice the cases of all the other defendants, which resulted in the wholesale jailing of men of a type which every community seeks to attract to itself.

"The next step for Sigman was to make capital out of the situation. To him it was of no importance that these workers carried responsibility for the support of families. He deluded himself into the belief that he saw in the situation created by him a new opportunity to smash the union.

"By shouting loud and long he hoped to create the impression that the chosen leaders of the workers were responsible for the heavy sentences dealt out to the workers. By this tactic he hoped to create confusion in the ranks of the left.

Desperate Acts.

"The Committee realizes that these are acts of desperation carried out by a most unscrupulous man.

"In his controversy with the group of prominent gentlemen of the Civil Liberties Union who had joined the Committee of One Hundred, formed for the purpose of affecting the release of the imprisoned cloakmakers and furriers and giving relief to their families, Mr. Sigman did not hesitate in an early statement to tell the gentlemen to "keep their hands off," as the imprisoned workers were members of his union, which could take care of its own; while shortly thereafter he issued another statement that these men had pleaded guilty and nothing could be done for them.

Save The Innocent.

"The Joint Boards of the Furriers, and the Cloak and Dressmakers, are well able to take care of themselves in the struggle to save the union. In this crisis the Innocent must not be permitted to suffer. We demand their release. We ask for help in carrying on the legal struggle to overthrow the brutal prison sentence that have been meted out. We ask for help to furnish relief to the families of the victims of the conspiracy hatched by Sigman, Woll, Green, McGrady and Company."

Money is needed. Send contributions and donations to the Joint Defense and Relief Committee, Cloakmakers and Furriers, 41 Union Square, Room 714.

TEACHERS' UNION RAPS DISMISSAL OF N. Y. TEACHER

A demand that the Board of Education make an immediate investigation into the actual reasons for the dismissal of Charles A. Wagner, who lost his position at the Berriman Junior High School, Brooklyn, last week, because he taught evolution to his class, was made yesterday by the Teachers' Union.

In a letter to the board, Dr. Henry R. Linville, president of the union, asserted that "after a preliminary study of the case of Mr. Wagner we find that full and fair consideration seems not to have been given to the protection of his rights."

Dr. Linville, while admitting the technical validity of the right of a principal to discharge a substitute teacher at will, nevertheless asserted that it was "unfair to make the public statements reflecting on the capacity of a teacher which will have the effect of making impossible his further employment."

In his letter to the board of education, Dr. Linville quoted statements from prominent educators, including Prof. John Dewey, of Columbia and Charles A. Beard of the New School for Social Research, who declared that the doctrine of evolution is now accepted by the leading scientists who have devoted their lives to the study of biology.

In his statement, Dewey says: "From experience, I know that young children have no difficulty in grasping the general idea of life development. It is so important that the younger they are when they are acquainted with it the better, if they get the idea. Children from ten to twelve should have no trouble with it."

In commenting on the case Prof. Beard declared: "If it is the business of the public schools to prepare the pupils for a life of intelligence among intelligent people, then how can they refuse to explain in scientific and dispassionate manner a doctrine which is so widely believed and discussed."

There Was Significance In the Fact That 22,000 Attended "Freiheit" Jubilee

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE FREIHEIT, our Jewish Communist daily, attracted 22,000 workers to the New Madison Square Garden in celebration of its Fifth Anniversary last Saturday night.

This is the greatest throng of workers ever assembled in the United States at the call of a revolutionary publication of the American working class. Of course, the reactionary organs of labor never ottempt such gatherings on any scale. It remained for an organ of Communism and the left wing in the labor movement to fill the largest auditorium in the land.

This gathering had tremendous significance. It was testimony to the fact that not only The Freiheit, but our Workers (Communist) Party as well, have become the leaders of the masses in the needle trades.

For several years The Freiheit struggled desperately and it was unable to total a circulation in the whole nation equalling the numbers in the mighty throng that joined in celebration of its Fifth Anniversary. Those 22,000 workers constitute the firm base that The Freiheit has established for itself in New York City, strengthening it for greater efforts in other sections of the land, according to plans already made and to be executed immediately.

The most vicious attacks by the reactionary labor officialdom have not succeeded in alienating the workers from their support of Our Paper and Our Party. President William Green and Vice President Matthew Woll, with the lackeys in the needle trades,—the Sigmans, the Schachtmans and the rest—might well pause to consider the meaning of this outpouring of labor in New York and vicinity in support of the Press and the Party that they so vehemently denounce.

If these agents of American imperialism had followed the proceedings at the Freiheit Jubilee, they would have heard the appeals made to these workers, and their enthusiastic response to those pleas, which were as follows:

1. To build The DAILY WORKER, the official organ of the Workers (Communist) Party, published in the English language.

2. To rally in aid of the Ruthenberg Enrollment Drive, not only by joining the Workers (Communist) Party, but by getting other workers to join the party and strengthen its ranks.

3. To stand solid as adamant as the left wing in the needle trades, and to give every possible support to the militant workers in all other industries, to the coal miners now engaged in a giant struggle, to the railroad workers, the steel workers, the automobile workers, the rubber workers as well as labor in the other great industries.

4. To render every possible support to the struggle against imperialism in Nicaragua, in Mexico, and in China, especially speeding the fraternal greetings of the gathering to the Central Council of the Chinese Trade Unions, to the Kuomintang and to the Communist Party of China.

Thus New York labor, not only declared its solidarity with the workers thruout the land, but voiced their will to battle with those oppressed by American imperialism, cementing their strength in a closer bond of fraternity with the valiant efforts of the Chinese workers on the other side of the earth.

When 22,000 workers go back into their shops and into their union meetings, they should be inspired to create here seething centers of sympathy in support of the Far East from of the revolutionary struggle of labor.

It is recognized that the working class in the United States is probably less responsive to the rapidly developing events in the Orient, than the workers of any other nation. Encouraging gatherings under the slogans of "Hands Off China!" "Withdraw' the Battleships From Chinese Waters!" have already been held, in many cities, in response to the appeal of Our Party, or thru co-operation of our Party with other forces. That the movement is growing, however, is well indicated by the fact that the 22,000 workers gathered in New York to celebrate the growth and spreading of influence of the Freiheit, should also be profoundly stirred by China's revolutionary struggle.

The standards of The DAILY WORKER were held aloft by practically every speaker. The prophecy was generally made that the time would soon come when The DAILY WORKER would be able to hold its anniversary celebration in the Madison Square Garden and attract similar hosts of labor.

Not only Jay Lovestone, Acting General Secretary of Our Party, Ben Gitlow and M. J. Olgin, but other speakers as well aroused great enthusiasm by calling for every possible support of the Party's Official Organ that was now being published in New York City.

Like the Freiheit the Party has grown in New York City. When The Freiheit was established the Workers (Communist) Party was only a few months old. There was considerable skepticism, in the early months of 1922, whether the Communist movement, driven underground by the Palmer raids in 1020, could function successfully in the open. In those days speakers appealed seldom for Party members at the mass meetings that were held. One speaker that never failed to make this appeal, however, was our late leader, C. E. Ruthenberg.

It was fitting, therefore, that applause in thunder tones should greet the plea for "Members for the Workers (Communist) Party!" in the Ruthenberg Enrollment Drive. The Party has become a living, fighting giant in the eyes of these workers. Its leadership is treasured.

It has been said that great masses of workers have been driven to The Freiheit as a result of the growing hatred of the workers for The Forward, the yellow socialist organ of reformism, edited by Abraham Cahan. This is held up as an argument that these workers are not yet Communists, not yet ready for membership in the Communist Party, and that some turn of the tide may cause them to again drift from us.

But hatred of The Forward as the traitor organ of Socialism, is the beginning of an awakening that will gradually lead to a correct understanding of the Communist program, and make of these workers intelligent soldiers of the social revolution.

Before the workers generally over the land will become convinced Communists, they must develop a hatred of capitalism and all its forces, much akin to the hatred of the New York needle trades workers for The Forward, for Cahan and Sigman, and for the social system that spawned them.

The Fifth Freiheit Jubilee was historic. The Freiheit, in common with the American Communist movement and the American working class from which it springs, faces its Sixth Year with more history in the making. Hail the Sixth Year of the Freiheit! Hail greater victories for Communism in the United States of America.

Who Backs Murder of Cuban Workers Under Machado?

By ROBERT DUNN, (Federated Press).

(Robert Dunn is the author of American Foreign Investments, standard work on the subject, published by the Viking Press, New York.)

Who are the American business men behind the Machado murder regime in Cuba? Between 280 and 400 Cuban workers and trade union leaders have been killed in the last year. Hundreds have been imprisoned and tortured since the railroad strike was crushed in 1925. Scores have been deported.

It may be well to have the names of some of the capitalistic corporations who back Gerardo Machado, the presidential dictator and virtual assassin.

First the Bankers.

Start with the bankers. Dwight Morrow, confidential advisor of President Coolidge, and a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. has offered toasts to Machado nt banquets of business men; he has assisted Major General Crowder dictate loan laws and revenue measures for the island.

National City Bank has handled most of the loans to American sugar corporations doing business in Cuba. It has 24 branches in the Island and is the largest of the three American banks which, with three Canadian banks, control 90% of all the banking in Cuba. National City Bank finances the leading sugar companies which dominate the economic life of the country. Some of the chief sugar corporations are Cuba Cane Sugar, the Punta Alegre Sugar Co., and the Cuban Dominican Sugar Co. Seventy-five percent of Cuban sugar, constituting 90% of her entire exports, is produced in American owned mills, most of them controlled by American bankers.

General Electric Has Them.

Public utilities in the cities are all controlled by the American & Foreign Power Co., identified with the General Electric Co. All Cuban holdings of General Electric are operated by this company.

Railroads, serving the sugar centrals, are also in American hands. It was on them that the strike, which opened the Machado trade union massacres, began. Seventeen railroad union leaders were imprisoned; 4 were slain. Consolidated Railroads of Cuba leads. The Cuba Railroad, one of the consolidated units alone represents an investment of about $100 million including the sugar properties. Some of the leading figures in the Consolidated are F. J. Berwind, also president of our great anti-union Berwind White Coal Co., which crushed the United Mine Workers in 1922; W. H. Woodin, president of American Car and Foundry Co.; Percy A. Rockefeller; C. H. Walker of Harriman & Co.; H. C. Lakin of the Long Island Railroad; W. V. Griffin, president Agrilin Chemical Corp. and H. S. Rubens of the U. S. Industrial Alcohol Co.

Other American corporations with large Cuban properties are Bethlehem Steel Corp., the American Tobacco Co., the Standard Oil Co., the International Telegraph and Telephone Co., the American Metal Co., United Fruit Co., and a large number of shipping, transit, dock and terminal companies. The total American investment in Cuba is estimated at about a billion and a half dollars. At least a fifth of the soil of Cuba is owned by Americans.

Elected Machado.

According to Dr. Leland H. Jenks, formerly of Amherst College, who has completed a special study of American investments in Cuba, "American corporations doing business in Cuba contributed heavily to the Machado campaign funds." Machado has been their friend and agent since the day of his election. They have backed his program to deport and do to death the "undesirable elements" as Machado calls the trade union workers.

Along with this policy of blood and iron against the unions has gone some "welfare work" for the non-union workers. Various housing and recreationnl facilities have been provided for the enslaved workers much as in India or in Illinois. The Hershey Chocolate Co., controlling extensive sugar centrals and railroads have even attempted to introduce the "company union" among their employees. Like Rockefeller and other American practitioners of "Employe representation" they know how to combine the militn and cold steel with housing programs and personnel management.

In a Shoe Factory

A young Italian worker speaking:

The only trouble with my job is that I can't get fired. I swore at the boss last week when he wanted to charge me up for them damaged shoes. Last nite the boss told me to work a little later. Like hell. I went home half an hour before five. That boss hates me like poison. Why the hell don't he fire me?

This afternoon the boss come around and says, 'A little speed, there! Wake up, you can make $30 a week if you hustle.'

He's good. He wants me to make a lot of money. Supposing I don't want to? I don't want to, that's all; I don't want to make a lot of money.

I know that game, it's old stuff. When I worked in the Flood, I went to cut back stairs. The boss would pick them up and pack them in a box, about a thousand in a box. When he had plenty, enuf to last all summer, he lays ma off. See, he don't fire me, he just lays me off. I know that lay-off, too. Try and get the job back. I know a fellow been laid off for three years and he can't get the job yet.

Say, got a light? Thanks. See that pile of leather? Christ, some day it will burn. Let it burn, burn down; who cares?

Oh the boss! The boss, he's a good fellow. He put in light's over every table, so we can work overtime. Work till eight and nine o'clock at night. Sure. I know a factory where they work Sundays.

Hil! John was working last nite till nine o'clock. Money! Who wants to work till nine o'clock? Who the hell wants to work anyway? Christ, I don't know. That guy must be in love with his job. He must like this place. Maybe he sleeps here. All right. Get a pile of soft leather, you can sleep fine. Have you got a better bed to sleep on anyway? What's that, you don't sleep here nights, John? I didn't mean it. I was only kidding.

Don't worry. I know we're all going to get laid off soon, because the boss is telling us to speed up. Summertime coming, who the hell wants to work? Go swimming; the boss, he's with his job. He must like this a little vacation, a long vacation; oh, just a vacation, you know: vacation. In the good old summer time.

IN THE SUBWAY

By C. M. (Ex-Subway Guard)

It was during the year of 1918 that I entered the service of the Interborough Rapid Transit Co. as a guard. Labor being scarce then on account of war conditions I was given the job without many formalities. After having filled a number of application blanks and other impressive documents, and having passed the medical examination, I was told to report for work the next day at the Bronx Park division.

When I reported for work I was placed in a train with a veteran conductor who showed me how to operate the trains. There was nothing to it but open and close the doors. You see, very easy job! Thus I started my underground work which lasted for seven long years.

Worse Than Slavery.

That job was worse than slavery. I had to be on the job 14 and sometimes 15 hours a day for nine hours' pay. Before I became a "regular" I had to wait on the extra list for 2 and 3 hours each day before I was sent out to work. Then, after making a trip or two in the morning I had to come back in the afternoon to finish my run. It was 8 or 9 o'clock in the evening before I was able to go home. There was no Sunday or holiday off. After working for two months continuously I decided to take one Sunday off. I asked the "starter" for permission, but he said that it couldn't be done. I remained away that Sunday anyway. The next day when I reported for work I was told that in order to get off it was necessary to get an O. K. from the superintendent. I went to the superintendent's office on 96th St. and after waiting for two hours to see him he told me that I was suspended for two days for disobedience. I was also warned that one more suspension would be cause for my dismissal. Since that time I never stayed off again until I was assigned to a run.

Wouldn't Defend Workers.

The officers of the "brotherhood," the company union, never opened their mouths to defend a fellow-worker. The only thing they were interested in is to collect the dues each month and do their spying work in the interest of the I. R. T.

These officials are nothing but the mere tools of the company. All of them are in conspiracy, under the leadership of Jal Connolly, to keep the principles of real unionism from the workers. In 1920 the rank and file succeeded in electing a man by the name of Green from the Bronx Park division. This man opposed the installation of the new "rubberbellies" (the one-man trains) because he believed that it would throw many men out of work. The company fired him without a hearing, and when he asked the "delegates" of the brotherhood to bring his case before the meeting they ignored him.

Workers Hate "Brotherhood."

The workers on the I. R. T. are not interested in the "brotherhood", because they all know that this is the cause of their miserable conditions. In every meeting held each month there are to be found no more than 10 or 15 attending. And during the meetings it is seldom that a member is allowed to speak about improving the conditions of the workers. They are all afraid to speak against the company for fear that they might lose their jobs. If anyone is ever bold enough to agitate for an increase in wages or improvement in the conditions of labor he is immediately quieted down by Mr. Mangan of the "brotherhood." The discussion is usually centered around plans for a "beefsteak" affair, or a visit to a sick brother.

Such are the conditions of all the subway workers, and unless they unite in a strong union under the leadership of experienced men, they will never be able to improve their miserable conditions.

The Letter-Box

Class War Prisoner Writes.

Editor, Daily Worker:—No doubt it seems rather unusual for a comrade and friend to write from the pen on the open-shop shore! And no doubt what I have to say will be of minor importance compared to letters from other fellow workers and comrades. One thing of interest to our class is the only seven class-war prisoners remain in San Quentin prison. Another is due to leave a week from today.

About the only news we get on China comes via the yellow press, but even from their censored reports one can see that the People's Army are knocking 'ell out of the capitalist tools (the northerners). Now what I offer for your perusal is something up of all the different angles of the Chinese affair; and I want to know if I've got the dope straight or have the facts been distorted in the "brass check press" that my data is erroneous.

From what I gather of the events in China, the upheaval has been 30 years or more in gathering its adherants; that the Boxer rebellion was only a temporary defeat. Sun Yat Sen is the leadership of Sun Yat Sen. Now the movement has grown to such an extent that the native capitalist saw or thought they had an opportunity to drive the foreign exploiter out and reap a golden harvest for themself! He (the native capitalist) joined the cry of "China for the Chinese!" Also he contributed to the "cause" always with the provision that he was to be a member of the governing board. But at this stage we see the work of diplomacy. His money was accepted and his election assured—but for every capitalist board member elected Labor put its representative on that same board. As long as the fighting to gain control of all China continues this board will work in harmony! This places the native exploiter bu dutch with his European and American brother-robbers! As the Cantonese win victory after victory the "bubble of China" begin to puff out his chest and endeavor to grasp tighter the reigns of control; and here his soapbubble of a dream bursts and he awakens to the sad realization that his enemies, the leadership of Sun Yat Sen, and that the talk of "the world for those who work" is beginning to be popular among those who have done the fighting! O yea, he sees his mistake—but it's too late now! His fellow-exploiter in Europe and Wall Street, U. S. A. calls him traitor! while on every side the workers see a Red Dawn!

I hope Comrade Miller's Communist Training Camps meet with success! Also in Comrade Ruthenberg's death I feel the labor movement has lost a militant worker.

The French Ambassador Wails

(By A Staff Correspondent)

Official and diplomatic circles in confidence—with much pleasure—the story of the unusual delay of the formal presentation ceremonies of the new French ambassador, M. Paul Claudel.

The episode is particularly amusing in view of the effusion of bull and blah that was expressed by the Coolidge-Kellogg administration coterie when M. Claudel. He was acclaimed as a prodigy, a poet and a diplomat.

Cash Also Counts.

Now it develops that while he may be both, nevertheless the dollar too must be served. And therein is the story.

Usually a foreign diplomate officer, particularly one representing a first class power such as France, upon taking up his post in Washington, is received by the president within a week. Only rarely is the function delayed ten days. To extend the time longer is literally an affront, and can be excused only on the ground of illness.

But That Debt.

But in M. Claudel's case, it was not illness, either on his part or Mr. Coolidge's. The trouble was that M. Claudel had "forgotten" to include in his "fallcitation address" a statement about France's willingness to pay her war debt to the United States. And so because tha statement he was to make did not contain the desired comment, M. Claudel was kept waiting at the gate until he came across.

Deliberate Spontaneity.

Presentation ceremonies are very carefully arranged affairs. The ambassador upon instructions—very explicit ones—from his government, prepares a statement which he reads to the president. The president then replies from an equally well prepared statement. The ambassador's statement naturally is first submitted to the state department for perusal and approval. When both are satisfactory they are then released to the press, with due caution that the "felicitations" were most enthusiastically presented and heartily reciprocated.

The capitalistic press of both nations then solemnly wrote long accounts of the ceremony—to which reporters are not admitted—and later follow with wordy editorials lauding the occasion as another example of the "peace and traditional fellowship between these two great nations."

And thus it was that when M. Claudel came to Washington almost three weeks ago, he immediately prepared his statement and sent it to the state department. There it was promptly discovered that he had somehow or other overlooked the fact that his nation owed the United States a very considerable sum of money, four billion dollars in fact.

This was most embarrassing, as the state department not anticipating any such problem, had arranged for an official dinner at which both the ambassador and the president were to be present. This problem was finally solved by keeping the dinner secret. Under the social usages that operate in this "democratic" capital, the president may not break bread, or even meet for that mattar, the representativa of a foreign nation until he has been formally introduced to him.

M. Claudel's "felicitations" were returned to him with the blunt demand that he revise his remarks so that they said something about French obligations to the United States. This he could have done no doubt without extended delay; but he personally could not proceed until he had been authorized by the French government.

He Admits Debt.

This apparently is what caused the delay. It was some days before M. Claudel submitted his "improved" statement. As made public when he was finally "presented" it had this to say concerning the debt:

"I am glad that I am entering upon the duties of my new post at tha moment when France has given fresh evidence of her firm intention to discharge her indebtedness and meet her just obligations".

Cesar, Likewise.

The last instance of a diplomatic officer having trouble with his hat in hand was when Alexandres Cesar, minister of the present Marine-maintaimed Diaz government in Nicaragua came to Washington around the first of the year. He proposed urging upon Coolidge the proposition that the United States establish a permanent protectorate over Nicaragua, or in other words acknowledging as a fact what it has been doing for many years. Congress was then in session and several senators, particularly Borah were eagerly scanning the horizon for something to hop the administration for in its Central-American policy.

The state department and Coolidge got cold feet and ordered Cesar to prepare another speech. This he did, but it took some time. In his case the state department explained that, "High Hat", J. Butler Wright, the official accompanier of foreign representatives when they present themselves, was out of the city. In M. Claudel's case the official mild seriously put out by the state department was that the White House calendar was filled with other engagements.

To which one member of the French embassy is said to have replied:

"No doubt with the official spokesman."

The Passing of Carl Sandburg

By JOSEPH KALAR

A YEAR ago I spent four months wandering over the streets of Chicago—the Chicago of Carl Sandburg. It had not changed. It was still the brutal, lusty, crooked, and wicked city of "Chicago Poems." It still needed its bard. In the hideous greasy room where three of us spent the evenings over our grub on a gas grate, we had a radio, a cheap rawdily crystal, set that yet ennbled me at one time to hear Carl Sandburg speak. I forgave what he said, but I think he spoke about Abraham Lincoln. Even then I felt that Carl Sandburg, the good old Carl who hurled such lusty defiance and blasphemous philippics at the fat men, was slipping. It is an ill omen when a writer turns from the brutal present and with rear-mindful eyes resurrects a fallen, if noble, giant. Look at what's happened to Van Wyck Brooks.

But that was not all. As often as my finances permitted I purchased one of the capitalistic newspapers in search of employment. I chanced to get the Chicago Daily News at the cinema page and my brief and contemptuous glance was arrested by the name of Carl Sandburg. He was reading Sally Rand a new love poem. I have ever had the misfortune to see. I expected to find the old Sandburg, a Sandburg beyond failing for the mushy nincompoop stuff that satisfies the tooth art. But no. Edgar Guest might have written that review. The Chicago Daily News could hardly afford to irritate Balaban and Katz. And a man must live. . .

Carl Sandburg is getting old. The final echoes, and Monckey, and Ezra Pound have convinced him that art is above life. Carl was too virile. The obese neurotic ladies who go in for art were at first thrilled by his blasphemy, but when he began to sneer at them and their own good men and true, it was too much. The past . . . the beautiful past . . . the melancholy past. . . Amy Lowell, that woman starved into scrawniness by poverty (sic) said he was unjust to the millionaire. It was all part of evolution, she said.

Has Carl, whose very name strikes the beautiful past . . . in many a breast, fallen for that stuff? I don't know. Yet the fact remains that his evolution was not into a fiercer hate of the existing mad and swinish society, but into one of sane and pure poetry, as devoid of genuine thought and emotion as the profound outpourings of Dr. Van Dyke. Chicago Poems. Cornhuskars, Smoke and Steel, a progression that is worthy of any poet. Here he expressed the slime, the brutality of life; here he sang of smoke, of steel, of hums, of trains, of cities. Much could have been expected of Sandburg after such a showing! But like Jane Oppenheim, he became tired, hopeless, wns hopeless. What was the use of protesting? It was nature. It was evolution. And evolution is stronger than man.

After Smoke and Steel we had Slabs of the Sunderant West. And what was this remarkable volume that lead Gorhum Munson to declare that his fame will most likely depend upon this volume? Mere vapid escape stuff. Mysticism. Subjective stuff. Beautiful . . . Beautiful West. . . .

In the first three volumes Carl Sandburg growled, he snarled, and spattered a few red drops for history to remember. Then he forgot.

Yes, Carl, good old Carl who was worth more than a concert hall full of esthetes, is getting old. After all, there is nothing like a beautiful sunset to bring the wanderer west. Out there where the west begins . . . Out there where Vachel Lindsay, one can hope, believes in the steel mills and coal mines, and the smoke from the slime, the dirt, the brutality. One can even forget his own proletarian past, bumming on freight cars, washing dishes, driving mule wagons, polishing stoves.

For out where the west begins, out beyond brutal Chicago in beautiful Santa Fe, one forgets that the "beat it" are locked out and unwanted, and one forgets that "everything but Death comes to me and makes me work and gives up what I have."

Carl has forgotten. And "his young wild ways are not so young any more, nor so wild."

IMPERIALISTS THREATEN TO BOMBARD HANKOW

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE hypocrisy of the Coolidge administration in dealing with foreign affairs was never better exemplified than in the wide difference between the president's words and his actions in the Chinese situation. On last Friday the Evening World carried a special Washington dispatch on the front page, which represented Coolidge as stating that the government would not make war on China but would confine its military action in the situation to the protection of American nationals. Yet, no sooner was his statement headlined in the press than new instructions were issued by the war department which sent more warships and marines scurrying to the Orient.

IT appears that the United States minister to Peking and the consular officers thruout China have entered into an agreement with the British government for joint action against the Chinese Nationalist government. It is noticeable that the Northern militarists who had previously come in for considerable criticism at the hands of American correspondents are now represented as champions of law and order. Chang-Tso-Lin is at the moment the white-haired boy of the imperialists due to it is doubtful if Chang has been successful in negotiating the loans he expected as the price or his willingness to serve foreign imperialism.

FOREIGN Minister Eugene Chen of the Nationalist government states in his official report on the Nanking affair that for every foreigner killed in that city at least one hundred Chinese lost their lives in the bombardment by British and American warships. This statement has set the imperialists gnashing their teeth with rage. Consul John K. Davis, U. S. stationed in Nanking reports that only three Chinese were killed. Of course Mr. Davis is lying like a bourgeois gentlemen who holds Chinese life as cheaply as the Chinese labor the imperialists have been exploiting for generations.

IT would appear that war on the Nationalist government by the United States would not be to the advantage of American manufacturers. China provides an enormous market for the goods of those manufacturing countries that have maintained friendly relations with the Nationalist government. Great Britain might as well kiss "goodbye" to her Chinese trade. Her crimes against the Chinese people will be avenged in blood and tears, and the loss of billions worth of trade and investments. It is not surprising that Great Britain should seek to drag the United States into the Chinese quagmire. But why the United States should embark on this venture is not so clear. That imperialists of the world have common interests against the revolutionary subject peoples is quite simple but it does not always work out that way. If the brigands could only get together the path of human progress would be even tougher than it is.

PENNSYLVANIA CONSTABULARY BEGIN TO THREATEN UNION PICKET LINES

Monongahela Field Badly Crippled Altho Owners Make Pretense of Operating

PITTSBURGH, April 4.—With the strike so new yet that neither union officials nor the operators can tell its exact extent, attacks by Pennsylvania state constabulary and coal company police on the union pickets have already started.

Threaten Pickets.

The Pittsburgh Coal Company's Gallatin mine, operated open shop, was the scene of the assault. State police met a force of 350 men forming picket lines in the vicinity of the mine and ordered them to disperse.

Corporal G. F. Pierce, in command of constabulary stationed at the North Belle Vernon barracks, said his men were carrying out an order to permit the assembly of no more than three persons in connection with the suspension.

Corporal Pierce admitted that the crowd dispersed promptly, but said that his men were hissed and "hooed" by the union sympathizers, and that this justified him in menacing them. Apparently no miners have been seriously injured yet.

Condemn Company.

The union pickets took up their posts at strategetic points near the Gallatin mine an hour before the non-union miners started to work, state police said.

Policies of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, which is trying to break the union's hold on the western Pennsylvania bituminous field, were condemned by the pickets both verbally and on huge banners.

Cripple West Virginia Mines.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., April 4. —The mines of the Monongahela coal field are crippled by the strike of non-union miners here, but the operators are making a pretense of keeping them running, so as to avoid encouraging the miners locked out in the rest of the industry.

Only about a quarter of the work ers are actually on the job, according to unofficial surveys. The owners claim more, but even the most brazen statements by company officials do not assert that more than fifty-five per cent of the crews are at work.

Operators Meet.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 4.—Aside from probable developments later in the week when Ohio operators go into conference there were few indications today that either the United Mine Workers or the operators were any closer together than when the Miami conference broke up.

The Coal Operators' Association of Illinois which employs some 72,000 union workers, will meet in St. Louis next Friday but then officials said they had no hopes of settling the strike.

Death of Ehrenfeld.

JOHNSTOWN, P., April 4.—How death is ever near to the coal miner is illustrated in the story of the explosion that killed four miners at the Ehrenfeld mine of the Pennsylvania Coal & Coke Corporation.

It happened because a coupling broke and a train of 40 coal cars ran wild on a 10 percent grade. The train plunged down the plane and crashed at the junction with the main entry. The crash raised a cloud of dust and it also snapped an electric trolley wire. There was an electric arc flash and a tremendous dust explosion. The shock was felt all over the villages of Ehrenfeld and South Fork, far overhead, and the windows of the towns were broken.

Only Luck.

At first the news spread that the 300 men underground had all been killed. Let Pat Stapleton, for 27 years an Ehrenfeld miner, tell of his escape. He attributes it to sheer "luck." He says:

"My gang was working in rooms three miles back in the mine off the main drift. When the explosion occurred we thought it was an earthquake. We were shaken up, but after a few minutes we realized that we had been spared. When we came out of the rooms we figured the scene of the blast was about a mile and a quarter from the drift mouth. Knowing our way out that drift was impossible, we turned to the rear and finally, four and a half miles back we came on undamaged air shaft. It didn't take us long to scamper up this hole to daylight. I'm an experienced miner, but have never felt such a sensation. It was just sheer luck I was not in the mine was not killed outright."

The dead are Dan McConeghy, John Fedko, William Connelly, and John Sheblock, all members of the United Mine Workers of America.

THE DAILY WORKER HAILS THE ARRIVAL OF OUR GREEK WEEKLY, THE EMPROS, IN NEW YORK CITY

ANOTHER fighting organ of the left wing of labor, Empros, our Greek Communist weekly, establishes itself this week in New York City. This will no doubt cause additional squirming not only among the reactionary officialdom of the needle trades, but among the imperialist agents wherever they are to be found in the ranks of the working class. Empros comes to New York from Chicago. When The DAILY WORKER moved to the metropolis of the nation, President William Green and Vice President Matthew Wolf declared it was done for the express purpose of developing the struggle of the militants in the needle trades. The same charge will no doubt be made against the Empros which is a powerful weapon, especially in waging the fight of the Greek workers in the fur industry, and also in the hotel industry where the Greek workers predominate. But Empros also wages the struggle of the Greek workers in the steel, coal and other great industries. The drive develops, not only to establish the Empros as a successful Greek Weekly in New York City, but to build it into a Daily, by May 1st if possible. The DAILY WORKER greets the arrival of its brother organ, the Empros, in New York City. It hails the growth of the Weekly Empros into a DAILY EMPROS in the very near future.

Baumes Type Law Prepared For Use In Golden State

By HOWARD BRUBAKER

SAN FRANCISCO, April 4.—Californians are given another dose of legal medicine by our salons of Sacramento that they have to swallow.

The new law is the Habitual Criminal Measure which is to be enforced at once. This enactment specifies that any one convicted of felony, under the laws of California, for the third time will be subject to imprisonment for life. There is already a statute that takes care of habitual offenders, but it is not drastic enough for our big property owners, so it was decided to tighten it up a bit for their protection.

Property Crimes.

The new act applies to specified crimes of a felony grade like robbery, burglary, arson, and other criminal assault. These crimes, of course, all emanate from an attack on private property, and this is always considered to be a heinous offense in the estimation of the owning class.

When introducing his bill, Senator Baker declared that "this new legislation would suffice to serve notice upon organized crime that California would stand no monkey business on the part of habitual criminals." "Our property must be protected, and we are in line with the thought that society demands a deterrent of the most effective character against the rampant criminal."

The law is patterned after the infamous Baumes Laws of New York state, which have done nothing so far to reduce the amount of crime, and have been the cause of several murders, those fearing life sentences choosing to take a chance and "shoot it out" of a tight corner.

Sapiro Admits Half Million Farm Graft Before Detroit Jury

DETROIT, April 4.—Nearly half a million dollars in fees is the sum already revealed to have been paid Aaron Sapiro, on his own admissions in federal court here where he is suing Henry Ford for libel because of a series of articles published in Ford's paper, the Dearborn Independent.

Continuing his testimony before the jury in the case, Sapiro admitted, under cross examination of Senator A. Reed, chief of Ford's counsel, that he received $64,000 from the American Cotton Growers' Exchange, and further admitted that his present salary from the Exchange is at the rate of $21,000 a year. These fees brought Sapiro's income from cotton growers alone up to $139,565 and his total income from all sources so far received at the trial to nearly $500,000 in the last ten years.

Half of Operations.

Thus far but a trifle more than half of Sapiro's cooperative activities have been examined before the jury. If his other activities prove as profitable as those already examined he has realized close to a million through his pillaging of the farmers and producers and marketers throughout the country.

Ford to Be Called.

Ford, the nation's first billionaire, who is accused of libelling Sapiro, will be called in the witness stand sometime this week, according to the announcement of Sapiro's counsel, William H. Gallagher. Ford's appearance may be delayed, however, because of the injuries suffered by the open shop auto magnate in an auto smashup a week ago when one of his flivvers was shoved into a ditch after being in collision with a larger car.

FORCE A. F. L. TO ADOPT STAND ON CHINA QUESTION

Chicago Federation Raps Imperialism

CHICAGO, April 1.—The Chicago Federation has forced the American Federation of Labor to take a stand on intervention in China.

While the labor movement in other countries has strongly protested imperialist intervention, the A. F. of L. has maintained a discreet silence.

Scores Wall Street

By passing a resolution demanding the withdrawal of American marines from China and Nicaragua and referring it to the A. F. of L. the Chicago Federation yesterday put the A. F. of L. in a position where it must break its silence on the Chinese question. The resolution introduced by the carpenters' local strongly condemned imperialism and a war "to protect Wall Street and the oil interests."

Oscar Nelson, local politician and supporter of the Thompson regime, who attempted to refer the motion to the A. F. L. was checkmated when the Federation voted to endorse the resolution before referring it to the A. F. of L.

Los Angeles Cigar Unionist Running For School Board

LOS ANGELES, April 4.—Sam Globerman, president of the Cigar Makers Local Union No. 22, and delegate to the Central Labor Council has qualified as a candidate to the board of education for the election May 3.

Progressive unions, fraternal organizations, and probably the central Labor council will indorse him, and he should have a good chance at the elections.

Chicago Officials Spat Over Matter Of Sending For Troops During Vote

CHICAGO, April 4.—Rows featured conferences today over whether Illinois national guardsmen would patrol the city tomorrow to prevent lawlessness at the mayoralty election.

Chief of Police Morgan Collins told Adjutant General Carlos Black and Major General Foy D. Keehn, commander of the Thirty-third Division, that his men could handle the situation.

After the conference with Collins the army leaders had another talk with Sheriff Charles E. Grayson, whose request that troops be held in "readiness" climaxed charges and counter-charges that ballot-box stuffers were "primed" for the election.

Fitzpatrick and Nelson Break On Chicago Elections

CHICAGO, April 1.—Two stalwarts of fraction in the Chicago Federation of Labor, John Fitzpatrick and Oscar Nelson, have split because of the frenzied struggle being waged between Mayor Dever, democrat, and William Hale Thompson, republican former mayor. Fitzpatrick supports Dever, who is also supported by Samuel Insull, proprietor of the notorious scab printing firm of Donnelly & Sons, and also head of the open-shoppers in this city. He was Donnelly and his "Citizens' Committee" who organized against the building trades workers and put over the infamous "Landis Award." Nelson supports Thompson, under whose administration the open shop drive against labor was launched in Chicago.

Divide Like "Open Shoppers."

The agents of the employers at the head of the Chicago Federation of Labor are thus divided along the same lines as the employers themselves. Some of the scabby "Citizens' Committee" support Thompson while on Dever's campaign committee there are the names of 27, seven of these organized labor haters.

At yesterday's meeting of the Federation there was an exceptionally large crowd on hand, expecting the fight between Fitzpatrick and Nelson to break out in open hostilities. After a few parrees, Nelson made a motion to adjourn the meeting, thereby avoiding bringing the issue before the delegates of the various unions represented.

Today Election Day.

Tuesday is election day, but the fireworks are continuing up to the last moment, with the labor fakers playing their old game of capitalist politics, while the great mass of the workers stand to lose no matter which of the two political puppets win at the polls.

U. S. News of China Biased, Says Ziang, Consul General Here

The news about China that has been flooding the capitalist press was branded as "utterly biased" by Ziangling Chang, Consul General for China in an address yesterday before the Junior League of the Sydenham Hospital, 565 Manhattan avenue.

The methods that the British use in flood the United States with pro-war propaganda was outlined by the Consul General. The British are very deliberately trying to trick the United States into the support of British Far Eastern policy, he said.

Few British Drinks.

After the American correspondent has had a few free drinks at a British bar and fraternized with British army officers, he goes up to his hotel room and types a few atrocity stories for the American press, Consul Chang declared. While all of the classes in China were rising in a movement to establish a free and independent China, he said, the American press was doing its best to misinterpret their object as anti-foreignism.

Declaring the Nanking affair regrettable, the Consul General bitterly scored the bombardment of the city by British and American warships.

NATIONALIST COMMANDER CHIANG BLASTS HOPES OF IMPERIALISTS

General Chiang Issues Circular, Asserts Loyalty to Left Wing Koumintang Leadership

BULLETIN.

SHANGHAI, April 4.—Naval commanders have threatened the Nationalist Government with the bombardment of Hankow. It is believed here that the imperialist powers are now on the three-hold of large-scale intervention. Great Britain has made it clear that she is ready to go ahead with or without the co-operation of the United States and Japan.

Labor Daily Sees Big War.

LONDON, April 4.—The London Daily Herald, official organ of the trade union movement today declared that Great Britain was preparing for an extensive war against China.

The paper based its statement on the continued massing of British land and sea forces in China.

It is expected that when the Chinese question comes up for debate in the house of commons the tories will demand a rupture of relations with the Soviet Government.

SHANGHAI, April 4.—The imperialist hope that General Chiang Kai-Shek would break with the Kuomintang because of his differences with the dominant left wing of the organization was shattered today when Chiang issued a public statement which was telegraphed thruout the length and breadth of China stating that in the struggle to defend and recognize the wing chief, in political matters, the military arm of the government being entirely subordinate to the political government.

The general had a lengthy conference with Wang. Chiang stated that he would be fully engaged from now on with the campaign against the northern militarists.

The Usual Lying.

The imperialist correspondents with their customary disregard for facts construed Chiang's submission to the authority of the Kuomintang as a measure designed to bring Wang over to his side. The fact is that Chiang, if he ever had any intention of breaking with the party now realizes that his position would be as precarious as that of any northern general if he betrayed the confidence reposed in him by the 1,500,000 members of the powerful and remarkable organization which has branches in every country in the world.

The fall of Peking before the Nationalist army is certain. The only doubtful factor is how soon they will be able to reach their goal.

Chang's Star Undimmed.

It is reported that Chang Tso-Lin has been obliged to return to Mukden because of murmurings in Manchuria.

Reports circulated here and cabled to foreign countries that the Japanese bombarded Hankow this morning are unfounded. The British official news agency has a tremendous staff working night and day turning out lies for British and American consumption.

All efforts to seduce the French admiral in command of the French fleet here to co-operate with the British and Americans have been fruitless.

KUOMINTANG ENDS INNER CONFLICT; UNIONS, PEASANTS CONTROL PARTY

New Program Against All Oppression; Calls On Workers and Colonials For Support

HANKOW, April 4.—The Plenary session of the Kuomintang Central Executive Committee which has just concluded its session here has thoroughly clarified the issue of party versus personal authority, according to an authoritative statement made to the Nationalist News Agency today by a responsible minister of the Nationalist government.

Crisis Past.

The tremendous tensile strength of the party fabric, this minister asserted, has been unequivocally proven by the fact that this great issue has been cleared up in the midst of revolutionary activity of the most critical sort, while the crucial military campaign is in progress. The government has stood the test, the military campaign is going on with undiminished strength. The revolutionary structure has held fast. Now that the crisis is past the Nationalist revolutionary movement is in a position to move unhampered by the slightest suggestion of inner conflict.

This minister of the Nationalist government said in the course of an interview that the majority section of the party had recently become convinced that the utterances and in some cases the acts of what might be termed the "Nanchang Group" had seemed to tend toward the introduction into Nationalist politics of a personal element in much the same way as Peking has been dominated by personal elements for centuries. This basic struggle between the personal elements has been definitely solved by the plenary session of the party executive committee just concluded.

New Measures.

The struggle has been solved by the following measures:

1. The re-establishment of the military council, which comprises various leading revolutionary generals, including Chiang Kai Shek, Tang Sheng-chih, Feng Yu-hsiang, and others, as well as several civilian members.

2. The establishment of a military commissary department, which would be responsible for supplies of food and other materials required by the army.

3. The centralization of control of foreign policy in the hands of the foreign ministry under a resolution which definitely prohibits the expression of views on foreign policy by any member or official without authorization of the Central Executive Committee, on penalty of expulsion from the party, which gives control of foreign affairs to departments of all kinds every-where in the hands of the foreign ministry.

4. Similar centralization of finance in the hands of the finance ministry.

This will directly prohibit any financial measures being instituted by military officials under pain of severe disciplinary measures up to expulsion from the party.

5. Abolition of all "chairman-ships" whether of the party, of the party's Executive Committee or of its Political Council. These bodies hereafter are headed not by individual chairman but by a presidium of three or five, anyone of whom may sit as chairman at any session of these bodies.

6. The elimination of a certain personnel from the party organs.

United Basis.

In all these changes there is now complete concurrence. The very individuals and groups which seemed directly aimed at in some changes have now signified concurrence in the new status quo.

It may definitely be stated, the

NEGRO ORGANIZER FINDS BRUSSELS CONGRESS HELPS

Colored Labor of World Takes Counsel Together

(By ESTHER LOWELL, Federated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 4, (FP).—Organised labor's aid in completing unloosing Negro workers and in promoting inter-racial solidarity is to be sought as a result of the Brussels conference of oppressed peoples.

Richard Moore, who represented the Universal Negro Improvement Assn., Inc., and the American Negro Labor Congress at the world gathering in Belgium, will tour eastern industrial centers to promote this campaign.

At Big Conference.

Seventeen great trade union organizations sent delegates to the Brussels meeting. The chief labor organizations represented were the Mexican Federation of Labor; General Labor Federation of South Africa; General Federation of United Labor, France; Miners Federation of Great Britain; London Labor Council; General Federation of Labor, Canton, China; Belgium Federation of Garment Workers; International Federation of Teachers.

All workers will be forced down to colonial standards unless organized labor in Europe and the United States make a united effort to maintain decent labor conditions, speakers at the congress declared. Moore found this the most significant lesson of the conference for American workers.

Negroes of Africa There.

Negro delegates from south and central African organizations and from Caribbean Islands met with Moore at Brussels to plan measures for the national and economic emancipation of their race in all parts of the world. A World Alliance Against Imperialism was formed by the conference, which drew delegates from north African countries, Egypt, Syria, Latin American countries, Dutch East Indies, India, Indo-China, Korea and China. The present Chinese Nationalist struggle gave a strong impetus to the conference work toward unity and freedom of peoples. Over 30 Chinese delegates, from union, strike and Nationalist organizations attended.

Jersey's Lobby Ridden Legislature Listened To Boss, Not Workers

(By Federated Press.)

NEWARK, N. J., (FP). — Labor fared badly indeed at New Jersey's last legislative session. None of the bills sponsored by the state federation of labor passed.

Night work for women continues; organized painters are still without an enacted health code; compensation remains inadequate; and the state's farmers can go on exploiting children from Philadelphia in their berry and vegetable fields and canneries.

Slightly Greater Allowance.

Hugh Reilly, state federation secretary, attacks Senator Stevens of Monmouth county for blocking the labor bill to increase compensation payments from $17 to $20 per week. Greater allowances were provided for loss of arm, hand, thumb and forefinger. Representatives of certain manufacturers joined unionists in conference with state labor commissioner Andrew McBride to draw up this bill in place of a more drastic one first proposed by labor.

Lobbyists against the labor bills came from the state's big open shop manufacturers. Agents from the brass factories and from Western Electric were particularly active against the bill to ban women's night work. Western Electric has established a new plant at Kearny, in addition to its others in New Jersey where girls and young women are worked day and night.

Textile Mills Lobby.

Passaic textile manufacturers and the big laundries were the first opponents of the bill against women's night work when it passed without a penalty clause in 1923. The bill lost in the present session was to add penalties for violation to make it enforceable.

Katherine Wiley, Consumers League secretary, aided the fight for the women workers' and to ban out-of-state children from farm and cannery work during their school sessions. Senate leaders frankly told her that they would not bring out the child labor bill because it would raise prices of strawberries, cranberries, asparagus, etc. Several thousand Philadelphia children under 16 are brought into the state yearly in spring and fall when Jersey youngsters are kept in classes by a "fairly well enforced" school law.

Bills prepared for the state conference of painters by the Workers Health Bureau to provide protection against lead, benzol and wood alcohol were lost in this legislature.

Riff War Breaks Out Anew; French, Spanish Beaten

PARIS, April 4.—Rebelling against the repressive policy of the Spanish protectorate, Riff tribesmen of the Shinhaja group are again in arms.

Ten days ago Shereef Khamlighi revolted and other tribes immediately rose. The Spanish garrison believing their position untenable, crossed into the French, while the insurgents drove a contingent of native troops from Sok Tnin. These successes caused other tribes to revolt.

Wipe Out Column.

The Spanish district commander, Major Ostariz, reoccupied Bab Sib, but the convoy following him was attacked and captured. Returning to support his convoy, Ostariz's column was ambushed and Ostariz and three officers killed. About 400 of the survivors are reported to be holding a precarious position at Adnam.

Other Spanish troops attempted unsuccessfully to reoccupy Bab Sib, the relief columns from the Spanish main force at Amiadi are reported to be advancing.

This is the first revolt since the surrender of Abd-el Krim and the disarming of the tribes, and the French and Spanish authorities are conferring at Rabat and Tetuan. The French outposts have been reenforced.

(From L'Humanite.)

Spanish Reversal.

The Riff is entirely pacified.

So much so, that a few weeks ago the Spanish troops suffered a bloody reverse near Cheda-men.

So much so that on March 11 a column of French troops were massacred east of Ouezza, losing all their officers and a sixtieth of its men.

How it is possible that all this could happen is what it happened according to the official version:

Evacuate Position.

For several months the frontier district east of Ouezza, inhabited by tribes of the Beni Mestara and Beni Falghoun, has been "ravaged" by a "band of brigands." Curiously enough, these so-called "brigands" — compelled one of our partisans, the Caid Ali, to evacuate the village Moulay Amane, whose position, says the communique, has become untenable.

It was then that the commandant of the Aoudiar sector decided to go to the aid of his subordinate to punish the "brigands." In the course of this operation that a fight took place between the Riffians, qualified as "brigands" by the needs of the occasion, and the troops of Commandant Bourguignon, about 500 men strong and guided by mounted scouts. The fight must have been very severe since Bourguignon's column was completely routed, losing its chief, two lieutenants, and leaving a sixtieth of its men dead on the field.

Lie About Disciplined Troops.

Of course, the bourgeois press denies the importance of this event, "simply the success of ambushed bandits," it says, "this event can not in any way influence the loyalty of our tribesmen: it will have no political repercussion in the Riff."

Why did Col. Hue, commandant of the Ouezzan district, depart in haste with troops for the reenforcement of Aoumiar? Why did General de Chambrun leave precipitately for Ouezzan from Fez?

Once again they are lying about events in the Riff.

There is fighting in the Riff, that's a fact.

Soldiers have been killed, that's a fact.

Horthy White Terror Prosecutes 52 More

News from Hungary is more and more alarming.

The Napszava, a socialist poster, announces that Socialist workers and the Communists recently arrested will be sent before a court martial.

Fifty-two arrests have been made in the Szanto "plot." 10 or 12 comrades are to appear before the blood tribunal which can only pass sentences of death.

The government papers have already designated the victims at the head of whom are found the Communist Szanto, the chief of the Socialist Labor Party, Vagi, Normal and Szepenyi.

The government is taking action under the shelter of a furious campaign by the paid press which is demanding pitiless executions.

Nurses Organize.

WILKES-BARRE Pa. (FP)—Graduate nurses have organized to promote the 12-hour instead of 24-hour shift. Nurses will reject 24-hour duty except in emergency cases. $1 a day more is asked for 24-hour service and the rate on maternity and contagious cases will be $6 for 12-hour duty. The $36 weekly rate for alcoholic and mental cases is unchanged. The nurses' registry will be established by the new association.

Organize the Traction Workers

ARTICLE XIV.—THE 1926 STRIKE—THE FIRST WARNING.

By ROBERT MITCHELL.

By such methods as have already been described the Interborough managed to maintain a kind of "peace" among the exploited traction workers from 1917 until 1926.

The workers will tell you that there was no strike during these ten years. Ask Pat Connelly or James L. Quackenbush, however, and they will maintain that there was a strike in 1919. In fact Mr. Quackenbush declares that the 1919 strike was won by the men; the only strike which the Interborough workers ever won, he declared in 1926.

How is it possible that "Rough Stuff" Quackenbush, ill-famed Interborough attorney and "Strike-Breaker" Paddy Connelly, president of the reptile company union are both anxious to claim the existence of a strike in 1919? Stranger still, how is it possible that they should insist that it had been a successful strike?

The Fake Strike.

The answer is simple. In 1919 the Interborough staged a little increased fare party. The city was then cruel to the Interborough's campaign for an additional stipend of 5c per ride. Accordingly, the company decided to stage a dramatic act of increased fare enforcement.

What is more dramatic than a strike? So the men "struck." The men knew that the order from Paddy Connolly to strike was a fake move from which they as workers had nothing to gain. Among other evidences was the fact that the "strike" was called by Pat Connolly without consulting the men. The strike call was made over the company wires and there were no strike breakers. Unheard of condition in the Interborough.

Now men are not over-anxious to walk out on fake strikes. So some of the workers tried to remain at work. They were fired for not striking. Men who reported at the shops and terminals for work were chased home. Others were suspended. It was a one strike! If you had attended one of the company union meetings shortly afterwards you would have had the pleasure of witnessing a trial of some of the "scabs," so-called who did not respond suitable to Paddy Connolly's fake strike call. Some of them were fined as much as $25. Others only $5. Some were threatened with dismissal from the company if the fines were not paid. Some actually were fined although the company had a hard time of it between trying to protect its "loyal" employees and at the same time maintain the prestige of the brotherhood. If you have never heard of a company firing men for refusing to strike against it, you should learn more about the Interborough methods.

"Arbitration."

The strike lasted about two and one half days. It was settled by "arbitration." There were no demands, no strike meetings, no settlement. The Brotherhood did everything possible to control its men and later to discipline them. It did not, however, suspend any one from the company union. You can't be expelled from a company union.

The company union continued to grow and increase its strange hold on the workers. When the Interborough found it impossible to obtain an increase in fare, it decided to make a reduction in wages. Accordingly the company union stepped into the breach. Paddy Connolly carried back to the men the proposition of a 10% reduction in pay. This happened in 1921 when the cost of living had risen to such an extent that the men were on the subsistence level.

New Way to Vote.

Naturally the men objected. A "vote" on the question was ordered. The proposal was overwhelmingly defeated. So Paddy went back to the men and begged them to reconsider. On his part, he likewise reconsidered the method of conducting the election. Another vote was ordered. This time the company won. The men took a 10% reduction in pay to keep the company from "bankruptcy." By 1923 the men could no longer endure the starvation wages. A threatened strike was averted by a return of 5c. In this way the Interborough brand of industrial "peace" was maintained until 1926.

Long years of success with the company union bred a sort of carelessness on the part of the Interborough. Occasionally a man other than the desired type of company tool was elected as delegate to the general committee. This was a great blunder.

Wanted a Raise.

Every year the delegates for each local made a protense of sending in demands to the general committee for an increase in pay. This was supposed to protect them with their men. Just as regularly the general committee took up the matter and found that no increase was possible that year. The vote would be taken to remain "as is" for another year.

It became clear, however, that as July 1st of 1926 approached, the day when a new agreement was to take effect, that the motormen and switchmen's local would not again concede to the existing agreement.

Several months earlier a strike had been narrowly averted by the company when the motormen refused to abide by a new schedule which the Interborough tried to put over on them.

Got Their Orders.

On June 30th, 1926, at 10 A. M. the general committee delegates from all the locals were summoned before Mr. Hedley at his office. This meeting was illegal even for a company union inasmuch as the discussion over the question of wage increase could not be held in the presence of the officers of the company and at the company office.

Always before the regular meeting of each year the Interborough is careful to summon the delegates of each group of workers separately in order to make sure that they would vote right. From such o procedure in this case the Interborough already knew in advance how the motormen's delegates would vote. The company union machine was accordingly prepared for the attack.

Mr. Hedley spoke as usual: The company was poor; the poor company was not poor that it couldn't be any poorer. He was sure the men wouldn't ask for more pay. They had been good, loyal servants and deserved more money. They would certainly get it if there was a possible way. Now if an increase in fare could be secured. . . .

But Lavin, Bark, Phelan and Walsh did not vote "as is"!

New York Bakers Open Big Membership Drive

A plea for the organization of New York food workers was voiced by speakers at an enthusiastic meeting held by the bakers of Local 35 of the Amalgamated Food Workers at the Labor Temple yesterday afternoon.

The organization of huge baking trusts with their labor-smashing policies makes a strong organization of bakers more necessary than ever, J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, Ludwig Lore, editor of the Volkzeitung, and A. Gund, organizer for the local were among the speakers who stressed the need for a strong food workers' union.

The Amalgomated Food Workers' Union is conducting a large membership drive, and invites every food worker in the city to attend its meetings and participate in the fight for better conditions for New York food workers.

The Ruthenberg pamphlet—THE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY, WHAT IT STANDS FOR AND WHY WORKERS SHOULD JOIN—will be the basic pamphlet thruout the Rothenberg Drive.

The New York District expects to distribute at least a hundred thousand of the Ruthenberg pamphlets in this drive.

Every nucleus must collect fifty cents per member for which they will buy 20 pamphlets, and every member will either sell or distribute these pamphlets. The pamphlet is to be sold at 5 cents and the proceeds from the sales is to be used to buy more pamphlets.

The pamphlets are to be secured from the District Office, 108 East 14th Street, New York, N. Y.

Will Not Be Forgotten.

Shop Nucleus I, Detroit: "The passing of C. E. Ruthenberg was a severe loss to the American and International Communist movement. Ruthenberg was one of the bravest, most brilliant leader of the working class in America. The memory of his life and work will be forgotten in Detroit, Michigan."

"Only True Working Class Party"

Workmens Circle, Branch 481, Milwaukee, Wis.:—"The death of Comrade Ruthenburg is a great loss to the labor movement in the United States. He was a sincere and courageous fighter for the workers' cause.

"The sorrowful loss of the able leader should strengthen the ranks of the only true working class party in America.

"Long live the Workers (Communist) Party of America."

Youngstown, Ohio Workers Party and Y. W. L.—"With deep regret we learn of the death of Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of our Party. Words cannot convey to you the vast personal loss we feel in his passing for Comrade Ruthenberg was well known to the steel workers in Mahoning valley as a fearless champion of the oppressed and his visits here always stimulated us to battle more aggressively for our liberation from the enslavement of capitalism."

Polish Bureau

Bureau, W. P.: "Death has taken from the ranks of the Communist movement Comrade Charles E. Ruthenberg, general secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party and member of the Executive Committee of the Communist International.

"The death of Comrade Ruthenberg is not only a loss to the American proletariat and the Communist International, but to the fighting proletariat the world over. Comrade Ruthenberg was known to the Polish workers. It was he who inaugurated the campaign for the protection of the foreign born workers which rallied large masses of Polish workers. It was our Comrade Ruthenberg who at innumerable meetings raised his voice in defense of the working class of Poland and protested against the wholesale murders and jailings of workers because of their fight for bread and freedom. He did this because he was an International."

Schenectady Local of District Eastern, Ohio: "We regret the death of C. E. Ruthenberg very much and realize the loss to the revolutionary movement of the world. We pledge our support to the CEC and carry on the work more enthusiastically than ever to make up our loss.

"Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg and his militant struggle was known to the proletariat of Ohio. Then we will continue our struggle in the spirit of our great leader, C. E. Ruthenberg."

INDIAN TROOPS WERE DUPED BY BRITISH LIARS

Told Sacred Shrines Ruined by Chinese

HANKOW, March—(By Mail). — Evidence now in possession of Kuomintang Party circles here indicates that while the British authorities are laying great stress on the inherent dangers of the "Shanghai situation" they themselves are authorising the most irresponsible propaganda directly designed to project new dangers into that situation.

The "dangers" of the situation in Shanghai are, in the first place, solely the result of the direct intervention of British in sending troops to that city. Otherwise the mere turnover of authority from Sun Chuan-feng's forces to those of the Nationalist armies would imply no danger to Shanghai or its inhabitants. But by bringing alien troops into that region the British have created a situation which necessarily has in it the seeds of potential dangers.

Alleged Atrocities.

They have added to this a new factor of false propaganda among their own forces. The Indian troops which have landed in Shanghai were pumped full of horrible tales of alleged Chinese "atrocities," according to information available here. These alleged "atrocities" were the destruction of the Indian places of worship in Shanghai. Immediately upon their arrival in the port city, these Punjab troops made inquiries. They wished to see the ruins of their holy places. When they found these buildings intact and in general use, they found they had been duped by the tales poured into their ears on their way out. The reaction is said to have been immediate.

The effect of the British is to sow the seeds of inter-Asiatic distrust by putting one Asiatic people against another in India, from here as another evidence of the blundering tactics of the British in handling Oriental peoples. They should have known that false stories of this kind, easily disproven, would cause an immediate and strong reaction from the hatred that was proposed and would bring about, instead, a crack distrust of their superiors among the Indian troops.

In State of Funk.

The entire situation in Shanghai, according to completely neutral observers who have recently passed through that city, is one of psychological fear. The foreign settlement is in the grip of a wholly irrational funk. The atmosphere of the International Settlement is plainly a war atmosphere, they state. This is now heightened by the presence of British and Indian troops who, ostensibly, are there to police and patrol the streets. The parades of these soldiery seem to have been deliberately planned, first to pump confidence into the foreign inhabitants and second to instil fear into the Chinese. The elaborate system of barbwire entanglements along the border zones, between the settlement and the Chinese city have also helped greatly to enhance this "war" feeling.

John Bull: "I do not know what effect this will produce on China, but it surely makes me afraid."
(Star, London.)

The reaction among the Chinese people in Shanghai has, of course, been precisely the opposite of that intended. They are not afraid; they are indignant. The erection of these barricades is a direct affront to the Chinese. And the effect is felt not merely in Shanghai but throughout the country, even in the most remote interior places. The news agencies have broadcast reports of the arrival of the British forces and the vow action of "preparedness" in Shanghai. These reports have been gathered up from English language papers and translated by the Chinese press. The result is tremendous. Already there have been new "incidents" in Hankow, Changsha and Chungking.

Nice Words and Bad Deeds.

No matter how much the British may seek to implant ideas of a "new friendliness" on their part toward China and the Chinese, their use of the printed word for this purpose is completely outweighed by these actions in Shanghai. The double process of giving wordy assurances of good will while the British Army and Navy are rapidly being mobilized on Chinese soil and in Chinese waters appears not to have any good effect on the Chinese mind, it is pointed out here. The "intimidation" of China is something which cannot be effected any more. It is a tactic of the past. But the British do not seem to realize it. And the Chinese (as would any other people) find it difficult to see tokens of friendship in barbwire entanglements and cruisers and soldier-filled transports.

The United States and Mexico: "Hands up! Pacifism for Europe, under America, all the oil that it needs!" (Simplicissimus, Munich.)

On top of all this comes word from London, by United Press service, that British concerns are rushing work on one hundred tanks for use by the Anti-Nationalist forces of Chang Tso-lin, Chang Tsung-chang and others. Such dispatches, too, which first appear in the English language papers which buy these news-services, are promptly picked up by the Chinese press and translated. The result is more indignation, again directed against Britain, Epitomizing the whole situation, one observer here says: "If there is a dangerous situation in Shanghai, the British have only themselves to blame."

British Company Gets Long Term Contract From the Soviet Union

LENINGRAD, March 16. (Tass).—A contract has been concluded between the Leningrad Machine Building Trust and the "Metropolitan-Vickers" (Metropolitan-Vickers Electrical Company, Ltd.), according to which the company, as the Machine Building Trust the sole right to construct within the borders of U. S. S. R. steam turbines and condensing apparatuses according to the sketches and patents used by the "Metropolitan-Vickers" both heretofore and during the term of the validity of the contract.

The latter has been signed for a term of five years with the right of prolongation.

TURKISH-SOVIET TREATY ON MOST FAVORED PLAN

U.S.S.R. Organizations Guaranteed Freedom

MOSCOW, April 4. As reported in the "Economitcheskaya Jizn," the Soviet-Turkish treaty, which consists of several parts, embodies clauses regulating questions arising and leaving U. S. S. R. the import and export of personal belongings, as well as the rights of individual citizens and judicial persons. The clauses of the treaty referring to trade and navigation are based on the principle of the most favored nation.

The treaty ensures special status of the Soviet trade mission, extraterritoriality of its offices, diplomatic privileges of the leading staff, etc. The Soviet economic organizations are guaranteed the possibility of carrying on their activity in Turkish territory on the same conditions as the juridical persons of any third state. The Soviet goods enjoy the same customs facilities which are granted to all the other states. Turkish goods, in their turn, are also granted a discount from the U. S. S. R. import tariff.

Military Autocracy in Chile Imprisons Chief Justice in Own House

SANTIAGO, Chile, April 4.—Because of opposition to certain acts of the new Chilean government, headed by Premier Ibanez, the president of the Chilean supreme court, Javier Figueroa, is being held a prisoner in his own home by government agents who refuse to allow him to leave.

A decree issued last month by Premier Ibanez' government removed from office 18 Chilean judges including five members of the courts of appeals. The appeals court judges, under the presidency of Javier Figueroa, met the next day and decided to notify the government that they refused to accept responsibility for the consequences of the decree. Figueroa's arrest is a result of this act.

Premier Ibanez, since taking office, has been actively hostile to all liberal forces, and has exiled several politicians.

CHINESE REGARD IRELAND AS A FRIENDLY NATION

Irish Priests Unharmed By Peasants

HANKOW, Feb. (By Mail).—The two Irish priests, Fra. P. O'Connell and F. McDonald of St. Columbans' Mission, Ilanyang, who were last week mishandled by a local peasants' union near Kien Kiang, West Nupeh, yesterday made a public statement concerning their adventure. They had arrived in Ilanyang Sunday night, safe and well.

Their signed statement indicates that the published reports concerning their treatment at the hands of the people in the Kien Kiang district had been grossly exaggerated. The following is their signed report of the occurrence:

"The first report circulated about our capture did not come from us and contains several exaggerations regarding the treatment meted out to us. Our clothes and boots were not taken off. Neither were we stabbed; nor were we tied to poles nor to a tree.

Ireland Considered Friendly.

"The following are the facts: A branch of the Nung Min Hsieh Hui (Peasants' Union) from a place about five miles away came to our Church at Ko Chia Tsui armed with pikes, swords and a few old guns. I went out to meet them. The leaders asserted that there were eight English priests at the Church and some guns. I assured them that there were only two of us—Irish priests quite unarmed. The leader then stated that since we belonged to a friendly nation they would not harm us, but that we should have to cease preaching Christianity. He then produced a crucifix, taken that day from a Catholic house, and mounting it said I should have to remove the cross from the Church and give it to him and surrender both church and house to them.

Rushed The Church.

"I refused to accede to his request. The crucifix which the leaders had only nominally come to seize me and found its way into safety. The crowd then rushed into the church and residence, broke the church windows and removed some religious articles from the building. Entering the residence both I and my confrere Father McDonald saw had a white metal crucifix in the hand. They broke the crucifix in the hall, then pressing him, and marching him out side the gate, treated him roughly and tied him to one. The leader then came over and whispered to us 'Do You (but) not scream.'

Prisoners Unbound.

"We were then marched to the headquarters of a local branch of the Hui. At their meeting place, the leaders on being assured that we had no firearms and that we were Irish unbound our hands and induced the crowd to leave. They returned to us some of the articles taken from our persons, including pocket-books containing money, clothes. They gave us food and a bed and said they would see us free in the morning. We had the hall to ourselves during which they decided to take us to the Director of Magistrate at Tien Men. A local [illegible] were [illegible] to us.

"Arrived at Tien Men, the Prefecture Magistrate received us well. We were provided with food and a bed and told we would be liberated and escorted back to our Church or another mission. The following day under an escort of four soldiers, we reached Ta Chia Kou where we learned that Chen our pastors had taken us away from Ko Chia Tsui, a local crowd had entered the church and house and had left nothing but the bare walls. Subsequently we set out for the Mission Headquarters at Han Kang, where we are safe and well.

LEAGUE AGAINST HORTHY EXPOSES TRIAL OF SZANTO

A raldegram urging Henri Barbusse, internationally known French writer, in form with William Bolitho, and other prominent publicists, a delegation to establish in Hungary a fund for the legal defense of Szanto, Vagi, and 80 others now facing court martial for labor union activities, was sent last night by the Anti-Horthy League of this city. The league also called $500 for starting this fund. The money was raised at a recent concert by Hungarian and American artists under the auspices of the Anti-Horthy League.

Workers Protest.

The raldegram follows:

"Workers throughout the United States have protested against the arrest, torture, and court martial of workers and peasants in Hungary by the Horthy government. Huge mass meetings were held by the International Labor Defense and protests were wired to Horthy representatives in Washington and Budapest. In New York City the following American Federation of Labor trade unions held protest meetings: The Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, Local 499, District Council 9 of the same union, New York locals of the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union, Local 2090 of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, and the New York Council of the American Shoe Workers' Protective Union.

Many Meetings Protest.

Similar protest meetings were held in unions in Chicago, Passaic, Detroit, and other cities. In Cleveland the Hungarian - American Liberty League sent raldegrams to the London Daily Herald, the English Labor Party, the Trades Union International in Amsterdam, and the International Transport Workers' Federation in Brussels, appealing for help in preventing the court martial and execution of Szanto, Vagi, and their comrades. This organization has also resolved to send a delegation of three prominent Americans to Budapest.

League Denounces.

In the name of its 200,000 members, the Anti-Horthy League of New York passed a resolution at a concert of Hungarian and American artists in New York City on March 27, denouncing the suppressive measures of the Horthy government against all labor organizations.

"As an internationally known artist and the champion of the oppressed, you were chosen as the delegate of the Anti-Horthy League of New York to go to Hungary and use your prestige and influence to provide legal defense for Szanto, Vagi, and their comrades. We are anxious to have Max Eastman and William Bolitho, well-known publicists, to join you in this mission if possible.

"We are cabling you $500, proceeds from the concert, for starting a defense fund. We will shortly send further proceeds from a campaign. Kindly give this action the widest possible publicity. For the Anti-Horthy League of New York, Hugo Gellert."

Kiamil Bey, First Turk Ambassador Since War

LONDON, April 4.—Kiamil Bey has been appointed the Turkish ambassador to the United States, according to a telegraphic dispatch today from Constantinople.

Kiamil Bey is the former undersecretary for foreign affairs and is not a deputy for Constantinople in the Turkish legislative body.

The appointment of Kiamil Bey completes the resumption of diplomatic relations between the United States and Turkey which were broken during the world war. Kiamil Bey will be the first Turkish ambassador to Washington since the break between the two countries.

Communist Council Sets Up Memorial to Soldier Dead, Shows War Evils

PARIS, April 4. One of the most daring monuments to war dead was dedicated today in the cemetery at le Vallois Perret, a suburb of Paris. The monument depicts suffering and horror and a protest against war.

At the base is a workman breaking his sword and rifle over his knee. Just above is a gassed soldier in agony. At one side is a figure representing a victim of unjust condemnation by court martial and on the other side is a Negro victim of European imperialism. At the top is the figure of a woman weeping over the martyrdom of her children.

The monument was sculptured by Vlordy, who was decorated for bravery during the war. It was ordered erected by a Communist municipal council, patriotic organizations protested that it was a "slander" of the war dead and several fascists endeavored to mutilate the statue.

Trouble was expected today at the unveiling but there was hardly an incident as 1,500 Communists paraded in silence following the inaugural address by the prefect on behalf of the French government.

USSR TRANSPORT WORKERS HOLD 6TH CONFERENCE

Sends Greetings to Labor in Other Countries

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., March— (By Mail).—The 6th conference of the Enlist of Transport Workers (Local Transport) of U. S. S. R., which met here on January 7-16 last, is going to occupy an important place in the life and activity of the Union.

Its importance arises not only from the weighty decisions and organizational measures adopted, but also from the attitude taken by the conference on the one hand of international unity of the transport workers and the units of the trade union movement among them.

The activity of the central committee in establishing contact with transport workers' unions in other countries has already gone beyond the stage of merely "forming" relations.

Fraternal greetings at the opening of the conference were delivered by Comrade Johansen on behalf of the Norwegian Trans-port workers, Com. Zwicker from Germany; Com. Hardy from Great Britain; Com. Losovsky from the Red International of Labor Unions and Com. Ashkanoi from the Transport Workers' International Propaganda Committee.

Messages of support were adopted by the conference to the English coal miners, to the workers of Uruguay in connection with the fascist coup d'etat in that country, and to the revolutionary masses and the transport workers of China.

The conference then proceeded to receive the report of the T. I. P. C. In an unanimous resolution adopted on the report the conference noted the unincreasing growth of confidence of the transport union in all the capitalist countries, as the result of the capitalist offensive against wages, working hours and other conquests of the working class."

The conference at the same time emphasized that the capitalist offensive was facilitated by collaboration with the bourgeoisie and treachery on the part of the reformist leaders of the Transport Unions who had departed from the class position and were betraying the interests of the workers in general, and of the transport workers in particular.

Since the last conference (from the end of November, 1924, to the beginning of December, 1926) the numerical strength of the union was increased by 21,342 members, or 12.6%. The state of organization among the local transport workers has grown, reaching 97.6% at the time of the conference. During the same period the body of active union members carrying on local committees, the various commissions, mutual insurance, assisting committees, delegates' meetings, dues collectors, etc., was increased from 13,000 to 23,000 people.

Ninety-nine Coreans Face Japanese Court

TOKIO, April 4.—Charged with organizing a Communist Party and of activity to gain independence of Korea from Japan, ninety-nine Koreans, taken into custody with two hundred others in a series of wholesale arrests last summer, are to be prosecuted as plotters against the state, so the courts have decided.

A preliminary investigation of these 300 Koreans is said to have been conducted since their arrest last summer, and the authorities state they found plans for enrolling 1,000,000 members "with the object of starting a revolt against the present regime."

Answer the Attack

The charges made by the American Legion representatives and those of other patriotic societies against The DAILY WORKER is the opening gun in the attack which is being launched against our paper. These societies are nothing more or less than high-sounding labels for groups of employers who have banded together to destroy the labor movement of this country. The first assault is being made against the organ of the most class-conscious and militant section of the labor movement. Reaction is bending its efforts toward the destruction of labor's fighting organ, The DAILY WORKER.

The answer to this first attack must be a flood of enrollments to the Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund. With the backing of thousands of comrades throughout the country we will be able not only to frustrate the plans of the dark forces of reaction, but also to build up The DAILY WORKER so that it becomes a greater menace to them. The answer to the attack must be a bigger and better DAILY WORKER. The road to a bigger and better DAILY WORKER is through the establishment of a strong Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund. Let no comrade fail in his duty when we are under fire. This means you.

War on China Is Last Weapon of Imperialist Powers—It Must Be Prevented!

Peking will soon be taken by the People's Armies and within a short period all of China with the exception of Manchuria will be under the control of the People's Government. The northern forces are making little resistance and the advance of the People's Armies is welcomed by the masses.

There is going to be no split in the Kuomintang. Chang Kai Shek remains in command of the drive on Peking, he accepts the authority of the Political Committee of the Party and the cleavage between the left and right wings of the Party upon which the imperialists have been building great hopes will not materialize at present. The Chinese liberation movement is a unit against imperialism.

These facts not even Frederick Moore, the world's greatest liar, whom the New York Times chose to replace Thomas F. Millard as Shanghai correspondent, can conceal successfully.

Recent developments in China show conclusively that not only Moore, but practically every other capitalist press correspondent, has not been sending out news but have been sending as news what the imperialist elements in China wanted to happen.

An instance of this method of newswriting is a Chicago Tribune dispatch republished in the New York Times April 4. The Tribune correspondent relates the fact that Wan Ching Wei, outstanding left wing leader who has been returned to the Political Committee of the Kuomintang, is in Shanghai and has had a conference with General Chang Kai Shek. The correspondent says:

"After conferring with Wan today, General Chang issued a circular telegram to the provinces under Nationalist control, declaring that henceforth he would confine himself to commanding the Nationalist expedition against the Northerners, leaving the business of government under Wan's direction.

"This is interpreted as a move on the part of General Chang to strengthen his position by securing the support of Wan, whose seniority in the Kuomintang makes him the logical heir to the political power of Dr. Sun Yat Sen. . . . Wan enjoys the respect of both factions of the Kuomintang and would likely be able to swing a big section of the Party to General Chang's side."

It would be hard to conceive of a worse distortion of the situation than that given above. What are the facts?

Wan Chin Wei led the left wing of the Party against the policy of General Chang. The left wing program was adopted by the recent Party conference and Wan is now one of the chief leaders not of the left wing alone, but of the Party as a whole. In Shanghai he is carrying out the instructions of the Political Committee of the Kuomintang and one of its decisions is that General Chang Kai Shek shall continue in command of the People's Armies during the northern offensive.

The foreign correspondents attempt to estimate developments in the People's Government and its armed forces by the same method—personalities—they used in forecasting developments among the militarist allies of imperialism. As a result of this their errors are nothing less than grotesque.

The Kuomintang is a mass party. It is the property of no individual and its choice of individuals for leadership and authority is based on the policy they advocate.

In another field, that of military activity, it is no longer possible for the foreign correspondents to even pretend that the victories of the People's Armies are anything else than the result of mass support. Moore himself has to admit this. He says, speaking of the People's Armies:

"That they will capture the Northern capital (Peking) is regarded now as a foregone conclusion. . . . Foreigners have wondered at the Northern forces' unwillingness to resist them. The explanation lies in the propaganda which precedes the Nationalist advance . . . agents circulate reports that the Northern armies are militarists and are in league with the foreign imperialists while the Nationalists are the people's army. Such arguments invariably appeal to the people and soldiers because of the long suffering to which the militarists have subjected them. COMMUNITIES INVARIABLY WELCOME THE ARRIVAL OF THE NATIONALISTS." (Emphasis ours.)

According to prejudiced observers like Moore who has been seeing in every bandit chieftain a potential savior, the militarist forces in the north have collapsed and Moore even voices a rumor that Chang Tso Lin has retired beyond the Great Wall into Manchuria.

The militarist allies of Japan, Great Britain and America are beaten, the People's Government will soon rule all of China proper, the labor movement is leading the whole struggle of the Chinese masses and these developments furnish the reason actuating the imperialist powers in the desperate policy they are pursuing in China.

Imperialism's Chinese allies have been defeated by the Chinese liberation movement and the imperialist powers are now preparing for invasion with their own forces.

The alliance between the colonial peoples and the working class in the imperialist countries has as its first task the prevention of this murderous offensive.

How to Serve Your Country

An American citizen has been killed by Mexican bandits and the New York Times gives a column to the details. The state department is very much concerned and Ambassador Sheffield has been instructed to protest in strong terms to the Mexican government.

We refuse to get excited. This American citizen was married to a Mexican woman and had a ten year old son born in Mexico. Evidently he had been in Mexico for more than ten years and liked the country well enough to stay.

Just what business the state department has in interfering in cases of this kind would be a mystery if we did not know that it is seeking any and every method of bringing pressure upon the Mexican government. As in Nanking, the death of an American citizen who may have forgotten what his country looks like, furnishes an excuse for insults, threats and finally a massacre of the people of the country American imperialism wants to grab.

The violent deaths of American citizens in countries where there are no rich natural resources and which are not needed as naval bases or canal routes arouse no excitement whatever in the capitalist press.

Any patriot who loves this Wall Street land with pions fervor can do its ruling class no greater service than to go to some country rich in oil or strategically situated and get bumped off by the local bandits.

THE TRADE UNIONS AND THE MILITARISTS

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

Article II.

It is evident that imperialism has been counting heavily on a split in the Kuomintang of serious enough dimensions to hamper if not to cripple the campaigns of the People's Armies.

The imperialist hopes were groundless. Commenting on these events the Moscow Pravda said on March 16:

"The anti-imperialist movement in China embraces various social elements having common as well as different interests which cannot fail to be reflected in revolutionary organization, in the government and in the Kuomintang party. It is easy to understand that the imperialist press in considering the above exaggerates the strength of the right wing gehieh had allegedly switched the revolution onto the rails of "moderation." This bourgeois uproar about the degeneration of the Chinese revolution is contrary to the fact that precisely in the recent period that the mass labor movement which is under the Communist Party's influence grew immensely. The unprecedently enthusiastic celebratinns of International Women's Day, the valiant struggle of the Shanghai proletarians, the big success of the recent peasants' conferences which were held under revolutionary slogans—all this bears testimony to the powerful pressure of the revolutionary masses to which even the Kuomintang right wing is compelled to submit."

"Chang Kai Shek's declarations relative to his faithfulness toward the revolution, toward Sun Yat Sen-ism and loyalty to the Kuomintang are distinguished from his former statements and testify to the pressure of the revolutionary rank and file. The attempt of the right wing to make the generals independent from the Kuomintang discipline has failed."

The fact that capitalist enterprises in China are for the most part foreign-owned gave the workers' economic struggle an anti-imperialist character to secure advances in wages and working conditions the workers had to combat the imperialists directly. The arrogance and brutality of the foreign capitalists in a colonial or semi-colonial country are well-known; they depend upon the native mercenaries and militarists for suppression of the workers and this brings the working masses into conflict with the allies of imperialism. The labor movement takes on a political character. It becomes, with the proper activity on the part of the Communist party, able and strong enough to lead the national liberation movement.

The brief history of the Chinese labor movement shows in what manner and by what experience it has gained the leading position it now plays and will continue to play.

The rise of the labor movement began with the strike of the seamen in Hongkong in 1922. Beginning as a protest against brutal treatment by British officers the seamen's strike first brought out other sections of transport workers and finally resulted in what was practically a general strike thru which the transport unions were established.

The strike of the railwaymen occurred in February 1923. It was followed by the general strike in Shameen, the foreign settlement of Canton. Than came the strike of the textile workers in Shanghai in the summer of 1925 and the great general strike and boycott in Hongkong lasting for 16 months—June, 1925—September, 1926.

In all these strikes the Chinese working class, as in Shanghai where the wanton massacre which aroused the Chinese masses took place, the workers and students who took the side of the workers found themselves confronted with the most brutal manifestations of imperialism in which all the great powers took part—officially and unofficially.

But the strikes continued and organization work went on. Last year (1926) there were 164 small strikes which, however, involved a total of 204,000 workers.

From these strikes, the overwhelming proportion of them for elementary demands such as wage increases, shortening of hours and improvements in working conditions, the workers gained invaluable political training. Not only did the workers come into conflict with the imperialist enemies directly but they found that in those districts controlled by the People's government their strikes were almost uniformly won while in the provinces ruled by the native militarist allies of the imperialists the strikes were bloodily suppressed and the unions either completely destroyed or the remaining fragments driven into illegality.

It did not take the Chinese workers long to draw the correct conclusions from these terrible struggles. Their conditions were such that whoever opposed any improvement immediately branded himself as the enemy of the masses. Wages were unbelievably low. In Shanghai wages were from 11 to 15 cents per day. In Hankow, the center of heavy industry, average wages were 2½ dollars in American money—PER MONTH. This at a time when the subsistance level for a family of five was $13.50 per month.

The hours of labor were usually not less than 12, in some industries 14 and in the silk industry there was a 15 hour day. The length of the working day for children was the same as for men and women altho their wages were slightly more than nothing.

The Chinese labor movement was literally born in struggle and in the provinces where People's armies smashed the militarists, and as soon as this was accomplished, the trade unions sprang into being. Even before the decisive battles were fought the workers showed in the most courageous and practical way their loyalty to the liberation movement.

The activity of the trade unions in the towns of Hankow, Hanyang and Wuhang, the great heavy industrial center of China during the advance of the People's armies and after their triumph, afford a typical example of the manner in which the labor movement has grown.

The workers, as the People's armies neared this center, declared a strike in the arsenal upon which Wu Pei Fu depended for munitions. This action was of the greatest moment in deciding the issue of the military struggle.

THREE months after the defeat of Wu Pei Fu practically all the workers in the district were organized. 150,000 of these workers are in base industries. Another 150,000 are engaged in the lighter occupations.

With the exception of the Railwaymen's Union and the All-Chinese Seamen's Union the trade unions are not as yet organized on an industrial basis but the extension of the power of the People's government has given an immense impetus to the spread of industrial organization. The process is carried on in two ways by the organization of unions which have an industrial structure from their inception and by the amalgamation of existing craft and occupational unions with the industrial organizations.

The overwhelming majority of the trade unions are affiliated to the All-Chinese Federation of Labor. The principal exceptions are the Canton General Workers' Union with 27,000 members and the Canton Union of Mechanics with 7,000 members. Negotiations are being carried on by the All-Chinese Federation with these unions looking toward amalgamation and it is seeking any and every method of bringing pressure upon the Mexican government. As in Nanking, the death of an American citizen who may have forgotten what his country looks like, furnishes an excuse for insults, threats and finally a massacre of the people of the country American imperialism wants to grab.

The violent deaths of American citizens in countries where there are no rich natural resources and which are not needed as naval bases or canal routes arouse no excitement whatever in the capitalist press.

Any patriot who loves this Wall Street land with pions fervor can do its ruling class no greater service than to go to some country rich in oil or strategically situated and get bumped off by the local bandits.

Another Injunction—The Way to Fight It.

The injunction issued against the Kings County District Council of Painters by Justice Cropsey not only enjoins the union from calling its members out on strike but also interprets the union constitution.

The attorney for the union characterizes this injunction as the most drastic document of the kind he has ever seen. This is the obvious tendency of these legalized outlawings of trade union activity—they constantly become wider in scope.

Involving 4,500 union painters, well organized and having the support of the Building Trades Council, here is a splendid opportunity for mass violation of the injunction. If the court order is obeyed the proposed strike will be crippled, the case will drag thru the courts and even if a decision in favor of the union is rendered by some hitch in the capitalist court machinery, other injunctions will continue to issue.

A delegation of 300 trade union representatives journeyed to the state capital recently to advocate legislative abolition of injunctions. The legislature has adjourned and injunctions are still the order of the day.

If the officials of the Painters Union will take the lead in violating this injunction, call upon the rest of the labor movement for support and put up a militant fight, it is a safe bet that the next session of the legislature will take more than a platonic interest in anti-injunction laws. Legislation under capitalist democracy which tends to favor the workers comes invariably as the result of a mass demand expressing a determination to force endorsement of the reform desired.

This is the correct way to approach the problem now facing the Painters Union.

Incidentally it may be remarked that the right wing in the needle trades, led by Vice Pfesident Woll of the American Federation of Labor, is using exactly the same methods against the majority of the workers supporting the New York Joint Board as the painting contractors are using against the union.

There will be no real fight against injunctions until this kind of leadership is thrown overboard by the labor movement.

Cooperative Apartment Dwellers Can Secure Bank Loans on Stock

By ESTHER LOWELL
(Federated Press)

Loans by the Amalgamated Bank and Amalgamated Credit Union to members of the men's garment union buying homes in the cooperative apartment house are offered. The workers can borrow three-fifths of the necessary amount from the bank and the rest from the credit union. The borrower's stock in the union's cooperative housing venture is pledged as security.

Interest Cancels.

Small monthly payments will be arranged to relieve the worker gradually of the debt. The interest on the loan is canceled by the interest on the stock—both being 5%. Workers are expected to pay $500 per room and $11 or $11.50 (depending on whether or not tax exemption is granted) monthly maintenance per room. This rental will decrease to about $7, it is hoped, as amortization proceeds.

Six units with a total of 300 apartments will form the complete union workers' housing project. The full project is expected to be $1,750,000. October occupancy is anticipated. The site chosen is near one of the city's largest and wildest parks, in a neighborhood where private profit apartments bring rentals of $18 to $22 per room monthly.

Communary Planned.

Cooperative communary units are planned; buses to take the workers' children to school; a kindergarten in the house; an assembly room, laundry and cooperative restaurant. The union hopes to erect similar cooperative housing units in other sections of the city where its members wish to live.

Practically all of the apartments in the first unit of the United Workers Cooperative housing project are already occupied. This is an independent organization of workers from various industries and unions. Official opening ceremonies were held when the first large group of members moved into their new homes. The project is quite similar to that of the Amalgamated, and workers were enabled to borrow from a subsidiary cooperative organization—the Consumers Finance Corp.

English Expect High Taxes.

LONDON, April 5.—Jewish residents in London already are preparing for increased taxes, as the result of the recent announcement of the huge budget deficit by the British treasury.

DRAMA

Propaganda in the Theatre

Five Playwrights Tell Daily Worker What Working Drama Means to Them.

ALBERT CARROLL

Will play one of the principal roles in the new Lyric bill to be presented at the Neighborhood Playhouse tonight.

To the Dramatic Editor of The DAILY WORKER: At a meeting at the 52nd Street Theatre on Sunday, March 27, the word "propaganda" shuttled menacingly around the house. The New Playwrights Theatre was accused of being too conservative, too radical; too timid, and other things. The following is an attempt to lay down certain definitions that may clear up the misconceptions as to the politics of the New Playwrights Theatre.

1. No Theatre emphatically bears no political label.

2. All the same, plays written by living breathing people in our time are bound to have their roots in the great mass movements of mankind of which the greatest is the struggle for power of the working class.

3. No "Propaganda Phrases."

3. When we say we want a working class audience we mean we want an audience of working people of all trades and occupations. We are not aiming merely at white collar workers or merely at industrial workers. We believe that until a fusion of industrial, white collar and intellectual workers is affected there will be no American labor movement worthy of the name.

4. A living and courageous theatre has a social function of the first importance in mirroring the color and tone of life around us, in crystallizing reflection. This function is much more genuinely revolutionary than the presentation of neat propaganda phrases which convince no one.

4. Want American Life.

5. To those who have suggested the production of Hauptmann's "The Weavers" or a middle class tract like Galsworthy's "Strike," we state categorically that we think this sort of thing entirely insignificant compared with the effort to crystallize the electric current of American forces. The very bleak and bones of a new era is in these forces, and it is only out-and-dried propagandists who fail to realize this reality.

6. Plays are written for audiences, not down to audiences or up to audiences; therefore, the plays we hope to put on next year will be working class propaganda in the sense that the output of Hollywood is propaganda class propaganda. They will not be Communist propaganda or single tax propaganda or social-democrat propaganda. This does not mean that we will turn down on account of its letter-head any play that we consider has human value.)

7. The whole discussion about art and propaganda is a lot of rubbish. Great art is good propaganda for any cause that bases itself on the vital needs of mankind, and great propaganda is good art.

Broadway Briefs

The Neighborhood Playhouse will present its fifth production, a bill of Lyric Drama at their Grand Street Theatre tonight. The program is headed by a Commedia Dell' Arte, a comedy of the seventeenth century.

The English rights to "The Silver Cord," have been sold to the Daniel Mayer Co., Ltd., by Theatre Guild. Sidney Howard, the author, will go to London for the rehearsals of his play.

Guy Bolton returned from Palm Beach a few days ago with the book of the operetta on which he is collaborating with Frank Mandel and which will be produced here by Mandel and Laurence Schwab.

"Gas Fairy of 1927," the Winter Garden revue will conclude its engagement this Saturday evening, beginning a tour in Pittsburgh and will have a summer run in Chicago.

Sen. Norris Says Will Retire When Term Ends

WASHINGTON, April 4 (FP).—Senator Geo. W. Norris of Nebraska, progressive leader in congress, announces that he will retire from public life when his present term expires in March, 1931.

This statement has been welcomed by his enemies, especially among the administration advisers in Washington, since he is considered the ablest and strongest of the progressives. His leadership of the fight for public ownership and operation of electric distributive systems as well as electric generating plants has created a new economic issue in national politics, with a majority of the Roosevelt an element refusing to declare for his program.

Jingoes Rave Against Biblical Peace Verse

PLAINFIELD, N. J., April 4.—A biblical text has so roused the ire of war veterans of this city that they threaten to refuse to take any part in the Memorial Day celebration here unless it is removed from the city's war memorial.

The inscription, which is objected to because of its pacifist sentiment, is the verse, "Nation shall not lift up sword against nation; neither shall they learn war any more."

The Central Board of Veterans and Military Organizations of Plainfield wants this removed at once, otherwise they will not help dedicate the memorial "in memory of those who gave their lives in the service of their country."

BRITAIN SENDING MILITARY FORCE TO OCCUPY PEKIN

But Nationalist Troops May Get There First

LONDON, April 4.—British reinforcements, consisting of 5,000 men, which have been ordered to China are destined to become the nucleus of a Peking defense force, the International News service learned today.

Although government spokesmen state that these reinforcements are a "fluid reserve" to be placed at the disposal of General Duncan, it is learned that their destination is Peking and that they will be followed by further detachments.

Must Find Excuse.

The dispatch of British troops to Peking will either have to be accomplished by consent of the northern government or under the guise of reinforcement for the legation guard.

Peking has no foreign concession, but it has the legation quarter, established under the boxer protocol in 1901. Foreign troops have been on duty in this quarter for many years, but it is a limited section already rather over-crowded with foreign residents and it will be impossible to properly quarter large forces of troops there.

Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign minister, arose in the house of commons this afternoon to deny the fact stated made by Eugene Chen, Nationalist foreign minister, that hundreds of Chinese had been killed in the shelling of Nanking.

The Lying Earthman.

Sir Austen declared he had no evidence which would fix responsibility of the "Nanking outrages elsewhere than upon the Soviets." He declared that "anti-foreign feeling in general and anti-British feeling in particular" had undoubtedly been encouraged and stimulated by Moscow. He stated, however, that the British government thinks it inexpedient to take any further action on the recent British note to the Soviets, protesting against propaganda.

Labor Deputies Protest.

There was an angry scene when conservative members of the house charged that the Inkorite newspaper, "Lansbury's Weekly" had published a statement fixing the blame for the Nanking troubles on the British. There was an immediate uproar from the labor benches and George Lansbury, M. P., editor of the paper, arose to shout denials, to which Sir Austen retorted angrily. The uproar was eventually quelled.

Anti-Saloon Crowd Admits Political Expense Millions

(By Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Some idea of what it costs to maintain prohibition propaganda in the United States is afforded by the figures just made public by the Senate campaign fund investigation committee. Its report shows that the Anti-Saloon League, according to its own figures, spent in the first six years of national prohibition over $13,000,000 for propaganda purposes in 37 States.

This amount does not of course cover the total outlay, not by far. The dry figures are only those they contend they have to make public under the law requiring funds spent for political purposes to be reported. They admitted, without saying how much however, that they spent at least us much more in activities they claimed they did not have to make any report on. Just what these so-called activities were can be imagined.

Dry Deficit

The Senate figures show that the national dry league expended $13,430,285 and had receipts of only $12,128,829, leaving a deficit of several hundred thousand dollars.

Of the States in which the league has large organizations, New York took first rank in the matter of expenditures, the total cost being placed at $1,738,840. Illinois, with "Machine Gun Chicago" as its metropolis ranked second with an outlay of $1,200,500.

The meeting is arranged by The Hands Off China-Nicaragua-Mexican Committee. Prominent speakers will address the gathering.

4,000 PAINTERS STRIKE DESPITE CROPSEY EDICT

Brooklyn Bosses Unite; Workers Enjoined

While officials of the union were being served with summons yesterday ordering them to appear before Supreme Court Justice James C. Cropsey in connection with the temporary injunction which he granted last Thursday, restraining the threatened strike, 4,000 Brooklyn painters walked out and expect to remain out until their demand for a $14 day is granted.

Bosses Uniting.

A vigorous fight will also be waged by the workers to prevent the boss painters organizing themselves into an association for the purpose of breaking the union.

Strike leaders insist that their insistence on "collective agreements" with the union is a direct effort in this direction. Heretofore all agreements have been made with individual employers.

Huge Strike Vote

Mass registration of the workers took place last Saturday at the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum and the men voted overwhelmingly in favor of a strike at once.

Attorneys for the union described the terms of the injunction as "the most severe" they had ever seen in a document of that kind. They also denied that the strike was called without notice, as is charged by the boss painters.

Nicaragua to Guarantee American Profits Will Continue to Flow In BLUEFIELDS, Nicaragua, April 4.—President Diaz has authorized the governor of the Bluefields area to guarantee American Mahogany contractors that their operations will not be molested by conservative troops. An agreement between the conservatives and the liberals to the same effect is being prepared for signature.

Rumors have been circulated here that General Moncada, liberal military leader, is dead, but these come from doubtful sources and are denied by liberals.

Arrest of 3 Alleged U. S. Killers Announced

MEXICO CITY, April 4.—Ambassador Sheffield today expressed satisfaction at the rapid action taken by the Mexican Government in the pursuit and capture of three members of the bandit gang which last week murdered Edgar Wilkins, American citizen of Savannah, Ga., in Guadelajara.

Mariando Calzada, alleged leader of the gang, was identified by the son of Wilkins by a conspicuous sweater which he wore. The police state that Calzada has confessed and named two accomplices. It is expected that the men will be executed.

Rumor Morgan Hits Mexican Debt Treaty

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Denial was made by the State Department today that it had any knowledge of a move on the part of the Mexican Government to repudiate the Lamont-Pani agreement, under which the Calles government has been paying interest to a group of New York banks on Mexico's bonded indebtedness.

A story was published to the effect that the agreement was to be abrogated and that Dwight Morrow, partner of J. P. Morgan, had protested to the state department. Secretary Kellogg said today, however, Morrow had made no protest and he knew nothing about it. The rumor persists.

LABOR MEN RUN IN THE PASSAIC CITY ELECTION

PASSAIC, April 4.—As a result of their experience at the hands of the brutal officialdom and police during the recent textile strike in Passaic, the workers there are planning to enter politics on their own in the forthcoming election.

A non-partisan ticket containing "labor candidates with a labor program" will be put forward in the contest for a city mayor and four commissioners in the spring election.

Meet This Sunday

The first meeting will be held this Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Russian National Home, 4th and Hudson Sts. William W. Weinstone, general secretary Workers' (Communist Party) of New York; J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The Daily Worker, and Lena Chernenko, union organizer, who was especially active during the recent strike will be among the speakers who will point out the importance of working-class participation in local politics in Passaic.

Minneapolis Mass Meeting to Score U. S. Imperialism

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. April 4.—The Minneapolis Conference Against Intervention in Mexico, Nicaragua and China, whose work is attracting much attention here, today announced that they will hold a mass meeting to protest against the slaughter of Chinese workers, and to demand "HANDS OFF CHINA" next Sunday, April 10th at 2 P. M. in Yeoman Hall, 702 Third Ave. South, Minneapolis.

Speakers will include County Attorney Floyd B. Olson, Ole Helhe of the Mid-West Student, Wm. Watkins of the Switchmen's Union and Norman H Tallentire, Workers' Party Organizer. Mr. S. A. Stockwell will preside and admission will be free.

Indications are that a record attendance will turn out for this meeting. News stories of the last meeting held by the Conference about two weeks ago received notice in the State Legislature, when Rep. Donald Wright, Republican Representative from the 8th Ward of Minneapolis to the House, attacked Rep. Emil S. Young, Farmer-Laborite, as having spoken at a "red" meeting run by a "red" organization in the pay of Moscow and the Communist International.

State Troopers Ready To Aid Special Police Attack Coal Strikers

WASHINGTON (FP). — Pittsburgh politicians attached to the Mellon organization, coming to the capital, that the state of Pennsylvania, report that all Pennsylvania state constabulary in the eastern half of the state have been moved into the western end, where strike service is expected.

One thousand special iron and coal police have been deputized to guard mines, mine properties and highways, in the Pittsburgh region. Barbed wire barricades are being hastily erected around many of the mines from which the union coal diggers are walking out.

Gov. Fisher, a close ally of the Mellon family, has placed the constabulary at the disposal of the operators, who are determined on a long war to break the union in western Pennsylvania or to cut union wages.

Prominent speakers will address the meeting. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Hands Off China, whose work is attracting much attention here.

Workers of all races will unite to protest against the imperialist massacres in China, to demand withdrawal of the United States forces, to stop the imperialist conquest of China. Admission is free.

CURRENT EVENTS

tensive interests in the district form a united front for the subjugation of the rising revolutionary movement in China? Is it because they are not equally antagonistic to the spread of revolutionary ideas and the establishment of a strong revolutionary governments in countries like China, long the prey of the capitalist bandits? Not at all. It is because each government is concerned, first, last and all the time, with the interests of the capitalist groups that it is the executive organ of. Only when the revolutionary conflagration threatens to engulf the lot of them do they make common cause and even then, only with their hands on their daggers ready to bury them in each other's spines. For which mutual love, good lord we give thee thanks.

DESPITE all those differences it is always safe to reckon wrongly on the right side of caution. There is a strong probability that the United States is already committed by a secret agreement with Great Britain to war on the Nationalist government in China. It is well to again remind our readers that Britain's benevolent neutrality towards the political rape of Nicaragua by Uncle Sam was traded off for Uncle Sam's benevolent attitude towards Great Britain's murderous policy in China. In addition the United States government may feel that a free revolutionary China would encourage the Filipinos to break the bonds that bind them to Wall Street. Wall Street intends to hold on to the Philippines and even the the Yankee trader may lose the Chinese market perhaps the Yankee rubber barons are thinking in terms of decades rather than the immediate future.

A NENT rumors of thiung Kui-Shek plans to break with the Kuomintang, his aim to oust the Communists from the organizations and his intention to set up an independent government in Shanghai, the National Finance minister stated that it is quite true that there is friction in the party, just as there is in every party, but scouted the report that the general had the intentions attributed to him. It is a case of the wish being father to the thoughts of the imperialists. They are amazed to learn that the Nationalist leaders are not purchaseable. They find themselves dealing with a political party that controls the military chiefs, something novel in Chinese history.

WALTER DURANTY in a Moscow cable to the New York Times of last Sunday takes a subtle rap at the optimistic capitalist correspondents in Shanghai who build on Chang's defection from the Nationalist cause. Duranty says that Chang's son is making revolutionary speeches in Moscow, that he is a member of the Young Communist League and declares that he is preparing to help direct New China along the revolutionary path blazed by the Russian revolution. The son of General Feng of the Kominchun army is also a member of the Young Communist League and has the same aspiration as his comrade. This should not prove encouraging news for the international plunderers.

PRAVDA, MOSCOW DAILY, SCORES NEW IMPERIALIST ULTIMATUM TO CHINA

Denouncing the bombardment of Nanking, the leading article in today's Pravda scores the imperialist ultimatum to China.

"After converting the workers' district of Nanking into bedlam and shooting thousands of peaceful Chinese citizens how else can we interpret the imperialist ultimatum but as a glamorous jeering against the Chinese people, as a new signal for attacking the Chinese revolution," the Pravda asks.

Virtual Blockade Now

The ultimatum, according to the imperialists, is a "well-deserved answer to Nanking violence." The Pravda asks, "But whose violence," and continues, "the only ones who have the right to present an ultimatum are the working masses of China to the imperialist oppressors. The English imperialists threaten to blockade the ports of the Nationalist Government. Practically the imperialist plunderers already occupy most of Shanghai. Their ships already blockade the Chinese coast, the international quarter of Canton is already an armed fortress. In fact they not only wish to blockade Chinese ports but on occasion to bombard them.

"The use of every means of strangling the Chinese Revolution is the plan of the imperialists in China. If the Chinese revolution develops it will radically change the political face of the world. The imperialists and their Chinese counter-revolutionists have suffered disastrous defeat at Shanghai and Nanking. Their efforts to help the Northern militarists throws a great responsibility on the international proletariat."

minister said in concluding the interview, that the complete reorganization of party control resulting from these decisions of the Central Executive Committee's Plenary Session has placed the entire revolutionary movement upon a much sounder basis and has enormously strengthened the revolution.

Manifesto Declares Support of Masses First Duty.

The final act of the Plenary session was the preparation of a general manifesto to the people of China which in summary is as follows:

"Our national revolutionary movement against imperialism and the feudal militaristic forces has entered a new stage since the occupation by the northern expedition of the Wuhan cities. In comparison with the former stage the present one may be characterized as follows:

"Nearly half the country is now released from direct oppression by the militarists allies and tools of imperialism.

"The imperialistic powers, especially Britain, were forced by the defeat of their allies Wu Pei-fu and Sun Chuan-fang, and by the direct struggle of the revolutionary masses, to agree to abolish some of their 'privileges' in exploiting our people through downright colonial methods.

"The imperialistic powers, especially England, while being forced to give in unessentials to the Nationalist government, are concentrating under false pretexts their forces in Shanghai and other points to help the northern counter-revolutionary forces in their coming decisive battles and to crush the developing revolutionary struggle of the masses of our people.

"At the same time the counter-revolutionary forces in the territory of the Nationalist government—militocracies, compradores, landowners, gentries and followers of Tuan Chi-jui, the diplomatic clique—are sabotaging the policies of the government, mobilizing their forces to strike the revolution in the back.

"But besides the aggressive actions of the imperialists especially of Britain, which are directed against our revolution the imperialistic powers and their servants the northern militarists are plotting to disintegrate the revolutionary front from within. Although the fact that our enemies are obliged to resort to such tactics is a sign of the growth of our revolution, nevertheless we must be on watch.

"The recent policy of the imperialists, who proclaimed that they were in accord with the 'national aspirations of the Chinese people and are willing to cooperate with the 'moderates' but are against the 'radicals' is clearly calculated to break the revolutionary front from within.

"In order to create a public opinion in the western countries favorable to intervention the imperialist powers, especially England, are calumniating our revolution by spreading through the numerous bought agencies monstrous lies about events in China.

Soviet Russia A Friend.

"The reactionary government of England is threatening Soviet Russia, the friend of revolutionary China, by impertinent notes aimed at weakening the revolutionary spirit of China, and at isolating the Chinese revolution from the oppressed masses of the other countries of the world.

"But the sympathies of the toiling masses of England and other countries as well as the oppressed people, is more and more with the Chinese revolution in spite of the schemes of their opportunist leaders to break the national revolutionary front in China and to create misunderstanding in the west about the real nature of the Chinese revolution.

"From the above characteristics of the present situation we must draw our line of action. The enlarged session of the Kuomintang Central Executive Committee declares to all members of the party and to all citizens of the country that in order to bring the revolution to a successful conclusion we will do the following:"

New Program.

The line of action in the paragraphs which then follow is summarized as follows:

The Kuomintang will continue its support of the revolutionary movement of the workers, peasants and of the democratic masses in the cities in their struggle for economic betterment. The party will create a labor ministry to direct and carry on the labor policy of the party. "We will oppose the fight against those who preach a lowering down of the movement of the masses, falsely claiming that they are creating trouble for the revolution."

There will be organization of the masses in the cities and rural districts for their self-government. The manifesto says that the party will continue the struggle against imperialism until the goal is reached, which is the real political and economic independence of China; it will fight against those tired of revolution and those who seek a compromise with the imperialist countries.

Help Small Nations.

"But any country which meets the real aspirations of Nationalist China even halfway need not entertain any anxiety as to its legitimate economic interests." The relations with Soviet Russia will be strengthened, the manifesto declares, and it adds that Nationalist China will help the small nations in Chinese teritory—the Mongolians and Mahometans—to achieve self-determination. Closer cooperation will be established between the revolutionary armies and the people so that the soldiers will feel that they are "the best sons of the nation."

Pravda Raps Coolidge Fake Peace Policies

MOSCOW, April 4.—The Coolidge policy of speaking gentle words of peace while ordering more troops and warships to China is caricatured in a cartoon in the Pravda.

Coolidge is shown standing on the bridge of a battleship bristling with guns trained on Shanghai, while a rifle belt attached to the bridge bears the label "Neutrality."

Oakland, Calif. Holds "Hands off China" Meet; Tsiang Speaks

OAKLAND, Calif., April 4.—A "Hands Off China" meeting was held by the Workers Education Club at Fraternity Hall, 7th & Peralta streets. An enthusiastic audience listened to an address on "The New China" by H. T. Tsiang, editor of "The Chinese Guide to America."

Mr. Tsiang emphasized the fact that the struggle in China was not one between the northern and southern Chinese, as it is reported in the capitalistic press, but is instead a struggle of the workers and peasants of China against imperialism and militarism for political and economic democracy and the restoration of Chinese national rights and sovereignty.

Resolutions were adopted by the meeting petitioning our government to withdraw American naval forces from Chinese waters.

The "Empros," Our Greek Communist Weekly, to Join the Ranks of Dailies

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

ONE of the sure indications of the increasing strength of the Communist movement is shown by the mounting influence of its press. No Communist publication can long survive if it does not enlist an ever wider support among the masses of the workers.

To be sure, a group of workers may well overestimate their strength, they may build their press on too large a scale, and fail to achieve their ambitions. That would be a case of mistaken judgment that must be guarded against.

This latter estimate, however, surely does not apply to the Greek workers in the United States who accept the leadership of the Greek Section of the Workers (Communist) Party.

They have builded their press on a strong foundation. Their present organ, altho a weekly, has the widest influence, acting not only as a spokesman for Greek workers in this country, but also in other lands to which Greek workers have been exiled or driven by economic necessity, as well as in fascist Greece today.

It is with great pleasure that The DAILY WORKER extends its greetings that appeared today on page one to its brother organ, The Empros. The removal of this militant publication of our Communist movement to New York signifies two things:

FIRST:—That our Greek comrades are striving to get in touch with ever broader masses of workers who speak their language.

SECOND:—That they are confident that New York City will provide the basis for building their weekly into a DAILY EMPROS.

Greek workers are no strangers to the American class struggle. In many conflicts of the coal miners, notably in labor's heroic efforts against the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, owned by the Rockefeller interests in this Rocky Mountain state, were the Greek workers especially noted for their courage in the class struggle.

In the steel strikes, in the copper fields, in the iron mining districts, the Greek workers have also been in the forefront of the battle against the class enemy of labor. The Empros speaks the spirit of this struggle.

Thus, in any great industrial district The Empros would be among its friends and supporters. In New York City, however, The Empros has the support of the large number of Greek workers in the fur industry as well as in the food industries. It is estimated that in New York City and vicinity at least a million workers are engaged in the preparation and handling of food, the daily necessity of the growing population of the metropolis. Among these there are large and influential numbers of Greek workers.

The spirit displayed by these workers in the past, in support of their press, indicates that there is every possibility of soon establishing The Daily Empros, thus adding to the battery of Communist dailies helping to build the left wing of the labor movement, to carry the slogans of militancy to ever-increasing masses of workers.

In their struggle the Greek workers will develop their mass daily organ, on a smaller scale perhaps, but in proportion just as our Freiheit, published in Jewish, showed itself to be by filling Madison Square Garden for its Fifth Anniversary last Saturday night.

All workers struggling to establish their English-language organ, The DAILY WORKER, may rest assured that the Greek workers will give every possible assistance in the future, as they have done in the past, in this effort.

They recognize, just as workers in every foreign-language section of the American population have come to realize, that an English-language press is absolutely necessary. No argument was left after the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor turned loose their mad guns and opened up their campaign of attempted expulsions against the needle trades workers in New York city, that was considered exclusively the province of the foreign language press.

It is certain, therefore, that the Greek workers, as they build their own press, will continue to inspire thru their deeds all other workers in the building of The DAILY WORKER.

There are in New York City at the present time The Freiheit, published in Jewish; the Elore, in Hungarian; Latsve, in Lithuanian and The Daily News, Ukrainian. The DAILY WORKER only recently joined this quartet of Communist fighters. The coming of the Empros and its development into a daily will make a half dozen of dailies rallying the workers for an effective struggle.

It must not be forgotten that there are two weeklies, the Novy Mir, in Russian, and Lavoratore, in Italian. These weeklies have been dailies. The Italian and Russian workers are anxiously working to restore daily to their former effectiveness. The absence of an Italian daily, for instance, makes it impossible to rally the Italian workers in the mining industry, in the needle trades and elsewhere with the same degree of effectiveness that would be possible with an Italian daily in existence to lead the struggle.

What a mighty battery thundering for labor. But, no matter how mighty this battery is, it must and can be strengthened.

The army of readers of The DAILY WORKER today is approximately what The Freiheit had during the first two or three years of its existence. Then it began to grow by the proverbial "leaps and bounds," especially in the Joint Action Committee struggle in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, in New York City, in 1926, and during the furriers' strike that won the forty-hour, five-day week.

Our battery is strong but it must shoot at something It must shoot more effectively at the daily problems of the workers, the issues that immediately engage the attention of the masses, using them as levers to pry the workers loose from their conservatism and engage them for the greater struggles. On this basis every Communist daily will continue to make progress, even as progress is being made at the present time, altho not to the degree that would be desired. Progress made should be an urge to greater and more rapid progress.

It is in this spirit that I am sure not only The DAILY WORKER, but every other organ of the labor's left wing in New York City greets the coming of the Empros. Hail the Empros, fighting organ of the working class. Hail greater victories for the working class. Hail the victory of Communism.

Economic Notes

By T. LOAF.

THE lessened rate of steel production that developed in November and continued into the first weeks of the new year has changed during March to a new production peak that gives rise to a belief that March steel production would exceed the high figure of March '26 with its production of 4,448,362 tons.

According to the leading authorities of the trade, the steel industry is still pointing toward prosperity and showing a substantial expansion of business. The industry is working around 92 per cent. capacity while the U. S. Steel Co., has reached its capacity.

To give a correct explanation and estimation of this new activity, one would have to study the various consuming lines that form the outlets for the present high production, chief among which are the building operations, agricultural implements, railroads, automobile production, oil and gas industry, etc. Likewise one would have to investigate how far the production tonnage of the last two years was keeping in line with the other industries and with the general growth of the country.

The nearest but necessarily merely a partial explanation for this expansion of steel operation is given by the probable policy of stocking up in anticipation of the bituminous coal strike. Steel companies operating their own mines in Pennsylvania report an influx of union miners seeking employment; they fear or profess to fear that this rush might be aiming at "stirring up trouble" among "their" mine employes. Reason enough, by the way, for "steel prices to show firmer tendencies."

MANY remember the great jubilation demonstrated by the spokesmen of capitalism and the entire crowd of capitalist scribes over the conclusion of the Franco-German steel agreement. It was greeted as a step toward the "reconciliation" not only between France and Germany but between all the other European countries (with the notable exception of the Soviet Union) and was linked to that abortive "congress" at Vienna that was supposed to do away with the trade barriers between these countries and to inaugurate a "European Federation."

Hardly was the steel cartel established and the "high political and economic aim" of the cartel was not only forgotten, but the cartel was sharply attacked by the German participants who considered themselves to have been "tricked." Gone were the pretensions that the cartel would moderate trade competition, still more that it would "foster international harmony." The Germans now pointed out what the Communists had been maintaining from the very start that "the steel agreement did not mean economic peace, but merely a truce between the struggle for markets and the struggle over quotas". In other words, it is but a shifting of the fight into an internal one, within the cartel itself.

Now, the German attack—though it has been caused by the changed condition of France and Belgium (more or less stabilized currency) on the one side and the changed condition of Germany (expanding market) on the other—was in itself a ruse to reach an agreement with the English industrialists. The matter is still pending, but curiously enough it developed lately an American angle.

WHEN the news of the formation of the steel cartel was published in the American press Mr. Gary, the chairman of the U. S. Steel Corporation made a declaration that the cartel would probably help the steel producers in the U. S. and surely would not harm them. A few months later Mr. Gary complains of a severe and menacing competition of the European steel manufacturers "whose labor cost in production and transportation cost in delivery ware materially less than those of the mills in the United States." The significance for American labor of this declaration was already pointed out in "The DAILY WORKER" of March 17 (see article "Drive Against the Wages of the American Workers") and it is but accentuated by the simultaneous announcement of the same gentleman that "no wage cuts were planned".

Mr. Gary is apparently considering at present the advisability for the steel trust to join the cartel. A side show of the affair is offered however by the stand of the head of the second largest steel producer in the U. S., Mr. Schwab of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, who has only words of praise for the cartel and refuses to see in it any source of worry to the American producers. It is being rumored that probable large investments in companies that are a part of the cartel?

WHETHER the foreign inroads in the steel trade of the U. S. producers are already of importance or not, the truth of the matter is that the world (chiefly European) competition begins to let itself felt and that it will constitute a new problem for American industry and commerce. It is already a "thorn in the side" of the iron pipe industry. Just recently Coolidge had to raise the tariff on iron ore from 75 to 112½ cents per ton this time the competition comes from British India), whereas Mr. Gary complains of sharp price cutting in on various steel lines because of the German competition.

However, the earning of the steel companies in 1926 as well as those predicted for the first quarter of 1927 prove that the home market is as yet capacious enough to guarantee high profits. Steel consumption in the United States is many times greater per head of population than in any other country and is steadily increasing. It grew from 360 pounds per head in 1900 to about 930 in 1926 The United States produced in 1926 39,000,000 tons of pig iron out of a total world production of 76,000,000 tons (51.3 per cent.) and 48,000,000 tons of steel ingots and casting out of a total world production of 91,000,000 tons (52.7 per cent.).

The net profits of twenty eight iron and steel companies, including the largest ones, for the year ended December 31st, 1926, totaled $302,282,297 compared with $154,593,750 in 1925, an increase of $47,689,147 or 30.8 per cent. (Journal of Commerce and Commercial). Even the smaller companies show losses, but the few giant corporations make fabulous profits. Here are the figures:

	Net Profits
	Years ended		Per cent
	1926	1925	Increase
U. S. Steel Corp.	116,667,401	90,602,653	28.7
Bethlehem Steel Corp.	20,246,487	13,858,496	46.0
Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp	13,149,094	8,554,491	52.1
Inland Steel Co.	7,117,701	4,869,735	46.7
Crucible Steel Co.	6,347,730	5,703,619	14.8
Republic Iron & Steel Co.	5,065,022	3,813,484	32.8
Wheeling Steel Corp.	5,006,460	4,073,295	22.9

A FEW words about the U. S. Steel Corporation. It is known in the business world for its "sound financial policies" and "conservative distribution of profits". It paid out in the period 1920-25 in dividends only 66 per cent. of the net income and in 1926 only 52 per cent., the balance going to surplus, improving properties, etc. Very illuminative is a comparative table showing the diversion of the U. S. Steel's dollar for 1926 and the four six-year periods from 1902 to 1925 (Wall Street Journal, March 26th):

	1926 cents	1920-25 cents	1914-19 cents	1908-13 cents	1902-07 cents
Wages	43.52	44.71	38.34	35.54	30.47
General expenses	32.38	31.36	32.19	33.46	37.92
Taxes	4.88	5.17	12.12	1.98	0.85
Depreciation	5.98	1.84	4.11	5.22	5.72
Interest	2.35	2.85	3.36	7.55	7.52
Net for stock	10.86	8.07	9.14	14.25	17.52
	100	100	100	100	100

We notice that in 1926 together with an increase of the "net for stock" from 8.07 for the period 1920-24 to 10.86 went a decrease in "labor's share" from 44.71 to 43.52. The corporation points out that this was due not to a lower wage but to "higher efficiency of labor" because of regular employment and labor-saving devices, in other words to more intensive exploitation of labor. In fact, according to the company's data, the average wage in 1926 was slightly higher than in 1925, $1844 against $1828. This would mean an increase in wages of less than 1 per cent, whereas the earnings increased more than 28 per cent.

We call the attention of the A. F. of L. Executive to this fact and remind them of their noble resolution at the Atlantic City convention (1925) on labor's share in profits from increased labor efficiency. We see how splendidly it works in the case of the steel trust. It is because all the aggressive spirit that is forthcoming from the A. F. of L. bureocracy is directed only against the left wing in the labor unions, while any resolution against the capitalist exploiters is mere cant or better a love serenade of an impotent.

Mora Millionaires.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—"Prosperity" and deep slashes in taxes have stirred the greatest crop of millionaire incomes" ever known, income tax figures made public by the Bureau of Internal Revenue disclosed.

More than 9,000 persons streaked into the ranks of Americans boasting annual incomes of $50,000 and over during 1925.

Scab Bus Company Tries Welfare.

NEW YORK (FP),—Bus drivers and dime collectors for the Fifth Avenue Coach Co. are to have 10% of the company's net earnings as an annual bonus, announces President F. T. Wood. The company's policy is definitely anti-union. The bonus will amount to only $100,000 for 1,850 workers, or about a dollar a week if it were paid in the form of wage advances.

Our China War

By WILLIAM PICKENS

Field Secretary, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

WE called the Germans bad names when they threw a few long-distance shells into the streets of Paris, aven tho they were at war with Paris. But the other day British warships and their imitating American cousins bombarded this peaceful, non-combatant and innocent people of the Chinese city of Nanking. And on what pretext? Because, as they say, a single American missionary had been murdered. If we should grant that a white man was murdered in cold blood by a marauding Chinese mob, that could furnish no excuse whatsoever for the brutal murder of 2,000 Chinese by American and English warships. We have mobs in the United States, and when they turn loose and murder somebody, our government does not shoot up their wives and children to pay for it. The Germans were at war with Paris, but were not even at war with China, and our shooting of their non-combatants as if they were dogs, was an act of savage revenge. We were simply showing our might,—and damn the right! We had the big guns. We could get away with it. There was a big fee hypocritical it makes us appear when contrasted with out outcry against "German atrocities" (which never existed) a few years ago. We knew when we were exclaiming against the Germans, that we were not better than the worst of our enemies,—but we were simply bawling because the Germans had thought of poison gas before we thought of it. If we had only thought of it first, we would have put it down to our superior science and brains.

Every honest man must confess that one of the marvels of the present situation is HOW FEW foreigners have been killed or injured in this civil war in China. We wonder how on earth the fighting Chinese can keep from killing a lot of "dumb" missionaries who insist on staying in the way,—doubtless on the superiority of their military backing, rather than on the Lord. If these missionaries were really Christian brothers to the Chinese, they would get out, for the time being, instead of standing around in the way, and so furnishing an excuse to their barbarous gunboat commanders for slaughtering Chinese people when a single white man gets hit.

Altho the English and American naval commanders jumped quickly to the pretext that one American had been killed and a British soldier or two hurt,—we suspect that the real inspiration was to protect Standard Oil's "Socony Hill" at Nanking, and the vested interests of the British. And we at home are so dull-witted that these fellows will get away with it: we will go on believing that our navy is on a sacred mission of the necessary protection of life. If they wanted to protect life, they would be taking the whites out of China to Manila or elsewhere, to stay until the Chinese war is over. That would be simpler and easier and cheaper, than standing off on the sea and making fiercer enemies out of the Chinese by slaughtering their babies on the slightest excuse of injury to any European. As it is, instead of our protecting life there, we westerners are about the greatest menace to life that Nanking or the rest of China has ever seen. Even the Europeans in the city were in more actual danger from the bombardment than they had ever been in from the Chinese.

Very soon our militarists and capitalists and newspapers will have us all frothing at the mouth hating Chinese and prating about "Chinese atrocities," as if the world ever knew any greater atrocity than this wholesale and indiscriminate murder by British and American war vessels.

Editor, Daily Worker:—The New Masses recently went through a severe castigation at the hands of several of our "hard-boiled" comrades, and while I personally believe that the criticisms were a trifle unjust, and in a few instances, absurd, I find that no one has yet taken the field on the part for a statement made in LOUD SPEAKER and OTHER ESSAYS.

Personally I have only the highest regard for Comrade Gold. He seems to be the only revolutionary writer the New Masses has that feels a hate, and axpresses this hate in terrific words. But what about this statement? "Respectable heads borne on bloody poles are not as revolutionary as a hundred typewriters drumming out statistics and manifestos."

Has Comrade Gold indeed reached such a cynicism? Has he fallen for the bunk that has seduced Albert Jay Nock, Upton Sinclair, Charles E. S. Wood, James Oneal, and a multitude of other "revolutionists by habit and nature" who cleverly want to be revolutionary without the writers who analyze from the outside, and Marx declared in the Communist Manifesto, "they (the Communists) openly declare that their ends can be achieved only by the forcible overthrow of all existing social conditions."

I do not underestimate the value of manifestos and revolutionary propaganda. They will help to bring about the ultimate revolution. But the final success of the proletarian will not be by a manifesto. It is easy to declare that the existing putrid social order is at an end, but unfortunately the capitalists and their lackeys have also a mind on the matter.

What did Lenin say in a letter addressed to his State and Revolution? "It is more pleasant and more useful to live through the experience of a revolution than to write about it."

Peonage In The Golden State.

Editor, Daily Worker.—The unemployment situation is extremely acute in the agricultural districts of California, especially the cotton belts. Many Mexicans, whites, and Negroes are working for what they can eat. Some ranchers, taking advantage of the situation and the general unrest, refuse to pay any money wages at all. They make arrangements with the local storekeeper to allow the employe a limited amount of credit. This practically enslaves the worker since he is unable to get enough money to leave the district.

Where cash wages are paid, they are generally the very lowest figures possible. The competition for jobs is so keen that from $1.25 to $1.50 per diem is offered for a nine-hour day in the Palo Verde Valley.

Cotton pickers are urged to come into the valley in the fall. They are usually given just about enough work to keep themselvos going until the cotton is harvested. When the cotton is gone (about February) a horde of broke, stranded agricultural laborers is on hand for the spring planting. Hence, although the ranchers pay $1.50 per cwt. for picking, the crop is planted for practically nothing, the labor expense being practically negligible.

BOOKS

MOTHER JONES AND THE MINERS.

—An Epoch In Labor History.

Autobiography of Mother Jones. Chas. H. Kerr & Co., Chicago. $1.50.

Although written in the first person, this book is a series of flash-light pictures of the battles of the coal miners. The "principals" of law and order, the carefully cultivated theory that Americans are so very peaceful and reasonable, the notion that the stern battling for elementary human rights with rifles is something alien to American labor history, are so prevalent that it comes almost as a shock to find here an old woman boasting of her American citizenship, of which she says on the first page of her life story, "I have always been proud," and still standing before the West Virginia statehouse and telling the crowd of miners to save their money and buy guns.

The miners' struggle has never been a peaceful one. It cannot be. The operators resort to violence. Mother Jones, this old, old woman who survived her husband and children before she even entered the labor movement, and served in it then for half a century, rendered her final mature, unwilling judgment in Cooper Union, in the evening of her life, when, speaking for Rockefeller's slaves, she had to say: "The miners lost because they had only the constitution. The other side had bayonets. In the end, bayonets always win."

If it had not been for this involuntary militancy of the miners of America, if it had not been for the hundreds and thousands of cases, which Mother Jones saw and many of which she reports in her autobiography, of miners shot in the back, of miners clubbed to death, of miners burned alive with their wives and children as at Ludlow, of women raped and tortured and children beaten into unconsciousness by brutal, powar-crazed company police in the uniform of the state or merely with the badges of the coal companies over their hard hearts, Mother Jones would not have been the figure she is today. It seems she started out to be a dressmaker.

But the legal lynchings that followed the Haymarket affair when she was forty-one years old, and her immersion immediately thereafter in the struggles of the United Mine Workers of America, then a rising, vigorous, rapidly growing union, made a labor leader of her. Her particular function in life came to be the driving onward of forlorn hopes. While helping some miner's wife to lay out for burial the children dead of filth from living in company houses, and malnourished from trying to live on the company's starvation wages, she would get a hurried call from some harrassed local official, "For God's sake, come over to Roaring Branch, Pennsylvania," or it might be Hazleton, or Fairmont, West Virginia, or somewhere in Colorado, where the miners were heartsick, and broken with the long struggle, and ready to go back to work. And she would go, and with flaming words, and with bolstering of the lagging courage, and send many back to face the terrors, the black death of starvation, the bloody brutal death at the hands of company gunmen, and the horror of a longer strike, which they must face, nevertheless, or suffer slower but even more certain destruction in the company's power, after a lost strike.

She tells of plenty of plain murder, like the shooting at Holly Grove, West Virginia, less known now than the Ludlow affair, but strongly resembling it in showing the same coal company tactics:

"The day before I arrived, an operator named Quinn Morton, the sheriff of Kanawaha County, deputies and guards drove an armored train with gatling guns through Holly Grove, the tent colony of the miners, while they were sleeping. Into the quiet tents of the workers the guns were fired, killing and wounding the sleepers. A man by the name of Epstaw rose and picked up a couple of children and told them to run for their lives. His feet were shot off. . . . No one was arrested."

Or this, a little incident at Stamford Mountain, West Virginia, forgotten now, covered up by the stories of so many more like it that have happened later:

"As I came nearer the miners' homes, I could hear sobbing. Then I saw between the stilts that propped up a miner's shack the clay red with blood. I pushed open the door. On a mattress, wet with blood, lay a miner. His brains had been blown out while he slept. His shack was riddled with bullets.

"In five other shacks men lay dead. In one of them a baby boy and his mother sobbed over the father's corpse. When the little fellow saw me he said, 'Mother Jones, bring back my papa to me. I want to kiss him.'

"The coroner came. He found that these six men had been murdered in their beds while they peacefully slept, shot by gunmen in the employ of the coal company."

And Ludlow has been so often described that it cannot be repeated here. It is any wonder that the miners of Illinois formally celebrate "Virden Day" every year, with parades and song making, in memory of a battle rich in casualties, in which nevertheless miners were victorious, and drove from the state a trainload of armed gunmen and scabherders? Herein only carried on a tradition old in the history of American coal mining.

Of course Mother Jones faced death too. She was convicted of murder once. Another time a plot was made to arrest her on a trivial charge, and burn her in the coke ovens—she would not be the first to burn in those ovens! Many times she was shot at. Once she stood with her back to a tree and defied two company skunks who had boasted they would like to hang her: "Here is the tree, and here is the old woman," but that time there were too many miners around for the rope to be usaful.

She had her clashes with the miners' union officials too. In fact, the slow growth of a disillusion in the union bureaucracy is a feature of the book. Back in the old days, there were men like District President Wilson, in Pannsylvania.

"One by one he killed his chickens and his hogs. Everything he had he shared. He ate dry bread, and drank chickory. He knew every hardship that the rank and file of the organization knew. We do not have such leaders now."

And Organizer Miles Daugherty, at Shamokin. "When he quit work and drew his pay, he gave one-half of his pay envelope to his wife and the other half he kept to rent halls and pay for lights for the union. Organizers did not draw much salary in those days, and they did heroic, unselfish work."

Now union officials draw too much salary, international President Lewis gets his $12,000 a year, and worse than that, District President Frank Farrington suddenly left his office last year when it was discovered he was drawing $25,000 from the Peabody Coal Company.

In reference to this book, Clarence Darrow defends International President John Mitchell—Mother Jones says that Mitchell, once poor, betrayed strike after strike, and died with a fortune of a million dollars—"He was not dishonest, but he had a weak point, and that was his love of flattery." Ah, but that millop!

Mother Jones is not ready to think evil of labor leaders she still believes in John Fitzpatrick, because he stood by Foster's side during the great steel strike. There is a chapter on the strike, in which she tells of their lives in constant danger, of the gunmen following them, of Foster's office in which no chairs could be permitted or the place would be raided as a "meeting," and of the shooting and bayoneting of workers, and workers' families.

The fact that Foster went on from this great object lesson to a place in the ranks of Communism, and Fitzpatrick retreated, beaten, from one step to another—this is not mentioned.

Neither is there one word in the book against John Lewis, directly —only by implication, and as part of a group, and a new class of bureaucrat officials which she despises: In the last chapter, significantly entitled, "Progress in Spite of Leaders," she holds up to scorn the "modern leaders of labor" who have wandered far from the thorny path of those early crusaders. Never in the early days of struggle would you find leaders wining and dining with the aristocracy; nor did their wives strut about like diamond-bedecked peacocks; nor were they astounded by humiliated, cringing colored servants."

Could she have been thinking of John L. Lewis, dining last year in Springfield, with Peabody, the czar of the Illinois coal mines, at a feast where the principle speeches were for separate wage agreements and a cut in the miners' wages? Or of other little dinners of the sort?

Mother Jones is shown by her autobiography to be what Darrow says she is: An honest old woman, a warrior of flaming zeal and courage. Now she is very old, and the fight is more complex.

But workers who know the miners' history will have confidence that new leaders will arise, including new leaders of her own type. And, "The future is in Labor's strong, rough hands."

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

MR. JOHN H. WALKER, alias "Honest John" Walker, alias "Weeping Johnny" did not pay a single cent in income tax on the graft he is alleged to have received in return for his political activities in behalf of the election of Frank L. Smith, Samuel Insull's successful candidate for the United States senate from the state of Illinois. Mr. Walker, as president of the Illinois Federation of Labor threw the weight of his influence on the side of Mr. Smith, and senator Caraway of Arkansas, a democrat, being a practical politician and discounting the virture of honesty, made haste to state on the senate floor that goodly sums of money were disbursed by Smith's treasurer to help Mr. Walker bring his followers to the polls to vote for Mr. Smith.

INDIGNATION swelled within Mr. Walker's altruistic breast and this feeling was communicated to other labor officials whose motives in supporting capitalist politicians might be the target for popular suspicion unless the calumny cast upon Mr. Walker was buried beneath a mountain of trade union resentment. Mr. Walker busied himself forthwith but only succeeded in strengthening the impression that "Honest John" was explaining too much.

TIME is a great healer and months after Mr. Walker had recuperated from the strain of serving the working class for the paltry sum of $5,500 a year in addition to suffering severe soul-wounds from an unscrupulous enemy, he summed up enough moral strength to again write Senator Caraway after "Honest John" in proof of his honesty—as if such proof were needed—filled out his income tax blanks as a good citizen and paid shekels to the internal revenue department on just $5,500 a year. This is where "Honest John" had Senator Caraway by the most tender part of his public conscience and Mr. Walker was no slow to seize the opportunity to humiliate a foe and get his own name in the papers again, this time minus a hint of scandal.

MR. WALKER dictated a letter to the senator in which he reminded him of his original accusation and contributed to the senator's sum total of general knowledge the information already alluded to. "Now" queried John in effect, "if I had received money for political activities besides my regular salary as president of the Illinois Federation of Labor would I not as an honest citizen tot up those sums and pay taxes on them to my government." This appears to be unanswerable and so it is. Senator Caraway came back with the reply that he did not intend to reflect on Mr. Walker's integrity but put a little gall in John's cup of joy by stating that he never heard of Mr. Walker before the true be mentioned his name in connection with the slush fund scandal. Now that "Honest John" has cinched his honesty and is square with the internal revenue department the trade unionists of Illinois can go to sleep with an easy conscience since their leader is exonerated.

THAT even professors do not always know what they are talking about is revealed by an article in the State Journal of Wisconsin by a Chinese university student who has taken issue with Professor H. L. Russell of the University of Wisconsin on the Chinese question. The professor spent two months in China and considered himself thereby equipped to tell an American audience all about the country. One of the inaccuracies given expression to by Mr. Russell who does not know a word of the Chinese language was that there are several different languages in China. The Chinese student corrects the professor stating that there is only one written language for all China tho there are several dialects. "Perhaps Dean Russell does not know the difference between a language and a dialect" asks the polite student.

WHAT the Chinese student does not do to the dean is not worth putting on paper. Had this man Russell been burdened with a sensitive soul he would have jumped into one of the many lakes that abound around Madi-

CHICAGO ARMED CAMP AS VOTERS FLOCK TO POLLS

Charge Democrats With Bombing Own Buildings

CHICAGO, April 5.—This is election day and in less than three hours after the opening of the polls more than half of the total registered vote of 1,146,400 had been cast, a record. This in spite of the fact that the supporters of the two chief contending forces, representing armed camps, with every professional thug and gunman aligned on one side or the other.

The first salute of the battle occurred early this morning before the opening of the polls when two democratic precinct headquarters in the 42nd ward on the north side were simultaneously bombed. No one was injured and no arrests were made. This ward is a Thompson republican stronghold and it is generally believed that the democrats bombed their own headquarters in an effort to excite sympathy for themselves, just as "Big Bill" Thompson's gang circulated leaflets among the Negroes attacking him in order to deceive the voters of Chicago's great "Black Belt" on the south side.

The police force, under the direction of William E. Dever, the democratic mayor who is fighting for his political life, is busy rounding up and jailing the more aggressive gangsters in the Thompson camp.

Meanwhile the two leading candidates, William Hale Thompson and William E. Dever, issued the customary pre-election prophesies regarding the certainty of victory.

Dever, the present mayor, backed by the George Brennan outfit that took graft from the traction magnate, Samuel Insull, in the last congressional election, asserts: "I have won this fight. The people of Chicago are not going back to the scandalous days which preceded my administration. I will continue to be mayor of Chicago for four years."

Former Mayor Thompson, who is supported by Samuel Insull's creature, Frank Smith, who tried to steal with traction trust money a seat in the United States senate, prophesies thusly: "I tried to run a clean and decent fight, but Mayor Dever and his boss, George Brennan, would not permit it. I have tried my best to get the truth to the people. The people are the government. They know the facts. The future rests in their hands."

A third candidate, Dr. John Dill Robertson, independent-republican, is contributing to the gaiety of the day by proclaiming that he will receive more votes than both of his opponents combined.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Selecting Hewitt Jury.

JEFFERSON, O., April 5.—Preliminary arrangements are being made here today to draw another jury panel of fifty names, owing to the belief that the original panel of 75 will be insufficient to permit selection of a jury to try Floyd Hewitt, 18-year-old boy, charged with beating Fred Brown, Jr., 5, to death near Conneaut, February 16. He has also been indicted for killing the little boy's mother, Mrs. Fred Brown.

Court No Beauty Parlor.

The attitude of a city magistrate on the feminine foible of powdering the nose, was heard throughout the corridors of the New Lenox Avenue Court in Brooklyn yesterday, when a pretty brunette attempted to perform the operation.

Magistrate Mortimer S. Brown said: "This court is not a beauty parlor. I think you women should come to court prepared and not have to foll us here. I think it is disgraceful. If I ever find another woman using the court for a beauty parlor, I'll fine her ten dollars."

K. O. For Dempsey.

TRENTON, N. J., April 5.—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion of the world, today won the first skirmish of his defensive fight against his former manager, Jack Kearns when Federal District Court Judge Joseph L. Bodine refused to set a date for trial of Kearns' breach of contract suit for $800,000.

Protest Prison Goods.

WASHINGTON, April 5. (FP).—Resolutions of the Central Labor Council protest against the proposed manufacture by inmates of the District of Columbia workhouse, of automobile license plates. The American Federation of Labor holds that this is a purely state-use plan, and does not bring convict-made goods into the open sales market.

Moncada, Liberal, Leads Troops in Great Battle Against U. S. Hirelings

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, April 5.—A great battle is reported under way in the Chantales area, centering about Cerro de Caballo. General Moncada, liberal leader, is reported to be personally at the front directing the troops.

2,500 STRIKING PAINTERS WIN A NEW WAGE SCALE

Victory for 1500 Still Out Now in Sight

With more than 125 of the 175 boss painters having agreed to their demand for $14 a day, instead of $12, a complete victory for the 4,000 painters of Brooklyn who went out on strike Monday morning is in sight.

Over 2,500 men have already returned to work on the basis of the new wage scale, according to officials of the union, and the remaining workers are expected to win their demands momentarily.

Injunction Hearing Postponed.

Meanwhile, Supreme Court Justice Callaghan yesterday adjourned until Friday the argument on a motion to continue the temporary injunction restraining the painters from striking against 27 of the employers.

Court Order Futile

Julius F Newman, lawyer for the workers, against whom the injunction is aimed declared that "It is obvious that these men will be at liberty to remain away from jobs that say $12 a day when others doing the same work have succeeded in getting $14 a day."

Under these circumstances there is a serious possibility the injunction against the strikers will have only theoretical importance

Agreements With Individual Bosses.

The present victory of the painters, in addition to the pay increase, is important because of the fact that the workers have refused to deal with the bosses' association. They deny that the employers are actually interested in "collective agreements," but will use the association merely as a weapon to establish the open shop and smash their union.

More Sapiro Graft Exposed by Reed in Detroit Libel Suit

DETROIT, April 5.—The enormous sums of easy money obtained by Aaron Sapiro from working the fake cooperating gag on all classes and conditions of farmers piled up ever higher today under cross examination of Sapiro by Senator James A. Reed in the million dollar Ford-Sapiro libel suit being tried here in federal district court.

Sapiro told of receiving $1,000 for attending a three-day conference of the American Farm Bureau in Chicago in July, 1920.

Leaving for the time being the examination of Sapiro's activities in the cotton belt, Reed swung into the wheat belt today. It was further revealed that Sapiro had "offered" his services to the American Farm Bureau for $500 a month retainer and $2,000 a year for expenses in addition to the bureau establishing and maintaining an office in Chicago with a stenographer to do the work, while Sapiro's name appeared on the letter heads of the bureau. He also asked the sum of $10,000 a year for legal services from the committee of seven," a part of the bureau. This liberal offer was not accepted, altho he did "work" for the bureau for some time.

It was next disclosed that Sapiro received an additional $1,000 for attending four meetings of sub-committees of the committee of seven," a part of the bureau. Just what services he rendered ware not revealed.

Ford Is Recovering.

Meanwhile the billionaire, Henry Ford, is recovering from his injuries sustained last week in an auto wreck, and the baron of the vast feudal domain that has grown up around his slave pens will be able to testify in a short time regarding his part in the publicity that resulted in Sapiro bringing suit against him.

SHERIFF REFUSES TO ALLOW MINERS TO HAVE PICKETS

Braun Uses State Power To Help Scabbing

PITTSBURGH, April 5.—Sheriff Robert H. Braun, of Allegheny County, where 18,000 union miners are idle as a result of the bituminous suspension, served notice on miners today he would permit no picketing.

The Allegheny County sheriff made this announcement in explanation of his order forbidding the assemblage of three or more persons in the vicinity of mines operated with non-union miners.

Admits Objections

"While the rule may be objected to be some," said the sheriff, "I consider it absolutely necessary."

Commenting upon the protests of union officials, Sheriff Braun said he would not consider rescinding the order.

Union officials objected to the rule because it interfered with picketing. No more than two pickets may be stationed at any one mine at a time under the sheriff's order.

Constabulary men first enforced the order at the Gallatin mine of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, near Monongahela, dispersing 350 union miners and their sympathizers who sought to enlist the support of non-union miners.

Murray With Him

Sherriff Braun, who became the central figure in the controversy overnight in this region with his anti-picket ruling, made a tour of Allegheny county mines early today, accompanied by international vice-president Murray.

The trip was made at the suggestion of union officials who objected strenuously to the ruling. They desired that the sheriff observe the impact of the pickets in attempting to persuade non-union miners to quit work.

Union officials sought to have the sheriff modify his order to permit and increased number of pickets at non-union mines, they said.

Armed Troops on Scene as Miners Hold Big Parade

(Special Daily Worker.)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 5.—Tens of thousands of miners throughout Pittsburgh district came out in demonstrations on April 1st despite the mine guards, the demonstration this year were much larger and were more enthusiastic. Many non-union miners joined in the demonstration even at the risk of their jobs.

The miners of Monongahela City and vicinity, three thousand strong, marched beginning with 4 o'clock in the morning from Monongahela city to Gallatin. The Gallatin mine is working on the open shop basis. The marchers reached Gallatin in time when the mule were going into the mine for work. When the mules heard the band which was leading the parade, they stomped at the pit mouth and refused to go in despite the efforts of the scabs.

In Brownsville nearly 6,000 miners gathered from the mines of Brownsville and vicinity with banners of their respective locals and signs reading that no wage cuts will be accepted. The miners paraded throughout the city and then ended up with a huge mass meeting at Snowden Square. Pat Fagan and Kennedy were the main speakers and Harry Wadsworth of Daisytown was the chairman.

Hapgood Speaks.

In Avella the demonstration attracted 4,000 miners. In Cheswick Pa., 3,000 miners attended the mass meeting which was addressed by Powers Hapgood, Geo. Papcun, Tony Minerich and Citrone. In Library where the miners are on strike for nearly one year, the miners gathered from all parts of that region.

Armed Troopers.

State troopers fully armed are scattered throughout the coal region but no interference was encountered during the demonstrations.

District five is a strong progressive district. Most of the miners do not agree with the policy of Lewis and Pat Fagan. However they are determined to put up a solid front against the operators which was shown by their demonstrations on April 1st.

France Desires to Keep Ships; Other States to Keep Men

WASHINGTON, April 5.—France's official refusal of the invitation of Coolidge and Kellogg to attend the three power arms conference as an observer, has arrived.

The French reply, the text of which was made public today by the state department, sets forth anew the reasons for France's refusal to participate fully in the naval arms parley.

The French Government, the note stated, "cannot allow either the weakening of the authority of the League of Nations, already intrusted with the problems of disarmament, in which naval armaments cannot be separated from land and aerial armaments, or injuries to the principles of the equality of the powers, to which France remains firmly attached, or the exclusion from the discussions of essential states without whose collaboration no results can be obtained, or the abandonment of the technical principles on which the French delegates have admitted during the preparatory discussions it is possible to base a general limitation of armament."

France Keeps Ship.

GENEVA, April 5.—France like England must think of her security," declared M. Boncour, French delegate, addressing the league of Nations Preparatory Disarmament Conference this afternoon and announcing that "France cannot accept naval limitation by categories for fundamental reasons."

"France has already accepted the Naval reduction of the Washington Conference," said M. Boncour, "and if she accepted a reduction in big units it was because she wanted to conserve the right to develop small units."

Countries Line Up

The delegates of Jugo-Slavia, Roumania, Finland, Holland and Sweden announced their support of the French thesis in favor of limitation of total tonnage.

The Argentine delegate announced his nation supported the British thesis of limitation of categories.

Germany backs the French stand. The American delegate argued that limitation of vessels was practical, and of personnel not practical.

Italy Completes Anti-Russian Block; Offers Hungary Big Seaport

ROME, April 5. — A pact of friendship between Italy and Hungary was signed today by Premier Mussolini and Count Bethlen, Hungarian premier

The signature of the pact marks the successful attempt of Mussolini and the die-hard British cabinet to form a reactionary bloc in the Balkans. Italy by offering Hungary Fiume, a badly needed seaport, and recognizing Roumania's spurious claim to the Bessarabian treaty has forced every Balkan state but Jugo-Slavia into an anti-Soviet reactionary bloc.

Opposition to the Italian-Hungarian pact may be expected from Jugo-Slavia, which stands between Fiume and Hungary.

DENY SACCO, VANZETTI NEW TRIAL MUST DIE, SAYS HIGHEST COURT

Italian Radicals, Victims of Frame-up, Face Execution as Defense Loses Appeal

BOSTON, April 5.—The highest court in Massachusetts today again denied a new trial to Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

A decision handed down by the full bench of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts sustained the action of Judge Webster Thayer last October in refusing a new trial.

Must Die, Court Decides.

Judge Thayer will now pronounce sentence—death in the electric chair—upon Sacco and Vanzetti. He will at the same time set a date for their execution.

Next Move Uncertain.

The next legal step to prevent this has not yet been announced. There is a possibility that Attorney William G. Thompson, now in charge of the legal phase of the defense, may carry the case to the United States Supreme Court on the basis of technical questions in connection with the behavior of the jury. This would serve to postpone the imposition of sentence.

Another possibility is action seeking the impeachment of Judge Thayer on the basis of having shown extreme prejudice at the original trial and in subsequent rulings in the case.

The Massachusetts courts are merely repeating themselves. Six motions, all based on new evidence impeaching prosecution witnesses and further supporting the innocence of the Italian workers, were brushed aside by Judge Thayer in previous years. He was in each case sustained by the highest tribunal in the state.

Clear Frame-up.

This is the seventh motion to go through the same routine. It was based upon two sets of new evidence:

First, a confession by Celestino Madeiros, a convicted murderer, that he was a member of the payroll robbery gang for whose crime the two radicals were railroaded; and that neither Sacco nor Vanzetti took part in that crime.

Second, affidavits by two department of justice officials employed in Boston at the time of the arrest and conviction of the two workers to the effect that the federal authorities were working hand in hand with the district attorney's office to "get" Sacco and Vanzetti as one way of ridding themselves of two "reds."

U. S. JOINS IN BLACKMAIL NOTES DEMANDING INDEMNITY OF CHINA

Nationalists Continue Advance North Along Nanking-Tientsin Railroad

BULLETIN.

NEW YORK, April 5.— Nationalist troops are pushing northward in Shantung and a battle is imminent in the vicinity of Hsuchowfu according to a Harkow dispatch received today by the Nationalist News Agency here.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—By drafting a note on the Nanking "killings" in conjunction with Great Britain and Japan, the United States has definitely embarked upon a more militant Chinese policy, a policy of war threats.

The imperialist notes which are being written by the American, British and Japanese ministers in Peking fill protest against the killing of foreigners and demand huge indemnities despite the fact that Chinese investigations of the Nanking affair have placed the blame on White Russians and Shantungese brigands. The notes are also understood to demand guarantees of the future safety of foreigners."

Although the notes will not be drafted in such a way as to suggest an ultimatum, oral threats will very likely accompany the notes.

Prepare Third Regiment.

In view of the increasingly grave situation, the third regiment of marines, now mobilizing, will follow the 6th regiment to China within a week, it was learned today. Orders already prepared will be issued for the regiment to sail from San Diego either April 11 or 12, it was understood. Its destination will probably be Tientsin, the port of Peking.

Sixth Regiment Starting.

The 6th regiment will sail on the transport Henderson from San Diego Thursday, it was announced.

Officials admitted that the situation in north China is rapidly assuming the aspect of that in the Yangtse Valley, from which Americans are fleeing for their lives before Cantonese mobs.

Americans are now being concentrated in Tientsin, which is the port for Peking, the capital. There has been no untoward incident.

A growing Cantonese sympathy is manifested on every side as the Cantonese armies continue their march toward the city.

Move On Tientsin.

SHANGHAI, April 5.—The Nationalists have begun their big drive northwards.

They are sweeping along the Shanghai-Tientsin railway and are rapidly closing in on Suchowfu, which is in the hands of Chang Tsung Chang, Shantungese war lord. Should the Nationalists smash Chang's lines, which appears likely, Chang Tso Lin, Manchurian war lord, would be compelled to withdraw from Peking as the only line of communication with Manchuria, his base, is through Tientsin.

Feng West of Peking.

Peking in the meantime is threatened by the well-drilled army of Feng Yu-hsiang, who may swoop down on the northern capital from the west.

T. V. Soong, finance minister, is now in Shanghai reorganizing the finances of Kiangsu and Chekiang Provinces. It is reported that Foreign Minister Eugene Chen and Minister of Communications Sun Fo plan to leave here shortly to supervise the reorganization of the departments of foreign affairs and of communications.

Marshal Chang Tso Lin has in the meantime issued another appeal for a foreign subsidy.

PARIS, April 5.—The Hindu Nationalists are supporting the Chinese Nationalist revolution to the fullest extent going as far as forming a corps of 2,500 men to help the Cantonese army in its struggle against western aggression, to quote the words used by the Hindus.

The executive committee of the Indian Nationalists recently passed a motion assuring "our Chinese brothers of our whole-hearted sympathy with their struggle for liberty and we hereby urge the government of India not to employ Indian troops or any other means against China."

Further "not a single Hindu soldier, Hindu civilian, not a pingle rupee" would be used for military purposes in China

Sinclair Conviction Is Upheld; Will Be Sentenced on Monday

WASHINGTON, April 5. — The conviction of Harry F. Sinclair, multi-millionaire oil magnate, on one count, of contempt of the United States senate was confirmed today by Justice Hitz in district supreme court, and date of sentence was set for next Monday. With it is a fine of $100 and a mandatory jail sentence.

George P. Hoover, of counsel for Sinclair, said he would have his client the court next Monday for sentence. Sinclair's counsel, however, plans to appeal the case clear to the U. S. supreme court.

CLOAK CONTRACTORS RUN SWEATSHOPS; ENCOURAGED BY ANTI-UNION BOSSES

(By SAMUEL CAMIEL, Worker Correspondent.)

A visit by your correspondent to a women's cloak contracting shop proved a sad surprise. This sort of shop is usually operated by three or four former shop workers and is frequently nothing more or less than an old time sweat-shop.

It was eight o'clock in the evening and the four partners who operated the shop were still hard at work. They said that they had been working since nevan o'clock that morning and were only too glad to do so as long as they could get work to do.

The jobbing bosses encouraged the workers to open contracting shops and then, in the capitalistic fashion, force the contractors to bid against each other. This gives the bossea the opportunity to have their work done at such a small cost to them that they are able, usually, to dispense with much of their own union factory help.

Unorganized Labor.

The workers employed by the contractors are usually non-union men and women who are unable to obtain employment at the regular cloak factories. These receive a minimum wage and work from 10 to 13 hours a day if their employers are fortunate enough to have contracted for a sufficient amount of work.

This condition is not particular to the one shop. Other small shops that were inspected were found to be similarly affected. All complain that they are being used by the big bosses as a tool to combat the union shop worker. They resent this now because they also are underpaid and over-worked.

One gathers, however, that the situation is coming to a head. Too many shops and too little pay and unequal distribution of work is forcing many of the contractors out of business. A lesser number of these shops will undoubtedly be of utmost benefit to the workers at this critical time in the Industrial Institution of the number of contract shops is one of the left wing's strong demands.

GUNBOAT POLICY IN CHINA FLAYED AT BIG MEETINGS

Dunne, Moore, Sha Will Speak on Friday

Workers of many races and political affiliations will gather at two mass demonstration meetings Friday to protest against the American policy of sending troops and warships to China under the cover of pretty words of peace.

The United States can only be kept out of a war to crush the Chinese liberation movement by the united action of the workers, prominent members of the Hands Off China Comittee said yesterday. The meeting will protest as the murder of two thousand peaceful Chinese at Nanking as well as demand the withdrawal of American marines and warships from China.

Representative Speakers

Richard B. Moore of the American Labor Congress recently returned from the Brussels Anti-Imperialist Conference, S. Sha of the Kuomintang, S. M. Ghose of the Friends of Freedom for India, William F. Dunne, editor of Tha Daily Worker, Carl Welsberg, Robert W. Dunn, author of "American Foreign Investments" will be among the speakers at the meetings.

The New York mass meeting will be held at the Central Opera House, 6th street and 3rd avenue, while the Brooklyn meeting will be held at the Royal Palace, 16 Manhattan avenue.

Lives of Many in Danger as Result Of Big Explosion

CLEVELAND, April 5.—A series of explosions at the east end plant of the Ohio Bronze Powder Company early today imperiled many lives, drove several persons from adjacent apartments into the streets and smashed scores of windows and skylights in the immediate neighborhood. Several persons were cut by broken glass.

The blasts were caused by streams of water from firehose striking power, according to assistant fire chief Nimmo.

Czech Communist Party Hails the Revolt in China

PRAGUE, March 25.—The IVth congress of the Communist Party of Tchecksolovakia was opened today in the Peoples House, Prague, by comrade Haken. The following comrades were unanimously elected to the presidium: Sturc, Touzil, Haken, Smeral, Krebich, Momdok, Kolarikova, Mnjor, Chlouba, Hral and Slivka.

In the name of the Central Committee, comrade Smeral proposed that the congress adopt the following resolutions in favor of the Chinese revolution:

"The party congress sends its revolutionary greetings to the Chinese proletariat. The Chinese revolution can only be successful through a decisive fight to the end against imperialism. For this reason the Chinese revolution is n part of the world revolution. The idea of Leninism for a close alliance of the working class with the peasantry will assist the Chinese revolution to victory."

The following resolution was directed to the Communist Party of the Soviet Union:

"The unity and consolidation of the C. P. of the U. S. S. R. is the keystone of the power of he Comintern. The present industrialisation of a socialist type which has been carried out with the assistance of the heroic sacrifices of the masses exercises a very great influence upon the western European working masses. The Soviet elections have shown a close connection between the urban and rural proletariat in the Soviet Union. Despite all provocations the C. P. of the U. S. S. R. is pursuing a policy of unswerving peace. if this peace is disturbed, then the Tchecksh proletariat will be found at its post."

A resolution was also adopted against class "justice" in Hungary.

The party congress then adopted a resolution in favor of the struggle of the miners and railwaymen and a message of greetings to the striking glass workers of northern Bohemia.

The chairman comrade Touzil then read a letter of greetings from the Communist nucleus of a district prison. The letter expressed the unswerving loyalty of the political prisoners to the party. A further letter of greeting arrived from the village nucleus Osog which a week ago unanimously left the social democratic party and went over in a body to the Communist Party.

Comrade Hais welcomed the congress in the name of the International Red Trade Union Federation (I. A. V.) of Tcheckoslovakia which he declared regarded the Communist Party as the only party representing the interests of the whole proletariat. He expressed the hope that the congress would make decisions to assist the good cooperative work between the party and the I. A. V.

The session was then closed.

Leavenworth Manager Helps Convict Escape

NEW ORLEANS, April 5.—Judge Henry Burns in Federal Court today ordered the removal to Kansas City of Charles N. Thompson, former shoe factory superintendent at leavenworth prison, to face a charge of aiding John B. Carroll, convicted bandit, to escape in a box supposedly filled with shoes.

Thompson was arrested here while enroute to a town in Mississippi where he was to meet Carroll, who is still at large. Thompson states he was offered a large sum of money by Carroll.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 5.—With nearly twenty airplanes again taking up the search, dragging operations will be started today along the waterfront near Crissy flying field for the missing mail plane of the Pacific Transport Co., which, with its two occupants, was more than 40 hours late.

son. In fact one with a supernatural tendency might be justified in coming to the conclusion that those lakes were created by a wise deity to accomodate stupid professors who lack the common sense to only speak on subjects with which they are acquainted. But the best of gods are stumped by stupidity.

THE Shanghai correspondents are having a lot of fun reciting the adventures of Chiang Kai-Shek, generalissimo of the Nationalist armies who is reported in daily struggles with sections of the Kuomintang Party, the party from which he derives his mandate. Sometimes they have Chiang beheading scores of revolutionary workers and again they report Chiang admitting that the workers have a right to arm themselves. They have Chiang welcoming the return of a Kuomintang leader on the ground that he is a moderate and a few hours later another dispatch comes along which tells us that the prodigal son is an extremist, so that is how it goes.

THE latest report from the Shanghai saloons where the American correspondents are said to hang out is that Chiang is on his way north to capture Peking. Tomorrow he may be in Hankow on executions bent or in Canton chasing Borodin, the Russian adviser. Time, distance and facts mean nothing to those hired scribblers. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are spent by the imperialists on cable tolls from Shanghai. But transmitted lies do not win battles.

Iuno Bungay Dies Rich.

DeWitt, the late "patent medicine king", today was estimated by friends to be at least $7,000,000 De Witt, born in Jones County, Iowa, in 1885, worked up from an obscure druggist to a fortune. De Witt began manufacturing nostrums in Sioux City, Ia., and later moved to Chicago.

Allegheny Sheriff Prohibits Picketing

in the fight the operators are waging to smash the union.

The Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Co., which is a large concern, has taken this opportunity to follow Andrew Mellon's Pittsburgh Coal and Coke Co. into the non-union ranks, and all this part of Pennsylvania is jammed with state constabulary and private armies of the coal companies, who are determined to resort to any amount of violence in order to stop effective picketing.

The lockout continues in other parts of the fields. About 200,000 men are now out, without counting an unknown number of non-union workers striking in West Virginia. The conference recently arranged between the Ohio Operators' Association and the officials of District 6 of the union has apparently broken down.

Strike At Moundsville

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., April 5.—When the bituminous coal strike went into effect April 1 about 1,000 non-union miners in this vicinity also walked out in sympathy, and as a protest against the 1917 scale which has been paid them since their strike in 1925 was lost.

There are injunctions galore in this section against unionization, issued in 1925. As a result the miners are having a doubly hard battle to wage. They cannot meet together; they can do no picketing; and they can't even dare to talk of unionizing any of the mines here.

Mines Almost Stop.

Already faint echoes may be heard of the capitalist offensive, mainly through their press. The coal operators, in order to break the solidarity of the miners, greatly exaggerate the number of those scabbing. According to them, the mines are working 50 per cent or 60 per cent, while an actual fact the miners declare that a very, very slight percentage go inside of the mines.

KELLOGG FAVORS INTERVENTION IN CHI. CIVIL WAR

Mexico Sends Gunboats To Protect Nationals

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 5.—The United States government is on the verge of intervention in Chicago according to information from usually well informed quarters today.

The Coolidge favors a policy of watchful waiting, Kellogg is reported to be in favor recalling 2,000 marines from Nicaragua to defend the interests of the G. O. P. in Cicero.

Mayor Dever has warned Washington that Chicago will not tolerate interference by any outside power.

The mayor issued the following statement: "The threat of Secretary of State Kellogg to dispatch an expeditionary force of 2,000 marines to this city is an insult to every law-abiding gunman in Cook County. Furthermore such a diminutive force would only serve to exasperate our soft drink parlor proprietors who are already near the end of their patience. The armed forces of the city and their allies from the "Valley" and Diversey Parkway are capable of taking care of the interests of foreigners. If the republicans keep out of the path of the civil war they are reasonably safe. I warn secretary Kellogg that Chicago is not Cuba, Nicaragua or Hayti. Our forces shoot to kill."

When this massage reached Kellogg he trembled violently and rushed to the white hous to consult with the president. Coolidge was taking his daily ride on his electric hobby horse and did not want to be disturbed.

It is reported that the state department is hoping for joint action by Britain, Italy, Greece and Poland, countries with heavy interests in the Windy City.

Sir Esme Howard was seen to leave the state department today with a serious look on his countenance. He refused to be interviewed.

Heavy Casualties Reported

CHICAGO, April 5.—The armies of Generals Thompson and Dever swung into action at daybreak today and residents of Maywood and Evanston could hear the booming of artillery from the time the polls opened until the bootleggers went to an early lunch.

The casualties are said to be heavy, General Thompson losing one of his most intrepid lieutenants, the leader of his best brigade of shock troops, Vincent Drucci.

"Bullets not ballots" was the motto of the Thompson-Crowe forces as they marched to the polls taking whatever action they could, and everything else that was not nailed down.

"Dead men tell no tales" retorted the Deveritas as they plundered the cemeteries for voters.

As this dispatch is being written neither side was able to claim victory, the both predicted it.

Dever decided to declare allegiance to Thompson and called all bootleggers between the ages of 18 to 60 to the colors.

Mexico Sends Note.

MEXICO CITY, April 5. — The Mexican foreign minister today handed a note to Ambassador Sheffield deploring the civil war in Chicago and expressing fear that a Mexican chile con carne restaurant on Madison and Canal Streets would be in jeopardy if the federal troops were not able to restore order in that city. The government would demand reparations for death or destruction of property suffered by its nationals and would consider the necessity of sending an expeditionary force to help restore order.

China Gives Tit For Tat.

HANKOW, April 5.—The Nationalist government of Eugene Chen today wirelessed Admiral Williams a protest against the alleged killing of a Chinese restaurant proprietor in the Chicago civil war. Chen claimed that the chop suey served by Chinese waiters in the United States was no worse than the spiritual pabulum dished out by American missionaries in China.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 5.—In reply to Eugene Chen's protest against the alleged killing of a Chinese restaurant keeper in Chicago, President Coolidge stated that his government was trying to observe neutrality between north side militarists led by Thompson and the west side tuchuns under Dever.

The Washington administration is in much the same position in relation to the war between the north and west sides of Chicago as Peking is in the differences between north and south in China," said the president.

China is said to be negotiating with the U. S. S. R., Mongolia, Turkey and Afghanistan with a view to sending a joint note to the United States.

Wealthy Man Robs Post Office.

Lee De LaHousaye, 46, who told authorities here he is a member of a wealthy family in New Orleans, was held in $15,000 bail yesterday by United States Commissioner Racquin in Brooklyn for the action of the federal grand jury on a charge of purloining postal money orders from the post office sub station in Woodside, Queens, April 2, 1916.

Unemployment Big Passaic Problem; Hold Conferences

By HOLLACE RANSDELL.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 5 (FP).—With thousands of workers in the textile district of Passaic still out of jobs the unemployment problem has become a very serious matter for the local unions of the United Textile Workers of America. One unemployment conference has already been held and a second will be called later in April by the Trades and Labor Council of Passaic and the District Council of the Textile Workers.

"Most of the mills are working only part time, days, and have cut out the night shift altogether," said Gustave Deak, president of the local textile organization. "Many of the mill workers are getting only two or three days a week. Every week the Botany lays off more workers. Last week about 400 were laid off and it is even rumored that these mills, the largest in the district, may shut down altogether. At less five thousand workers are unemployed."

At the last conference the local chamber of commerce secretary and the poor master of Passaic spoke, and the poor master made a bid for the reelection of Mayor John McGuire, as a coming benefactor for the unemployed, if only he were elected again.

JAPAN WORKERS DRIVEN TO LEFT BY HARD TIMES

Strikes of Long Duration Waged by Unions

TOKIO, April 5.—The economic crisis in Japan during the last few months of 1926 fostered the swing of the masses to the left. This leftward movement of the masses had been greatly helped by the increasing consolidation of industrial and financial institutions. On the one hand this helped the capitalists to fight more successfully against the workers. On the other hand the revolutionary feeling of the working masses continued to grow. It was expressed in many strikes of incredible duration and obstinacy.

During the first half of the year there were 490 disputes of which 152 turned into strikes. The strike movement involved 36,117 workers. Comparing this with the same period of the previous year, the number of strikes increased by 105. The tactics adopted by the strikers considerably changed. The strikes of the past year were well organized. They were led for the greater part by trade unions mainly of the left wing.

Popular Sympathy.

The strike committees carried out wide agitation, drawing to uid of the strikers, workers in other enterprises and oven obtained the sympathy of the wide masses of the population. Of the strikes that occurred during the first half of 1926, we should note the long drawn out strikes in the copper mines belonging to the Besuy Company (108 days) at the Asiatic Schoe Factory (99 days), in the printing establishment of Kodo in Takio (67 days) in the factory of musical Instruments in Khanamatzu (105 days) and also the many strikes that occurred in textile and other industries.

The chief reasons for these strikes were demands to regulate wages and to improve labor conditions.

Right To Organize.

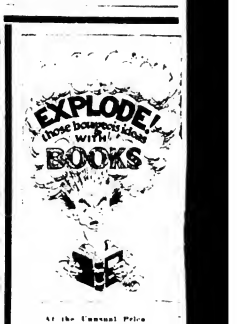
Together with these economic demands the workers fought for the right to organize themselves in trade unions, for the reinstatement of dismissed comrades who had been active in the strike movement, for a change in labor legislations for collective bargaining etc. However, the crisis in Japanese industrial life, the divisions in the Japanese labor movement coupled with the treacherous role of the right leaders could not be conductive to the success of the strike movement. These strikes during the past year were often ended in defeat for the workers.

Numerical Strength Growing.

During the past year the number of organized workers has considerably grown. The numerical strength of the left trade union centres—Hiogikai—has grown from 18,700 to 31,000, while Rodomay—the reformist organization—from 25,200 to 25,600.

Sodomay, in excluding the centrists, who subsequently formed the Nikhon Ronoto decreased its membership by 16,000. What one remembers that all the unionand forces of Japan, beginning with the police and fascists and ending with the reformists were linked up against the Hiogikay, it becomes very clear that Hiogikay has grown considerabl, more than Sodomay.

The general total of organized workers in Japan, nevertheless continues to be very insignificant. Altogether there are 270,000 industrial workers, organised in trade unions and this out of a general total of approximately 4½ million industrial workers.



Union Restaurant Is Labor Meeting Place

No matter what hour of the day you may drop in at Comrade Sollins' Dining Room, 222 East 14th street, near Second avenue, you will always find your lunch, regardless of what bunch you belong to, furriers, cloakmakers, or other makers.

The first pleasant music you will hear is not Bethoven, Chopin or Mendelson, but the green buttoned union waiters' symphony to the tune of one hundred and one appetising dishas of klaka, borsht, geffite fish, up to tea and zite. No need to make appointments with your friends, you are sure to meet them at Sollins'.

Sollin's is not an Elite Aristocratic Rendezvous, or an intellectual corner, but just a darn good place to eat for eats sake, and fine sensible surroundings where people speak common sense. The name is just Sollins' Dining Room.

That ought to tell the story.

FOREIGN WASTERS IN SHANGHAI WILL MISS OLD DAYS

Kicking Coolies Will No Longer Be Luxury

WASHINGTON, April 5.—If extra-territoriality is doomed in China—and it seems so—we may as well be saying goodbye to the Shanghai we used to know.

This refers to the foreign city. Don't mix it with the native one.

The two are jam-up together, but that's the only thing they have in common.

Native Shanghai is just a big Chinese city.

There are plenty others like it. It may seem queer, to a stranger, as compared with New York or Chicago, but not a bit queer as compared with Soochow or Ningpo or Changsha or many other places in China.

There's only one foreign Shanghai. It has some small-calibre imitations—one norse "treaty ports," scattered along the coast or up and down the big rivers—but to stack them up alongside Shanghai would be like contrasting Podunk or Dinkyville Junction with Manhattan.

The International Town.

Shanghai's international. It's independent of everybody and everything. It's run by the foreign consuls. They're mighty strict as to Chinese residents. Everybody's agreed on that proposition. Foreigners do about as they please. They're answerable to nobody except each to his respective consul. It may seem as if this would make the consuls bossy. Not so. A consul has too much sense to make himself unpopular by annoying his own countrymen.

An American, for instance, is supposed to live in Shanghai subject to American laws. He doesn't care the flip of a copper for any other laws. He generally doesn't care much for America's, either. How, say, is his consul going to make him pay any attention to the Volstead Act?

If a foreigner in Shanghai stops short of murder or burglary, he isn't apt to be interfered with.

All this will be changed if extra-territoriality goes by the board. The foreigner in Shanghai, or anywhere else in China, will be yanked up in a Chinese court, if he does anything contrary to local peace and good order.

To illustrate:

It always has been considered among the God-given privileges of a foreigner in China to kick a rickshaw coolie if he felt like. Frequently he has felt like it.

The same rule used to prevail in Japan until the Japanese abolished extraterritoriality. Now the Japanese penalty for rickshaw coolie kicking by a foreigner is a two-year jail term, without the option of a fine, for the kicker.

There's no foreign working class in Shanghai.

It's a community of traders, managers, professional men and expert clerical help, with their wives and children.

All the coolie jobs are held by natives.

Consequently the entire foreign population opposes well-to-do.

In fact, a great deal of it is exceedingly hard up. It's a great aggravation to live beyond it's income.

Reeing Popular.

Such amusements as the theatre naturally are almost wholly lacking. The Shanghai-ites make up for them by going extensively for such expen-

Nation Editor Raps Fake China News in Capitalist Papers

The deliberate lies about China that have been flooding the capitalist press in the guise of news stories were scored by Lewis Gannett, associate editor of the Nation, at a mass meeting at the International House, 500 Riverside Drive, Monday night, under the auspices of the Social Problems Club of Columbia University.

Frederick Moore, correspondent for the New York Times, came in for an especially strong drubbing at the hands of the Nation editor.

"America hasn't any news service in China to speak of," he said. "The Associated Press has one rare there and depends on Reuter's for the rest of its news." (Reuter is the British news service, which corresponds to the Associated Press of this country. It has been helping the British Foreign Office in its attempt to drag the United States into a war against the Chinese Nationalist movement.)

"The most colossal example of the kind of news we are getting," Gannett continued, "came with the shelling of Nanking when our correspondents, particularly Frederick Moore, of the New York Times, hardly notice that American and British gunboats laid down a barrage around Socony Hill, which Moore admits killed hundreds of Chinese. They seem to think that it doesn't matter how many Chinese are killed if Americans are protected."

Professor Harry H. Ward pointed out that the British "are dominating our policies in China."

No Joint Note.

LONDON, April 5.—The "Big Three," Britain, Japan and the United States will not send a joint note of protest over the Nanking outrages to the Cantonese authorities, it was learned tonight from an authoritative source.

ence sports as raving and a great deal of entertaining.

These things come high.

Then, too, credit is almost unlimited. That's because Shanghai's a very difficult place to slip away from unawares. Departures have to be announced tentatively. Departures have to be taken by steamship with plenty of preliminary notice.

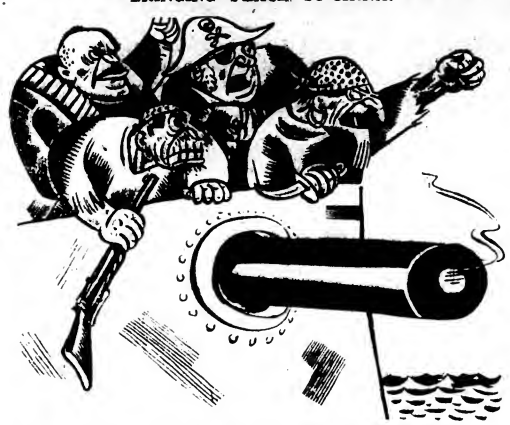
A deadbeat can hardly flit, leaving a stack of unpaid bills behind him. Perhaps he can do it as a stowaway, but that's humiliating, and for a man with a family practically impossible.

Too Much Credit.

Credit, then, being so easy, it's overworked extensively. Anything from a cocktail up to a polo pony's wealth to be had by signing a "chit," which is a check or note, and "chits" have a way of piling up alarmingly.

Many's the externally prosperous but really desperately hard-up Shanghai-ite who proudly wouldn't shed many tears if the Cantonese wiped out the entire "international settlement," provided they'd construct to wipe out his "chits" with it.

Shanghai's well equipped to resist military attack from without, but mighty poorly able to stand much interference with its local supply of Chinese cheap labor.



It's a large city—not to mention any of its other labor requirements—with no sanitary system whatever, and every thimbleful of sewage has to be carried away by the barrelful by coolie-power. Obviously, once let these coolies quit and the besiegers prevent others from offering their services, it would hardly be more than a matter of hours before the place would become uninhabitable

LEADERS IN CHINA'S REVOLT

These photos, taken exclusively for Central Press in China, show Mme. Sun Yat sen, widow of the founder of the Kuomin-tang, Chinese Nationalist party, left, and George Hsu Chien, minister of justice of the Nationalist government. They are active workers in China's revolutionary movement. Mme. Sun Yat-sen, the "first lady of China," was educated in an American college, at Macon, Ga. Chien was an intimate friend of Dr. Sun Yat-sen and has been closely connected with the Nationalist movement since 1911. He is a noted scholar and jurist.

BRINGING "PEACE" TO CHINA!

LABOR-SMASHING BILL IS BROUGHT BEFORE COMMONS

LONDON, April 5. The strike-smashing measure that the government decks-hands have long been threatening to introduce came up for its first reading last night.

The measure not only makes general and sympathetic strikes illegal, but makes union members participating in them liable to civil damages. Severe restrictions on picketing are provided for in other clauses of the bill.

The first clause of the bill declared any strike illegal if it has "any object in addition to the furtherance of a trade dispute within the trade concerned." The penalty is a fine not exceeding $1,000 or imprisonment not exceeding two years.

Strikers, in the meantime, go through, will be forbidden to picket houses or factories. Picketing the home of a worker will be a criminal offense. The law-set says the p a are of any "threatening, abusive or insulting" are also made criminal of fences.

Political levies on trade members are forbidden unless workers contribute "written notice signifying their will ingness to contribute." Government employees are forbidden to belong to trade unions "unless such unions are confined to civil servants only, and are independent of any outside union."

Cuban Congress Boycott Prevents Machado From Changing Constitution

HAVANA, April 5. The Cuban congress was not opened today, as provided by the constitution, because there was not the two-thirds majority of the members present in either house.

The president's message was not read and his proposal for a constitutional reform cannot be considered.

Anna Louise Strong Speaking at Russian Affair Saturday Eve

Anna Louise Strong, prominent radical journalist, and author of "The First Time in History," who has just returned from Soviet Russia, will be among those who will speak briefly at the Russian entertainment being arranged by "The Russky Golos" at Webster Hall, 11th St. and Third Ave., next Saturday evening, April 9.

Arranged for the benefit of the John Reed Colony for the Homeless at Alexejevka on The Volga, the program will consist of music, singing and ballet. Mischa Mischoff, violinist, and Dora Bascher, gypsy song singer, are among those announced.

Other features of the entertainment will be the showing of "The Big Famine," a motion film being shown in New York for the first time, Alberina Rascha ballet, and Alexander Chigirinsky, pianist.

MOSCOW WOMEN WORKERS ACTIVELY PARTICIPATE IN SELF GOVERNMENT

MOSCOW, April 5. Seventy-eight women delegates assembling at the delegate meeting of the Moscow Textile factory "Proved Labour" to discuss the coming elections to the Soviets.

Practically every tenth woman worker in Russia is a delegate—the delegate meetings are significant as a social test in that they support the party in carrying out the election campaign by means of influencing the masses of women workers and workers' wives to take an active part in the elections, to help choose the most worthy and most suitable members to the Soviets, and to combat the efforts of the internal hostile elements, like the kulaks, nepmen, etc., to get into the Soviets with their own people.

More Interest Shown.

The fact that in 1922 the percentage of women in town Soviets in the RSFSR was 10.8 per cent while in 1926 the percentage was already 15.5 per cent; women members of village Soviets in 1922 was 1 per cent, in 1926 10 1-2 per cent, shows the increased interest that women take in the political life of the country.

I asked the woman organizer of this factory, how is it that these women do not seem to be worried about their home affairs? Have they no children at home to take care of? Mustn't they prepare meals for their husband and family? Have they no house duties at all, that they can leisurely spend 2-3 hours after work at a meeting?

Free of Home Duties.

The woman organizer of the factory, herself from the weaving loom, smiled and said:

"Before we could draw in our women workers to take such active part in the political and economic life of our country, we had to free them from some of their house duties and drudgery. We have, right here in the factory, children's creches, and every mother who is present in this hall, feels quite certain that her child is being taken good care of by a competent nurse; as to cooking her meals, why practically all of our workers of this factory (there are 1,400 workers employed) live in workers' communes; there are communal kitchens, so there is no need to worry about cooking the supper. House cleaning is done by turns. Tonight every woman delegate is freed from house cleaning duty, so as to enable her to attend the meeting.

Instruct Candidates.

But I am anxious to follow the discussions of these delegates.

The chairman read the list of instructions to their candidate to Moscow Soviet; the following are some of the instructions:

Open another bath house in the district.

Repair the children's creches and kindergartens attached to the factory.

Build more houses to ease the housing problem of the workers.

Lower prices and better products in the co-operatives.

Hasten the opening of a new clinic.

Improve the street lighting.

Hastes the opening of another communal kitchen in the district.

The delegate to the Moscow Soviet is to report to his electors of this factory once every six months.

A lively discussion followed.

Learn Politics.

After these instructions were accepted, many of the women participated in the discussion of the importance of the Soviet elections. It was amazing to watch these plain, simple women folk, many of whom have just liquidated their illiteracy, and some of whom still do not know how to read and write, express their views on this important political and economic question of the Soviet government. Two points were emphasized in their discussions: (1) The world bourgeoisie will judge our strength by the result of our elections; (2) the success of Soviet construction depends on the people we will send to our Soviets.

REPORT COOLIDGE FRAMING ATTACK ON NATIONALISTS

Shanghai Exploiters Yelp For Troops

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The Coolidge administration is being pulled hither and thither by capitalist groups that have conflicting interest in the Chinese situation.

Spurred by the chamber of commerce of Shanghai, the outstanding members of which are representatives of the oily interests that are trying to involve the United States in Mexico, the administration has apparently decided to protest against the alleged outrage against American nationals in Nanking ignoring the massacre of scrapable Chinese citizens by the savage bombardment of American and British warships.

Six Hundred For Seven.

It is now definitely established that only seven foreigners lost their lives in the Nanking affair while at least six hundred Chinese were slaughtered by shells from the battleships.

Washington believes that the appeal from the Shanghai chamber of commerce demanding intervention was influenced by the British government which has a small auxiliary of society women here to reinforce by social affairs the efforts of male diplomacy to seduce the Americans into joining with them against the Chinese nationalist government. And they have been successful.

Bombarding Washington.

Under the influence of the British experts, American naval commanders and consuls are literally bombarding Washington with appeals for intervention. The result of this pressure is the decision of the administration to send a protest (be not a joint note with Great Britain. Coolidge is said to fear that joint action with Britain would arose the sleeping anti-British prejudice in this country that has been the nightmare of capitalist politicians here for generations.

Big Demonstrations.

Consul Jenkins, at Canton, reported today that a mass meeting and a demonstration were planned in that city in celebration of the capture of Nanking and Shanghai by the Nationalists, as well as to protest against the Nanking and Bias Bay.

Order to Evacuate.

All Americans in western China, even as far as the Tibetan border, have been ordered to evacuate by Consul Adams at Chunking.

General Liu-Hsiang has assumed full responsibility to protect American lives and property at Chunking.

The nervous tension among foreigners at Tsinanfu has relaxed, according to a dispatch from Consul Swaney. He said 171 Americans had been evacuated and 215 remain.

A labor delegation from Canton has arrived in Hankow. One of the members is Earl Browder, member of the Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

Marines Fire on Workers.

American marines at Chunking, opening fire with riot guns on Chinese workers which resulted in the wounding of three Chinese, Admiral C. S. Williams, commanding the Asiatic fleet, advised the Navy Department today.

The Americans were part of an armed force from the U. S. Gunboat Monocacy, which had been placed aboard the American steamer Chinan to protect. The vessel was attacked by Chinese Sampans, loaded with local agitators.

NECKTIE WORKERS SLAVE FIFTY HOURS A WEEK FOR WAGES AS LOW AS $12.00

By I. LAZAROVITZ.
(Member of Labor Journalism Class, Workers School.)

Necktie workers of greater New York are still slaving 50 hours a week, while furriers and workers of other needle trades have almost all established the 40-hour week.

Conditions under which necktie workers produce are so bad that a few years in a shop makes a man ready for a sanitarium "visit,"—if he has the means to make such a visit.

Starvation Wages.

Wages are as low as possible in spite of the high cost of living. Here are a few examples:

Knitters (the mechanics of the trade) earn from	$20 to $26 per week.
Steamers	$15 to $25
Operators	$15 to $20
Finishers	$12 to $15

Last week in a Broadway shop, the employer advertised for a steamer. Although he needed only one steamer, eight or ten applied for the job. The boss picked out a man of about 50 years.

During lunch time I learned that the man took the job for $22 per week. On my questioning him as to whether he has a family and whether he can get along on $22, he told me his story.

Speed-Up System.

He has a wife with three little children. The oldest child is nearly seven. The wife is sick and he himself can hardly work. He worked piece work in his last place, but being physically weak he couldn't rush as fast as the others. He was always behind not only in wages but in the orders given to him.

One day he found in his pay envelope the message: "Your service is no more required." After a few days the boss why he was fired, he was told that the firm needs production and that he cannot give ill.

He was out of work several weeks before he was able to get this job for $22 a week.

"I wouldn't ask for any more," he told me, "so he would not send me down. Twenty-two dollars is not enough but better than nothing. Without that my children and sick wife are subjected to starvation." His eyes were full of tears.

Prosperous America.

I looked at the man and thought to myself. Here in this industrially developed, richest country in the world, people are subjected to such misery. Tens of thousands of dollars are spent in luxuries at the various beaches of Florida and other places. Yet here in the city of Wall street and big capital, a working man is compelled to work 50 hours a week for $22 and is glad if he has it.

I also the guts of your so-called labor leaders who are busy trying to clean out the "reds" and have no time to pay attention to millions of "important real enslaved slaves.

Build up the Official Opposition

Some time ago we were offered the important series of articles exposing the scandalous operations of the Insurance Trust. These articles were offered to a leading metropolitan daily of a so-called liberal tinge as well as to the most prominent liberal weekly in New York. Strange to say they never saw the light of day, because these publications apparently are too deeply interested in the maintaining of cordial relations with the insurance companies which advertise in them.

The DAILY WORKER has accepted these articles and will publish them beginning April 11. This occurrence marks a new phase in the life of The DAILY WORKER. It marks a phase in which The DAILY WORKER has assumed the role of the official opposition to the capitalist and even the so-called liberal press. It is no accident that these articles have found their way to The DAILY WORKER. The DAILY WORKER has become indeed the "tribune of the people," the platform from which they can make public all their grievances.

It is this fact which is forcing the reactionaries to open their guns upon our paper. It is this fact which is enlisting behind The DAILY WORKER, thousands of contributors to the Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund. The Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund will enable us to secure more articles of this character exposing the filth and corruption of the present system of exploitation which is now successfully hidden by the capitalist press. The Struggle Sharpens in the Coal Fields.

Only six days old, the struggle of the coal miners is already becoming sharper.

The coal companies in districts like Bellaire, Ohio, a short distance from Moundsville, West Virginia, where members of the United Mine Workers are still in jail because of their activity in the last strike, and in Western Pennsylvania where the coal companies have mobilized their mercenary armies and own the local government officials outright, are using the most tyrannical methods.

Near Bellaire the Powhatan Mining Company has ordered 200 families living in company houses to pay rent in advance or suffer eviction.

In Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, the sheriff has limited the number of union pickets to two after a crowd of union pickets on a highway had been dispersed by state cossacks. In this territory, as in and around Bellaire, the miners have a long record of militant struggle.

These two instances perhaps furnish an insufficient basis for a prediction as to the general strategy of the coal barons but with previous history of coal mining struggles from the period of organization up to the present time in mind, there seems little doubt but that the coal barons will attack more or less isolated but militant sections of the union by all means possible with the hope of smashing them before the rest of the union and the labor movement as a whole can get into action.

A purely defensive struggle will mean defeat for the United Mine Workers of America. The union can take the offensive by shifting the center of the struggle to the non-union fields of West Virginia and Kentucky by means of an organization drive and this is what the coal barons fear.

The union can also raise the demand for nationalization of the mines and if it engages in a wide popular agitation on this issue it will give the coal barons something else to do than attack certain sections of the union.

The coal mining interests are not popular idols by any means. Not only workers feel the pressure of their power but large groups of the middle class look upon them as robbers.

With these two methods at hand—organization of the non-union fields and mass pressure for nationalization—coupled with wholehearted support from the rest of the labor movement for the strikers in the former union fields, the UMWA can put up a winning battle.

The UMWA must win.

Its defeat means a defeat for the American working class.

Demand Withdrawal of All American Armed Forces From China

The state department denies energetically that it contemplates any joint action with other powers in China yet in the same breath the announcement is made that an "identic" note is being sent to Hankow by Great Britain, Japan and the United States.

For those who have forgotten the terminology of the Wilson regime we volunteer the information that an identic note is the same thing as a carbon copy. The difference between such procedure and "joint action" is not perceptible to the naked eye.

There is every reason to believe that the state department is getting deeper into commitments for joint action while deliberately denying any such intention. Washington dispatches state for instance:

"Unless the anti-foreign sentiment becomes so inflamed that Americans are again endangered, the further use of arms will probably be the very last resort . . . The demands will not in any way be an ultimatum . . . the American government will be patient unless new outbreaks occur, and may wait months for the Chinese to meet its demands."

The above statements might be construed to mean no armed intervention in China except for the fact that American naval and military forces are being increased almost daily.

Nevertheless it is clear that the Coolidge administration does not dare to identify itself openly with British policy in China in spite of the fact that the fall of Peking to the People's armies is predicted now by the most hostile press reports.

Another reason for the attempt at caution is the consolidation of the forces of the People's government and the knowledge in the American state department that some new "savior" of China must appear on that open intervention in his behalf can be made to look like an attempt to establish a "stable" government in China.

Summed up the outstanding facts in the present situation are that the public indignation at home aroused by American participation in the Nanking massacre, the resentment in wide popular circles against common action with Great Britain, the continuous victories of the People's armies and the failure of the much-touted split in the Kuomintang to materialize, are making the state department watch its step.

There must be no let-down in the demand for Hands Off China and the withdrawal of all armed forces from her ports and soil.

WORKERS PARTY OF DISTRICT 2 PROPOSES TO SOCIALISTS A UNITED FRONT ON CHINA

In an effort to secure a united protest against American intervention in China, the Workers' (Communist) Party, District 2, has addressed a message to the Socialist Party Convention in this city.

Pointing out the danger of a war to further Wall Street and Standard Oil interests and protesting against the slaughter of peaceful Chinese citizens in Nanking, the message urges a united front in the fight against American imperialism.

That the United States recognize the Nationalist Government, that it withdraw its marines and gunboats from China, that it keep out of a war to protect British interests in the Far East are some of the demands voiced in the message.

The letter was sent by the Executive Committee of the District and signed by William Weinstone.

(The All-China Federation of Labor—The Issues in the Struggle Between Left and Right in the Kuomintang.)

Article III.

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

AFFILIATED to the All-Chinese Federation (which in turn is affiliated to the Red International of Labor Unions) are such important bodies of workers as the Shanghai Council of Labor Unions with 150,000 members (this information is about three months old and since the struggle for and the fall of Shanghai, has undoubtedly increased substantially) the Hunan Council of Labor Unions with 170,000 members, the Kwangtung Council of Workers Delegates with 170,000 members, the Hupeh Council of Labor Unions with 70,000 members, the Railwaymens Union with 68,000 members, the All-Chinese Union of Seamen with 50,000 members and the Hongkong Council of Labor Unions.

THE rapid extension of the trade union movement is shown by the figures on the membership represented by delegates to successive conventions of the All-Chinese Federation of Labor. At the first convention in 1924 the number of organized workers represented totaled 200,000. At the second convention 500,000 workers were represented and at the third convention the delegates spoke for more than 1,000,000 Chinese trade unionists. When it is remembered that China is predominantly an agricultural country (about nine-tenths of the population are agrarians) the progress of trade union organization is nothing less than amazing. This progress can be accounted for only by the manner in which the struggle for national liberation from imperialist oppression, the struggle against native militarism and feudalism which is the political side of the problem, have been combined with the struggle to raise the economic and cultural level of the working class.

IN SPITE of the fact that the advance of the peoples Armies from the south, their continual victories ending for the present period with the sweeping of imperialism and crushing of militarism in the Yangtze valley and the capture of Shanghai, would have been impossible without the cooperation and sacrifices of the labor movement, its rapid rise made still clearer the social cleavage among the forces which compose the Peoples Party (Kuomintang) and brought on the internal struggle which ended in a victory for the left wing composed of the Communists, certain sections of the students, the labor unions and peasant organizations.

This struggle was all the sharper because of the victories of the Peoples Armies which brought new elements into the party and gave rise to new and complicated political problems both in the south and in the provinces liberated from the militarists.

The representatives of the labor unions came into conflict with the middle class elements in the Kuomintang for three reasons:

1.—IN the strike movements which took place following the victories of the Peoples Armies, and which were directed principally against foreign enterprises, the workers nevertheless had to struggle against Chinese capitalists who were either members or supporters of the nationalist movement. This created a situation whose diffiruities and contradictions are obvious. These contradictions were sharpened by the attitude of the right wing members of the party executive committees who in some instances took the side of the Chinese bosses against the workers.

2.—THE attitude of the right wing toward the peasantry in many instances was such that the peasants were losing faith in the Kuomintang, a tendency which would have sealed the fate of the liberation movement had it been allowed to develop on a national scale.

As has been said the Chinese liberation movement by the very fact of the overwhelming preponderance of oppressed peasant elements in the population is a peasant revolution. The right wing of the Kuomintang failed either to realize this or in other instances was opposed to drawing the correct conclusions from it, i. e. that the struggle against the landlords, usurers etc., must be led by the Kuomintang, that the Kuomintang must take as a major part of the national struggle the liberation of the peasantry from Chinese exploiters as well as the imperialists.

IN A number of sections where the wealthy rural classes had joined the Kuomintang after discovering that they could not fight the peasant masses successfully, while appearing as known enemies of the national liberation movement, the right wing leaders failed so completely to take the side of the peasantry against reactionary organizations like the Ming Tuan (formed to fight the peasants and uphold the rule of the wealthy elements) that the peasants turned against the Kuomintang government.

What is meant to the national liberation movement to lose the confidence of the peasantry will be understood clearly when it is known that as early as 1925 in 24 districts of the province of Honan there were 400,000 members of the "Red Lances"—peasant defense organizations.

The Kuomintang Second Army was defeated by Wu Pei Fu because the peasants had lost confidence in the right wing leadership of the Kuomintang.

THE class struggle in the villages and countryside was becoming more acute, the Kuomintang was losing influence among the peasantry in exact proportion as it failed to aid it in this struggle and it failed to aid the peasantry in the struggle in exact proportion to the influence of the right wing in the government. Since the right wing leadership was endangering the whole movement the left wing had to act. It secured control of the Kuomintang and consequently of the government at a special conference and Wan Ching Wei, the leader of the left wing and the most skilful organizer in the party, was brought back into the central committee of the party.

3.—THE right wing did not want to use the economic struggles of the workers as part of the revolutionary fight against imperialism nor did it wish to have the army directly under the control of the leading committees of the party. Its idea of the army as separate and apart from the rest of the movement was a continuation of the old militarist policy and against the interests of the mass movement.

In a number of cases this arbitrary conception of the role of the army created great friction between it and the mass of the population and weakened the will of the workers and peasants to support the military wing of the movement.

The left program adopted at the special conference likewise corrected this grave error and resulted in raising greatly the morale of both the soldiers and the masses when given practical application.

The Chinese liberation movement, relieved of the dead weight of control by elements ready to sacrifice the interests of the workers and peasants for a temporary compromise with imperialism and its agents, launched the great drive which has made so much recent history, and has in turn released reserves of forces which the right wing had been afraid to call upon.

EUREKA VACUUM CLEANERS, QUAKER OATS, ALSO POSTUM CEREALS BRING IN THE SHEKALS

By LELAND OLDS (Federated Press).

How the vacuum cleaner extracts gold from old carpets is revealed in the financial report of the Eureka Vacuum Cleaner Co. for 1926. The year's profit of $1,879,397 means a return of about $1,507 on each dollar put into the company when it was founded in 1912.

Eureka is the largest producer of vacuum cleaners. Its production of about 280,000 cleaners is estimated at 27 per cent of the entire yearly output. Its plant is being enlarged to make 2,000 a machine day. Over 50 per cent of Eureka sales are on the instalment plan.

Worth $16,900.

Stock dividends have been paid to such an extent that each share in 1912 has since become 250 shares. According to The Wall Street Journal, each $1 of original investment now has a market value of around $16,900. The corporation's annual cash dividend of $4 a share means that the original investor is receiving each year 1,000 times his original investment.

The Eureka company looks upon the 16,000,000 homes now using electric power and the 10,000,000 to be added in a few years as a market which will make its present profits look small. Today about 6,500,000 homes are using vacuum cleaners. About 5 1-2 cents out of each consumer dollar spent for Eureka cleaners goes into the company's profit bag.

Quaker Oats.

Common oatmeal when sold under the "pure" Quaker trade mark turns to gold for the benefit of Quakers Oats stockholders. The company's annual report shows a profit of $7,-140,232 after interest, depreciation, federal taxes and generous reserves. This gives the owners a return of $13.46 on each share of stock.

The 450,000 shares of common stock are carried on the books at $11,250,-000 but at least $6,500,000 of this represents stock dividends. So the common stock does not really represent an investment of more than $5,-750,000 or about $12.75 a share and the 1926 profit is really a return of more than 100 per cent.

Wants To Expand.

Quaker Oats has been steadily expanding to become one of the Wall Street food trusts which intervene between farmer and consumer. In addition to its wheat bearing line name it produces puffed wheat, Aunt Jamima pancake flour, macaroni, spaghetti and feed for stock. It owns mills in the United States and Canada as well as 59 country elevators.

Coining Gold Out of Food.

Postum Cereal Co. is another Wall Street food trust coining gold out of the nation's food products. Its 1926 report shows a profit of $11,317,442 has been emptied of its white occupants. After a hasty superficial cleaning, the new colored tenants move in. Today in an area bounded roughly by the Harlem River, Morningside Heights and 125th street, thousands of workers are crowded.

Homes Overcrowded.

In order to meet the outrageous rents Harlem has taken to lodgers. The majority of houses are filled with roomers. Both moral and physical evils have followed in the train of this crowding and lack of privacy.

In an endeavor to force lower rents, necessary repairs, proper service and periodic renovation, the colored worker has had recourse to the courts. The Washington Heights court calendar is crowded with rent rasrs.

Families Dispossessed.

Negro agents appear here and argue against reducing the rents of poor colored mothers. They get writs to dispossess families where the wage earner is temporarily out of work. By offering the bait of more rent, the Negro agent gets a start in the business. By keeping down expenses for his boss this larkey keeps his foothold.

The South has long had a parasitic class of Negro landlords in every large city. These persons lived on rentals from ramshackle wooden houses. Now, here in Harlem, we have a growing class of colored landlords and realtors who are living easy off the labor and misery of the working masses.

NEGRO RENTAL AGENTS EXPLOIT OWN RACE IN OVERCROWDED HARLEM; LANDLORD WINS

(By a Colored Worker Correspondent)
Labor Journalism Class, Workers' School

Negro rental agents have been a vicious factor in the Harlem housing situation from the start. They prey on colored workers, taking advantage of the limited housing area available for this group to force rents up.

In New York, as in other cities, the great crowd of Negro workers are massed in undesirable sections. The Harlem agent saw in this social ban a chance for money making. His method is simple and always the same. He looks for an owner eager for bigger profits.

"If you will turn out your white tenants and let me put in colored people, I will get you three dollars more a room," he urges.

Landlords' Creed.

This bait always works. Harlem rents have been hiked sky-high by this sales talk. Prejudice on the part of landlords against Negroes melts away before their greed.

Old-fashioned, rat-ridden, run-down tenements are filled with colored tenants as fast as enterprising hustlers can find such places. Colored people sometimes move in without repairs being made. The colored agent who insists on the slightest rights for the tenant is a rare bird. His boss is the landlord.

House after house in the district has been emptied of its white occupants. After a hasty superficial cleaning, the new colored tenants move in. Today in an area bounded roughly by the Harlem River, Morningside Heights and 125th street, thousands of workers are crowded.

Calverton Will Debate Kelly Miller On Church

The Messenger Forum, recently established by the Messenger Magazine of New York City, has arranged a debate on the subject "Does Orthodox Christianity Handicap Negro Progress" between Prof. Kelly Miller of Howard University, Washington, D. C. and Mr. V. F. Calverton, editor of The Modern Quarterly, Baltimore, Md. Mr. Calverton holds that it does and Prof. Miller rontends that it does not.

The sponsors of the affair have scheduled the debate for Sunday, April 24th, at 2:30 P. M. so as to enable Sunday excursionists from Washington and Baltimore to attend. The debate is to be held in Community Church, 34th St. and Park Avenue, in New York City.

THE DAILY WORKER DRIVES DEPARTMENT STORE OFFICIALS INTO FRENZY; ONE ARREST

CLEVELAND. — A big Cleveland department store, The Bailey Company, has felt the hand of the Workers (Communist) Party. A shop bulletin has appeared and the company is raving.

Conditions in this department store are no different from the other large stores in the city or country. The workers are 80 per cent. women and girls and are earning from $12 to $15 a week, some of them who are below 16 years of age no more than $10. During the sales the workers have to work extra hours and get nothing for it. If they work till 8 P. M., they are presented with 50 cents for supper; but the managers take good care that they leave a few minutes before 8 so as to save the money of the company.

The porters have to work till late at night and get nothing for the work. These conditions are appalling, and the Workers (Communist) Party, seeing that the trade unions of this city are doing nothing to organize the help in the department stores, and aid them in improving their conditions, decided to take steps to wake up these workers and rouse them to organization.

Handed to Workers.

The Party issued a bulletin called the "Bailey Worker," which was distributed by a well-known young comrade of the Party. When she began distributing it to the wage-slaves as they rushed into the store in the morning, she was accosted by the company watchman, who called her a Bolshevik and asked why she did not leave that job to the American Federation of Labor. "For the simple reason, that that A. F. of L. is not doing it," was the reply.

"If you don't move away from here, I'll call the cops," was the threat, which was ignored. Within a few minutes, the comrade was surrounded by several detectives, who took her to the station. There she was subjected to a grilling. "What are you wasting your good time on such things? You're an intelligent lady and you ought to know that the workers won't stick together. Everything is graft—look at Doheny and Sinclair. Do you suppose the trade union leaders would be where they are if there wasn't graft in it?"

Police Matron Argues.

The police matron entered and participated in the conversation, during which she admitted that the salespeople do not get more than was stated in the bulletin.

Then the police judge, who blustered and thundered, and let the comrade go with the words: "This will be a warning. Next time we will dig up some law to hold you on."

Excuse For Arrest.

"I don't doubt that you will find some law all right", was the reply. The next day, the district office of the party was visited by one of the detectives who made the arrest. During the conversation he admitted that woman in the department stores of Cleveland do not get more than $2 or $2.50 a day.

And then they wonder why girls "go wrong!"

The company went wild. The superintendent tore the bulletins from the hands of the women as they entered the store. But that did not keep most of the bulletins from entering the place, and the people from gathering in groups and discussing the contents.

The manager raved. What was he to do? At noon, when the girls and women gathered in the lunchroom, they were addressed by detective and superintendents, who recommended that they be industrious and pay no attention to the trash in the "paper", be loyal to the company and everything would be fine and dandy. Smiles greeted their speeches and when the girls returned to their departments they laughed at the futile superintendents who could not hoodwink them.

The next issue of the "Bailey Worker" is being eagerly awaited.

PRISON LABOR MENACE TO TRADE UNIONS; SHOULD BE COMBATTED

By S. WYNN.

The problem of prison labor has arisen again of the order of the day. From year to year more prisoners are being exploited for little or nothing and the undertakings are making a great deal of profit.

According to the data supplied by the United States Census Bureau there are 202,545 persons incarcerated in the penal institutions of this country. About half of that sum are sentenced to "hard labor." Hard labor has been the means of political corruption and private profits for some individuals under that system of society.

No Census Taken.

We must remember that no real census of the number of convicts sentenced to "hard labor" who are engaged in producing commodities for private profit has ever been made.

On the inaccurate report of 1922 out of 7,105 convicts in penitentiaries alone, there were 47,109 engaged in the manufacture of goods for the markets and for private profits.

Three systems of transferring prison laborers to prison labor contractors are used in various states. Kentucky, Alabama, Maryland, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Delaware, Virginia, New Hampshire, and Maine, use what they call contract system, under which the state sells the labor of the convicts to the contractors for a little sum of money per day.

"Piece Price" System.

The states of Connecticut, Wyoming, Tennessee, Rhode Island, Oklahoma, Vermont, Indiana, Nebraska and Massachusetts, use what is known as the "piece price" system, under which the contractor pays the state an agreed price for each piece or article made by prisoners.

Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Mississippi, Texas, Iowa, North Dakota, Kansas, California, Louisiana, Arkansas, South Carolina, Illinois and South Dakota use the "public account" system, buying all raw materials, manufacturing and marketing the goods. The contractors of prison labor exploitation escape all the risks and make an assured profit.

16,000,000 Work Shirts.

It should be the point, that many manufacturers are building different kinds of factories in prison by prison labor and operated with prison labor. In 1923 one single contracting firm produced in 17 prison factories it controls about 16,000,000 work shirts, other small firms produced millions of overalls, children's play suits, underwear and women's house dresses. All those millions of garments went on the market under a cheaper price than that of unionized labor products.

In Massachusetts there is now a bill in the legislature that provides the right of the state to transfer prisoner mechanics from one part of the country to another if necessary.

Prison labor is a very urgent problem before the American labor movement and a solution must be found. Instead of building new prisons we must build schools and improve the economic conditions, so that the crime wave may diminish.

1,500 Plumbers' Helpers Insist On Union Rights

1,500 plumbers' helpers of Brooklyn and Queens packed the auditorium of the Church of All Nations, 9 Second Ave., last night and expressed determination to carry on the strike of the men which began last Friday, to a successful finish.

Rank and File Growing.

C. E. Miller, president of the Plumbers' Helpers' Union, which is now negotiating with the United Association of Plumbers of the A. F. of L. for a charter, announced from the platform that hundreds of men are now joining the organization. The initiation fee will be raised to $5 on Wednesday night.

Demands To Bosses.

A decision to send the formulated demands of the union to the Master Plumbers' Association was made at the meeting last night, and the communication will be forwarded to the employers today. The fundamental demands of the workers call for recognition of their union; a $9 a day wage, with double time for overtime; and a 40-hour week.

Meanwhile a lockout of 1,000 plumbers by the bosses of Queens is being expected momentarily as a result of the strike of 1,500 plumbers in Brooklyn Boro. According to officials of the association this action will be made necessary by the agreement between the bosses of the two boroughs whereby the members of each organization are bound to pay the same wages.

Fur Union Right Wing Trades Away Workers' Victory for Boss' Aid

Charges that the reactionary officials of the International Fur Workers' Union in agreements just made with the fur bosses had forfeited the rights of workers that it had taken years to achieve in return for co-operation in smashing the Furriers' Union, were made yesterday by Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board.

For aid to be given the entrenched officialdom of the International in their efforts to force registration of workers the bosses are to have the right of "piece work" and "standards of production." Wage schedules will also be determined by the manufacturers, it is charged, with the result that the influence of the workers on the job will finally disappear.

Leaflet Explains.

Precise details of the deal made by the officials of the International and the bosses are contained in a leaflet which will be distributed in the fur market today by the Joint Board.

Restaurant Owner Howls That Strike Causes Him Damage

GARY, Ind.—The hearings in the injunction suit brought by Michael Magioudis, proprietor of the Delmar Cafe, Gary, against the Culinary Workers' Union, Local 241, Gary, continued 3 days before Judge Cries of the Superior Circuit Court at Hammond, Ind.

Attorney Rose officially represents the plaintiff. Back of the case is, however, the Restaurant Keepers' Association, formed recently in Gary, Ind.

Damages vs. Damages.

The plea of the restaurant keepers for an injunction was made on the basis that their business was damaged because of the picketing by the union.

The culinary workers countered with the declaration through the officials of the union, Frank Foley, the business agent and B. Borsoff, president of the local, that the consideration of the health of the man and women employed in the restaurants and their general welfare is far superior to the selfish interests of some greedy restaurant keeper.

The union officials and the pickets, while denying "conspiracy to cause damage," did not hesitate in the course of their testimony to state that they would continue picketing even if they knew that by so doing they are causing damage to the plaintiff.

The testimony by the union brought out that the 7-day week, long hours of work, and low wages cause unculcuable damage to the health of the restaurant workers.

Demanding More Pay.

MELBOURNE, Australia (By Mail) (FP).—The Waterside Workers' Federation is claiming increased rates of pay for overtime worked on the various wharves on the Australian coast. The present rates for overtime are: 5 p. m. to 12 midnight, 90 cents per hour; 12 midnight to 8 a. m., $1.08 per hour. The federation is claiming increases to $1.05½ and $1.42 respectively. The present rate for ordinary time (71 cents per hour) is to remain unaltered. The federation is also claiming straight-out preference for unionists for its members.

McGRADY RAGES AT COMMITTEE OF A HUNDRED

Appears at Its Meeting, Wants Jail for Labor

The Committee of One Hundred for the defense of the Imprisoned Needle Trades Workers, which met late yesterday afternoon at the Civic Club, 103 East 16th St., for the purpose of electing an executive committee and planning its campaign for the raising of funds, was heatedly assailed by Edward F. McGrady, representing the American Federation of Labor, and Abraham Beckerman, member of the Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, who were given the courtesy of the floor to voice their opposition to the relief work which the committee has planned.

An attack on the personnel of the committee and its object was also made by Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, in a letter which was read by Julius Hochman, one of the International's vice-presidents.

Only For Relief

Altho the Committee of One Hundred in its official announcement, and in the statements of several individual members, had made it clear that it has been organized to raise funds for the relief of the families of those furriers and cloakmakers who are in jail for their strike activities, Sigman, in his letter which was read by Hochman says "we will reserve the right to expose the committee, at every opportunity, for its supine willingness to be used as a tool, in the name of humanity, by a group of rewardly rascals."

Julius Hochman was voted permission to read Sigman's letter, which was full of references to the left wing "gangsters" whom the committee was in danger of helping, and which quoted the recently published "statement" from the four cloakmakers who denounced the raising of funds for themselves or their fellow prisoners.

Beckerman's object in coming to the meeting, he said, was because he "would not want to see anyone be misguided as to become part of the underworld; or start a fund to support gangsters."

Growing somewhat excited, he added:

"You will probably make yourselves ridiculous and somewhat of a nuisance. There is a state of civil war in the cloak and fur unions about which you know nothing. If you get into the union fight you will be injuring yourself with the underworld. If any of you still have clean reputations, you had better stay out of this fight. My advice to you is to mind your own business."

McGrady Up.

To most of the committee members this most astounding address was a great surprise. But they were given an even more bitter attack from Edward F. McGrady who had made several attempts to get the floor and was now granted an opportunity to speak his mind.

"You are aligning yourself with the underworld," McGrady bellowed at the committee. "Civil war is no business * * * the American labor movement doesn't want outsiders in business * * *. Before you start injecting yourself, you might as well know we have raised the banner of Americanism versus Communism."

The Old Formula

In repeating this slogan, McGrady made a slip and said "We have asked the workers to choose between Americanism or Socialism" but he turned back to the proper formula and went on enumerating the various brands of criminals belonging to the left wing forces.

"I congratulate you on the company you find yourself in. As for me, I am going to leave." (Picking up his hat and coat he stalked out).

What About Men Jailed?

Several others in the right wing delegation wanted to talk, but the committee refused to listen to any more speeches. Chairman Arthur Hays again stated the objects of the committee and asked Hochman whether Morris Sigman was attempting to prevent the committee from giving relief to the innocent men in jail because they refused to ask help from the International.

Hochman Dodges

Hochman "dodged" to make another speech on this point, and when Mr. Hays demanded a "yes" or "no" answer, Hochman refused to reply.

Marion Meyers Relieved.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., April 5.—Marion Meyers, University of South Dakota co-ed, today left the state penitentiary here, having completed her month's sentence for breaking into the First National Bank at Vermillion. Miss Meyers was released five days off her sentence for good behavior.

Parents' League Meets April 7.

CHICAGO, Ill., April 5. — The North-West Side Parents' League will meet Thursday, April 7, at 8 p. m., at 3301 LeMoyne St., cor. Spaulding (in the basement of the church). Reports will be given by the officers at the League on the school situation in Chicago. All parents of the north-west side, whether they are members of the organization or not, are welcome to the meeting.

Charles W. Morse and Sons Are Free Of Fraud Charges

Indictments against Charles W. Morse, steamship magnate, and his three sons were dismissed yesterday upon the request of the U. S. District Attorney's office.

The four were indicted in April 1922, on charges of defrauding investors in the sale of the "United States Steamship Co." stock. The three sons were tried last October and the jury disagreed.

Charles W. Morse was presumably ill at the time and was excused from trial. Yesterday Assistant U. S. District Attorney Robert Manley said that he "had made a thorough investigation" and that is his opinion "a retrial of the men was not warranted by the facts in the case."

The alder Morse has become involved in shady deals a number of times during a stormy career as a financier. Nearly a decade ago he was sentenced to Atlanta after being convicted of defrauding the government. He did not serve long, however, as he was pardoned by President Taft following charges that he was "on his deathbed."

Employers' Lobby Has Fake Worker Delegate But Nice Trick Fails

CHICAGO, (FP).—Employer lobbyists of Springfield had a bad time of it when their carefully coached "representative of the workers" was shown up as a fraud in the Illinois legislative hearings on the women's 8-hour bill. As a result the bill was reconsidered and passed by a vote of 17 to 5. The Illinois State Federation of Labor Weekly News Letter describes the victory as follows:

The action of the committee was taken after extended hearings. On March 23 the time was given wholly to opponents of the bill except for a few moments during which Miss Wasowicz, a member of Electrical Workers' Local Union of Chicago, completely upset the enemies of the bill by proving certain of their statements to be absolutely untrue.

Surprised Faker.

Miss Wiszowaty's appearance was a surprise. Miss Wilberna Ayers had claimed to represent the women and girls employed by the Automatic Electric Co. at Chicago. They were opposed to the bill, according to the positive statement made by Miss Ayers. Miss Ayers seemed very sure of her ground and the merchants and manufacturers who were present grinned smugly as she spoke her piece.

Had Names.

Then Miss Wiszowaty, a pretty, pleasant mannered young lady, appeared on the scene. "I work at the plant of the Automatic Electric Co.," Miss Wiszowaty informed the committee, "and I am authorized to speak for the other women and girls employed at that plant. We favor the women's 8-hour bill and we ask you to pass it. Here is a petition signed by more than a hundred of my fellow workers asking you to pass this bill. I do not know Miss Ayers. She signed petitions that the girls want the bill enacted."

The crowd of manufacturers, superintendents and foremladies looked at each other uneasily. A motion that the bill be reported with a recommendation that it "do pass" was adopted by a vote of 17 to 5.

James Rowen Not to Be Deported Court Finds; Retains Naturalization

A legal decision of primary importance to the labor movement was secured from the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals of the 9th District in the case of Rowen vs. the United States of America.

Rowen, a naturalized Englishman, was a member of the I. W. W., and convicted along with Hayward and other members of the I. W. W. in 1919. His citizenship papers were taken from him in Spokane on the ground that he had fraudulently obtained them by concealing his disloyalty to the United States at the time of making his declaration, i. e. that he had hidden motives in applying for citizenship. The government endeavored to prove this by the fact that five years afterward he had joined the I. W. W. and in 1917 took part in a strike.

The Circuit Court of Appeals held that too long a time had elapsed between the securing of citizenship papers and his joining the I. W. W. and that it was impossible to prove any fraudulent concealment. The case was fought by Attorney Austin Lewis of San Francisco, the foremost champion of civil liberties and the cause of labor on the Pacific Coast.

Had this case been lost, the way would have been open for the revoking of citizenship papers and deportation of naturalized citizens who might for one reason or another be deemed "undesirable citizens."

Rowen was the leader of the "Kmarxency Program" split in the I. W. W. in 1924.

Labor Faker Mulcts Union of Thousands In Phoney Bond Deal

(Special to Daily Worker.)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 5.—The DAILY WORKER carried several reports about the failure of the Pittsburgh Brotherhood Bank. Further investigations reveal astounding facts. Kelly, the well known reactionary official of the carpenters' union took $37,500 of the Carpenters' Union funds and put them into the pool to buy the fake bonds.

This was done without the consent and knowledge of the official district board of the carpenters' union Patton who was one of the three who slugged Powers Hapgood, progressive leader of the U. M. W. A. at the Indianapolis convention, signed a note, notwithstanding the fact that he was not worth a cent. His made an effort to deny his signature but under pressure he was compelled to admit that the signature was his. Beatty, the well known Pittsburgh spy while president of the bank, forced through loans amounting to $14,000. He threatened to resign as president of the bank if these loans were not given to his "friends." The $14,000 were given on notes which turned out to be worthless paper.

Mysterious Bonds.

The secretary of banking, Cameron, stated to the joint committee on reorganization of the bank and the Pittsburgh C. L. T. representatives, that the did not like the directors of the bank, that is the reason why he examined their accounts twice as often as he did those of other banks.

The bank failed as a result of a number of crooked deals which terminated in an attempt to buy some mysterious bonds amounting to $800,000. These bonds were supposed to be bought at the reduced rate of $320,000. The money was turned over to a man by the name of Knapp who disappeared with the money and never delivered the bonds.

Birds of a Feather.

Knapp was found guilty and was sentenced to a jail term and to a fine. It is remarkable that in this district besides the high labor officials a ex-superintendent of Carnegie Steel Works in Braddock also took part. This steel man is Mr. Dinkey brother-in-law of the infamous Charley Schwab who is now leading the open shop against the U. M. W. of A., and whose record dates back from 1892 in the fingernetead strike. Dinkey "invested" $150,000 in the pool to purchase the alleged liberty bonds, which McGrady, Nelson, Redmond and Kelly were to get from Knapp. McGready, was well known to be one of the worse labor baiters in Pittsburgh.

Fakers Pull Wires.

The assistant district attorney was about to nolle prosse the cases against McGready, Kelly, Redmond and Nelson after Knapp was made the great goat and sentenced to jail. It was due only to the vigorous protests raised by the Central Labor Council of Pittsburgh that the assistant district attorney did not dare to carry on his schema and made a promise to persecute the case.

It is remarkable that D. J. Davis also was chairman of the Board of Directors of the bank and who is also chairman of the banks' reorganization committee did not explain why the officers of the bank were allowed to indulge in such deals.

Seamen Have New Scale.

SYDNEY, Australia (By Mail) (FP).—Seamen in Australia have a new scale of wages. Boatsmen's wages range from $77.40 to $82.20 ordinary seamen, $48.20 to $58.80, according to age; donkeyman and firemen drivers, $91.80; greasers, ordinary firemen and storekeepers, $87; trimmers, $77.40; firemen assistants, $34 to $36.50, according to age. The rates of pay are subject to adjustment according to the rise and fall in the cost of living. Hours at sea are eight per day, from 6 a. m. to 5 p. m. with overtime at the rate of 66 cents per hour. When ashore in port men receive payment for meals and lodgings, while 14 days' holiday on full pay annually are granted.

Student Attempts Suicide.

CAMDEN, N. J., April 5.—Walter Ballinger, 17, student at the Moorestown Friends' Academy, attempted suicide today by shooting himself through the chest in a shack back of the school. Police took the boy to Cooper Hospital where his condition is reported as serious.

Ballinger left a note addressed to is parents, reading: "I'm sorry to leave you this but I was tired of living."

Blood Flows in Berlin

By JOE FREEMAN.

BERLIN, March 23. (By mail.)—I have seen the blood of German workers along Bismarckstrasse. The green police, who serve under a social democratic chief, fired into a peaceful demonstration of men, women, and children who marched to protest against the fascist terror instigated, patronized and protected by the German bourgeoisie.

Violence Prepared.

Violence has been in the air for some time. On May 1 the workers of Germany, like the workers the world over, will celebrate the international proletarian holiday.

The German fascists have announced a counter-demonstration for May 8. From all parts of the Reich the black hordes of reaction will march to Berlin. The subsidized hooligans of the Stahlhelm have openly announced their plan to terrorize the workers. This week they gave a few preliminary examples.

On Sunday the workers of Juterbog, on the outskirts of Berlin, celebrated the anniversary of the Paris Commune. They were entertained by a brass band of 25 Communists from the Rote Frontkampferbund, a militant working class organization especially feared and hated by the fascists.

On the same day 400 fascists held maneuvers at Trebbin, a nearby town. Both groups returned to Berlin on the same train. The brave 400 fascists attacked the 25 Communists. They beat them with sticks and flagpoles; they threw heavy stones at them; they fired revolvers into the small group of unarmed workers. The police at the railway station of Lichterfeld-Ost, where the fascist pogrom took place, did not lift a finger. Twenty of the Communists were wounded. Six of them had to be taken to the hospital. From the Lichterfeld-Ost station the fascists went on to Berlin with the cry: "Kill the Jews!" They beat up people in the streets.

Often Attack.

This is not an isolated incident. The anniversary of the Paris Commune was celebrated by workers in various parts of Germany, and in a number of places the celebrations were followed by fascist pogroms. In Duisburg a gang of fascists attacked a small group of social democratic workers. In Solingen they attacked Communist workers.

Thousands March.

Yesterday the Rote Frontkampferbund called on the workers of Berlin to demonstrate against the fascist terror. Thousands of workers gathered at the end of the Tiergarten to march toward Friedrich Carl Platz.

The members of the R. F. B. and of its women's auxiliary wore uniforms and carried banners. The side-walks and gutter were jammed with workers—young and old, men, women and children. They were indignant over Sunday events.

At the head of the R. F. B. lines stood half a dozen of Sunday's victims with bandaged heads. In front of them was a line of green police on horseback. The streets were full of police in uniform and plain clothes. From the side streets there came pouring in R. F. B. workers in uniform, on foot and in motor trucks. They carried red banners and placards.

"Down with the fascist terror!"

"Workers, defend yourselves on May 8th!"

"Prepare against the danger of international war!"

"Down with fascism and reaction!"

"Our blood shall not flow in vain!"

Behind each contingent of R. F. B. workers came a truckload of green police. The brass bands scattered along the R. F. B. line struck up the Internationale and the demonstration began to move, thousands of voices taking up the words, thousands of heads bared under the arclights of Berlin's polished streets.

We were marching through the bourgeois quarter of the city. The R. F. B. swung along four abreast, the workers on the sidewalks and in the gutter moved in loose formation. Ahead of us we could see the backs of the green police bouncing on their horses.

An excited young man started to run about among the front lines of the workers, urging them to push on faster. The leader of the R. F. B. said:

"Be careful! He is a provocateur!"

Murder Begins.

The excited young man disappeared. The mass moved on, part of it getting ahead of the R. F. B. lines. We came to a street car crossing. The police horses backed up against the crowd. The singing went on.

"Down with the fascists!"

"Down!"

"Down!"

"Down!"

The police sabres flashed in the air. Some one screamed.

"Dogs! Fascists!"

"Murderers!"

A shot rang out. The mass at the head of the demonstration began to scatter. Several more shots were fired. Voices began to shout:

"Weiter! Weiter!"

"Keep together and march on!"

We were moving along Bismarckstrasse. I looked down and saw a line of blood which continued for a block. Some wounded worker was still marching. The deep voiced mass was still singing revolutionary songs.

"Voelker hoert die Signale,
Auf zum letzten Gefecht!"

"Pure Reason."

We turned into Kantstrasse, named after an 18th century German philosopher who wrote a book called The Critique of Pure Reason. . . . At the head of the procession the ashes must have been slashing again, for there was blood along the philosopher's street, too. But the mass kept moving.

"Weiter! Weiter!"

At the Friedrich Carl Platz there were three trucks full of green police. On the corner stood a long police officer with a long green coat, patent leather boots and a sword, surveying the scene with the exaggerated hnuteur of a Simplicissimus cartoon. The R. F. B. fife corps struck up "Wir sind die junge Garde," and the mass kept moving.

"Rot, Front! Rot' Front! Rot' Front!"

Thaelman Slashed.

From that point the procession went on more or less peacefully. Later we learned that three workers had been wounded by revolver shots, and about twenty had received sabre cuts. Among the latter were Comrade Thaelman, one of the leaders of the German Communist Party.

Meantime a similar scene took place in Weberweise, in the east part of the city. Several thousand workers gathered to march on to join the demonstration in Charlottenburg. The green police charged into them, using sabres and revolvers. One man was killed and a number wounded.

Net results of the day: one dead, forty wounded.

Bloodthirsty Socialists.

Today, Herr Zoergiebel, chief of the Berlin police, has issued an order to his men that all crowds must be dispersed. He is a member of the social Democratic Party. Herr Gerzinski, police president, defended last night's murderous action of the police before the Prussian Landtag. He is also a social democrat. The Vorwaerts, official organ of the Social Democratic Party, writes today that the poor police had to defend itself. The press of the extreme right publishes headlines about a Communist assault on the poor police. Such is stabilized Germany.

The workers are going to hold another demonstration in Lichterfelde-Ost tonight to protest against the white terror. The Communist Party has publicly pointed out the connection of this week's events with the fascist preparations for May 1 and 8, and with the general drive to consolidate the power of the bourgeoisie politically as well as economically.

Different in U. S. S. R.

Two weeks ago I saw an entirely different kind of demonstration. I was in Moscow, where elections to the soviets were going on. Soviet Square was filled with groups of workers, communals and Red Army men from early morning till late at night, listening to speeches about the magnificance of the elections, the British note, the world situation. A few "millionners" stood by directing izvoschiks to go down a side street so at not to disturb the comrades in the square.

The days when the police of capitalists, landlords and bankers could shoot into groups of unarmed workers are gone forever in Russia. In the "cultured west" it will go on for a little while until the workers take power.

Booze Deaths Increase.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 5.—The death rate from alcoholism has increased over 500 per cent in Baltimore from 1900 to 1926, Health Commissioner Jones said today. There were four alcoholic deaths in the city in 1920 and 74 from alcoholism in 1926 Jones said.

Worker and Wife Killed by Gas.

John Burtha, a laborer, and his wife, Mary, each fifty years old, were found dead from gas poisoning in bed in their furnished room at 55 Concord street, Brooklyn, yesterday.

Fragments from "The Broken Charm"

A Free Translation From the Russian of A. Andreyiv.
By VERA and VIOLET MITKOVSKY.

Part I

The soul matures sometimes in youth and sometimes even in adolescence. It is then one begins to feel the need of action, to grope for a pathway; comes the desire to kindle a star, then reach for another, even brighter. Stirring events—wars, revolutions, hasten boyhood into youth, youth into manhood, and bring old men to senility.

The native land of two youths, Tropin and Golubovsky, clamped for centuries in the relentless charmed ring, was breaking through that ring, not by a cunning more fine or a magic more potent, but by force. Countless rusting millions trod the new way, followed it eagerly, firmly, relentlessly. With them marched Tropin and Golubovsky. Tropin, having glimpsed Truth, followed her with his heart and mind, nor was he deluded. Golubovsky, too, grasping beauty and strength, went with his comrade.

In the February revolution Golubovsky had commanded a company in one of the first regiments to mutiny and had joined together the units of the outlying districts of St. Petersburg. In the October revolution he again took arms, this time against Kerensky. He was sincere when he said, "It is the strength of the Bolsheviks I love. Strength is beauty and weakness is ugliness." And he kindly Tropin answered, "There you go again."

With eyes smouldering gloomily in his swarthy face, aged beyond its years, Eugene Golubovsky would say,

"Now at the front there is no taking prisoners or giving quarter; I will get a transfer."

It was a long time since Golubovsky had laughed or joked. It was terrible to hear him say.

"They murdered my bride on the Fleetskaia. She was a Communist. They pinned her to the floor of a train with bayonets."

"You are cruel, Gene." As in childhood, Tropin spoke the words with a sigh.

Golubovsky was finally sent to command one of the Red regiments on the Siberian front. He rarely wrote to his chum, but Tropin often had news of him. Soldiers returning from the front and newspapers told of advantages gained by his friend and of the two decorations presented to him for daring.

Commander Golubovsky, the regimental secretary Fakeyiv, and the courier, Iversov, escaped from the enemy's camp. It was a desperate attempt, made at night, just as the train was approaching the rear of the white army. They were nearing a station. The prisoners, in rags, their shoes taken from them to their ungainly feet, with one guard in a dark freight car. Half-naked, they crouched together for warmth. The weak, sickly Fakeyiv's teeth were chattering and he pressed closer to Iversov, the powerful twenty year old Siberian, trying to gain some warmth from the strong young body.

Suddenly Commander Golubovsky whispered into Iversov's ear, "Escape," and, without waiting for an answer, added, "By the throat." The whisper was still as a thought. Iversov rose noiselessly. Feet shuffled, a rifle rattled, and in a second the laboring gasps ceased. Golubovsky ran his bayonet twice through the guard and left it there, pinning him to the floor. The train whistle sounded—the station! They jumped from the moving train. Fakeyiv nearly broke his leg. He was clumsy and frightened. They found themselves in the shadow of the train, half-naked, standing bare-footed on the brush—the forest lay near.

All night they stumbled through the forest, silently, scowling as branches swept their faces. Only at times Fakeyiv complained of the foot he had hurt. He was trembling and continually stubbing his bare toes. "We'll die anyway." At times he would exclaim angrily, "Why did we run away? We'll only wander into one of their camps again. The devil knows where are troops are. They're retreating. Maybe we wouldn't have been shot, but now, we're sure to—" The giant Iversov slapped him on the shoulder with the huge paw which a few hours before had strangled the guard. "Brother, pull yourself together, comrade; we'll live." "Leave me alone," Fakeyiv shrugged away. Silence again. They stumbled along, closing their eyes as branches brushed by. In the morning they rested. "Not enough food. Bad." Iversov shook his head.

"Do you know these parts?" Golubovsky asked him.

"Not very well. But farther on is our country. We'll reach it, Comrade Commander." A smile spread over Iversov's fat, kindly face.

"We can't reach it," said Golubovsky quietly. "One might, but three—impossible."

Golubovsky drew up his great height. His voice rang out as clearly as a short time ago when commanding his regiment:

"Iversov! One of us must reach our territory that he may lead our troops to the rear of the enemy's army. Its right flank is weak. Even a small company, preferably cavalry, entering the rear, might decide matters for us on the front. Iversov! remember this path as well as you can. You know the tundra better than I know the streets of St. Petersburg. Come, divide the food into three portions, one for each day. If you eat it all at once you won't be able to crawl half the way. Understand?"

"Three? I alone? Iversov did not understand.

"There is barely enough for you alone—you are stronger than we. Then Golubovsky pointed at Fakeyiv, "he certainly couldn't live through it!" And I—you know yourself I had a contusion lately and have been wounded. They know this country."

"Commander, Commander, . . ."

"Stop! I will go on with you as far as I can without food. As for him," he pointed at Fakeyiv, "he can go no farther. Will he turn to us treacherously, or he will return to the whites and ruin himself, us, and, what matters most, our plans. He'll be afraid to die in the forest and would go back to hell itself. I know him—a coward."

"Comrade Commander! Impossible! If we die, we will die, if we go on, we go on together. How can we tie a man to a tree?" exclaimed Iversov rapidly.

"Comrade Golubovsky!" Fakeyiv staggered on his swollen feet. His white face was convulsed.

"Comrade Iversov! Remember, we are no longer prisoners. I am giving a military command. Bind Fakeyiv!" thundered the voice at the sound of which but lately three hundred men had frozen into passion or a man dashed into battle. He continued quietly but firmly, "Iversov! I saved you at Belash. Don't stop to save me now, save the cause and yourself. Save yourself that you may save the cause. You will lead our men back. The matter is clear: three die or one goes on. Silence Iversov! You are to be married. Remember, you told me?" Even more quietly he went on, "Remember—Katia, Iversov? You must save yourself for her sake. Why argue? Can three walk ten days and nights on one day's rations? You alone, eating a little, can make it. I am still your commander. We are not in prison. For the last time I repeat, I am issuing a military order."

Frenzied scolding, prayers, and curses streamed from Fakeyiv's lips. Weak, narrow-chested, with swollen feet, he was being crushed by Iversov's firm, heavy-boned hulk.

"Tighter," Golubovsky was saying. "Comrades! Dear comrades! Ah-h-h! What does this mean? Oh—oh! Com . . . Com . . . "Golubovsky was stuffing his mouth with a crumpled, torn shirt sleeve. "Ooo-oo-oo." He clenched his teeth.

"Stop this! Open your mouth," said Golubovsky. Trembling against the tree-trunk, Fakeyiv desperately wriggled his head. Gazing up at him, his eyes filled with tears, Iversov was binding his feet with strips of torn-off clothing.

"Force his mouth open." The tearful brown eyes were brimming over. "Fool. He'll scream." Iversov lowered his eyes and a great sob shook his large frame. Tears streaked his round, sun-burnt young cheeks. He raised two dirty red hands, each larger than the small face he was now clamping between them. "Com. . . Com. . .oo. .oo. ." Fakeyiv caught at the fingers with his teeth. "Oo. .oo. ." Huge firm hands forced open the powerless jaws.

They went on again—now two. They rested only when too tired to move. It was always Golubovsky who stopped, but not for long. They went on again, curling their bare toes as they stepped on rough stumps and prickly shrubs. Even Iversov's hardened peasant feet were swollen and bleeding. His powerful young body was weakening, his spirit, falling. Yet it was always Golubovsky who said,

"Come, we sit too long. This is no birthday-party." He had eaten nothing for several days and was thin, pale under his tan, but his black eyes were still glowing and his voice firm. Iversov gazed at Golubovsky's tall form with fear, respect, and worship. He thought aloud, "Yet he goes on and still he will not eat. What a man!" When they halted, he gave him bits of bread, this inexhaustible man who starved himself. At each of these rests the conversation never varied. It was always the command, "Remember this place. Lead them here. Are you listening? Do you give me your word to lead them back? Any regiment, the first you come across. Are you listening?"

"I am listening, Comrade Commander." Then Iversov would whine in the voice of a beggar, "Comrade commander, eat just a little. I won't go on alone. How can I go on alone?" Or, himself hungry, he would resolutely refuse, "I won't eat if you kill me. I don't want any food. If you starve, I starve with you." The unchanging answer was always, "You old woman!" Why don't you start crying? Dishrag—no soldier."

"How can I? I'm not an animal. A man starving and I. . ." "And you're a fool," said Golubovsky sharply. Then a minute later, "You went then?"

"Alone, no." "Then let us go on." The bread was left behind on a stump until the end. "Comrade Commander," said the piteous voice behind Golubovsky. "Well?" The large brown eyes looked like those of a suffering horse. Golubovsky turned his back on them. "We are not going to a ball. Come, take the bread." As they went on, he said sharply over his shoulder, "Let this be the end of your whining."

Day came. They had not gone a mile since morning before Golubovsky sat down on a stump. Iversov, silent and hiding his fear, gazed at the pale face tinged with yellow and at the strong bony chest. He tried to rise—sank down again. "Rest, man, rest," said Iversov quietly, then sighed. The voice and the sigh were full of pity.

"Prokopic," suddenly called Golubovsky. Long ago, when on the commanding staff, he had called his favorite so, by his Christian name. Iversov's head swayed. His voice shook. "What is it? He forgot to add the customary Comrade Commander.

"Go on—I can't. You'll reach it now." His head fell on the mossy stump as though it were a pillow. A slight breeze rose. The bushes shivered and rustled above the up-turned face. Iversov hovered. He knelt by the stump, there in the holly bushes, with that face, so well known but Fragments from the Broken Charm. Chief among the now unrecognizable. Only the eyes remained the same—black stones, not eyes.

"Comrade Commander, do as you please, I won't leave you. I can carry you. I have strength enough." He spoke rapidly, gulping. "Honestly, I have only two days left. Come, eat a piece. There is some left, see. Eat it or I'll force you to and then carry you. My back is strong and my feet—look, they can stand it. Comrade—look."

Scaree audibly but firmly. "Go, don't waste time." Iversov's inner struggle was great. He clasped his head between his hands, his teeth chattering. Suddenly he began to weep and mumble like an old woman wailing over a corpse. "Oh, oh, ai, ai, it makes my heart sick. O my friend, my comrade. How often you have saved me. At Belash you received a bullet for me, and now again. You'll starve for me, a fool. You are needed, an educated man, a commander. Golubovsky's voice was still stern as he answered, "Hound! Traitor! Stop philandering around. Go!"

"Comrade Commander, I can't go alone." The thin face smiled for the first time in years. "Pity is a weakness. Crush it." The holly leaves rustled above the calm face. "Forgive me, Comrade Commander. Good-bye." "Go, then, go." The lanceolain steps scrunched a short distance along the moss, then returned. "Oh, what shall I do? What shall I do? Golubovsky's voice was but a part of the rustling breeze, "Here again? Go. I say." Iversov turned and disappeared, running swiftly.

A few days later a company of cavalry, guided by a Red Army soldier, lately escaped from the enemy, entered the forest. After a long search they suddenly came upon the body of the regimental commander, Golubovsky.

His eyes had been pecked out.

"BOB" IS A FAITHFUL FRIEND

"Bob," a mongrel (a cross between a collie and an airedale) stood guard all night in the rain over his friend, a white poodle, which had been injured by an auto in New York's busy streets and then shot to death by a policeman. "Bob" even dragged the dead dog to shelter. The veterinarian pictured here finally coaxed "Bob" away and now has adopted him, giving him the freedom of his dog sanitarium with all its comforts.

Onward Christian nations
With guns and poison gas,
Forward Christian soldiers
For Mammon, God and Jazz.

Teach the yellow heathen
With Christian shot and shell
Respect for Christian Powers
And fear of Christian hell.

Don't they like old China
As it is run by us?
Then let them leave their country
And make no heathen fuss.

How To Be Comfortably Dead.

(If you have the price)

"100 years from now," the exclusive Fairview Mausoleum of Fairview, N. J., heads an advertisement which then reads:

"Where will today's cemeteries be? Gone, the same way as most of those that existed a hundred years ago. Fairview Mausoleum with its huge endowment fund for perpetual upkeep will be more glorious than ever—with its forty-three hundred peaceful dead."

Not to be outdone, the Kensico Cemetery announces:

"The New Kensico Mausoleum has been completed more than a year. It is a beautiful, heated and lighted building with an atmosphere of luxury and comfort. In definite use may be arranged for."

The prospects for indefinite use will be especially attractive to well-to-do corpses.

Note on the Age of Specialization.—The New York World puts this caption over a story on the city's new police chief: "WARREN TO LEAVE CRIME TO POLICE."

Some More About Liberals.—Take the tragic events at Nanking. Tragic, of course, for a great many reasons. Big epochal world-circling reasons. Above all in revealing the deliberate intention of the British imperialists to frustrate the Chinese revolution—any pretext (or no pretext) for drawing the other powers into supporting its designs; British bomb planes ready to blow up the Chinese arsenals; tanks ready to mow down the workers; ships ready to blockade the Yangtse and choke populous cities to death. The Nanking affair calls up a picture of giant forces preparing for giant struggles.

But how does a liberal react to this picture? Norman Thomas in the "New Leader" leads off a piece on it with these words: "The Nanking incident was in itself tragic and disappointing to those who had high hopes of the discipline and restraint of the Nationalist army." Until this happened, of course, we all thought that the Chinese civil war was being fought with wooden swords and bread pellets for the entertainment of kind-hearted and sympathetic observers. Furthermore, Mr. Thomas is annoyed because "the whole affair has been grossly exaggerated all over the world"—exaggerated in Russia to the discredit of the imperialist bombers; exaggerated in the rest of the world to the discredit of the Chinese. He fails to grasp that these exaggerations—like the shootings themselves—are only minor signs of a great clash of interests, mere sparks thrown off by blazing emotions on both sides.

Thus always the liberal permits a secondary consideration, a breach of etiquette or some petty annoyance to blot out the big and the significant facts. He is quickly "disappointed" and runs from the scene crying for "moderate sentiment."

A Triumph of Civilization.—Our notion of the completely "suppressed" human is one who eats fried chicken with knife and fork when all alone and no chance of anybody peeping.

Religious Note.—Recording the accomplishments of a local evangelist, the pious "Offenbacherzeitung" says: "The subject of the inauguration sermon was the immaculate conception of Mary, which was delivered masterfully by Prater Gerhard."

A Greenwich Villager Calls On The Statue of Liberty.

(Note for the provincial readers: Greenwich Village is a state of inifidity.)

"Well," the Villager breathed to his vis-a-vis, as he gently replaced the lace handkerchief into a well-cut sleeve, "my dear, you are delightful. And so well preserved! There are such fine lines in your face. I really believe that you write poetry. But then again, you shouldn't hold your grm in the air. It is inartistic. It spoils the alignment of your pose. And it makes you look dumb and athletic, like a prizefighter, or a baseball pitcher warming up. I can see that you are not at all blase, or shall I say sophisticated? Really, you are quite naive, like an adolescent who writes poetry. I do believe you write poetry?"

"No, I can't find the time, I must pose for artists all day."

"But I mean as a sideline, do you go in for any other form of art?"

"Art never is a sideline. In my spare time I decorate."

"You do? That's fine. Interior decorating?"

"Oh, no. I decorate the harbor."

"What's that? I never heard of it."

"Go on, now, get out of here, you make me sick. Go hide yourself. You're a nuisance. The revolution's coming."

"But you mustn't be so impolite and inhospitable. Why, you haven't even offered me a cup of tea yet, nor shown me an example of your work."

"Oh, all right, you win." And she decorated his eye a beautiful shade of blue.

And since the Villager missed his boat back, he was drowned trying to swim back, not having had any experience with ocean water, or, for that matter, any other kind.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THERE is a play at the Martin Beck Theatre that every young boy and girl should know as Margaret Sanger might say. Even the professional critics vowed it was good, tho those gentlemen detect various flaws in its historionic anatomy. As for myself, if I like something I have a habit of glossing over little defects. And "Spread Eagle" with American imperialism in Mexico as the theme is as hot a potato as a patriot ever had shoved into his mitt.

TWO ex-warriors who occupied the same sector of a battle area in France are chatting in the office of Mr. Henderson, the big Wall Street broker. One of the two is a newspaper man; the other is the big broker's amanuensis. The latter had his lesson and was sharing it with the reporter, who lived up to the common conception of the typical newshound. He wanted an interview with Henderson which he was willing to write, provided the great man permitted the use of his name. That would be plenty.

THE big man worked for a dollar a year during the war and made a fortune out of it. Every time a shell shrieked from the sector in which those lads suffered it rang up 37 cents on Mr. Henderson's cash register. The man who now supplied Henderson with his business brains also worked for him on the western front. The dialogue between the reporter and the broker's clerk is ear-tickling.

* * *

MR. HENDERSON has extensive holdings in Mexico. He might be Doheny or John D. Rockefeller. He is an interventionist and does not want a stable government in Mexico. Hearst failed to bring about intervention but his spade work planted the idea in the minds of the people. Mr. Henderson has a daughter. A little kokum is enjoyed by the most serious of mortals. Somebody had to get married to cater to that kind of an audience. She played her part capably.

INTO the broker's office bursts an O. Henry, Latin American general, who bored Henderson with speeches on liberty until he was assured of $650,000 to pull off a revolution against the Mexican government. No sooner had he left than the son of an ex-American president came in on the track of a job which he got, starting in at the bottom on a salary of $5,000 a year. tIf course he took the job to prove to Miss Henderson that he would and could make good, etc. He did, and almost got murdered by her father's general. And strange to say that is just what Mr. Henderson wanted to happen tho of course he was not aware his daughter loved the victim. Why? Because the American people would never stand for the murder of the son of an ex-president. And did not the Washington people admit that the people were not yet keyed up to the intervention pitch.

HENDERSON'S general did the job he got paid for and the ex-president's son got Shot. War was declared. Now, there is where the authors of "Spread Eagle" spring something new. They introduce a newspaper editor on the radio who does his one minute speech in four-minute fashion and speaks of soldiers marching to the front and kissing wives and babies are flashed on the screen. Mr. Henderson becomes chairman of the national defense committee and goes to the border in his private car. Generals fuss on him. He is America.

THE ex-president's son is found safe and sound but talking like a man out of his wits. In fact he knows that Henderson sent him to get killed and he is going to spill the beans. The big patriot is shocked and is about to collapse when his amanuensis comes to his rescue, frightens the wits out of the victim who goes off and marries the maiden. Then the big man's flunkey joins the army after giving the broker a tongue thrashing. The curtain falls with the star-spangled banner playing, and the broker's flunkey ordering his boss: "Stand up you son of a b - - -." Perhaps this is a concession to the patriots. Perhaps it is satire.

THE play is the best piece of anti-imperialist propaganda that I have yet seen on the stage. It reveals the imperialist in all his horrible nakedness. Of course there is a strong touch of cynicism there and the acts of the main anti-imperialist character are at variance with his words. But the amount of hokum and the cynicism and the Star Span-

INDIANA STRIP MINING BOSSES TO MEET UNION

Lewis Did Not Attend Conference

INDIANAPOLIS, April 6.—With the bituminous coal lock-out still keeping about 200,000 men idle, and the Pennsylvania constabulary still reported breaking up picket lines there, the miners settled down to what looks like a long fight.

The Indiana strip mine owners may settle, temporarily, on the basis of the Jacksonville scale, and let their men go back to work until the rest of the field settles the wage rate.

Conference On

A meeting takes place at Terre Haute, tomorrow, between operators of strip mines and union officials. Any decision made there will affect but a small part of the mine-out, even in Indiana, and none of the strip miners outside of the state are involved. Strip mining is a special sort of work, more like excavating or quarrying than tunnel and shaft mining, and is not applicable to all American coal fields.

Lewis Won't Attend.

John L. Lewis, International president of the United Mine Workers chiefly responsible for the present tactics of the union, and especially for the making of temporary agreements with any of the owners who will do so, stated in his office here today that he would not attend the Terre Haute conference.

2,500 Women Join In Needle Trades Defense Meeting

2,500 women workers of the needle trades and wives of workers jammed Labor Temple last night in a demonstration protesting against the imprisonment and persecution of active needle trades workers for their activity in recent strikes under left wing leader-hip.

Resolutions Adopted

Resolutions giving their whole-hearted support to the defense of these workers were adopted, and a call was made to all working class women to join in fighting for the release of their mates if the question any existing law or the courts made.

Declaring that "working class women can no longer remain indifferent to the struggles that are going on in the needle trades, and will not be passive to the continual suffering and misery brought about by the officialdom of the International unions of the A. F. of L.," the resolution calls upon the women "who know what it means to have the father of your children taken away and placed behind prison bars for the crime of fighting for a better living," to "raise their voices in protest."

The meeting, which was called by the Unity Committee of the furriers and cloak and dressmakers, was addressed by Kate Gitlow, Fannie Worshofsky, Rose Wortis, Juliet Stuart Poyntz, Leon Chernenko, Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board of the furriers' union, and Louis Hyman, head of the Joint Board of the cloakmakers.

Committee to Begin Work.

A committee of 25 women was appointed at the meeting to begin at once a campaign of agitation for the release of those workers now in jail and for the legal defense of those facing trial.

Fascist Flyer's Plane Burns Up at Prescott; Trip Seems To Be Over

ROOSEVELT LAKE, April 6.—Marquis de Pinedo, fascist round the world flyer, has sunk his plane in the Roosevelt Lake here, and will have to at least temporarily abandon his trip. His policy of a little flying, by easy stages, and much speech making for Mussolini, came to grief when soon after he left it, the plane, Santa Maria, caught fire. No one was hurt. The flames were extinguished, but not until the engine and heavy parts had gone to the bottom.

Anti-fascist in Eastern cities are prepared to answer any of de Pinedo's arguments when he gets there, whether he flies or walks.

BRITISH LABOR TO WAGE FIGHT ON TORY BILL

Right Wing Leaders to Call Conference

LONDON, April 6. The British trade union movement is planning an attack on the government's new bill prohibiting strikes and outlawing the political levy.

Under pressure from the left wing the general council is organizing a national campaign and will hold a special trade union conference to discuss the plan of action.

This is one of the most drastic attempts ever made any British government to crush the workingclass movement.

Driven by the left wing, Ramsay MacDonald and J. R. Clynes have been forced to express opposition to the bill which is sure of passage in the house since the tory government has a big majority.

Thus the government saves the press and has not aimed at the right to strike, but has made it "unlawful for strikes impossible since any strike that would intimidate any "substantial portion of the community" would come under the legal ban if the bill be made the law of the land.

Liberals More Cautious

The liberals say that the government is now intercepting the bill at this time. The right wing labor leaders are only a little more critical, being more fearful of the opportunity for propaganda it presents to the Communists than the injury it may inflict on the workers. The liberals agree with its attack on the general strike and on picketing but doubt the wisdom of banning the political levy and attacking the principle of the closed shop.

While the employers' government is mobilizing its forces against labor the right wing bureaucrats are fighting the left wing, the backbone of the trade union movement and preparing to expel them.

American Stranglehold On World Tightens As Investments Increase

WASHINGTON, April 6.—American investments abroad are rapidly increasing.

While $253,362,150 were invested in foreign countries by American financial magnates in the first quarter of 1926, $377,172,700 were invested in the first quarter of 1927.

American investments abroad now total $11,900,000,000. Investments, according to Department of Commerce officials, are distributed as follows: Europe, $3,200,000,000; Latin-America $4,700,000,000; Canada, $3,-100,000,000, Asia and the rest of the world $900,000,000.

Fierce Battle in Nicaragua; Diaz' Claims Disputed

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Reports continue here of fierce fighting in Nicaragua between the armies of the constitutional president, Juan Sacasa, and those of the usurper, Diaz, placed in power by the United States government. The Diaz representative in Washington has issued a statement claiming the conservatives have captured Muy Muy after a bloody battle in which hundreds were slain.

The claims of the liberal collapse were received with reserve here, however, even by government officials, as the Diaz Government has made similar claims in the past only to have Mr. Sacasa's forces come back apparently stronger than ever.

Latimer Reports Battle

Real Admiral J. L. Latimer, commanding the American occupational forces, reported to the navy department today that the fighting has been very severe in the region of Muy Muy and Sierra Azul.

No definite information is at hand, he reported, indicating a conclusive verdict for either side, but unofficial reports indicate the success of the Diaz forces.

Bulgar Tyrants Force Workers Into Scab Unions

AMSTERDAM, (FP), (By Mail)—Conditions of hardships for organized labor in Bulgaria, says a special report just received from Sofia, are now worse than any known in western Europe in the past 40 or 50 years. Nothing remains of ordered working conditions, of state care for the workless or sick, or of sanitary workplaces. Under the fascist club which now is wielded by the government upon all workers alike, persecution and endless corruption go unchecked.

"Even in trades where unions had some strength," saya the report, "they can do nothing, for they are under constant supervision from the police, who do not allow the slightest free action. Trade union meetings are forbidden, or, if held, are broken up by force. Strikers are arrested by the police beaten, imprisoned and made to suffer worse penalties."

Imitating Mussolini's system, the Bulgarian government is now driving the starved and intimidated workers into fascist unions. Leaders of these organizations play upon the ignorance and prejudices of their recruits, give them uniforms and arms, and pay them a pittance to attack and destroy the free labor organizations.

5,000 Jobless to Be Big Issue in Passaic Election

By EMIL GARDES

PASSAIC, April 6.—After a long and bitter strike the workers of Passaic are faced with another plague—unemployment. There are over 5,000 unemployed workers in Passaic and vicinity, which is a huge number in a small district where the number of wage-earners is about 25,000. All industries feel the depression, but the greatest burden falls upon the textile workers. Most of the mills are running with greatly reduced forces and are discharging workers continuously. This slack is due to the lost orders and to the efforts of the millowners to break the union. The number of workers laid off in the Botany mills alone during the last two weeks amounts to about 600, including naturally, the best union members who were last back to work recently.

Candidates Forget Workers

At the present time there is an election campaign for city commissioners going on in Passaic. The campaign issues consist mostly of slanders and accusations. There is not a word on unemployment, the big issue at the present time. The two capitalist candidates endorsed by the Central Trades and Labor Council are also keeping quiet.

What we need is not the black-listing employment agency of the Chamber of Commerce, but an unemployment committee consisting of workers, for the purpose of arranging larger conferences and mass meetings, demanding of the city to relieve unemployment by construction and repair work; by relief, free medical help and rent moratorium to the destitutes. The demand of equal division of work, the 48 hour week, the strict enforcement of the child and women labor laws shall be raised. This measure cannot be carried out however in small committee meetings, but only by mobilizing the thousands of unemployed workers.

Conference Monday Night

Like the long textile strike, this unemployment movement in Passaic is touching a basic problem of the labor movement which must be followed very closely.

A conference will be held Monday night, April 11, at Carpenters Hall, 167 Jefferson street. Calls with credentials went out to many organizations and the interest manifested, the number of articles appearing in the local papers shows that the conference will be a success.

INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE CALLS ON ALL LABOR TO PROTEST

Planning Huge National Conference to Decide Action for Two Workers' Freedom

CHICAGO, Ill., April 6.—The International Labor Defense, thru James P. Cannon, secretary, issued the following statement today calling for renewed effort to save Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti from the electric chair:

"The decision of the Massachusetts court, disregarding even the established rule of capitalist legal procedure, lays bare the class nature of the prosecution and the forces behind the conspiracy to legally murder Sacco and Vanzetti, two militant workers whose loyalty to their class brought down on them the relentless hatred of the enemies of the American working class.

Only Labor Can Save.

"Sacco and Vanzetti must not die. Those who still retained some hope that the Massachusetts hangmen would relent and spare the lives of these workers by crawling thru some legal loophole which would have allowed them to appear as honest but mistaken agents of the industrial and financial lords, must see now that only the united action of every worker and farmer, every lover of liberty and foe of dishonesty and corruption can save Sacco and Vanzetti. There must be organized and set in motion such a huge mass protest that the executioners of these two innocent men will have to stay their hands.

One Gigantic Movement.

"The International Labor Defense calls upon all who want to save Sacco and Vanzetti to join in one gigantic movement which will not only save their lives but liberate from the tortures they have been forced to endure for more than six years.

Secretary Cannon stated that plans

REED ASSAILS LOWDEN IN FORD LIBEL CONTEST

Sneers at Politicians Farmer Pose

DETROIT, April 6.—National politics entered the Ford-Sapiro libel suit today when United States Senator James A. Reed, democrat, virtually assailed Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, and assistant for the 1928 republican presidential nomination. Continuing his cross examination of Aaron Sapiro, so-called "wheat king," Reed charged Lowden, who headed the National Wheat Growers Advisory Committee, made his living as a capitalist while Sapiro declared Lowden was "one of the greatest farmers in the country."

Sneers at Lowden

Reed was sharply contemptuous of Lowden as a friend of the farmer. The senator who is mentioned as a possibility for the Democratic presidential nomination, declared Lowden, who may be the republican nominee in 1928, was making his living as a son-in-law of the Pullmans." It angered Sapiro, who warmly defended the Illinoisan to the huge enjoyment of the courtroom fans.

Fake Farmers

The clash came when Sapiro listed the members of the advisory committee. He named Lowden, Judge Robert W. Bingham, of Louisville, Bernard M. Baruch, New York capitalist, Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, Thomas Campbell, Montana wheat king, and a half dozen editors of farm papers.

"Why there isn't a wheat grower in the lot," Reed snorted. He then read each name to Sapiro, asking: "Does he grow wheat?" and the witness invariably replied "I don't think so."

"What about Lowden?" Reed queried.

"He may grow some," Sapiro said. "Why he's a capitalist," Reed declared.

"No, he's a splendid lawyer and a very fine farmer," Sapiro said sharply. "He is one of the largest farmers in the country."

Pullman Parasite

Reed stared at Sapiro.

"Now isn't he a capitalist?" the senator insisted. Then with a wave of scorn in his voice, he added: "Isn't

CHINA STRIKES IMPERIALISTS WITH BOYCOTT

Soviet Union Embassy Raided by Chang

SHANGHAI, April 6. China's most effective weapon against foreign aggression—the boycott—has been turned against the United States.

A strike and a boycott of American goods went into effect Monday after noon in Changsha, capital of Hunan Province, in southern China, according to a wireless dispatch received here. The crews of all of the Standard Oil Company launches have walked out, the report said.

General Strike.

A general strike of all employes of foreigners has been called for today at Kiukiang, on the Yangtse River in Kiangsi Province. In the meantime foreign business in Hankow continues at a standstill.

Organized labor at Hankow controls the situation so well that coal burning imperialist gunboats at Hankow are unable to get any fuel. Coal will probably have to be sent up the river from Shanghai.

Raid Soviet Embassy.

PEKING, April 6. Troops of Chang Tso Lin, Manchurian warlord and puppet of the imperialist powers, raided the Soviet Embassy at Peking this morning.

Eighteen Russians and sixty Chinese who were found in the embassy were dragged away by Chang's troops. The raid started at seven o'clock in the morning and did not end until early in the evening. The embassy was ransacked and all documents were confiscated by the northern troops.

Among those captured was Li Shou Chwe, one of the northern leaders of the Chinese liberation movement.

The Russian Charge d'Affaires visited the foreign office this afternoon to lodge a formal protest against the violation of Russia's diplomatic right.

Part of Chang's Terror.

The raid on the Soviet Embassy is only one feature of the campaign of terrorism that Chang Tso Lin, Manchurian war lord, has been waging in an effort to retain his hold on the north. Workers, students, merchants who have dared to protest against Chang's corrupt and unofficial dictatorship in the north have been executed. A number of labor leaders in Tientsin, port for Peking, recently met their death at his hand.

Race Prejudice Is Flayed at Chicago I.L.D. Mass Meeting

CHICAGO, April 6. — Protesting against the imprisonment of colored workers on grounds no more substantial than race prejudice, a mass meeting was held here last Sunday under the auspices of the International Labor Defense. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the American Negro Labor Congress, the International Workers' Aid and a number of Mexican fraternal organizations.

Stressing the unity of interest of workers of all races and colors, William Simons, speaker for the I. L. D., declared that race discrimination was the work of industrial gangsters whose purpose is to divide the workers and rule. The purpose of the I. L. D., he said, is to unite the workers of all races.

Segregation laws came in for a severe drubbing at the hands of Dr. Charles Thompson, who outlined the role of the N. A. A. C. P., in the working class struggle. James Ford of the A. L. U. and Maximo E. Lira, editor of "Mexico," who has been intimately connected with the workers' movement in that country, were among the speakers.

he a capitalist who makes his living as a son-in-law of the Pullmans?"

The Pullmans are the family of multi-millionaires, whose sleeping cars run on all American railroads.

Sapiro's eyes flashed at the sneer in Reed's voice.

"No," the cooperative king shouted, "Governor Lowden does not make his living as a son-in-law of the Pullmans. He is a very fine gentleman and he makes his living as a lawyer and by his work as a farmer."

Ford Profit Great

Meanwhile it has come to light that Henry Ford, baron of the vast Ford domains who tries to regulate the lives of 25k slaves both in and out of the slave pens he owns, realized last year a surplus of $55,637,578, as shown by the annual report of the Ford Motor Company filed with the Corporations Commissioner Henry Long today.

Ford is rapidly recovering from his injuries received a few days ago in an auto accident and will be able to testify in the million dollar libel suit brought against him by Sapiro when called.

MUSSOLINI'S GANG STRETCHING BARBED WIRE IN SHANGHAI SETTLEMENT

The appeal to violence which is going out from all militarist and imperialist camps now, has affected the blackshirt regime. Italy has nothing much to "protect" in China, but Premier Mussolini has sent a warship, and some of her bluejackets are here seen building a barbed wire entanglement.

Twelve Killed by Big Explosion in Wyoming Shaking Entire Town

PARCO, Wyo., April 6.—Loss of five in the terrific explosion of two huge refining stills of the Producers and Refiners Company here may reach ten or twelve. The blast shook every building in the town.

Fire resulting from the explosion spread to two large oil tanks and other stills but was believed to be under control this morning.

Several bodies have been recovered, and three men, badly burned, have been taken to the local hospital.

Huge Profits for Yellow Taxi Co.

CHICAGO, April 6.—Chicago Yellow Cab Company for the year ended December 31, 1926, showed consolidated net profits of $2,241,722, after all charges equal to $3.60 a share on the 100,000 common shares outstanding. This compares with $3.51 for 1926.

During the year 1,277 new cabs were purchased from the Yellow Truck and Coach Manufacturing Company at a cost of $3,204,917. "All the cabs have been paid for," President C. W. Gray said.

Nationalists Spike Mud Guns Of Imperialists

SHANGHAI, April 6.—In a sort manifesto issued today by the Communist Party of China and by the Kuomintang, signed by Chen Tu-hsiu for the former and by Wang Ching-wei for the latter, the people were warned to beware the Hankow [illegible] of the imperialist press. It represented the Communists as seeking to immediately set up a proletarian dictatorship on the heels of the establishment of the U. S. S. R.

The manifesto explicitly denied that the policy of the Communists is to divide [illegible] and declared that the Communists are [illegible] the Kuomintang, saying they "must not [illegible] another opportunity to stage a split in the ranks of the revolutionary forces by [illegible] the cry."

Broad Alliance Needed

[illegible] Kuomintang [illegible] the masses including the [illegible] China "there is need of an alliance of the oppressed, comprising all the classes of the revolutionary people. Judging by present tendencies of the Chinese revolution the overthrow of rule by the working class will not arise at present or in the near future. What China needs now is a democratic government by all the classes that have been suffering at the hands of the counter-revolutionaries and imperialists."

Endorses Kuomintang.

The manifesto expressly states that the Communist Party endorses the Kuomintang Canton and will not attempt to take the concession by force. It says that the imperialist enemies of the revolution in Shanghai are deliberately spreading rumors about the intentions of the Labor masses to lead an armed attack upon the concessions which are absolutely falsehoods. Any split between the parties now, the manifesto says, would be playing into the hands of the militarists and imperialists which are [illegible] literately trying to create a split

"Peaches" In Chicago; Will Dance at Cabaret

CHICAGO, April 6.—"Peaches" Heenan Browning, who lost a sensational separation suit against Edward W. Browning, millionaire real estate dealer, arrived in Chicago today to prepare for the opening of her cabaret dancing act April 12.

"No, I wouldn't consider a reconciliation," said Peaches. "I want to forget the whole business and earn my own living. I'm not even going to bother about a divorce."

Lash For Prisoners In Michigan Passed By the Legislature

LANSING, Mich., April 6.—The whipping post for bank robbers and other felons was approved by an almost unanimous vote of the house of representatives today.

The bill provides that bank robbers be given "from ten to twenty strokes of the lash, well laid on," every six months up to 200 strokes.

The bill now goes to the senate. It seems probable the upper body will concur.

No Women in Taxi Union.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, April 6.—"Nothing doing" was the emphatic reply of Dan Tobin, head of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs and Stablemens Union, to the recent plea of Miss Mary Hensen, of San Antonio, Texas, a taxi driver.

Miss Hensen operates a Shaw [Yellow] cab in this city and since she has been refused admission to the teamsters' union she is unable to make up her mind to sell the cab or go scabbing [involuntarily] in San Antonio.

CHINESE WOMEN FORGING AHEAD, SAYS MME. SUN

Daughters Will Be Fifty Years in Advance of Us

HANKOW, March—(By Mail).—"Our grandmothers were five hundred years behind the women of America, but our daughters will be fifty years ahead," says Madama Sun Yat-sen, the lovely woman of exquisite poise who is the widow of the man who founded the Kuomintang, the Chinese Nationalist Party, and who led China's revolution.

Madame Sun is a slender, delicate creature, but she has force and a clear, wise mind. She is given the homage due the first lady of the land. China at the moment has no president, but Madame Sun, its first lady, is a member of the Central Executive Council of the Kuomintang, the controlling body which defines the policy and directs the government of Nationalist China.

Training School For Women.

Madame Sun was speaking to the interviewer about the women's movement in China, in general, and, in particular, of the political training school for women, which she has founded in Hankow. In this school, women leaders will be trained. A small group of one hundred, very carefully selected young women will be trained intensively in the problems of China and the role of China's women. They will be given more than a knowledge of problems. They will be given a technique with which to solve them, the technique of the Kuomintang, of nationalist revolution.

"These women leaders will make real the vision of a free Chinese womanhood which was part of the great emancipation programme of Dr. Sun Yat-sen," said Madame Sun. "Always in his writings and his speeches, Dr. Sun stressed the point that not only China's men, but her women, also, must be freed. My husband did not only a political and economic revolutionist. He was a feminist revolutionary as well. Wherever he went, he fought the battle for freedom of both sexes. Women have sat around conference tables with the men who forged the revolution in 1911. They sit around conference tables today. Within the ranks of revolutionary leaders, China's women have been given, without question or without a struggle, equal rights."

Great Changes Have Come.

Madame Sun spoke of the great changes in China during the past twenty years. "It is just an hour ago, as history is measured, that China really awoke to the extent of her bondage and was stirred with the desire to be free," she said. "But in that short hour great changes have come. China is transformed, its women as well as its men. Mothers find their daughters a little strange today; grandmothers look upon them as creatures of another world. But we younger women feel that there is just a touch of envy in the hearts of the older women, and, perhaps a timorous applause.

Attend American College.

It is not without experiences of other lands that Madame Sun speaks of China's women. She has traveled widely, with her husband, building up from end to end of the world the revolutionary force in China. American she knows especially well, for she attended college in Macon, Georgia.

"I doubt if you women of America can grasp the extent of the change in China," she said. "In my three years in college, and later in the larger cities, I came in contact with many women and with the political and social life of American women. I saw a little of the desperate fight for suffrage and of the present agitation for equality before the law. I was always impressed by the determination of America's women, but, in my college days, I was impressed even more by the thought that the chains against which they were rebelling were not half so strong as those that bound the women of China. In those days, when I looked ahead and thought of the long decades that I felt inevitable before Chinese women could reach even the degree of freedom of the American women, I became sad. Complete freedom for American women seemed just around the corner; for Chinese women, it seemed a distant, almost a foolish dream.

Chains Have Been Broken.

"But I was wrong. As strong as were the chains that bound the women of China just a few years ago, they have been broken. Our grandmothers may have been five hundred years behind the women of America, but our daughters will be fifty years ahead. Chinese women, under the Kuomintang, are wiping out centuries.

"Yes, it is the Kuomintang that is doing it," said Madame Sun in response to a question. "The great, inclusive principle of freedom that is driving Chinese nationalism is sweeping along with it. Every one is in the current, from the highest to the lowest, man and women, scholars and laborers, old and young. Under the Kuomintang, we are being spared the painful path, step by step, out of feudalism. We see the goals at the far end and in the twentieth century it is not necessary to travel slow.

"Much will be saved us, of transitional suffering. Women in China, for instance, will never have to wage the battle for the right to vote. Suffrage will be given them as a matter of course by the Kuomintang national constitution which was drafted by Dr. Sun Yat-sen. Neither will women have to fight for property rights in China, nor for the right of guardianship of their children, nor for fair and decent marital laws. Marriage and divorce will not work greater hardship for women than for men in the new China. Citizenship, suffrage, property rights, political rights, for men and for women, are as much a part of the fundamental revolutionary program in China as is the achievement of sovereignty of China in its relations with the world."

In speaking of the specific plans for the new women's institute Madame Sun explained that its purpose would be intensive training for a selected group in the political and social background of present day China, and in the principles and technique of the Kuomintang. China must have women leaders in great numbers. This institute will provide, on a small scale, only one hundred students. But, explained Madame Sun, there will be another hundred, and another, and another hundred. It is in this way that freedom for Chinese women must be gained. In China, it will not be a battle against outworn manmade laws. Kuomintang laws know no sex. The task of China's new women is to reach their sisters and make them open their eyes upon a new world.

howled down when he arose to speak on the Chinese situation. Ramsay MacDonald, labor leader, pleaded with the government not to dismiss the proposals for bringing in the league of nations "to smooth out the Chinese troubles."

MacDonald complained that "the British action in dispatching troops to China has undoubtedly spread a suspicion through all China as to the real intentions of Great Britain."

Nails British Lies.

The Nationalist News Agency made public a dispatch from Shanghai, vigorously denying reports that two American women are in a Shanghai hospital as the result of attacks made upon them by Chinese soldiers at Nanking.

The reports were branded as propaganda circulated for the purpose of creating opinion favorable to intervention. British news agencies and pro-British correspondents have been flooding the United States with propaganda and distorted accounts of the events in China, the news agency said.

One of the women who is reported to have been "attacked" is a tuberculosis patient transferred from Nanking, and the other is a woman who was wounded during the Nanking evacuation, according to an investigation made by the Nationalist News Agency.

Boys Must Dance With Boys.

There will be no "mixed dancing" at the eastern district high school in Brooklyn at class day this year. The acting principal of the institution said yesterday she would take no steps to repeal the 23-year-old regulation forbidding boys and girls to dance together. The seniors had tendered a formal request asking that the ban be lifted to permit boys to dance with fair partners at their graduation dance in June.

I. L. D. CALLS FOR PROTEST MEETINGS

for a huge national conference were being considered by the International Labor Defense at which a program of action could be settled upon.

By EUGENE LYONS

(Eugene Lyons conducted the publicity work of the Sacco-Vanzetti defense during 1921-22, the year immediately following their conviction.—Ed.

Massachusetts has celebrated the tenth anniversary of America's entry in the world war by announcing that Nicola Sacco and Bartoloman Vanzetti—two working class victims of the hysteria created by that war—must die in the electric chair. It is likely that in a few days Judge Thayer will wind up a seven years' job by pronouncing the sentence of death and setting a date for the execution.

Verdict No Surprise

The action of the Massachusetts Supreme Court does not come as a surprise to those familiar with the history of the case. In sustaining an outrageous decision by Judge Thayer on the latest motion for a new trial, the august tribunal was merely saying "ditto." It sustained the irate and vindictive old judge on a long series of decisions equally outrageous in the past.

One lessnn at least the latest episode in the legal farce should leave with us, and that is the futility and foolishness of optimism.

There was every outward reason for believing that the courts would do something to save their reputation. A perfectly respectable and conservative lawyer was in charge of the legal defense. The New York World, the Boston Herald, the Baltimore Sun—the influential and respectable sheets came out for a new trial. Men like Prof. Felix Frankfurter said publicly although some six years too late what they knew privately, that the conviction of the two Italian radicals was a ghastly farce, that the refusal of a new trial thereafter was based on the violent prejudices of a judge who helped convict them.

Courts Always the Same

What could be lovelier? The courts, usually fair and just, had made a mistake. They would, of course, correct it. Why all the mass meetings and parades and trade union resolutions". The process is a little long, which is too bad, but be patient and everything will turn out right. The case is now in safe and sane hands, said Leary of the World. It has taken on a new complexion," Frankfurter announced.

This attitude unfortunately was reflected in the radical and labor movement, which should know better. Even the defense committee itself published such stuff.

But the latest decision has demonstrated the absurdity of the attitude. It demonstrated that there must be no let-up in working class protests, here and throughout the world. The assistance of conservative lawyers and college professors and editors is welcome—But it must not be relied upon to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the chair. It will be useful only if it is backed up by a powerful and militant working class agitation.

Weakness of Liberalism

The influence and authority of menning liberals and near liberals is a really big asset—but they are of no importance. Just so soon as they try to assert themselves on a clear cut class-war issue, they learn their own weakness. It took nearly seven years for some of them to wake up to a fact which was perfectly clear in May of 1920—that Sacco and Vanzetti were being railroaded to death because of their working class activities. It was the world-wide labor agitation which kept these persecuted workers alive while the Boston Herald etc. were asleep. And only a continuation of that agitation, louder and stronger than ever, will prevent their murder now.

MORE MASS PROTESTS! MORE TRADE-UNION ACTION IN BEHALF OF SACCO AND VANZETTI! MORE STOPPAGES OF WORK TO SHOW HOW LABOR FEELS ABOUT THE EXECUTION!

Workers Must Free Them

The courts, and the governor will act to save Sacco and Vanzetti only under pressure from the workers. William G. Thompson, for all his standing as a conservative leader of the bar, received exactly the same treatment at the hands of the court as did Fred H. Moore, his predecessor. Thayer attacked and insulted both of them with the same violence—and the Supreme Court o.k.d both attacks quite as readily. The appeals of the Boston Herald and the Baltimore Sun were disregarded precisely as the appeals of The DAILY WORKER and a thousand other labor papers were disregarded

Situation Very Serious

Those who speak and agitate in behalf of the Sacco and Vanzetti must realize the seriousness of the situation. They must recall the whole history of the class persecution, not merely its latest phase. They must revive in the workers' memory the facts about those "identification" witnesses who confessed to perjury; the other witness who was exposed as a criminal testifying under a false name; the witnesses of whom the government knew but did not bring into court because their testimony was favorable to Sacco and Vanzetti; the confession of the gun expert that his testimony had been deliberately misinterpreted by the District Attorney, etc.

Above all they must make clear the part of Judge Thayer in the whole affair. Thayer's behavior throughout the trial and some of the things he said to the jury went far towards bringing about the conviction. He was attacked throughout the world. He was angry, nervous, almost hysterical as a result of this—issued statements to the press, called reporters and others into his chambers to bawl them out.

Save Sacco and Vanzetti.

Yet it was he who was called upon to rule upon the fairness of his own acts. And the highest courts, working on the pleasant theory that a judge is calm and impartial (things of which Thayer is not capable), upheld his rulings.

Sacco and Vanzetti must not die! The responsibility rests with the workers of the world!

Earl Carroll Visits Calvin Coolidge and Asks Him for Pardon

WASHINGTON, April 6. Earl Carroll, the theatrical producer, came to Washington today seeking presidential clemency to escape serving his sentence in Atlanta federal prison for perjury. He is due to start on his sentence on April 12.

Carroll surrounded his Washington visit with the greatest secrecy. He obtained a suite in a prominent hotel, but did not register and hotel officials denied he was there.

Despite the secrecy, it was learned this afternoon that Carroll had an appointment to see President Coolidge at noon. White House officials declined to say whether Carroll had actually seen Coolidge, but the appointment was made on the private list.

14 Dead, Many Injured In Oil Tank Explosion

PARCO, Wyo., April 6. Fourteen men are known to be dead, several are seriously burned and at least six are missing, following a terrific explosion in the oil plant of the Producers and Refiners Company here today.

The explosion, of unknown origin, occurred in two Diablo pressure stills located in the heart of the $5,000,000 oil plant, which employed 350 men.

Fire spread quickly to other stills and two large oil tanks, but was under control after six hours of frantic work on the part of volunteer firemen, oil company workers and fire apparatus from Rawlins, eight miles away.

SOCIALIST CHIEF FOR IMPERIALISM IN PORTO RICO

Iglesias Is Secretary of Pan-American F. of L.

By J. NEVARES SAGER.
(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, March 25.—During the session of the Porto Rican senate, held March 22-27, the senate president, Antonio Barcelo, in outlining his intended discourse before the visiting Secretary of War Davis, at the official banquet, suggested that he intended, in addition to laying bare the problems of Porto Rico, to condemn the Latin-American policies of the U. S., initiated by Roosevelt with the rape of Colombia, and pursued at present in relation to Nicaragua, by supporting a hireling, Diaz, against the actual government sustained by the people of Nicaragua.

Senator Santiago Iglesias of the Pan-American Federation of Labor hastily intervened, and warned Barcelo, "You would assume a serious responsibility in confronting the secretary of war regarding the policies which his government may pursue in its relations with Mexico or Nicaragua. You should confine yourself exclusively to the problems confronting Porto Rico and not meddle in international affairs. Such an act would be interpreted badly by those in whose hands the fate of our aspirations lie." Which means the fate of their political ambitions, whose further development can be realized with the granting of political autonomy to the Islands which would give either of these politicians the opportunity to become the governor of the island.

Barcelo with much humility bowed to Iglesias, adding, "True, very true, as colonials it is not our right to vent our feelings and sentiments. I will confine myself as Senator Iglesias suggested."

PALESTINE IS IN THE GRIP OF CLASS STRUGGLE

Workers Intend to Bury Masters in Sepulchre

JERUSALEM, March 6.—By Mail.—The past 1926 year, without any exaggeration, was an extremely difficult year for the working class in Palestine.

Despite the hampering of British imperialism, despite Zionist speculations, capitalism has entered a stage of capitalist development. Neither imperialism nor Zionism find it possible to hold up the process of capitalist development in this country. Their influence only makes the development of capitalism more intensified and more difficult and produces profounder and severer sufferings for the peasants and workers.

Growth of Trade Unions.

Immigration to Palestine proceeds at an incredible tempo. During the last six years the number of Hebrew workers alone increased almost by 50,000. The nonexcel growth of the working class led to an intensive growth of its organization. The Trade Union Federation Gardadut which is seen from the following figures:

1920—4,000 organized workers.
1922—6,000 organized workers.
1926—25,000 organized workers.

Arab Workers Increase.

Together with the growth of the number of the Hebrew workers, there is a parallel growth in the number of Arab workers. Unfortunately, we have no exact numerical data on the number of Arab workers, but in all probability, this figure reaches 70,000.

Just previous to 1925, Gestadrut was not only the single labor organization in the country, but in general the only organization that existed. During recent years and especially during the past year, this situation sharply changed. A variety of organizations have sprung up among different strata of the population. The economic crisis and unemployment coupled with the revolutionary movement in Syria was conducive to this change.

Lower Wages Urged.

Simultaneously with the growth of unemployment, the attack of the capitalists on labor conditions becomes increasingly more active. The British and Zionist capitalists have long contemplated the lowering of wages of the Hebrew workers. In answer to the memorandum of the trades and industrialists, who demanded a lowering of duties imposed, the British customs authorities advised them to lower wages.

INDIA ENTERING NEW PHASE OF FREEDOM FIGHT

Meeting Held to Discuss Question of Leninism

BOMBAY, Feb. (By Mail).—Signs have recently multiplied in India to show that in 1927 we are entering on a revolutionary phase of the class-conscious political organization of the Indian proletariat and its emergence in its role as the leader of the national-revolutionary movement. These signs are the visible fruits of the underground activities of the Indian Communist Party, carried on under exceptional hard conditions of imperialist repression. A recent factor which has stimulated the revolutionary orientation of the masses of India is also undoubtedly the cause of events in China.

During the last two or three years, the Indian proletariat has gone through a severe training in the school of industrial action in the shape of many hard-fought strikes and it has reached a certain degree of political maturity which was absent in the first post-war revolutionary period of 1921-1922. This is evidenced by the fact that revolutionary propaganda which before had to be carried on underground, can now be made publicly without the British authorities attempting to suppress it. An occasion for this open propaganda has been furnished by the present visit to India of Comrade S. Saklatvala who has addressed a large number of meetings in the Province of Bombay in the first week of his arrival. A detailed report of his speeches is being prepared.

Towers of Endurance.

A foremost place in the revolutionary proletarian movement in India is destined to be taken by the workers in the industrial areas of Bombay. Because Bombay is the seat of the oldest capitalist industry in India, namely, the textile industry, engaging now about 200,000 workers, and the Bombay workers have shown very great powers of combination and endurance in their strike action. The trade unions of the Bombay province have a record of industrial and political activities, not equalled by other unions in India. Bombay is appropriately the permanent headquarters of the All-India Trade Union Congress.

Discussing Leninism.

In Bombay we have had an example of the new propaganda that is being carried on among the Indian workers. The Congress Labour Party, a left wing organization within the National Congress held a public meeting of workers to discuss the significant questions: "Does India need a Lenin?" What did Lenin stand for, and what has Russia gained by adopting his principles? If India needs a Lenin, with what modifications should his theories be practiced, and with what moderation should his principles be introduced into the body politic of India?"

The meeting was presided over by S. H. Jhabvala, a Vice President of the Bombay Textile Labor Union. By social origin Jhabvala is of the intelligentzia. He has an active record of work within the Indian trade union movement. According to Jhabvala, the meeting was organized, inter alia, "to pay tribute to Leninism, a Russian movement that had revolutionized the modern world and had evolved a state of society and government for which humanity had been yearning for the last half a century or so." Jhabvala declared Leninism a "mass organization and the rule of the proletariat."

Under Gandhi Influence

That Jhabvala still remains under the influence of the ideology of Gandhism is shown in the following remarks of his: "Lenin has done for Russia what Mahatma Gandhi can certainly do for India; only, Indians should imbibe Gandhism as the Russians had assimilated Leninism." Continuing his remark, Jhabvala said: "Gandhi had contented himself with his ideal-ism while Lenin had a dynamic force of organization."

Coming to the needs of the present situation in India, Jhabvala said: "British imperialism in India was goaded on by economic and commercial motives, it was nothing short of a money grubbing campaign. India was and had long been a prey to economic exploitation of the oppressed by the militarist force of the oppressor. A general and wholesale revolt against their organized and democratised violence was the need of the day. In China also, the present commotion was the natural and inevitable outcome of the continued and persistent efforts of the imperialists to choke and curb the just aspirations of a civilized nation."

For Mass Revolt.

Jhabvala then put forward the slogan: "Organize a mass revolt." Explaining the slogan, he said: "During the six years following the overthrow of Czardom in Russia, the Russians had progressed by leaps and bounds intellectually and economically. Whereas nearly two centuries of British rule had left the Indians illiterate, semi-civilized and incapable of being entrusted with even minor responsibilities. We should also adopt Leninism and organize a thorough mass revolt against all tyranny and oppression whether capitalistic or imperialistic."

Another speaker at the meeting said: "The picture of the U. S. S. R painted by the English press was false and mischievous." "The present regime in Russia," he explained, "is the dictatorship of the proletariat. But it was only a transitory stage which would eventually lead to Communism." A third speaker said: "The neo-Brahmin movement in India of the lower castes against the higher castes, was an indication that socialism was gradually but perceptibly creeping into the body politic of India."

France Trying to Save Submarines At Geneva Meeting

GENEVA, April 6.—Attempts at a compromise on the question of naval disarmament were being made today and the League of Nations preparatory disarmament conference stood adjourned to permit compromise conferences between Viscount Cecil, British delegate, and M. Boncour, French delegate.

M. Boncour states that France is not able to accept naval disarmament by categories but suggests that a draft be drawn whereby these navies would be to accept disarmament by categories make a detailed statement of their future naval programs.

M. Boncour submitted this proposal in writing to Viscount Cecil and to Hugh Gibson, American delegate, who wired the proposal to Washington for instructions.

The "peace" struggle at Geneva has settled down to a combat between Premier Briand and the French, over the question of whether reserve man power should be counted, and whether she French, with the smaller navy, shall be allowed to build submarines enough for protection against the British grand fleet.

The British delegate insists that the total tonnage alone shall not be counted, as she would allow France to build submarines at the expense of other shipping Britain insists that each "category" of ships shall be limited.

U. S. Bankers Aid Fascisti, States Italian Liberal

WASHINGTON (FP). American bankers who are lending hundreds of millions of dollars to fascist institutions and fascist business men in Italy, and the Tory government in Britain, stand as barriers to the liberation of the Italian people, said Professor Gaetano Salvemini, former professor in the University of Florence, in a lecture on fascism, in Washington.

Salvemini charged that Mussolini's economic reports are distorted to meet the needs of argument, and that in fact Italy has suffered during the past four years a distinct slackening of the pace at which she was recovering before the march of the Black Shirts on Rome from the economic disaster of the world war. Lust and murder go unreproved and rape offers the road to honor in Mussolini's regime, he reminded his audience. He named five of his friends in parliament who had been murdered in cold blood, the list beginning with Matteoti and Amendola.

Resolutions offered by Jas. Egan, editor of the A. F. of L. News Service, were adopted. They declared that fascist organizations are at work in this country to prevent the naturalization of Italian workers in America; demanded that steps be taken by the government to stop this hostile activity, expressed sympathy for the Italian people's struggle to regain freedom, and declared there can be no compromise of democracy with fascist tyranny.

He gave repeated and definite warning that the Italian nation, when it throws off fascist despotism, will not pay any of the debts contracted by the Fascist regime. It will make good this warning, he said, because foreign capital, and chiefly American capital, is being poured into the scale to lengthen the period of national slavery.

Striking Printers Silence Imperialist Papers in Hankow

HANKOW, April 6. — The union printers of Hankow have silenced the vilnies of the reptile press in the pay of Imperialism. Their strike has closed the American-owned Hankow Herald and the British-owned Central China Post. Both these publications closed several days ago and have not been able to reopen on account of the uncompromising stand of the striking printers, who refuse to work on newspapers printing abusive and mendacious attacks on the Nationalist government and the Kuomintang movement. Before subsiding the Americanosidized Herald issued a few mimeographed sheets containing the most infamous slanders upon the Chinese liberation movement. These foul libels furnished material for such allegecl correspondents as the vicious Frederick Moore, reports of whose attacks in the New York Times have just reached here.

The foreign communities under the domination of imperialist chambers of commerce are protesting loudly against this action of the strikers. They are being properly answered by the organ of the liberation forces, the People's Tribune, which has been received after suppression by the forces of Chang Tso Lin, and daily prints the facts regarding the development of the revolution.

We Are on Trial Today

Today the bespatted and high-collared representatives of the National Security League, and the Keymen of America will appear in court against The DAILY WORKER. Today these wealthy scions of reaction will rally their legal talent and the forces of the government in an attempt to impede the progress of the only paper which lifts up its voice against the brutal power of American imperialism. They will speak with the assurance of those who are fully conscious of the support of the dark forces behind them.

But the drama which will be enacted today will stretch far bevond the confines of the courtroom. Outside in every important city and town, in the factories and workshops, as well as on the farms, there are many thousands of workers who have enrolled themselves in The DAILY WORKER army, who have enlisted in the ranks of the contributors to the Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund to build a bigger and better DAILY WORKER. The attack upon the paper by the enemies of labor will inspire this army to superhuman efforts in behalf of the paper. The answer to the attack against The DAILY WORKER must be an avalanche of contributions to the Sustaining Fund. Thus we will show our enemies that we will brook no opposition to our determination to build up The DAILY WORKER, and to increase its effectiveness in the struggle against American imperialism. YOU must fall in line.

The Trade Union Reform Bill—The Inevitable Consequence of Imperialistic Labor Leadership

The British ruling class, having smashed the general strike and beaten the coal miners by means of force and treachery of reformist leaders procured by the government, is taking the next step in the general attack on the labor movement of which the mobilization of the full power of capitalism against the British workers was the first move.

The "trade union reform" bill which will be introduced in the House of Commons next Monday has two principal features:

1.) It outlaws not only general strikes but sympathetic strikes as well and makes union members responsible for damages to business and property claimed by the capitalists as a result of strikes.

2.) It makes illegal all assessments levied by unions for political purposes unless each member of the union signifies his consent in writing in advance.

If this bill becomes law the British trade union movement can legally conduct only localized and ineffective strikes and will have no legal right to support the labor party by means of the ordinary trade union methods of raising funds.

If this bill becomes a law the British labor movement, after a quarter of a century of struggle, will have the illegal status it was placed in by the Taff-Vale decision. In the struggle against this decision the modern British labor movement was born.

The responsibility for the furious attack of the British government upon the labor movement rests in one place and in one place alone—upon the shoulders of the MacDonald section of the labor party and those spurious left wing trade union officials who called off the general strike, deserted the miners, justified their conduct by imperialist phrases and then followed up this treachery by refusal to even attempt to rally the labor movement to the aid of the miners' struggle.

These capitalist-minded labor officials took the side of the government by parroting phrases about "constitutionalism" and "democracy" while the army and navy forces were against the strikers in full war panoply. These officials have already given evidence of their willingness to accept legislation which will outlaw political strikes but the government goes them one better and takes advantage of the favorable situation created by their acceptance in principle of the inviolability of the British constitution and their hostility to militant mass action to strike a deadly blow at the working class which these leaders betrayed. These leaders are simply continuing their betrayal altho they just make a pretense of fighting the proposed legislation.

As the British Communist Party and the National Minority movement pointed out at the time the general strike was called off, the disgraceful surrender of the leadership would be followed by demands for the labor movement to give up its arms—the strike weapon and mass support of the labor party.

MacDonald and his crew, who led the workers to defeat, are now confronted with a rising tide of mass resentment brought into being by the public proof of the hypocrisy of these leaders in trying to deceive the workers into believing that there was any difference between British government and British imperialism.

The theory of the impartiality of British government as an institution was severely shaken by the course it followed in the general strike and miners' strike. It has been shattered by its advocacy of the destructive bill aimed at the trade unions.

More rapidly than ever the masses are turning to the Communist Party and the left wing in the labor party is challenging MacDonald's leadership with George Lansbury mentioned as his successor. That Lansbury took a leading part in the recent Conference of Colonial Peoples in Brussels, an international expression of the worldwide revolt against imperialism, has a deep significance when taken in connection with the drive on the living standards and organizations of the British working class and the failure of the right wing of the labor party and trade union leadership to put forward a fighting program.

There is Danger in Believing in the Pacific Intentions of Wall Street

The news from China seems to indicate that Great Britain is not meeting with brilliant success in lining up America and Japan for joint action with her against the People's Government but formal agreement means little when such incidents as the Nanking massacre have occurred without any known agreement existing at the time.

For members of our class it is enough to know that all the imperialist powers are enemies of the Chinese national liberation movement and that actual invasion is prevented only by a conflict of interests and not by their lack of desire to use this method for securing the degree of subjugation necessary for successful and continued robbery of the Chinese masses.

In addition to this there is always the convenient excuse of "protecting lives and property" of citizens or subjects which is used to justify war on colonial peoples by a collection of powers, whether or not an agreement for joint action exists.

American policy toward China has not changed since the Boxer uprising altho the methods by which it has been applied have varied due to the fact that America's actions in China have been the result of a desire to rob the Chinese masses while still retaining their friendship. Having no extra-territorial rights in China it was necessary for American imperialism to appear in a different guise than that of the powers who had forced concessions from the Chinese.

Secretary of State Hay, the author of the famous "Open Door" policy, explained America's attitude at the time of the Boxer rebellion (essentially a rebellion of poverty-stricken peasants) in the following words:

". . . affording all possible protection everywhere in China to American life and property; guarding and protecting all legitimate American interests; aiding in preventing a spread of disasters to the other provinces of the empire and a recurrence of such disasters."

Surely no further basis for war is needed than to follow the procedure outlined above. It was by carrying out the official interpretation of this policy that American warships took part in the bombardment of Nanking. Nothing more than this is needed to send shells hurtling from American battleships into Chinese cities and to have an American army take the field with British butchers. American imperialism needs no formal agreement with other powers to appear as an enemy of the Chinese liberation movement.

Any note indicating pacific intentions on the part of Wall Street government toward China is meaningless as long as American naval and military forces are in Chinese waters and on Chinese soil.

Neither should we forget that the Philippines are the outpost of American imperialism in the Pacific and that the Chinese liberation movement, thru its political expression the Kuomintang, now leads the struggle of all workers and peasants of the Far East against imperialist domination. American imperialism's potential rubber plantatien and strategic naval base is threatened.

There is no guarantee of non-intervention until the demand for the withdrawal of all armed forces from China has been complied with by Wall Street government.

The Unions in China's Pittsburgh—Their Advanced Demands —The Native Bosses

ARTICLE IV

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

WITHOUT the disorganization created in the rear of the gallicartata' forces and the organization work carried on among the industrial workers and peasants by the trade unions, the Peoples Armies would have been unable to secure the series of swapping victories which gave them control of the Yangtze valley and the port of Shanghai.

The three towns of Hankow, Wuchang and Ilonyang form the center of Chinese heavy industry and it was in this center that the unions showed the greatest activity. The living standard of the workers in this district is shown by the following table in which the figures are approximate but with a very narrow margin of error in either direction.

Minimum monthly expenditures for a worker's family:

Rice	$6.00
Coal	1.00
Fat	.75
Vegetables	1.50
Salt	.15
Rent (one room)	1.00
Clothing	2.00
Total	$12.75

This sum represents the minimum amount on which a family of four could exist. It will be noticed that no provision is made for amusement or medical attention.

But the wages of the workers previous to the fall of this district to the Peoples Armies did not provide for this miserable budget. Miners for instance averaged 50 cents per day or $19 per month. Textile workers averaged about 35 cents per day.

These starvation wages prevailed in both Chinese and foreign enterprises. When the organization drive and strike movement began it there faced encountered the hostility of Chinese and foreign employers alike.

Chinese and foreign capitalists joined hands to oppose the workers. In the foreign settlements this unity of the capitalists was smashed only by the threat of the unions to cut off water and electric light and power supply.

In Hankow the merchants aided by right wing of the Kuomintang organized the "Association for Struggling Against the Strike Movement" and threatened the Nationalist government with a shutdown of all industry unless it checked the movement. This moment gives an insight into the basic cause of the revolution involved in the struggles between the left and right wing in the Kuomintang and the reactionary character of the reverse right of the party.

The victories of the Peoples Armies brought not only workers and peasants to the Kuomintang in great numbers but also many formerly neutral or hostile sections of the Chinese middle and capitalist class. These elements came in with more or less sympathy for national independence divorced from the class aspect of the liberation movement in order to exercise their influence in the governing party. Their readiness to make peace with imperialism in order to protect their class interests was shown in their united front with foreign capitalists against their working class countrymen.

It is not hard to understand that thru the two-sided struggle against imperialism and native exploiters the Chinese labor movement developed at express train speed duplicating in a sense the experience of the Russian working class.

This development took on a political character in two ways first, it clarified the struggle for national liberation by including other enemies than open imperialists and second, it showed the workers the necessity for control of industry thru the government and the trade unions.

That this latter lesson was learned well is shown by list of demands put forward by the Postal Workers Union—demands similar in their nature to those made by other unions.

Discharge of two "favorites" of the overseer who had injured other workers—payment of wages in standard Chinese coin instead of dollars a maximum working day of 8 hours an annual bonus of two months wages—payment of wages instead of the various days when the workers had not received it—members of the executive board of the union to be allowed to remain at work in the district so they could do their union work—local inspectors to be appointed by the union—all instances of discharge to go thru the union offices—payment of wages during sickness wages to be paid while workers are forced into a union strike and the union to be compensated for losses during strike—general improvement in working conditions.

It will be noticed that most of the above demands are designed to strengthen the control of the union and further that they are for the most part far in advance of any demands ever made by American trade unions—proof that the Chinese labor movement because of its anti-imperialist character has leaped several decades during the recent struggles.

Even the police were drawn into the organization drive and policemen from five separate concession districts held organization meetings.

The foreign press, especially the British, was alarmed by this rapid growth of unionism and the display of class consciousness. It tried to bring pressure on the Kuomintang government by editorials calling on General Chang Kai Shek to show "courage" and "firmness" in suppressing the labor movement and in return promised him the full support of the foreign interests. The effect of this upon the workers was not what the British editors thought it would be. It served merely to call the attention of the labor movement to the necessity of having a party in control of workers' representatives who would evoke "courage" and "firmness" in their behalf.

But it was the organization of the Union of Servants and the demands which it put forward that convinced the British that their world was toppling.

One needs to understand that one of the great attractions in the orient for imperialists and their hangers-on is the low cost of personal service—the whiteman does nothing for himself. A superintendent or a foreman could have more servants in China than his employer could afford in Great Britain or America. The lords of creation who carried the white man's burden in China did not even need to dress themselves. Flocks of low paid menials and imperialism go together in oppressed nations.

What a shock to discover that the servants whom the overlords had looted around at will had organized a powerful union and were putting forward such demands as

No discharges without proper cause and no ill-treatment of servants—all wage arrears to be paid by the Chinese New Year—union inspectors to be allowed the right to visit all houses where members of the union were employed free medical aid during sickness except in cases of venereal disease acquired thru neglect or lack of caution—all workers to be hired thru the union three weeks annual holiday or a month's wages—no one to be discriminated against for protecting the union's demands.

It was by this process of organization and struggle for daily needs with the experience of the imperialist elements as the most unscrupulous, and the growth of the conviction that without the support given by native capitalist interests by the still more powerful imperialists, the workers would be able to secure wide control over working conditions and the trade union movement and the movement against British control of the foreign settlement in Hankow.

Britain's surrender of this valuable concession to Chinese control was forced by the labor unions. Strikes and boycotts were the weapons used. It had consequences of tremendous importance for the whole national liberation struggle

TEN YEARS AFTER

With a Few Reflections on the Liberal Supporters of Wilson

By H. M. WICKS

APRIL 6, 1917, President Woodrow Wilson signed the declaration that put this country into the World War. Four days before he had appeared before a joint session of the two Houses of congress and proclaimed that

"Our object is to vindicate the principles of peace and justice in the life of the world as against selfish and autocratic power, and to set up amongst the really free and self governing peoples of the world such a concert of purpose and action as will henceforth assure the observance of these principles . . .

"The world must be made safe for democracy. Its peace must be planted upon tested foundations of political liberty . . .

"We are but one of the champions of the rights of mankind. We shall be satisfied when those rights have been made as secure as the faith and freedom of nations can make them."

TODAY, ten years after, the Wilsonian philobelists are again treated as various shades of opinion obtain as to "the meaning of the result realized. There is none so stupid as to believe that the war was fought for democracy. Not even the most rabid apostle of Wilsonism ventures the suggestion that greater freedom is enjoyed today than when these lofty principles were proclaimed.

The horde of liberals and yellow socialists who were in full cry with the social pack of imperialism are now compelled to admit that the hoped-for blessings have not materialized, that black reaction today pervades every province of the capitalist world; that instead of the World War being a formidable crusade by "the champions of the rights of mankind" to end war for all times, it was simply a prelude to still more titanic and sanguinary conflicts. None can view the world today and doubt that the gathering clouds of another World War will soon burst forth and rock the earth with their thunder and lightning.

SECRET treaties, Machiavellian diplomacy, bestial and mendacious imperialistic aggression against the colonial and semi-colonials, the series of mow alignments growing out of the brigands' Versailles pact, desperate efforts on the part of the self-styled victors of 1917 to create a bloc against their "savior" of those days, the malignant conspiracy of Britain to encircle the Soviet Union, the war against the liberation movement in China, the crusade of Wall Street against Mexico and Nicaragua, the disarmament conferences which are merely maneuvers to gain advantages in the race for more deadly instruments of destruction are subjects of comment in every newspaper in the world.

How naive are the comments even of those liberal opponents in principles of war! Mr. Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of The Nation, still believes that Wilson really had an impelling desire to realize the aims he put forth in his public utterances. According to Villard "the President did still blind to the fact that he chose the wrest method by the world to achieve his purpose; the method that made success impossible."

The inability to grasp fundamentals, the sloppy mentality that takes words for deeds, sophistry for political honesty, characterizes liberalism everywhere. What every real revolutionist in the left wing of the Socialist Party in this country knew and openly proclaimed four years ago the liberals have not learned to this very day.

When the Princeton professor in the White House was issuing his exhortations to "make the world safe for democracy," we stigmatized him as the agent of the House of Morgan.

One who thinks that Woodrow Wilson really believed he was a "champion of the rights of mankind" has no conception of the role of political lackeys of imperialism. Less than four months before his declaration of war against the Central Powers, Wilson himself asserted that the struggle in Europe involved "no moral issues and ought therefore be brought to a sensible close." That observation was made in December, before the first 1917 revolution in Russia removed that power from the tanks of the Allies, and before it was evident that unless new forces were thrown into the balance the investments of the House of Morgan in Europe would be wiped out to the accompaniment of the roar of the German "Big Berthas," even then thundering at the gates of Paris.

Wilson could not come before the American people with a request to rally to the defense of Morgan's millions, so he coined the slogan "Make the world safe for democracy," which in reality meant "make the world safe for Morgan's investments in England and France and Russia."

Wilson discovered that the War that involved no moral issues in December, 1916, threatened the freedom of the world in April of the next year.

THE 4,355,000 men who were now in the service of the United States as the result of the achievements of America's participation in the War was the bestial suppression of ever larger numbers of peoples, the stifling of what little liberty once existed in this country, with the armed forces of the nation functioning exclusively as the hired gunmen engaged in defending the foreign investments of Uncle Shylock.

LIBERALISM, that whooped it up for Wilson during his two campaigns for President of the United States, prefers to think of its former idol as a misguided idealist, rather than as an astute politician, a master orator who, to the fullest degree, used language to conceal, thought. Liberalism denies the class struggle, therefore it cannot be ex-pected to see in the diplomatic manoeuvers of statesmen anything other than a conflict between great men, each, in his own way, following the light as he sees it.

The revolutionist alone is able to look beyond the apparent movement of history and perceive the real movement. The proclamations, manifestoes and exhortations of statesmen are merely dramatizations of the clash of economic interests on the stage of world history. All are as inadequate to reveal the real movement as were the Wilsonian war cries of a decade ago.

Today, when other servile flunkeys of imperialism at Washington are trying to conceal their policy of longandage beneath alibis for the defense of Americans in China, in Nicaragua, and in Mexico, the workers should refuse to heed their pleas. Instead every working class organization should in no uncertain terms demand that the bloody butchers in the service of Wall Street keep their hands off China, Nicaragua, Mexico and the Philippines.

MANY lessons have been learned since the World War, but most important of all for this epoch is the magnificent lesson of Leninism that has taught hundreds of thousands and millions of workers throughout the world that an insipid pacifism, such as pervaded the ranks of the liberals and the overwhelming majority of the Socialist Party leaders during the last World War is utterly inadequate of best to deal with the situation and at the worst is merely a gesture of despair. Complete paralysis of revolutionary energy that might otherwise be generated among the masses of workers. Lenin and the Bolsheviks alone knew how to meet the practical problems arising out of the World War and the slogan raised by Lenin at Zimmerwald and Kienthal: "Turn the imperialist war between nations into a civil war against capitalism," must be the reply of the vanguard of the proletariat to the wars and the threats of war today.

"The Ladder" Offers $500 Weekly for Best Essays

The group presenting "The Ladder," at the Waldorf Theatre, announces that they will award a weekly prize of $500 to the person writing the best 200 word article on the play. The rules of the contest are simple. The contest is open to all. The latter should be typewritten, on one side of the paper. The contest begins today and the first week ends with Saturday night's performance. Manuscripts should be sent to office of the United Actors, room 502, 226 West 47th St.

The management will reserve the right to use the letter in advertising the play. They also will reserve the right to use any of the other manuscripts by the payment of $50 for each one used. The award will be announced as soon as possible.

Another innovation was announced by the producers, which is rather new on Broadway—the refunding of the purchase price of a ticket to any seat holder who does not feel satisfied with the play. The money will be refunded at the conclusion of each performance, if the patron applies at the box office. No other formality will be required.

"The Ladder," which deals with reincarnation, has undergone revision since its opening Oct. 22. The play in its altered form was given Monday night before a special audience.

ORGANIZED LABOR

INJUNCTION AFFIDAVITS OF WINNICK, LUCCHI SHOW UTMOST CONCERN FOR PROFIT TO BOSSES

Rumors are frequent and persistent concerning an injunction to be taken out by the International Fur Workers' Union to try to prevent the New York Joint Board and its locals from carrying on the union business.

No doubt they are giving this matter extraordinarily careful thought and prayer after the thorough defeat they met in Newark when they attempted to use this capitalistic weapon against Local 25, when it had elected officers to suit itself and not the International Fur Workers' weasel officials.

Swear Some News.

There are some interesting affidavits attached to this Newark injunction, which the International was eventually forced to withdraw. Vice-President Isador Winnick, for instance, says:

"It is absolutely essential that immediate action be taken. That all of the books and offairs of the local organization be turned over to the proper authorities of the International because of the chaotic condition which exists in said Local 25, and because of the attitude of its president, executive board and officers are taking.

Save The Industry.

"Local 25 has approximately five hundred members employed in various fur factories in the vicinity of Newark, and that any dissension in its ranks will materially effect the employment of these men, the output of the manufacturers and general conditions in the fur trade. It is necessary that this work be carried on or irreparable damage will be done. It is also essential that steps be taken immediately to wipe out from Local 25, the personality of the Communist Party of its members."

Save The Bosses.

General Organizer Pietro Lucchi is also deeply concerned over the "dissension," and worried for the safety of the bosses. He says:

"I am now informed that Mr. Langer and his associates have even continued their acts of creating dissention among the ranks and are directing the men not to return to work; are ordering the men to refuse to pull the wet skins used in the fur trade and threaten to create avary possible disorder amongst the workers. If this condition should continue, it will cause irreparable damage to the workers, the employers and International union.

"The Sub-Committee consisting of myself, Mee Harris and Hyman Sorkin, the last two gentleman named being vice presidents of the organization, have had experience in union affairs for many years and I believe could wipe out the Communist tendency among the members and bring about peace and harmony, besides protecting the interests of the manufacturers who have a great deal of material on hand."

Doubtless the some worry over the business of the bosses in New York is making the International lie awake nights now, trying to figure out how it can jail the workers and smash the union in order to make the boss's life happier and more peaceful. Of course they don't forget how happy their own lives would be with no opposition and a handful of faithful, dues-paying followers. It will take a little while before they realize this is a hopeless dream.

Radical Organizations Co-operate in Angeles To Celebrate May Day

By ROBIN E. DUNBAR.

LOS ANGELES, April 4.—Four radical organizations have united together to form a gigantic united front and put on a May Day celebration in regular A. F. of L. style. There were 15,000 at the Labor Day picnic last September to hear a lot of platitudes, etc., of the eminent orator (?) John P. Frey, who conveniently forgot about the Judge Bush injunctions, the Mooney-Billings frame-up, the Criminal Syndicalist Act, the open shop drives and the class collaboration moves of the capitalist class in this state. He talked generalities about the labor movement "back east," and kept off dangerous ground out here. There were some limn taming acts, pop-corn balls sold, three Communists ware driven off the ground for selling Passaic pamphlets, and the picnic was a jazzy affair all around with Bro. Buzzell playing the buzzoo.

For Class War Prisoners.

Of course we won't draw that heavy; but we do count on 2,000 radical workers from the unions, the fraternals, the co-operatives, the Young Pioneers, and the various singing societies and sport clubs of the radicol organizations to unite in a rallying mass gathering to toast the heroes of labor; and to collect funds to liberate the Centralia prisoners, to fight on for Mooney and Billings, for Sacco and Vanzetti.

The I. W. W.'s, original branch, the I. L. D., the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense League, the Centralia Defense Committee and the Workers (Communist) Party are the principals who are behind the movement. The Carpenters Union, the Woman's Consumers League and all the various language groups, Finns, Hebrews, Russians, Mexicans, Negroes, Chinese, Japanese, etc., are expected to co-operate in the day. They are all welcome. There will be athletic contests; speakers will be limited and their addresses will be short and they will represent as many organizations as possible.

Jersey Painters Ask Raise.

NEWARK, N. J. (FP).—Paterson and Atlantic City painters are asking $13 a day. They now get $12 and $11 respectively.

Scranton Carpenters Strike.

SCRANTON, Pa. (FP).—Five hundred journey carpenters are striking for $10 a day. The old union scale was $9.

Lacurto Gets Life Term.

Joseph Lacurto, 25, of 379 Lincoln Road, Brooklyn, a friend of Thomas ("Red") Moran, was sentenced to a life term in Sing Sing prison by County Judge McLaughlin in Brooklyn yesterday. He pleaded guilty to a charge of robbery, first degree.

THREE TAILORS' UNIONS CUT EACH OTHERS' POWER; INDUSTRY SHOULD HAVE ONLY ONE

By A Worker Correspondent.

(Labor Journalism Class, Workers School.)

Organization of the hundreds of unorganized custom tailors seems still far away in spite of the joint conference for united action recently held between representatives of the Journeymen Tailors Union and the Amalgamated Custom Tailors.

No results have yet been shown from the conference, though the committee gives favorable reports stating that thousands of journeymen tailors are ready to join the union when there will be a unified union. The 1923 conference between the unions had no follow up until this year's meeting.

Consolidation Needed.

The rank and file of tailors realize the necessity of a consolidated union, but the bureaucratic job holders of the two unions mentioned and of the United Garment Workers Union hinder united action.

The terrible results of three unions in the field are unforgettable to tailors who went through the bitter struggle of 1920 for better working conditions. The journeymen tailors struck demanding the 44-hour week and increase in wages which the Amalgamated tailors had won. The Amalgamated tailors did not help the journeymen by joining in a sympathetic strike and continued working.

The loss of the strike by the journeymen within three months quickly affected the Amalgamated tailors. The United Merchant Tailors started wholesale wage reductions and ended with the general lockout of 1921.

The United Garment Workers, with Rickert as president, do the strike-breaking on each occasion. The last big example was in the International Tailoring strike in Chicago. The United acted as a scab agency against the strikers.

The consequences of the isolated unions in the men's garment trade causes the present demoralization, whereby the tailors are compelled to work under miserable conditions. Only through united action is it possible to organize the open shops and to build a powerful organization to serve the interests of the workers.

With the Young Worker

To Our Readers

This Youth Column will be conducted under the supervision of the National Executive Committee of the Young Workers League. Our start will be modest, that is to say, will only appear on Mondays and Thursdays. In a few weeks, however, we can establish it on a daily basis if support in the form of material is forthcoming from our readers. We want to make this column full of life, one that can be an asset to the paper and not a mere space filler. This column should reflect the life of the young workers and students; it should discuss their problems such as militarism, exploitation of the young worker, unionization and the like. A minimum of articles on the Young Workers League activities will be inserted. Humor and sports (in the absence of a regular sports column in The DAILY WORKER) will be features of this column. The quality of this column will to a large extent depend on the co-operation of our readers. Manuscripts should be limited to 400 words and addressed: Young Worker, Editorial Committee, 33 First Street, New York City.

Every Comrade on the Job—and the Job Will Be Accomplished

By P. FRANKFELD.

In the construction of a building, the first necessary step is the laying of a strong and solid foundation. After the foundation has been laid, every worker has his given task to perform. The bricklayer, the plasterer, the hod-carrier, the cement-mixer, iron-worker, plumber, painter, carpenter, etc., etc., all do their bit and after weeks of work, the building is completed.

In our present membership drive we are in the process of laying a strong and solid foundation for the building of a mass youth league in New York City. Like the workers constructing a building, every league comrade must do his bit, and in that way accomplish our task of doubling the league membership in New York.

Despite the general "prosperity" that is supposed to exist in the U. S., it is a fact that the young workers do not receive high wages, work long hours, are unorganized, and therefore are more exploited than the adult workers. Also, the fact that the young workers are being mobilized for the coming wars, makes it imperative that we become more energetic than ever before in building up an effective, powerful, youth revolutionary movement here. The young workers can be made to listen to our message, the young workers are willing to be organized; the young workers have no desire to be used as cannon-fodder.

We must build a mass Communist movement in New York City. It is up to every league comrade to get on the job, speak to his fellow young workers in the shop, recruit new elements for the league, and if every comrade does just that, not only will we double the league membership, but treble our present membership.

Plumbers' Helpers

From the beginning obstacles have been put in the path of organizing the plumbers' helpers both by the bosses and the plumbers' unions—American Federation of Labor or United Association.

For 20 years the plumbers' helpers have attempted to form a union, but they have been often betrayed by their officers. In one instance the treasurer and the president ran away with the money; in another case the plumbers' locals took the leaders into the union and broke the organization through not having a leadership.

The plumbers' helpers are the only unorganized and exploited young workers in the building trades. The average wage is $1.00 per day doing the same work, urinq the same tools as the mechanics getting $12.00 per day. All other building trade helpers receive from $8.00 to $11.00 per day, such as steamfitters, plasterers, carpenters, etc. Being unorganized, the plumbers' helpers are at the mercy of the bosses, doing all the dirty and heavy work connected with plumbing such as carrying tools, heavy pipes, fixtures, etc. Working overtime, whenever the boss chooses, for straight time. Plumbing being a bad insurance risk, the helpers risk their lives every day for the bosses.

In the plumbers' locals the majority of the mechanics are in favor of the helpers union. It is the reactionary officials who do not wish the helpers organized for fear of losing their graft. The graft comes in the form of initiation fees of the helpers. The initiation fee is $105.00 but with the graft the helper must pay $358.00.

While the policy of the A. F. of L. stands on record as organising the unorganized, there has been nothing done towards the unorganised plumbers' helpers.

At the present time the helpers have organized the American Association of Plumbers' Helpers, taking in all helpers from Bronx, Manhattan, Long Island, Brooklyn, etc. The membership has grown in the last three months from 8 to 1,200 under a leadership of an organizer and experienced Executive Board. Having a shop chairman system and office at 15 East 3rd Street, there is close contact with the members. In face of the expected strike of plumbers local No. 1, the helpers, are joining by the hundreds.

A few of the demands are as follows:

1. Join the American Federation of Labor,
2. Recognition of the union,
3. 40 hour week,
4. Double time for overtime.

All helpers should join the American Association of Plumbers' Helpers at 15 East 3rd Street, New York City. Put your shoulders to the wheel and fight for a living wage.

Religious Education in The Schools

For the last several years a steady stream of propaganda has been appearing in the columns of the capitalist press advocating the compulsory religious training of the children in the public schools.

Everything that is in any way not to the liking of the bosses is charged to the lack of religious training. The press even goes so far as to say that the continual wave of crime or the appalling number of suicides among the youth is due to this cause. Their only remedy is to pack all the children off to church and have the priest give them a good dose of meekness-pills. This is despite the fact that a great majority of the criminals come from religious homes and have had religious training, even continuing it to the present day.

"Religion," said Marx, "is opium to the masses." The true reason why the capitalists support the churches, is that they, more than any other means of propaganda, succeed in effectively doping the workers.

It has been found that those workers with religious training are more obedient to their masters, the bosses. The churches and of the individual, is completely ignored.

The young workers' children in the schools with their unformed and uncontaminated minds are especially susceptible to this dangerous propaganda.

All religious organizations teach the false doctrine of class-collaboration.

The workers must train their children in the class struggle. They must not let the capitalists teach the children the false doctrines of the church, which is itself a great capitalist business. The workers and especially the young workers must fight against the teaching of religion in the schools. The YOUNG WORKERS (COMMUNIST) LEAGUE must lead this struggle. This fight will bring them to great things. It is an effective means for agitation. The workers must rally together to fight this menace of religious training.

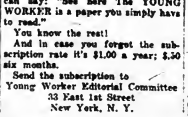
The C. M. T. C.



Tons of propagnnda are spouting forth about the virtues of the Citizens Military Training Camps and the opportunities being offered to the youth. "A Month's Vacation," is the catchy slogan used, but intensive dull vacation under strict military discipline is the truth.

All this hunkem about the camps that stares us in nur face wherever we go, comes at a time when Chinese workers and peasants are slaughtered under false pretenses.

Militarism is a problem that is of paramount importance to the youth for it is the youth that acts as cannon foddor in wars. It is no accident that U. S. Steel Corporation, and other large industrial corporations, that are directly concerned in fostering the idea of war and the exploitation of the young worker should endorse the Citizens Military Training Camps. The C. M. T. C's are being used as tom-toms for a war that may, at any moment break out against China and Mexico.

The camps are being used for still another purpose which in the class on citizenship means loyalty to your boss and scab on your fellow workers. The answer of the young worker and student must be a complete rejection of these war training camps.

Negro Death Rate Twice White Due To Bad Housing

Negroes in Chicago have a death rate more than twice that of the whites, and an infant mortality rate of 118 (per thousand) as compared with 71 for whites. More than six times as many Negroes as whites die from tuberculosis and syphilis; more than three times as many from pneumonia. The Negro death rate from tuberculosis for the past 12 years shows no appreciable decline. It has increased rapidly since 1924.

These facts are cited by H. L. Harris, M. D., in an article, "Negro Mortality Rates in Chicago," appearing in the first (March) issue of the Social Service Review, a new quarterly issued by the University of Chicago. They were admitted by Chicago's Health Commissioner, Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, in talking with members of the Negro Health Committee, shortly after publication of a bulletin by the Health Department showing that for 1925 Chicago had the lowest death rate of any city of a million or more population. Dr. Harris, a colored physician, analyzes some of the conditions causing this discrepancy in the mortality rates between white and Negro citizens—notably the lack of public health services and adequate housing in the congested area where the 200,000 or more Negro workers live.

Goretzky Case Next.

The case of Joseph Goretzky, manager of Local 55, Sigman's own local of pressers, will come up for trial before Judge Rosalsky on Friday in Special Sessions. Goretzky was the victim of framed up charges, which were apparently made against him in the hope of eliminating him from the local.

Walsh Argues.

Fraed P. Walsh and Louis Boudin appeared for the Joint Board of cloakmakers before Supreme Court Justice Tierney, on Tuesday to present arguments on the injunction secured by Luigi Antonini of Local 89, which attempts to restrain the Joint Board from collecting dues from the Italian members.

Justice Tierney asked both sides to submit briefs by April 12.

Two Firemen Overcome In New Jersey Blaze

ORANGE, N. J., April 6.—Two firemen were overcome by smoke in attempting to rescue a third who was trapped in the belfry of the first presbyterian church, 125 feet from the ground when the steeple of the church was ignited by sparks from a blazing picture theatre across the street today.

The trapped fireman managed to escape from the belfry, however, by sliding down a rope while cheering hundreds looked on. The interior of the theatre was destroyed.

SCAB TANGLES UP YARN, BUT JUDGE CONVICTS GIRLS

Walsh Argues Against Garment Injunction

In spite of the fact that no corroborating witness appeared and that the complainant herself was "not sure" that Gussie Kimberg and Clara Kimberg had "struck" her, the two girl pickets were found guilty, by Judge Kelly Yoschels in Special Sessions in Brooklyn, of attacking Mrs. Anna Bloom during the second month of the recent cloak strike.

Although her story was inconsistent in many details, and no witnesses appeared who could corroborate her testimony, the judge found the girls guilty. They will be sentenced on April 14th.

Persecuted by Sigman.

The interest which the International officials continue to take in the conviction of strikers who picketed during the strike was again attested when several agents of the International from New York were seen in the Brooklyn court room.

James Pasanti was found guilty yesterday before Judge Rosalsky in Special Sessions, of the misdemeanor of malicious mischief during the strike. He will receive sentence on April 11.

The Chief and Stalin's Picture

By DONALD McKILLOP

THE first trip we sailed together, the chief and I got along without friction, in fact, he thought so much of me for fixing the freezer, which I found in a very bad state, that he did an unheard of thing by giving me a refreshment. I rose still higher in his estimation when he discovered me reading the Bible.

But, alas! I only flattered to deceive in agreeing with him that the Bible is a good book. But his disillusionment didn't come until homeward bound, the second trip. A comrade sent me a copy of the "Workers' Monthly," of San Francisco, which contained a picture of Comrade Stalin. I thought it would look well stuck up in my room so I cut it out and pinned it up, facing the door, where it stuck, one on entering.

Strange to say, what was ambrosia to me turned but to be poison to others, and I very soon learned that "arts that cause scarcity two don't thrive at number five." Some of the engineers griped at it; others made uncomplimentary remarks about Stalin in a good-humored manner, but the 1st assistant scowled and said nothing. His silence was far from golden to me for I knew from experience that silence with him was a sign of brooding within.

The chief seemed to me more affected than anybody else, however, which was most unfortunate for me, as it does not pay to cross a chief engineer. When first he gazed upon it, I watched him closely, for "old Jock" has his share of the Scottish trait of hiding the emotions. A steely look crept into his eyes, but he spoke on without comment about the picture. His caution, however, didn't deceive me as I am a "canny Scot" myself, and I felt instinctively that he would have something to say later.

I hadn't long to wait. Two days afterward, the 3rd assistant, an American, and I were having a friendly argument on politics in his room, when the chief put his head in the door, and a finish to the controversy. By way of conversation, the 3rd said, in jocular manner:

"What do you think of this man, chief?—He's a Bolshevik."

This brought forth what was coming to me. Like damned up waters when the gates burst, and with the hatred of a fanatic, the chief let it out to settle with a member of another race. His flow of vituperation against the Bolshevik whom he loves the way the eat loves mustard.

"Yes, I know since 1917 he has got one of the b——s stuck on my room. There are the b——s that have ruined the trade, and caused the ships to be built elsewhere. If I had my way, everyone of them would be put again the wall and shot. The quicker he gets the picture of the——out of here, the better for himself!" With this, he turned on his heel.

The third engineer, a great fan on talking the subject. Although one has just got out American, and a republican to boot, he liked a row well to with me harm. I assured him he had a——staged me in "old Jock's" eyes, but that simply made him to cause his feelings. Once, the 3rd advised me in a friendly way, "to drop Bolshevism and other such-like ideas as it doesn't pay to have such beliefs in America."

It was clear to me that I was doomed and damned on the ship. I could see the writing on the wall. It may be true that the Scots are clannish, but then I had become as a Campbell in the eyes of a MacDonald. The latter clan had a great number treacherously murdered, in the Massacre of Glencoe, by the Campbells, at the behest of Williams, Prince of Orange, for, ostensibly, not taking the oath of allegiance at the appointed time. We were now as the poles apart. This, of course, was only to be from my first day on the ship, even if the chief didn't know before.

"Old Jock" was typical of the old school of engineers in the Clyde, and lives in order to work. While the young generation only works in order to live, he has a supreme contempt for the young engineers coming on. Maybe this is because they don't spend as much time in the engine room longer than is necessary. They, unlike the chief, are not bought body and soul by the company." The heat of the engine room causes them feel they have a duty to themselves. When an engineer is wrestling with a breakdown, between ports at the Mexican coast, the hottest part of the world, he has to sweat his soul, and work with a will, until the trouble is remedied, all the while loosing rivers of sweat.

After receiving the chief's veiled ultimatum, I pondered over the question of whether Stalin should stay put or disappear. Economic interests were involved, as well as the necessity of looking for another job if fired. After a while, the nervous spirit came to the rescue with the thought that facing facts can do better than fearful oddities, and, in the lion shaking dew from its mane, I cast my qualms and fears into the discard by saying, "To hell with poverty, give the cat the canary!" I had crossed the Rubicon, and decided to go down, or not with colors pointed to the mast, at least with Stalin pinned to the bulkhead.

Every time "old Jock" was up or down the engine room he got another sight of "the b——d," as my door was always open to me, and his glance to see if he were still in was quite the chuckle.

He certainly gave me long enough "to come to my senses" for it suffered that picture two other trips before realizing I was incorrigible. Then he enlisted the services of the superintendent engineer to get rid of me, as, no doubt, I had become as a red rag to a bull.

The superintendent, after examining around the freezer, trying to find legitimate cause for removing the thorn in the flesh, and failing to find one, seized upon my habit of smoking cigars on watch, which my cyder, a Hawaiian, was good enough to present me with. He remarked:

"You seem to have a plentiful supply of cigars." "Oh, no," I repaired, "like most things the Scots get, this is a gift."

That night, the chief informed me that the super had hired a man smoking cigars on duty. He hoped I bore him no ill will and that I would leave the job in good condition. His concluding remark explains why he didn't do the job himself: he was afraid I might throw a monkey wrench into the works before the new man arrived.

If I may be permitted to discovered in my present job, where we have no use for the proverbial hatter, the Scots are the most easy-going and easier work; and should I ever be in dire straits once my duty, I will say, with Shakespeare, "Sweet are the uses of adversity," and regard the sailing from the ship as a blessing in disguise.

The Letter-Box

[illegible] regarding "Heroes."

[illegible] have read in the daily papers [illegible] China. I saw their pictures as [illegible] the poor people who are in revolt against the British and American exploiters in Shanghai.

In the papers, the boys were looking very nice and smiling, but I don't know how they will look after they come back. If they come at all. Maybe they will get the chance to die on the world war.

I have been very much sad and my physical condition is very [illegible].

I learned how much of a country I had and how much the capitalist class appreciate the sacrifices soldiers make for them when they throw me out like a dirty dog, without home or friends.

I hope the boys never come back who go to crush the revolutionary movement in China.—William Poznlak.

Fragments from "The Broken Charm"

A Free Translation From the Russian of A. Andreyiv.

By VERA and VIOLET MITKOVSKY.

Part II (Continued From Yesterday).

One who has lived much, not in years but in experience, realizes some fundamental truth, some inexplicable law of life. One who has lived much must have a big heart to accomodate all his experiences.

She was not coquettish or trying to be original. She merely had a queer turn of speech. She told him, "You remind me of early spring. There is something sunny, something of the spring about you. You make one throw off all fear and heaviness of spirit. Are you always happy? Most unusual man!"

Tropin had arrived from the front two days before and was now waiting for the Revolutionary Committee to send him to another front where panic, treachery and desertion held full sway. Every village in the district was a nest of bandits. His wounded leg ached and before his eyes continually daoced the words of a letter received a short time before, telling him of the death of his friend, death from starvation in a forest while fleeing from the enemy's prison camp.

In answer to her he smiled and said, "I have never experienced a great joy." "I can't believe you. You smiled just now. Only a happy man could have smiled like that."

He knew she loved him, and when his train pulled out, felt he had left something precious behind. "I am unhappy," he murmured to himself, but the expression of his feelings did not relieve them as it had done in childhood.

A change began to come over Tropin. It may have been caused by the life he was leading—a life full of danger, fighting and rearlessness. It began to take place during the endless obstinate fighting in the village Kedrovka. Kedrovka was an important port and changed hands three times a week. It seemed the war had begun because of Kedrovka and would continue there eternally.

For the second time the village was in the hands of the Reds. Brigadier Shiharoff and Brigadier-General Tropin were riding towards Kedrovka through a small wood. It seemed to Tropin he had always been riding thus, riding eternally through the bullet-scarred wood. He felt hooked and unfastened his collar. The Brigadier turned towards him in his saddle. "We'll stay here about two days, then get thrown out again—a continuous trotting in and fro. The third brigade kept it up for two months before we came." He hummed six a tune and turned again. "Its like a dance: two steps forward, two steps back, this way, that way, back again. The Madam's Waltz. Heigh-ho!" Tropin forced a laugh and remarked, "The charcoal burners have nourished to encourage himself: "We'll break the charm yet."

A nameless sorrow oppressed Tropin, and with sadness came fear. He felt it first while fighting, not in a battle such as he was used to but merely a short exchange of shots. He feared death and the "Why? Why? Why?" of everything closed in upon him like a charmed circle.

One day Lucy unexpectedly arrived in the village. "I couldn't stand it any longer," she told him. "I suffered too much and thought I should go mad. I can't live without you." He knew she was sincere. All her little unnuerous and quirks of speech had disappeared. She simply repeated, "I can't live without you."

Soon the sleigh-bells of the wedding party rang merrily through the cold air. They drew deep breaths of the biting wind, but Tropin's gloom was not dispelled. Shortly afterwards he told Lucy that he couldn't see her often, that she had better go back to St. Petersburg. None of the inhabitants were evacuating, yet he insisted that she go. "We're at the very front," he told her. "There will be many inconveniences." Lucy pouted and said, "No one else is going. Why can't I stay." She stayed but saw little of Tropin. His thoughts were always of her, yet the feeling of fear and uneasiness oppressed him more and more.

One day Lucy said, "You have a prisoner of war here. He is my brother." Tropin remembered, "Oh yes! I thought the surname was a colonel-dence." "No, he is my brother. What will they do to him?" she inquired anxiously. Tropin was silent. He knew what they would do to one of the enemy's scouts. "I'll send him to the rear of our army," he lied. None knew of the prisoner save himself and he could easily have been sent to the rear flank, as was customary with ordinary prisoners. Yet he knew that he was going to give orders for the scout's execution on the following day. "But what will you do with him?" she insisted. "Shoot him?" "Yes," answered Tropin. "No, no! It's impossible. Oh my God! You beast! You beast!" She wept and scolded in a frenzy, finally throwing herself across the threshold and exclaiming, "You won't go till you've said yes, unless you walk over me. Will you walk over me, your bride?" He was silent, for he knew he would have to step over her. "No one knows he is here," she pleaded. "You said so yourself, send him to the rear. He'll do no harm to your party there. You'll do it, won't you? Come, say yes." With a great effort he said firmly, "No." She clasped his feet. "No, no. You won't do it. You love me, don't you?" "I can't. Don't you understand?" He explained his duty to her. To him it was clear. His answer was, "No." All the uncleanness of the past few months rose and choked him. His thoughts cleared and strength flowed into him. He made a step towards the door. Lucy jumped up. In her eyes, whose expression Tropin would never forget, was a full knowledge of what he was going to do. She whispered, "You don't love me?" "I love you but not as I love ——." "As you love what?" He made another step. She flung open the door. "Go!" "Damn you, damn you!" she screamed after him and ran out calling, "Murderer."

Next day Tropin received two packets. The first was an answer from the rear to his report of the capture and condemnation of the white guard's scout. At the end it said, "Report immediately sentence is carried out." The second was a note containing the two words, "Cursed Murderer."

Within an hour a little boy, bearing a note, tucked into his room. The youngster had been running and was panting for breath. "Comrade . . . Commissar . . . the lady . . ." Tropin looked at the frightened eyes and understood. His head swam but he controlled himself and said, "You are tired, little man. Well . . . the lady?" "She . . . she took poison." He patted the wet hair. "Go, my dear."

He picked up the portfolio and wondered, "What did I want this for?" then remembered that in it lay a paper with the words, "Report immediately sentence is carried out."

That evening the brigadier asked Tropin, "Is it true that you shot the white scout with your own hand?"

"Yes," answered Brigadier-General Tropin.

The War Makers

By WILLIAM PICKENS.

IT is interesting to note how our naval officers and daily papers are trying to set us in a rage against the Chinese—especially against the progressive and intelligent element in China, which is represented by the Koumintang forces. These war-makers know that the average reader does not think and analyse, but "swallows whole" whatever "the papers say." Therefore they keep harping on certain cunning phrases, such as "Chinese atrocities" and "Chinese outrages," altho an analysing mind can see clearly that the greatest outrages being enacted in China, so far, are those being done by British and American guns; and that the remarkably self-controlled Chinese are being gradually and systematically bear-baited and enraged by our naval commanders, so that the yellow people will attack the white people, and thus create a pretext for a general war on China and for the possible crushing back of the "racial equality" aspirations of the Cantonese leaders.

IF such a white and yellow war is forced upon a sleeping world, the United States will have been duped into acting as the tool of the British. The British dragged us into that world war on a plea for an Anglo-Saxon victory; they may drag us into a color war on the plea for a white victory. Great Britain is now financially too much embarrassed for her leaders to want to start a big war all by themselves. But they know that America has the money, and if they inveigle us in, so that we can pay the heaviest bills and costs, they will feel safer in starting an Asiatic war. If the Cantonese succeed and place China on the international plane of Japan, England sees the end of British domination in Asia. It would hardly be a decade before they would have to withdraw from even India. They can delay (they cannot ultimately prevent) this exit, if they can get somebody to bear the costs.

* * *

ONE who reads the papers discriminatingly about these "Chinese outrages," can see how the headlines are contradicted by the details of the reports; "one American is killed" by a mob; and there are reports of at least two attempts at criminal assault on American women." To the unprejudiced mind these details indicate the superiority of control in Chinese men. For whenever did white soldiers get into a white mob break in on a people whom they did not like to, and "kill one" and only "attempt" to assault two of the women? Can you imagine a Mississippi mob being so mildly savage when it breaks into the Negro section of a town—even tho the Negro is a native citizen and not a "foreign devil"?

* * *

IF there come such a war, it looks pretty clear that some big white nations will be on the side of Asia, and some others strongly in sympathy with the Asiatics. Will our American people allow either British interests or Standard Oil or Wall Street sheep to lead us into the worst horror of all these horrible ages—a COLOR WAR?

How Metro-Goldwyn Movie Ads Are Made

(By JACK GLASS, Worker Correspondent).

Learning a trade nowadays is not so easy. Not because it is such hard work, but because the boss won't give you much chance to learn.

When I was laid off from my last job for asking for a raise, I answered an ad which stated: "Boy wanted to become a pressman."

I got the job. The elevator took me up to the 6th floor. The heat struck me in the face as soon as I opened the door. It was hot—a funny odor.

The foreman came over to me and looked over from head to foot. The first thing he told me was that I'll have to work for $16 a week.

Pay Seems High—But.

Sixteen dollars! Gee, that's a lot of money, as they usually pay about $10 or $12 to start. Especially when advertised "to learn a trade."

I was also told that I'd work from 8 to 5:30 and half an hour for lunch. Nine hours a day, and a half day on Saturday. I MUST work overtime whenever I'm asked to. Of course I wouldn't have to work much overtime.

The windows are shut tight. The steam heat at full blast. Gas heaters lit to give extra heat.

The foreman told me to keep an open one of the windows, that they must be shut. "Otherwise the plates will crack. They cost between $15 and $25 apiece and need very much heat." The plates are of glass.

Health Not Considered.

I wanted to tell him that the health of the workers is more valuable than the plates; that steam heat can be put under the press. I kept quiet.

I have headaches and feel dizzy after I get through with the day's work. My throat is dry from the ammonia, benzine, kerosene, etc., used to wash the press and plates.

There is no water in the place, except in the toilet, where it's dirty and filthy. It seems as though they never cleaned it since the building was erected. At times I have to go in there to drink, especially when I get through washing the press. The floors are swept when we have nothing to do. And then we are sent home—given a vacation without pay.

All the Odd Jobs.

I was supposed to feed the press in order to become a pressman. Instead I did everything else but feeding. Sorting pictures as fast as my hands can move. The boss came over and told me to hurry up as Mike has to pack them up immediately and send them out. If in New York, deliver them—heavy bundles.

After working for two months I was promoted to feed the press. Jumping "from the frying pan into the fire," I have to stand a whole day and feed the press. My head reaches the ceiling and I nearly choke to death.

Pay Day Postponed.

We used to get our pay on Saturday. We quit work at 12 and had to wait till one before we got it. They started to lay off our pay until Monday. Then regularly on Monday night. Now they are beginning to pay us on Tuesday.

The workers are desperate. "We are going to raise hell if we don5t get paid regularly," some of them claim.

And then people wonder why the workers in the printing trade are kicking and want to organize.

THE MISSIONARIES.

Nanking's streets are red with blood,
The people's homes aflame,
But never a man of the brotherhood,
To raise the cry of "Shame."

Deaf to the widowed mother's shrelk,
In that hellish shrapnel's screen,
Nor heeding cry of maimed or weak,
They spit on the Nazarene.

They prate of Christ the crucified,
Of a western world's good will,
While christian guns spray death's red tide,
O'er dark Soconv Hill.

.ROBERT MONTEITH.

BOOKS

A JOURNALIST LOOKS AT CHINA.

Young China. Lewis Gannett. The Nation. $.25.

It is difficult to get the feel of awakening China from garbled newspaper stories, statistics or theses. China tends to become for the average well-informed reader a huge chess board; growth versus reaction; little war lords moved from box to box by the Imperialist powers, etc.

Gannett, a brilliant journalist, expresses the movement in human terms.

Take the industrialization of China. Here is what it means expressed in human terms. "All about the industrial outskirts of the great Western city which is the pride of foreigners in Shanghai one may see the disreputable sheds, built of bamboo, mud, lime, straw. Six or eight people live in one-room floorless huts, through whose flimsy roofs the rain leaks in a storm; whose walls, falling or riddled with holes, affords no privacy. There is no drainage, no lavvers tories; garbage heaps and cesspools—or rather cess-puddles—surround the hovels. A big rain floods the whole neighborhood and the ragged babies wade about covered with mud and filth."

"Walking through the dimly lit mill-rooms one sees baskets containing children, sleeping or awake between the whirring, clacking machines. Sometimes a tot of two or three sits cheerfully playing with cotton waste in the aisles through which the foreman guides the visitor. Girls a little older help their mothers tend the rows of spindles and the deftness of five-year-old fingers is amazing.

"Often the children are brought in from the country by a contractor, who follows disaster like vultures and pays starving parents about a dollar a month for a contract which amounts to slavery; the girls live for years in his compound, eating his food, or in factories, eating factory rice, working sometimes fifteen and sixteen hours a day, and often sleeping on the floor beneath their machines."

The report of the hard-boiled Shanghai Child Labor Commission made in 1924 contains all this and more. But reports are as a rule lifeless. . . .

Gannett does better at reporting than at an analysis of the forces back of these revolution, of class alignments, etc. He sees that industrialization of China "has upset her old equilibrium," but it seems that he fails to grasp the implications of China's industrialization.

He seems surprised at the revolutionary role of the Chinese bourgeoisie. He says, "The Chinese employer straddles the class issue. He does not identify himself with the employing classes of the world. Race consciousness has taken the place of class consciousness."

The Chinese middle classes, like the middle classes of India, Mexico and other colonial countries, "do not identify themselves with the employing class of the rest of the world" for very definite class reasons. Noble notions of race unity or Chinese brotherhood have little to do with their position in the revolution.

Tariff restrictions imposed upon China by foreign industrialists extra-territorial rights, fat concessions handed out to foreign plunderers by the Manchus and Yuan Shi Kai, as well as natural antagonism to foreign competitors flooding China with cheap manufactured goods, have forced the middle classes (with the exception of the compradore element) into a revolutionary role.

How long the Chinese middle classes will remain with the revolution is open to question. Judging by press reports, (and the role of the bourgeoisie in other revolutions) it won't stay very long.

AN IMPORTANT BIOGRAPHY

Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels, by D. Riazanov. International Publishers. $2.50.

Many characters on the surface of the European radical movement at the close of the 18th and the first half of the 19th centuries are brought before us in the vivid analysis of historic developments at the time. Not that all of the individuals are of such vast importance to us, but as molders of historic events and as precursors of scientific socialism they are important for a clear understanding of the movement. And Riazanov surely throws the clear light of Marxism upon them.

Marx came upon the arena of life with the French Revolution as a background. The capitalist economy which he is to analyze in the future is establishing itself through a series of revolutions embracing his youth and early manhood. The revolution of 1848 finds Marx a Communist. For just a few months before the conflict of that year broke out in Germany, the Communist Manifesto was published.

Karl Marx displayed the trend toward the materialist interpretation as early as his high school days. Not in vain was he bred on French materialism.

The movement for the liberation of the working class is far more of a social consequence than the very immediate surroundings of the individuals. While Karl Marx was brought up in the free spirit of the French revolution and the doctrines of materialism emanating from the same land, Engels, on the contrary, was raised in the midst of bourgeois mannerisms and religious narrowness. Yet, the labor movement was at its birth, the social forces were being released upon the road of clarification; and Marx and Engels approached and collaborated for the final overthrow of class rule.

Contrary to opinions held by many, Marx was not a closetred thinker. He was not merely a philosopher but a revolutionist taking an active part in every struggle of the workers. Long before he was asked to participate in the proceedings of the League of the Just, there were many working class groups and organizations in the most important European countries which were initiated by him. He kept in close touch with them.

The book shows that Marx was not a closet theorist but was following current political and economic events very closely. Although at all times arriving at the basic conclusions of the Communist Manifesto, he nevertheless modified his method of approach and wording of manifestos to conform with the revolutionary understanding of the workers and the political situation at the time.

The book by Riazanov is a biography of the founders of scientific socialism, written by a Marxist and analyzed in a Marxian way.

DARROW VS. DURANT.

"Is Man a Machine?" Clarence Darrow, affirmative; Dr. Will Durant, negative. League for Public Discussion. $1.

This is the stenographic report of a debate between the big lawyer from Chicago with the drooped shoulders, bored manner and drawling voice, and the author of "The Story of Philosophy."

Listening to this discussion might have been fairly interesting, at least when Darrow took the floor. But reading this cohalmed collection of mutual genuflexions and impromptu wise-cracks is awful punishment.

Clarence Darrow likes nothing better than a huge, appreciative crowd before whom he can show off. He doesn't mean half he says. (He'd been having a wonderful time these many years arguing the thesis that life's not worth living.) As far as Dr. Durant goes, the great advantage of reading his part of the debate is that one is relieved of the pain of listening to his ingratiating, nasal locutions for two whole hours.

Immigration.—In spite of much agitation for even more drastic regulation of immigration, the law as amended in 1924 still stands. The quota of which may be admitted from any country in a year is 2 per cent of the persons born in that country and living in the U. S. in 1890. Monthly quotas in general must not exceed 10 per cent of the yearly quota. The present quotas hold until June 30, 1927. After that date the total yearly quota is 150,000, apportioned according to the national origin of residents in the U. S. in 1920. Of the numerous laws proposed in congress for fingerprinting or otherwise registering immigrants, none has yet been enacted.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE decision of the Massachusetts supreme court to refuse Sacco and Vanzetti a new trial is just what might be expected of this organ of capitalism. Despite the almost universal belief that the two Italian labor leaders are the victims of one of the most coldblooded frame-ups in the history of the labor movement, the hard-boiled legal machinery of capitalism scorned public opinion and forged another link in the chain that is intended to drag Sacco and Vanzetti to their doom. Which should convince even the most naive liberal that justice in cases similar to this one depends almost entirely on the class prejudices of those in a position to dispose it.

THIS dastardly conspiracy has aroused labor all over the world as no case has done since the employers of California did their damndest to give Tom Mooney a seat in an electric chair. Even sluggish American labor has been aroused and moved to protest. The officials of the A. F. of L. gave lip service to the movement organized to save Sacco and Vanzetti from legal murder, but the capitalists of Massachusetts know quite well that if Green was as seriously concerned with saving the lives of those two workers as he is in making wac on the left wing in the trade unions, the whole labor movement in the United States would be mobilized for a fight that would burst open the jail gates deapite the opposition of the capitalists and their lieutenants.

WHEN Sacco and Vanzetti were originally framed only the radical wing of the labor movement jumped in to save them from the vengeance of the bosses. But by degrees, thru years of agitation and propaganda it was proven to the satisfaction of even large sections of the bourgeoisie that those men were innocent of the crime charged against them and that their execution would be pure and simple assassination that would recoil with stunning force on the heads of the perpetrators. Not foc the sake of Sacco and Vanzetti or for the sake of the labor movement but out of regard for the capitalist system, several capitalist newspapers and university professors joined their voices to the demand of labor that Sacco and Vanzetti be given a new trial. The answer of the Massachusetts supreme court is an emphatic "No!"

* * *

THIS answer will not be considered final by the friends of Sacco and Vanzetti. And those friends are legion. A most serious responsibility rests on the shoulders of the working class of this country. Two members of their class stand on the threshold of the death chamber. The enemy arm stretched out to drag them to eternity must be paralysed by a blow from the mighty fist of American labor. If there ever was a time when all sections of American labor should stand together regardless of differences it is now. Those who would stand in the way of a united front of labor and all other sympathetic elements could be charged with objectively aiding and abetting the efforts of the capitalists to burn out two proletarian lives in the electric chair. Here is a challenge to labor that it cannot fail to take up. The Massachusetts supreme court has determined to kill our comrades. American labor must be equally determined that "SACCO AND VANZETTI SHALL NOT BE MURDERED!"

Desire to Throttle Daily Worker Seen In Action of Court

William F. Dunne, J. Louis Engdahl, editors, and Bert Miller, Business manager of The DAILY WORKER, were placed in $500 bail yesterday in Essex Market Court in connection with the charge of violating section 1141 of the penal code which is technically directed against the publication of "lewd, lecherous, lascivious, and disgusting matter."

Case To Be Heard April 19th.

Judge Brodsky, who presided, granted adjournment until April 19, when the case will be continued.

A poem, entitled "American," by David Gordon, which appeared in the magazine section of The DAILY WORKER on March 12 formed the basis foc the present attack on the editors of the paper. When summons were served last week by members of the Bomb Squad, they declared that the charges were inspired by "a well-known patriotic society."

Don't Like DAILY WORKER.

The proceedings in court yesterday brought out clearly the fact that an organized attempt to suppress The DAILY WORKER is being made by various wealthy and patriotic societies cooperating with government agencies. Against the paper there appeared, in addition to officer Kelly, a representative of the Bomb Squad, who pressed the charge, a delegation of counsel and officials of the American Legion, District Attorney McWitter, and Jacob Cash, president of the American Patriotic Society and vice-president of the International Tailoring Co.

Charge Is Only Excuse, Says Defense

Joseph R. Brodsky, the attorney who appeared in behalf of the defendants, in arguing for the dismisal of the case, pointed out that these making the complaint were not interested in the charge of publishing "lewd, lascivious or salacious literature," but that they were simply using this section of the code as an excuse foc an attack upon The DAILY WORKER, because it ceiticized American institutions. This charge was substantiated by the fact that representatives of the patriotic societies sought to introduce into the case cartoons and other materials of a radical character, critical of the U. S. Government and capitalist institutions.

Irked At Radical Book Publishing.

District Attorney McWitter asked for adjournment of the case on the ground that he wished to have more time to investigate the post-office rules and regulations in connection with the distribution of the paper. He also sought to draw The DAILY WORKER Publishing Company into the case, apparently seeking to involve the right of this company to publish other radical publications.

SOVIET UNION DRAFTS PROTEST TO UNPRECEDENTED RAID ON EMBASSY

Chang Tso-lin and Imperialists Together Try to Provoke War, Says German Press

MOSCOW, April 7.—The Soviet Union foreign office is drafting a note protesting against the unprecedented raid on the Soviet Union embassy in Peking yesterday.

This startling breach of Russia's diplomatic privileges is believed to have been instigated by Great Britain. The raid was carried out with the full permission of the imperialist powers who permitted the troops of Chang Tso Lin, Manchurian war lord, to march along a road in the Legation Quarter to the Soviet buildings, according to dispatches received here.

Calls England Responsible.

That the raids were inspired by England in order "to provoke the Soviets to war" is the opinion of Chancellor Marx's "Germania," according to a wireless report from Berlin. Any other state than Soviet Russia would have declared war under similar treatment, declares the "Rote Fahne," Communist daily.

Chang Tortures Captured Russians.

Several Russian watchmen who were captured during the raid were severely beaten and tortured from Chang Tso Lin's troops. Twenty-two Russians and sixty Chinese were dragged away from the Soviet building. Many others in the Chinese Eastern Railway offices and the Dahl Bank was destroyed and valuable documents were confiscated.

R. C. L. Leads Chinese Workers.

Congratulating the Chinese labor movement in its role in the revolution, the Red Trade Union International has sent the following message to the Chinese Federation of Labor:

"We view with pride the great achievements of the Chinese section since joining the International and are convinced that Chinese workers will develop unceasingly and hand in hand with the revolting peasantry will lead the revolution to victory."

Workers Party Has Two Candidates in Passaic Election

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., April 7.—Entering the local political campaign with two candidates for city commissioners, Simon E. Bambach and Simon Smelkinson, the Workers (Communist) Party, Local Passaic, has issued a statement of its demands.

It raises the issue of the exclusive use of union labor on all municipal work who should aid the union rate of wages. It demands that the city establish an unemployment bureau in which the local labor movement shall participate. Also the immediate undertaking of construction work on a large scale to provide employment for unemployed workers. They workers to receive pay at the union scale of wages.

Free Rent for Unemployed.

It requests a moratorium on rents for families of the unemployed and compensation for those who cannot secure employment.

It demands the right to picket and strike and asks for the abolition of injunctions in labor disputes, also opposing the use of police against strikers.

It ends in part as follows:

"The campaign for the election of five commissioners on May 10th has begun. You are confronted with plenty of candidates, and the question is, which will best represent your interests?

"The majority of the people of Passaic are workers. The biggest industry is the textile industry. Passaic has just gone thru a textile strike of over a year, in which the millowners demonstrated that they owned the city government and can use it against the strikers. Mayor McGuire, director of public safety; Abram Preiskel and the othec commissioners served the mill-owners on every occasion. We had clubbings, arrests, the breaking in of picket lines, trampling down of men, women and children underfoot by mounted police, water hose, gas bombs and all

FURRIER STRIKE RECEIPTS NEVER COUNTED BY COOK

Socialists Audit Only to Discredit Lefts

Testifying yesterday before Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan, who is investigating the charges of police bribery in connection with the fur strike of last year, Walter M. Cook and Herman J. Volk, the two socialist accountants who made the audit of the books of the Furriers' Joint Board for the A. F. of L. investigating committee, acknowledged that they had not taken the trouble to examine a huge numbec of receipts which were presented to them for examination.

Didn't Look At Receipts.

Altho the figures which they finally submitted to the investigating committee, were accepted as an authoritative audit and made the basis for all the charges of bribery during the strike, Walter Cook stated that "Morris Cohen, the Joint Board secretary-treasurer, handed us some boxes which he said contained receipts. They were a lot of slips with names on them, but I did not have time to look at them."

Said Opposed Cook.

Cook said that the Joint Board accounts showed $556,174.17 had been paid out in strike relief. He reported to the investigating committee that the amount and some other items were "not accounted for." District Attorney Brothers asked him whether the boxes of receipts presented to him might have been vouchers for this money. He said yes, but he did not have time to look and see. Cook acknowledged that Ben Gold had objected to him as auditor because of his known socialist bias.

"Too Much Trouble."

Volk, made the same sort of statement about the accounts. "We did not have time to go over eveything," he said. "They handed us receipts arranged in alphabetical order. They wanted us to receipt for them each morning and return them in the same shape each night. That was too much trouble. We did not have time."

Yet on the work of these two "expert" accountants, the furriers were "exposed." Cook repeatedly referred to the "so-called" cash book and "what were presumably strike receipts." This whole job of investigating was purely a business proposition he told Assistant District Attorney Brothers who conducted the questioning. His personal attitude toward the members of the Joint Board did not enter into the matter.

Hugh Frayne, New York organizer for the American Federation of Labor and a member of the fur investigation committee, was the first witness called yesterday morning. His testimony revealed the fact that Edward F. McGeady was frequently absent from the committee meetings, and also the fact that the charges of alleged bribery of the police were made on the basis of notes jotted down by Matthew Woll—not from any stenographic record of testimony.

Several times Mr. Frayne men-

SAPIRO'S CO-OP FAILURES TOLD AT FORD TRIAL

Promoters Gross Income At Least $750,000

DETROIT, April 7.—An agricultural morgue was shown the jury in the million-dollar Ford-Sapiro libel suit today as counsel for Henry Ford revealed a series of failures among potato cooperatives organized by Aaron Sapiro.

Two big potato exchanges which he created in Maine and Minnesota, collapsed after brief careers, Sapiro admitted, under cross-examination by Senator James A. Reed, chief of Ford's counsel. The so-called cooperative king seored however, by blaming the Maine failure on the Dearborn Independent's attacks, which were the basis of his libel suit.

The Ford forces gained by showing that Sapiro got huge fees out of the potato co-operatives before they failed. In Maine, Sapiro got $19,300 while in Minnesota, he got $7,500 within two years.

With these items included the cooperative king's gross income nearer $750,000 for the last decade.

Frequent Clashes.

Frequent clashes between Reed and Sapiro came when the examination turned to Sapiro's connection with potato growers. Sapiro said he received $19,000 from the Maine potato growers exchange, which collapsed after eighteen months. It's failure Sapiro blamed on the Ford attacks in the Dearborn Independent.

"Didn't the Maine exchange live only eighteen months and then go into the hands of a receiver?" Reed asked.

"It lived through 1923 and part of 1924," Sapiro replied. "After the publication of the Dearborn articles, it may have collapsed."

TO SENTENCE SACCO AND VANZETTI SATURDAY DESPITE WORLD PROTEST

All Political Opinions United in Demand for a New Trial for Framed-Up Workers

BOSTON, April 7.—Although defense counsel, William G. Thompson, was delving into all points of law before the sentencing of Sacco and Vanzetti tomorrow, the Defense Committee in a published statement frankly announced that "our sole hope now is the public conscience."

The outcome of the various meetings, believers in the innocence of the two Italian workers declare, will result in a huge petition to Gov. Alvan T. Fuller for executive clemency.

"Frisk" Prominent Friends.

Several members of the Defense Committee were subjected to a search for weapons by police before they entered a committee meeting last night. Those "frisked" were a number of men and women prominent in Boston life, and the matter was brought to the attention of Police Commissioner Wilson today.

Death Sentence Saturday.

Unless a legal move is made to interfere, death sentence will be made tomorrow at Dedham court house.

Shock To World Labor.

Denial of a new trial to Sacco and Vanzetti by the Massachusetts supreme court for the second time is a distinct shock to the labor movement. But it has not taken the defense by surprise. William G. Thompson, counsel for the two workers, is preparing a new legal move for their freedom, of which announcement will be made shortly.

The verdict is widely resented, not only in labor circles. Formerly hostile Boston newspapers are supporting the demand for a new trial. The conservative republican Boston Herald, which came out last fall for a second trial, again repeats its views. And the still more conservative Boston Post, reflecting the sentiments of the letters that have been pouring into its subscribers' columns, is also moved to editorially deprecate the verdict of the judges.

I. L. D. Raps Decision.

Commenting on the refusal of the Massachusetts court to grant a new trial to Sacco and Vanzetti, the New York section of the International Labor Defense, which has been taking the most active part in the struggle to free the two workers, said:

"Speaking for thousands of men and women of all shades of opinion,

U. S. EMBASSY SEEKS ALIBIS IN WATTS CASE

El Sol Proves Oil Co's Plotted Kidnaping

MEXICO CITY, April 7.—American embassy officials today were anxiously engaged in "refuting" the exposure in El Sol, organ of the Mexican Federation of Labor yesterday, that the attempted kidnapping of A. E. Watts was an oil company frame-up to cause war between the United States and Mexico.

The embassy officials have started another rumor, as a back-fire to El Sol's charges. They say they have evidence of threats against Watts by another American in Mexico. Their stories, coming after the exposure of Kellogg's machinations by means of the "forged" letters to his underlings in Mexico, tend them to encourage the overthrow of the present Mexican government, and the lame excuses by Kellogg which followed that incident, have prejudiced public opinion here against American official explanations.

To Scare Sinclair.

American oil interests, dissatisfied with the Mexican oil legislation, and, particularly resenting Sinclair's visit to Mexico to work out an agreement with the government decided to kidnap Watts, Sinclair's friend and right hand man in Mexico, El Sol charges.

The kidnapping of Watts, these interests, hoped would incense Sinclair and bring about a change in his own policy and also pave the way to cause a definite break between the United States and Mexico. The labor organ claims.

Chauffeur Got Data.

General Federico Cordoha, it is alleged by El Sol, was selected foc the kidnapping job.

The plotters handling the Mexico City end of the scheme, it is alleged, approached a chauffeur who was a secret agent employed by the Mexican government and asked him to hold himself in readiness foc a confidential job having his money

BIG MINER LOCAL FIRMLY AGAINST SEPARATE PEACE

Asks Officials to Call All Out and Win Strike

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 7. Sharply repudiating the policy of granting agreements to coal operators by union districts instead of over the whole central competitive field, Local Union No. 999, of this city, United Mine Workers' of America, has gone on record for a hundred per cent strike call, including an especial effort to get out the non-union workers.

Big Local.

This local, which has about 800 members, and will undoubtedly set an example to be followed be many others in this completely organized union district, resolved in a well attended meeting:

"That we go on record as opposing separate district agreements and demand of both the district and International officials that they issue a one hundred per cent strike call, as our answer to the attack on our union by the coal operators and further

"That we call upon our International officials to launch a vigorous campaign in the non-union fields and issue a strike declaration to the non-union miners, especially those miners who were formerly members of our union, to lay down their tools and that we promise these men that we will not sign an agreement until they get one."

Peace Talk Futile.

Meanwhile the lockout continues without any immediate probability of a cessation.

The operators are not apparently making any headway with their attempts to operate the Pittsburgh region non-union, and the tentative plans for meetings between Ohio miners' union officials and the Ohio operators' association are not working out.

"Save the Union!"

As the strike continues, and the rank and file miners are allowed a chance to look over the situation, and talk it over with their fellows, it is seen that more and more of them come over to the opinion that the slogans of the progressive "Save the Union" group in the election foc union officials last fall, are correct. This group demanded especially: No wage cut, organize the unorganized, no district agreements.

SOCIALISTS DISREGARD RECEIPTS IN FUR AUDIT

tioned how "foreign to the policies of the A. F. of L." were various acts of the Furriers' Joint Board—their conduct of the strike, their ignoring of A. F. of L. officials like himself. He refused to say that he thot money had been paid to the police by the fur workers, but said there was a large sum of money unaccounted for and they would presume it had gone to the police unless it was proved otherwise.

Mr. Frayne was interrupted by the magistrate just as he was launching forth in an impassioned dissertation on the terrible tactics of the left wing. The speech was declared irrelevant, and was ended abruptly.

Ryan Seldom There

The testimony of Joseph P. Ryan, president of the New York Central Trades and Labor Council, was very brief but revealing. He stated that he had been absent from a large number of the committee's hearings, and had never attended one where any statements were made concerning bribing of the police nor any hearing where members of the Joint Board appeared. He says he does not know Morris Cohen, Sam Resnick, or the former delegates to the Central Trades—Samuel Liebowitz, I. Shapiro, Sam Mencher and Ben Gold.

Acerding to Mr. Frayne's secretary Miss Henriette M. Holden who appeared next on the witness stand, members of the committee were frequently absent from the hearings; but Matthew Woll, was always present, and Hugh Frayne and Edward F. McGrady were usually on hand.

Miss Holden also acknowledged that there were time when she was asked to leave the room during the hearings, and also times when she remained in the room but was asked not to take notes. The proceedings during those periods were entered, presumably by Mr. Woll, from memory.

The hearing adjourned at 3:30 yesterday to be resumed this morning at 10:30. It was announced that Magistrate Corrigan had granted the request of Ben Gold to question both Matthew Woll and Edward F. McGrady for ten minutes each on matters pertinent to the investigation. This questioning will be conducted by attorney for the union, Frank P. Walsh, at the opening of this morning's session.

"You cannot believe anything Mr. Sigman says. He says everyone who disagrees with him is a Communist."

The comment came from the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, pastor of the Community Church in this city, and a member of the Committee of One Hundred for the Defense of the Imprisoned Needle Trades Workers.

Mr. Sigman was made to say by persons who questioned him as to why he had joined this relief committee whose personnel and motives have been so viciously assailed by Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union as part of his attack upon the left wing progressive group in the union.

Referring to the correspondence which passed between Mr. Sigman and Forrest Bailey, director of the American Civil Liberties Union relative to the presence of Civil Liberties members on the Committee of One Hundred, Mr. Holmes said:

"I read the letter Mr. Sigman wrote to the American Civil Liberties Union and I did not believe a word he said. You cannot believe anything Mr. Sigman says. He says every one who disagrees with him is a Communist. He and his union have been brutal and cruel in their treatment of their opponents who disagreed with their policy."

Committee Starts Appeal

The Committee of One Hundred is beginning a nation-wide appeal for funds to relief the families of needle trades workers imprisoned for their strike activities. The Secretary of the committee is Ann Washington Craton; and Robert W. Dunn is Treasurer. The offices of the Committee are at Room 715, 22 East 17th Street, New York.

One Dead, Four Others Narrowly Escape Death In Bronx Excavation

One man was killed and four others narrowly escaped death yesterday when ten tons of earth fell into an apartment house excavation in which they were working in Gerard Avenue, near One Hundred and Sixty-fifth Street, the Bronx.

The dead man is James Canero, who was buried beneath the deluge of earth. His lifeless body was dug out by his fellow workers.

Salvtano Pantina was standing beside Canero when the earth began to fall. He shouted a warning and then fled. He was buried to the waist in the earth, but was only slightly injured. The three other men who were in the excavation fled when Pantina shouted a warning. They were unhurt.

THE 1926 STRIKE—THE SAME OLD GANG

By ROBERT MITCHELL

The delegates of the motormens and switchmens' local refused to vote "as is" for another year. Lavin, the leader of the fighting train drivers, could not be bought or bullidzed into any betrayal of his men. In addition to the delegates of the motormen on the subway, two delegates of the "L" likewise refused to vote "as is" on the ground that their men had instructed them to demand an increase and that the new agreement had first to be submitted back to the workers.

At this point the Connolly steam roller began its attack. The ever ready henchmen, Mangan-LaSalla-Fox combination got into motion. Here was launched the most vile tirade against the motormen.

Hyre, realizing for the first time what was happening, Walsh the delegate of the motive power, electrical operating division, arose to defend the attacked delegates. He first called attention to the fact that the meeting in Hedley's office was illegal. This point was conceded by Connolly himself. But the meeting continued none the less.

The vote was finally taken and as might be expected the fake company union again sold out its men.

Lavin immediately called a meeting of his men to whom the situation was reported. That night in Mosso Hall, Bronx Ave. and 127th St. the motormen voted unanimously to break with the reptile company union and form a real union of their own. The name they chose was the consolidated Railway Workers of Greater New York. Demands of increases in pay were drawn up. A vote was taken to strike July 5th, unless the company conceded to their demands.

Denounce Brotherhood.

A group of men from a company union meeting of the "L" motormen joined the subway motormens' meeting. Each group denounced the face brotherhood for what it was. A committee was appointed to call on Francis Hedley to present the demands of the workers.

In the meantime the Interborough began its old game of double dealing, "negotiating, lying and falsification in order to beat the impending strike. The same old gang is in control of the policies of the Interborough at the present which has misruled this public utility from the beginning. That its methods have not improved with age will become clear as we go on.

Scabs Imported.

Immediately Hedley and his advisors began the usual importation of scabs and strike breakers. Long before the strike was a certainty the Interborough had again resolved to teach the man another lesson.

Several hundred strike breakers came in from Chicago. Other hundreds were imported from Pittsburg, Philadelphia, etc. These flinks began to ride the trains as passengers in order to acquaint themselves with the conditions on the road.

Scab Pen Built.

At the Lenox and 148th St. yard, provisions as for a famine were being stocked up. A field kitchen was installed. Hundreds of cots were set up for the coming siege.

"The management has done all that it did in previous strikes and more," testified Quackenbush. That is going some, as we may well believe from our knowledge of past strikes.

"Diplomacy."

But the Interborough officials did not neglect the field of "diplomacy." As always, the Interborough attempt was to divide the men. First of all a conference was held with the general committee delegates at which the plan was worked out to break the strike. Quackenbush was "among those present." "I do not wish to dictate to your free body", said this arch hypocrite, "but I would suggest—"

Thereupon the plan of breaking the strike was unfolded.

A letter was sent out to every member of the Brotherhood advising the men that the general committee had agreed to support the company.

The letter, signed by Hedley, stated in part: "Our agreement with the Brotherhood made at the insistence of the brotherhood requires us to employ only members of the brotherhood." In the letter he says that very few people would believe him capable of lying to any one in his representations—this completely unprincipled scoundrel!

He speaks of the "solemn promises made to the brotherhood", etc. He pleads with the men on the basis of job good enough to keep for years, that they now continue with the company as loyal Americans.

The man who is not himself a citizen of the United States and whose British prejudices are still so pronounced that he sends his wife to Canada in order that his children may be born on English soil! Can you beat it!

Plot For Split.

Hedley and Quackenbush's second move was to seek to divide the "L" workers from the subway workers. A circular letter was sent to the workers on the Elevated lines.

Previous to this the "L" delegates had been made to agree that they would work to break up the strike. Some of these delegates rode the trains instructing their men not to go out, spreading false rumors that the strike was a "fake" strike in order to increase fares for the company and generally bewildering and deceiving the men.

Lock Their Men Up.

One of the honest "L" delegates and one of two others who were suspected of being sympathetic to the men were locked up by the company and not permitted even to communicate with their homes in the fear that some move would be made on their part to call a meeting and join the strike.

All meetings of the company union already scheduled were suspended!

The purpose of giving these events in detail is that the workers may learn from the actual facts what a company union may be counted on to do in the time of a strike. The methods of the Interborough Brotherhood are the methods of all company unions. They must be understood and exposed before the workers can attain their freedom from them.

SACCO AND VANZETTI TO BE SENTENCED SATURDAY

we register our unqualified protest against the decision in this case. It is therefore needless to carry on any further organization work. The only course open to workers is to fall back on their own organized power."

World-wide Agitation.

A world-wide agitation has been developed in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair and home. With the redoubling of that agitation, the Massachusetts state government will be compelled to forego the danger of persisting in its vindictive efforts to murder two men who are really the personification of the oppressed working class.

Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent! They must not be allowed to die. The working class must rise in its might and demand their release. Rally to the struggle! Use your union power! Do not rest until you have vindicated yourself by saving Sacco and Vanzetti from the "laws of death". The International Labor Defense will put all its energy into this fight, and hopes to get the assistance of the working class.

United Protest.

Deep resentment at the decision of the Massachusetts supreme court in refusing a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti was expressed yesterday by a large number of individuals, of varying political opinions, who are convinced of the innocence of the two Italian radical workers.

Some of the comments follow:

Contrast Harry Thaw Verdict.

LEWIS GANNETT, associate editor, "The Nation":—"Does anyone believe that if Sacco and Vanzetti had the wealth and the social relations of Harry K. Thaw that the verdict would have been the same?"

JOSEPH BROOKS, lawyer, attorney:—The supreme court of Massachusetts in refusing to give a new trial to these two workers, despite the fact that a large number of disinterested lawyers of distinguished reputation have repeatedly declared that Sacco and Vanzetti were unjustly convicted, have merely shown that they are acting true to these traditions.

Murder Two Innocents.

"It is impossible to believe, however, that the workers of the United States will permit these two innocent men to die. The organized strength of the American workers, through huge mass protests, meetings, and continued public agitation must be marshalled to thwart the desires of the master class of this country."

Regrettable Decision.

FORREST BAILEY, of the American Civil Liberties Union, speaking personally, said: "I consider the decision in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti very regrettable."

ENEA SORMENTI, editor of "Il Lavoratore," and now facing deportation to Italy at the behest of Mussolini:—"I am not surprised in the least at the decision of the court. I am only surprised that any thing was expected of these judges, who have never been known to go out of their way to serve the ruling class of this country. The workers of America must now realize that nothing will save these two brilliant martyrs to the cause of workingclass emancipation but direct action in the form of a general stoppage of work. Sacco and Vanzetti must not die!

JOHN HAYNES HOLMES, pastor of the Community Church: "I am concerned in a great tragedy. It is hard to believe that the noble work of the thousands who agitated for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti will be lost. I am confident that Gov. Fuller of Massachusetts will realize that justice has not been done in this case. If this fails, then the force of enlightened public opinion will bring about a re-consideration of the essential facts involved."

LOUIS HYMAN, manager of Joint Board of cloakmakers:—"It is hard to believe that the supreme court of Massachusetts did not recognize the weakness of the case against Sacco and Vanzetti, which is nothing more than a frame-up against these workers by the most reactionary type of employers. This decision can only be considered a miscarriage of justice.

"Nevertheless, the present situation of these victims of class-justice is due to the weakness of the American labor movement. If we had a strong labor movement in this country, the judges of Massachusetts would certainly not dare to render such a decision. There is still time, however, for the workers to raise and save the lives of these two champions of labor."

CARLO TRESCA, Editor of "Il Martello":—"I am not surprised at the decision of the Massachusetts court. It is their business to use of the weapons in their possession to destroy the leaders of the working-class. That verdict is a class verdict. The only occasion for surprise is the fact that the workers of the United States have not yet realized that unless they use direct action of the general strike they will lose these two brilliant martyrs of labor."

Search For Chicago Bandits.

CHICAGO, April 7.—Search was continued today for the bandits who held up a Chicago and Alton train last night and escaped with loot valued at $5,000. The hold-up occurred about twenty miles south of Chicago shortly after the train had left Joliet, the last stop before arriving here.

Seize $75,000 Worth of Booze.

Brandy, champagne, cordials, gin and whisky, to the value of $75,000 was seized in a raid on a tenement house on Mulberry Street here late yesterday afternoon.

Frank Russo, 29, was arrested charged with owning the contraband. Federal authorities conducted the raid.

Four Communists Have Their Lives Saved by The Workers' Protests

KOVNO, Lithuania, April 7.—The International working class records another success of its international nerve solidarity. The Lithuanian government has now abolished the death sentences against the four Communists, Glowacki, Wizas, Schwarzberg, and Adamowski. The first three have been sentenced to imprisonment for life, the latter to 15 years hard labor.

The abolition of the death sentences is only the first step which is brought about by the international protest of the working class. These protests must be continued to free the many political prisoners in Lithuania.

Vajtauer, Communist, Will Be Deported in A Couple of Weeks

Emanuel Vajtauer, former editor of the Czecho-Slovak paper, Obrana, who was recently ordered deported to Czecho-Slovakia for illegal entry to America, has but a couple of weeks yet to remain before sailing. His deportation was fought by the International Labor Defense as a violation of the right of asylum to political refugees. Vajtauer was a Communist, compelled to flee from the Czecho-Slovakian persecutium.

other infamies practiced on the citizens of Passaic.

"These facts attracted the attention of the whole country to the barbarity of the mill-owners and their tools, the city officials. It is time we rid Passaic of its administration of the mill-owners, by the mill-owners and for the mill-owners. What we need in Passaic is a government of the workers who make up the overwhelming majority of its inhabitants.

Need Labor Party.

"We have had too much of 'business mens' administrations in Passaic, yet most of the rival candidates are also business men. Caldwell is a manufacturer whose workers are unorganized. Turnor is the captain of the Detective Bureau and we know the work of that bureau in the last strike. Vanacek is a lawyer and Rubachy is a doctor. It is time that the workers of Passaic were represented by workers who understand and will fight for the workers' interests. What we need in Passaic as we do all thru the country is the unity of all labor forces into one powerful party of all the producers, a Labor Party capable of fighting for the interests of the producers and giving as not a bosses' government or a business man's government but a workers' government."

Soviet Union Protests Peking Embassy Raid

turn to their homes because they are still occupied by the Peking police.

In addition to Li Hsu Chow, well-known northern Nationalist leader, a cousin of General Feng is reported to have been taken in the raid.

Violated Immunity.

The unprecedented violation of Russia's diplomatic rights has stirred even the foreign legation. The Dutch minister has handed a note of protest to the Peking government, declaring that the raids on the Soviet embassy exceeded the rights of the northern government.

Marshal Chang Tso Lin, northern war lord and puppet of the foreign imperialists, has issued a statement attempting to justify the violation of Soviet diplomatic immunity.

Pats Bolsheviks.

"Those arrested will be duly tried," he states. "It must be pointed out that these rebellious elements responsible for the dissemination of Bolshevism have wrought harm to the people and the nation that is unpardonable."

Chang Tso Lin has been making every effort to forestall a revolution in the north. With the help of the imperialist powers, he has been waging a campaign of terror in an effort to retain his hold on the northern provinces. Workers, students, peasants, merchants who have dared to protest against Chang's corrupt and unofficial dictatorship have been promptly executed. A number of labor leaders in Tientsin, port of Peking, were recently murdered by him.

Shanghai Consul Protests.

SHANGHAI, April 7.—Declaring that they would hold the consular body responsible for a raid on the Soviet consulate in Shanghai, William F. Linde, Soviet consul general, protested against the Peking raid when he called on the Norwegian consular general here. The Norwegian consul general is dean of the consular corps in Shanghai.

Mr. Linde, who was former chargé d'affaires in Peking said that the Soviet Club was located in the embassy, which accounted for the discovery of Nationalist flags. The club is decorated with the flags of various nations, he said.

Dangerous Precedent.

He announced the Peking raid as an act of vandalism which if approved by the Peking diplomatic corps, as reported, set a precedent endangering the foundation of diplomatic prerogatives.

War Lord Holds Americans.

Two Americans are reported to be being detained by Chang Tso Lin, Manchurian war lord, because they published articles in magazines sympathetic to the Nationalist cause. They are Mrs. Mildred Mitchell of San Francisco and Willour Burton. Mrs. Mitchell has been editor of the Chungwei News Agency, which was once a Sino-American project and later served as an organ of General Feng.

Nails Standard Oil Lie.

The statement of the American Chamber of Commerce in Shanghai denouncing United States intervention in China was not authorized by the membership of that organization, it was learned by the Nationalist News Agency today.

The executive committee comprising the heads of the Standard Oil Company and the British-American Tobacco Company and a number of banks prepared the petition. A member of the chamber said that the statement was not submitted to the membership. Fear of incurring the criticism of the membership caused the statement to be given to the correspondent on a pledge from the latter not to publish it locally.

Train Imperialist Guns On Hankow.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The guns of twenty-one foreign warships are concentrated on Hankow, consul general Lockhart advised the state department today. The possibility of the Nanking massacre looms close with the concentration of imperialist gunboats at Hankow, where a half-day strike has been declared as protest against foreign intervention.

Rush Troops To Tientsin.

Although the ultimate destination of the 1,560 marines sailing from San Diego will be decided by Admiral C. S. Williams, according to Secretary of Navy Wilbur, it is suspected that they will be directed to Tientsin in anticipation of the Nationalist drive against Peking. The marines left on board the transport Henderson this morning. They will be accompanied by two batteries of artillery, an aviation detachment and a draft of sailors for duty in Asiatic waters.

The American note on the Nanking "outrages" has not yet been presented to the Nationalist government. But it is momentarily expected that it will be.

Koo Resigns Again.

PEKING, April 7.—Dr. Wellington Koo, who was nominal premier and foreign minister of the so-called Peking government, but whose policies were dictated by Chag Tso Lin, Manchurian war lord, has resigned.

New German Budget Is Largest In History

BERLIN, April 7.—The Reichstag passed the heaviest budget in Germany's history yesterday afternoon in spite of the opposition of Communists and socialists.

The new budget calls for an expenditure of more than 8,000,000,000 marks, about one-eighth of which will go for reparations under the Dawes plan. According to Finance Minister Kohler German taxpayers will have to pay 11,000,000,000 marks in the form of federal, state and municipal taxes.

CURRENT EVENTS

Dever succeeded in convincing John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and Victor Olander, that labor was nearer to his skin than his underwear. Thompson was perhaps successful with Oscar Nelson, alderman, lawyer and head of the Flat Janitors' Union. Thompson won, and Fitzpatrick is out in the cold.

OF course Thompson's police will use their clubs on the heads of strikers with as much vigor as did Dever's coppers during the latter's four years in the "white house." State's Attorney Crowe, one of the most bitter enemies of organized labor in this country, is Thompson's "organizer of victory." Crowe's favorite pastime is putting militant workers in jail and turning gangsters loose. Between both thieves labor is sacrificed. But compared to the labor fakers who have sold the workers for pelf, Crowe, Thompson, Dever and their ilk are like unto the lilies of the field. How about starting to agitate for a labor party comrades, fellow workers and ye toilers of the United States in general?

NEW YORK readers who wear long overcoats should keep away from that part of Seventh avenue that shoots straight between 23rd and 24th streets. Yesterday morning an anonymous pedestrian was sending his way to the last mentioned street. While in front of a second hand clothing store he attracted the appraising eye of a fatty barker, known in the business as a sinkman. The appraiser licked his chops and rubbed his hands as if in anticipation of a hot and delectable meal after consuming which he would show the proprietor a policeman's badge. Anyhow that is the kind of a look the enemy of the shabby proletarian wore.

FOR a moment I thot the gentleman with the long overcoat would go by. It was not an aged coat. Perhaps it saw only the tail end of misfortune. Anyhow that is the kind of a coat it looked like. But at a distance it would pass for a cleaned and pressed horse blanket. The barker finally decided that this pedestrian was engaged in the business of deceiving the public, so as a good citizen he intervened by pouncing on the walking globes sack and dragging him into the emporium. He followed rather stiffishly, not knowing when an eagle eye might light on me and take me to task for the trifling transgression. Several assorted garments unbecoming a gentleman obviously on his way to work at the unseemly hour of 11 a. m. (The DAILY WORKER is a morning paper, if this explains anything.)

* * *

NOW let us go on with the story. The barker had his victim safely in hand. The latter was shown various overcoats of various degrees of virtue, many of them said to have once graced the persons of men whose names would make a white collar slave bend a knee. Wild young bloods who pawned garments for the thrill of it? Prince? This long-faster was giving them away. The victim sparred for time. How could he pry himself loose from the human octopus? He looked at every garment presented by his captor and shook his head. Once he saw an opening and was on the point of making a dash for the door when the salesman froze him to the ground with a look which steel glittered in company with that soft look that a devoted sheep bestows on her newborn.

I could see quite plainly that the situation was reaching a crisis and being strongly opposed to intervention unless where my class interests are involved I was on the point of sneaking away when the drama suddenly climaxed. The victim reached into his pocket as the salesman suggested a $17.50 overcoat or right over $75—in front of him. His mouth opened wide but no video than his eyes. But the eyes of the barker did not open. They degenerated into an evil-omened slit, reminding one of Bill Hart of the films when that worthy, playing the role of a prospector, at the end of the picture produced his two guns and washed out a saloon full of seasoned and salted sinners.

* * *

"SO you have no money!" snarled the salesman." I thot so right. Next time you come in here make my time, I'll call a cop and have you arrested for vagrancy. I don't mind to pitch you out on the street. What do you think this place is now? A salvation army barker was agitating himself to the point of violence and might have succeeded if his eye had not taken on my overcoat. Like a mountain cat he darted for me but I was in the middle of the next block before he was on the sidewalk.

POLISH WORKERS DISAPPOINTED IN PILSUDSKI REGIME

Wage Increases Fall Below Rise of Living Costs

BERLIN, (By Mail).—The strike movement in Poland which originated in connection with the May coup d' etat and the boom caused by the British miners' strike has recently again begun to intensify and its character is noticeably changing. During the first period of the movement, unemployment decreased and the situation of the workers seemed to improve as a consequence of an increase in nominal wages and overtime which assumed enormous proportions—12, 14 and 16 hours a day.

This apparent improvement in the situation and the remnants of illusions regarding Pilsudsky made it possible for the Socialist Party as a Labor Party closely connected with the government to take possession of the strike movement in the majority of cases and steer it into reformist channels. The transfer of conflicts to the decision of government arbitration commissions, the mediation of labor inspectors, representatives of the ministry of labor, appeals by the S. P. to the Sejm-deputies—such were the usual tactics of the reformists, tactics which threw a crumb or two to the hungry masses of the Polish working class without demanding those severe sacrifices involved in a strike struggle especially when carried on in conditions of police terror.

Economy Is Unstable.

But the boom came to an end. Unemployment again began to grow, embracing a quarter of a million workers. In the mining industry a big cutting down of labor is to take place. The textile industry is at present undergoing its usual seasonal enlivenment. The general position of Polish national economy is extremely unstable. The question of a foreign loan, the question of eastern markets, the question of the resumption of commercial relations with Germany after the breakdown of negotiations—all these important questions—questions of life and death for Polish national economy still remain unsolved. The unsolved agrarian questions causes unrest in the villages; the borders of Poland (White Russia and the Ukraine—are revolutionary fuel set alight by government repression.

Masses Disappointed.

The policy of Pilsudsky's government soon showed itself to be a policy hostile to the working class. The increase in wages is far from keeping up with the cost of living. The disappointment of the broad masses in the government's policy affected their attitude to the papers. Sensing the spirit the socialists, the real supporters of Pilsudsky's government, were forced in questions of labor policy to take up an opposition attitude. The socialist deputies in the Sejm brought forward opposition proposals of a social character and voted against the budget. The reformist central trades union commission passed a resolution, affirming the hostility of the government policy to the working class and summoning the workers to struggle for the improvement of their economic position.

Bulgarian Student Is Tortured to Death; 5 Get Long Sentences

PLEVNA, Bulgaria, April 7.—In Plevna a trial against five young people took place, who were arrested at the time of the wholesale arrests in Bulgaria. One of the accused was not present at the trial. "He died during the imprisonment on remand," stated the judge. In reality, however, the student Dimitri Toteff died from the tortures in prison.

The workers who were present in the trial, were furious when they heard this news. "Down with the rule of murder!" they exclaimed.

The accused stated that all their "confessions" had been extorted from them with tortures and showed marks of the maltreatment on their bodies.

Although there was no evidence against the accused, apart from the spy reports, they were sentenced to five years hard labor each. Only the two workers, Rassanoff and Pangoff received three and a half years. The names of the accused who were sentenced to five years are Stolko, Sahotieff, Ivan Warbanoff and Georgi Christoff. The accused received their sentences with the singing of the "Internationul."

Government of Colombia Slave Of Imperialism

BOGOTA, Columbia, March (By Mail).—Economically this is one of the most backward countries. Her natural resources are attracting the covetous attention of foreign capital. The British were the first on the field to exploit local possibilities. They were followed by the Americans who began to seize the sources of raw material and to take possession of the Columbian market as a dumping ground for their goods. And at present, foreign capital keeps a tight grip on all of the most important branches of industry and commerce.

The present government of Columbia is whole-heartedly devoted to the interests of foreign capital, and pacificularly to American capital. The Americans, by granting to the Columbian government one loan after another, forced it to give them the best concessions in the mining and coffee districts. Here the American imperialists feel themselves at home. They have their own police, their own legislation and even their own currency. What are the conditions of the workers, who are subject to exploitation of both their own as well as foreign capitalists?

Starvation Existence

There are at present over 500,000 skilled workers in Columbia, and about 1,000,000 agricultural laborers. On the coffee and fruit-growing plantations piece-work prevails. Whole families, men, women and children are engaged on this work, but their joint earnings scarcely afford them more than a semi-starvation existence.

The working day lasts from 9 to 10 hours in industrial enterprises, and from 12 to 14 hours in agricultural. In many parts of the country work goes on under conditions reminiscent of the days of slavery. The workers are deprived of any independence. Their wages are extremely low. Their housing quarters belong to the foreign capitalists or to big local landowners. They are forced to do all their buying in shops belonging to the employers, who dictate the prices. As a result of the system the workers are perpetually in debt to their employers. The slightest attempt to protest is immediately suppressed by special police employed by the bosses, who do not stop at any measures including even murder. In brief, the life of the Columbian worker has much in common with that of workers in colonies.

The Labor Movement.

Up to 1922 the labor movement of the country was under the strong influence of the American Federation of Labor. According to statistics published by the American Federation of Labor in 1922 200,000 Columbian workers were represented at the congress of Central American organizations in 1921. This, of course, is far from the truth, for at this time the membership of the Columbian trade unions did not exceed 70,000. In 1923 a left wing, consisting of anarchists and socialists, formed itself within these trade unions. This wing tried to give a revolutionary orientation to the Columbian trade union movement. At the congress in 1924 at which 30,000 workers were represented, one third of the votes fell to the share of the left wing elements, who afterwards became the Communist Party. At this congress a National Trade Union Centre was formed, imbued with a revolutionary spirit and aspiring to join the R. I. L. U.

Move Declared Illegal.

The congress also adopted a resolution about the necessity of an armed rising. In reply to this the government declared the movement illegal and began to persecute the trade unions. The best leaders of the working class were either thrown into prison or deported.

The reactionary period continued up to the middle of 1926. By this time the trade unions had organised, [illegible] ...

Furuseth Is Red Baiter.

Yet it is doubtful if any remedy will be accomplished by appealing to anyone, without the existence of a strong organization to back up these demands. The seamen, ever since their strike in 1921, have been without an organization which has any recognition. Due to the red baiting and exclusion policy of Andrew Furuseth, president of the Seamen's Union, and his lieutenants, the union has been a weak and anemic institution which the strong and progressive factors expelled and on the grounds, the union has been a body without a head, the remnant of a former strong and militant organization. Having in its heyday a membership of about 100,000, the seamen's union has now barely 20,000, one third of whom are said to be living on the ports of the Atlantic coast and the gulf. Weak and disruptive, this union is in the absolute control of Furuseth and follows his dictates with strict obedience. Furuseth, the autocrat, would sooner destroy this union than to lose control and relinquish his position as president.

Strong Union Needed.

There is only one alternative for the seamen, the cooks, stewards, firemen oilers and watertenders, they must organize themselves. How this is to be done must be thoroly discussed. For the immediate future it is necessary that the I. S. U. A. must be kept alive and be strengthened by having the militants on the outside join it. Once inside the union they can then lead a fight along progressive lines, demand of the leaders that they conduct their policy in line with the rank and file demands, and, failing in this, a fight must be made to replace these old and useless men by a new, active and aggressive element.

The shipowners must be fought with all the energy available. In this respect the seamen's law can be made use of very effectively, the law guarantees certain rights which for immediate times, may give considerable relief and protection. While thus fighting for better wages and conditions, the militants must prepare themselves for a revolutionary struggle, which will culminate in the end of all wage exploitation and will place the means of transportation in the hands of the proletariat.

Race Wars—An Ever Present Danger

The danger of a race war in Chicago produced by the unscrupulous campaign waged by the democrat and republican party politicians preceding the recent election brings forward sharply the constant menace created by the friction between Negroes and whites in America.

The capitalists themselves love the sight of white worker competing with black worker for a job. The poisonous doctrine of the racial inferiority of the Negro with which the white working class has been fed is relied upon to set in motion a whole stream of prejudice which will prevent unity against the common enemy—the capitalist. But prejudiced as many white workers are it is nevertheless true that racial hatred is less deep-seated in the workers than in any other class in modern society.

William Pickens, field secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, out of his wide experience with workers of the black and white races, says:

"Contrary to the popular superstition about the attitude of the 'poor whites' toward the Negro, I find the white working people more open to the claim of unqualified equality for colored working people than are any other classes of American whites. One gets this impression if he speaks in their forums or confers in their other meetings.

"In addition, Negro labor is becoming more and more organized, co-operative and articulate, and is offering greater and greater resources of power to any Negro movement that will include them. And American colored people are still laborers in greater proportion than are the people of the white race. An active concern in the industrial and other economic interests of this people will enlarge the power of any organization."

The ally of the white working class in the struggle against oppression is the Negro working class which is still more oppressed. The most powerful ally of the Negro masses in their struggle for social, economic and political equality is the masses of white workers whose social status differs in degree but not in kind.

The American labor movement could make no greater immediate progress than by abolishing all bars—open and secret—against the Negro workers' entry to the unions. It is the experience in unions where black and white meet on the common ground of unity against the capitalist and his government agencies that it is here the racial lines tend to disappear most rapidly.

"The Unity of Labor is the Hope of the World," and today this includes, as Lenin pointed out, all who are oppressed by the crushing weight of imperialism—workers and farmers, white, brown, black and yellow.

The struggle between black and white workers in America will be replaced by a common struggle against the exploiters of both—the American capitalist class. Unity in labor's most elementary struggles is the first step toward unity in the political struggle.

Criticising America—The Attack on The DAILY WORKER.

The DAILY WORKER editors and business manager are charged with publishing "lewd and lascivious" material in a poem entitled "America" in the magazine section of the March 12 number.

The charges have been preferred by some patriotic societies out the issue of patriotism is not raised in the complaint. The charges specify simply that the publication of the words cited is in violation of a certain section of the penal code—the section under which there have been a number of prosecutions of playwrights, producers and actors.

The method in which the representatives of the patriotic societies have proceeded is thoroly hypocritical and we hope that before the case is over that we will be able to make it clear that action of the complainants constitutes an attack on the right of free press and free speech.

The DAILY WORKER does not attempt to justify the particular phraseology used in the poem. As a matter of fact the poem was published only as a result of the confusion created by having a magazine editor in Chicago while The DAILY WORKER itself is in New York. We consider the phraseology objected to as perhaps the poorest way that could be devised of saying what the writer seemed to want to say.

But we do defend the right to criticize America and its institutions. This is the right that is under attack. We believe that every person in the United States who sees and understands the nation-wide effort now being mad eto muzzle the press, the trade unions, workers' political parties and all organizations expressing the discontent of the masses, will support us in our effort to repel this attack and expose it for what it is—part of the drive of reaction against all individuals and organizations in opposition to the theory that only Wall Street has the right to own and only Wall Street government has the right to rule America.

Another Blow Against Philippine Independence.

Calvin Coolidge, by his veto of an act of the Philippine legislature proposing a plebiscite on the question of the independence of the Islands, clearly reveals the fact that he knows the overwhelming majority of the inhabitants of the Philippines would vote for immediate, absolute and complete independence from the imperialist tentacles of the Wall Street government at Washington. In a long note reeking with sophistry, the president states that such a vote would be unconvincing, that discussion of the question of immediate or proximate independence is untimely and that submitting the question to a vote of the Filipinos, unless such action were requested by the American congress would be disturbing to good relations.

Coolidge, spokesman for the American imperialists with their heavy investments in public utilities, municipal bonds, rubber, sugar and tobacco industries, brazenly throws off the usual mask of democratic hypocrisy and flatly refuses to permit the people of the Philippines even to voice their desires for independence at the polls. He tries, with crude ingenuity, to persuade them that it is for their own good that they are prohibited from expressing their opinions regarding liberation from the thralldom of imperialism.

Nothing else was to be expected from the White House. Not only Is his decision influenced by the investments of American dollars in the Islands, but it consistently carries out the decisive orientation of the imperialist policy of the government in the Pacific. The decision affects China no less than the Philippines. It is the policy of Wall Street to keep enslaved the Philippines in order to have a base for military operations against the national liberation movement in China. In this connection it is also plain that the success of the nationalist movement in China has given new hope to the great masses of oppressed colonials throughout the world and the advisers of the puppet in the White House are aware of its influence upon the Filipinos.

It is to be hoped that a proper reply will be forthcoming from the Filipino legislature. The only answer to the contemptible and despotic document issued from Washington is to hold the plebiscite in spite of and against Wall Street imperialism and to follow up the decision with action that will be convincing to Coolidge and his masters.

The Labor Movement Takes Power In Shanghai—How It Gained Its Strength.

ARTICLE V.
By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

THE city of Shanghai was taken over by the trade unions a day and a half before the Peoples Army entered.

The executive committee of the conference of Peoples Delegates, with the trade unions playing a leading and decisive part, becamo the Provisional government of Shanghai and maintained its authority.

The base of this authority were the armed and disciplined organized workers who forced the Shangtungese allies of the imperialists out of the city and opened the way for the Peoples Army. A Shanghai Inprecor dispatch dated March 22 stated:

"The insurrectionary workers who have driven out the Shangtung troops, are arming themselves speedily by disarming the police and the remnants of the Shangtung troops. The whole of the old and new Chinese town up to the borders of the foreign and French concession is in the hands of the insurrectionaries who are maintaining revolutionary discipline and order."

THESE were the "wild mobs" described by the imperialist press correspondents who a few days before had been lauding the barbarous executions of workers and students to the number of 200 and more by the headsmen of Chang Tsung Chung the Shantungese bandit chieftain.

Another dispatch stated:

"The whole southern district is reminiscent of the first days of the Russian October revolution. The armed workers look like typical Red Guards patroling the streets. This impression is still stronger on the chief tramway depot which served as the mobilization point for the staff of the insurrectionaires. There the workers are not only armed with rifles but with hand grenades and machine guns

At a central meeting today over 30,000 persons took part. The chief appeal of the speakers was to support the insurrection which they declared formed an integral part of the national-revolutionary movement."

THE armed uprising which was the answer of the labor movement to the murderous atrocities of the militarists, and the aid given them by the imperialist forces, was preceded by a strike in which 300,000 workers took part. (There is an estimate total of 500,000 workers in Shanghai).

The Chinese labor movement, in spite of the courage, solidarity and political understanding it has displayed in numberless strikes since 1922 was notoriously weak organizationally.

Previous to May, 1926, it had little centralization—that is, there was the poorest of connection between the central authority and the provincial and city organization. In addition to this, following the strike and massacre of strikers in Shanghai in 1925 many of the outlying unions had practically been destroyed.

How was it possible then for the Shanghai labor movement to show such organization and political ability —to actually become both the leading and driving force in the struggle previous to the capture of Shanghai by the Peoples Army?

WE have already mentioned the tremendous influence of the events in Hankow, Wuhang and Hanyang upon the development of the struggle for liberation. The struggle against the imperialists had become sharper and this had tended to broaden and at the same time solidify the labor movement.

The Third Congress of the All China Federation of Labor and the measures adopted there to strengthen the labor movement also had a tremendous influence on the labor movement when these decisions were applied in practice. The Congress criticised the weaknesses of the trade unions with the greatest sharpness. It worked out plans for establishing better connections between local branches and the central committees and securing common action on the part of separate unions. A common program for the whole movement was adopted and the substance for industrial federation worked out.

THE Congress also dealt with the alliance between the working class and the peasantry and went on record for the building of a powerful federation of all labor organizations of the Far East.

Finally there was the strike movement which developed in Shanghai in the early part of 1926. There was strike after strike as follows:

Month	No. of Strikes	No. of Strikers
January	7	8.000
February	8	4.376
March	11	10.374
April	11	6.150
May	20	12.854
June	28	57.030
July	24	27.662
August	11	29.127
September	18	34.237
October	10	14.308
Total	161	201.189

It was in a movement of the character statistically sketched above that the Shanghai workers, under the increasing pressure of imperialism and militarism, and with the example of the struggles of their comrades in central China before their eyes, developed the courage, skill, knowledge of organizational methods and the revolutionary discipline which enabled them, in spite of the mass terror, to organize their enemies and establish in place of their rule the authority of the Conference of Peoples Delegates.

PARENTS' CONFERENCE OF CHILDREN'S CAMP FOR YOUNG PIONEERS PROPOSE THIS SUMMER

Children of New York workers will have an opportunity to enjoy vacations next summer at their own cooperative camp. This was determined at the "Parents' Conference" held yesterday afternoon at the headquarters of the Young Pioneer Camp, 108 E. 14th St.

During the past three summers between 50 and 75 children spent periods ranging from one to three weeks at Camp Nitgedeiget, the summer playground maintained by the United Workers' Co-operative, composed of active radical trade unionists.

Separate Children's Camp.

If the plans of the present conference materialize, a separate children's camp, probably located near Nitgedeiget will be built during the next few months. Whereas the private profit-making camps for children charge between $300 and $.50 for a season of 9 weeks, the proposed camp for workers' children expects to operate on a basis of $8-$10 a week, no single child, however, being permitted to remain longer than three weeks.

Martin Gottfried is director of the proposed camp, and David Lyons is secretary. Those desiring details about the plan of the new venture are invited to write to the Young Pioneer Camp, 108 E. 14th St.

Reiss, Active Party Member On Way Thru New York to Moscow

(By L. P. RINDAL)
(Worker Correspondent).

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—Paul C. Reiss, local all around Communist organizer, and representative in Southern California for The DAILY WORKER, will leave for New York on April 17th—then to Moscow, Russia.

In May, 1921, Comrade Reiss was appointed District Organizer of California for the Communist Party (C. P.). Worked in that capacity up till November, 1922. Resigned said office on account of sickness. From the spring of 1922 to the summer of 1924 he was manager of "Labor Unity," a San Francisco labor newspaper. In the latter part of 1924 he went into the Labor Party campaign and other working class activities in Los Angeles. This same year he was sent on an organization trip in the Northwest. During the city election, 1925, he was manager of the campaign at which Comrade Emanuel Levine, running for the Board of Education, got over 26,500 votes. The following winter 1925-26, his activities was mainly restricted to C. E. C. work. From January, 1926, up to the present time, Comrade Reiss has been the local representative of the DAILY WORKER, the only Communist daily in the English language in the world. He established a Workers' Book Shop and Library, a Daily Worker Club and a Workers Correspondent Class, all in Los Angeles, Calif.

Breaking Chains Plays Passaic This Evening

PASSAIC, N. J., April 7.—Love, romance, hate, revolution—all are vividly portrayed in the sensational seven reel Russian film "Breaking the Chains" which will be shown in this city Friday night, at Kanter's Auditorium, 259 Monroe Street.

"Breaking Chains" is a dynamic and forceful tale of the early days of the Russian Revolution. It is a film comparing in technique and sustained interest even with the "Volga Boatman" and the "Cruiser Prinze Potemkin," the first of which was shown to capacity crowds in this city last summer.

The picture is being presented under the auspices of the International Workers Aid, as a benefit for the textile strike prisoners and their families.

The showing will begin at five o'clock and will be continuous to eleven o'clock.

DRAMA

Spanish Lullaby

"The Cradle Song" at Civic Repertory Theatre, Goes Off to a Quiet Corner

Reviewed by HARBOR ALLEN.

Only a backward, priest-ridden country like Spain could have produced in this day and age a play like "The Cradle Song." And then only the most backward portions of Spain. Red Barcelona, industrial nub of the peninsula, would have a different story to tell.

Here are all the trappings of a medieval idyll. A nunnery, pious women, an air of peace and resignation, a humor a cranky slater, for vivacity a mischievous novice. For a modern touch there is a heretical doctor: be at ease, a gentle one. Prayers, canaries, afternoon sunshine on cloister walls, a playful hint of Freud. Above all, the "fear of God."

Sentiment and Piety.

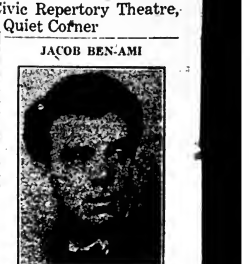
Into this retreat comes a child, the daughter of a woman of the streets. The nuns bring her up, spending their pent-up mother love on her. Eighteen years later, a pretty, happy girl, she goes off with her lover. They bless her and weep over her and feel a genuine loss when she is gone.

This material the Martinez Sierra brothers have handled with real feeling. The nuns are human, simple, naive; they talk the language of living women., A warm flood of sentiment and piety flows over you. At times you are moved. Generally you are only drugged.

Opiate For Middle Class.

Maybe that's why "The Cradle Song" has become the Civic Repertory Theatre's most popular play. It's a great opiate for the middle class. People like to go to the theatre to be charmed, amused, touched—a little—not too hard—will get their money's worth from this Spanish lullaby. Then can go home adoring it. They can go home feeling that the world and which will open in October. Tyler has two other plays for Hunter Pat hoe Lord will be the star of another production in their all-opening on October. This will be followed by a new play with Helen Gahagan in the leading role.

"Eaton Walks Out" is Grace Livingston Furnace's will be produced by Mary Forrest April 18 at Parsed's Theatre, Hartford. The play comes to Broadway later in the month.



Kathleen Kirkwood, director of the Triangle Club, on Seventh Avenue and Eleventh Street, announces a fourth subscription bill to open next Tuesday night. The bill of one-act plays includes "Dutfolk" a Thomas Burke "Limehouse" story, dramatized by Y. Herbert; "The Silver Fruit" and "The Verdict," by Daniel Henn, "Oh," by Hensky Winfield; "The Dance of Death," translated by Jean Wohl, and "The Judge," a war playlet by Zuare Hamidi.

"Enchantment," a fantasy by the English playwright, J. Jefferson Farjeon, will be presented here April 25, by a new producing group. The American Theatre Society, which is composed of over 1,000 subscribers,

"Queen Hazle," at the Ambassador Theatre, will celebrate its 250th performance tomorrow.

Batiuna Nemerony, recently in "Betsy" will be in the cast of "Tangles," the musical version of "The Importance of Being Earnest."

"Fiesta," the new Michael Gold play did not open Wednesday as planned. Following the dress rehearsal on Tuesday, the New Playwrights Theatre announced that several changes in the cast would take place, and the play opened some time next week.

JACOB BEN-AMI

Now playing in "The Idiot," Dostoyevsky's psychological drama at the Irving Place Theatre.

"The Sea-Woman's Chalk" and "The Trumpet Shall Sound." The cast includes Helen Tobum, who made such a personal triumph in "The Trumpet Shall Sound," Stella Adler, daughter of Jacob Adler, Frank Burk, and Grover Burgess.

George C. Tyler, before sailing for Europe this week gave out his plans for next season. The first of these will be the re-written and re-named Tarkington-Wilson comedy, "The Man from Home" which will be presented in Chicago in September with Elliott Nugent in the leading role. The second will be "Behold this Dreamer," a dramatization of Fulton Oursler's novel of the same title, in which Glenn Hunter will be starred and which will open in October. Tyler has two other plays for Hunter Patchoe Lord will be the star of another production in their all-opening on October. This will be followed by a new play with Helen Gahagan in the leading role.

DISTANT NON-GARMENT WORKER SENT COPY OF SIGMAN'S MASTERPIECE; MAKES HOT ANSWER

Within the past few days, The DAILY WORKER staff and its friends have been receiving numerous copies of a pamphlet called "The End of the Communist Adventure in the Garment Unions."

This seems to have been issued, for free distribution, by the right wing officials of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union for propaganda purposes.

Awful Yarn.

It contains an amazing amount of misinformation about the struggle between the reactionary and progressive forces in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; but it does not fool the workers—even when they live at a distance from the center of action here in New York.

From one of our readers in Taunton, Mass., comes a letter saying "That you might like to know the kind Sigman is reaching this far with his lying pamphlet; so I am enclosing a copy of my reply to him."

Which End?

His letter says:

"Morris Sigman:

Sir:

Have just received from the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union a copy of pamphlet 'The End of the Communist Adventure in the Garment Unions.'

Frankly now Sigman, just as one good proletarian to another isn't the wish rather father to the thought suggested by that title? Or perhaps you mean the initial 'end.' At any rate my position is better expressed by The DAILY WORKER if I must you subscribe) than in any words of mine.

Unfortunately there is no garment industry located here among whose workers I could, and would, undermine your position; but will do my worst for you among other unionists. Even had I never come in contact with trade unionism, or Communism, the editorial support of your and Green's policies by boss-loving, bourgeois sheets like the Boston Transcript, and your badly concealed hatred and terror of Communism would make me suspicious of all your kind of leaders.

Support for you fakers from such quarters but makes our work easier. So I will support you in the same way the old hempen strand renders support at a hanging.

I believe you at least have the advantage of Bill Green and Co. in enough Marxism and comprehension of world history to appreciate that we really are coming on a world scale and to realize something of what it will mean to fakerdom when we arrive.

Where will be your 'International concession' in which to hide? H. t. Fillmore."

More Than One Way to Skin a Creditor, Say Wall Street Experts

Wall Street has more than one way of skinning Europe. Not satisfied with taking over financial control of industry and bolstering tottering states at 7 and 8 per cent, the Street now counts a tidy profit of $250,000,000 in the last few years by the rise in foreign bond prices.

The shaky government comes begging. Messrs. J. P. Morgan, Kuhn, Loeb et al. for a few millions. "Sure," they reply. "There's a few lousy millions. It's not ours, anyway, but comes from the boobs out in the sticks. You can have it for a mere 6 per cent, in one condition, though. You pay us a rakeoff of 1 to 10 per cent on the total loan."

For example, a $10,000,000 loan is floated at 94. The borrower gets $9,400,000 but pays 8 per cent on $10,000,000. Later the bonds go up to 100 or more, representing clear profit for American bond buyers.

OPEN SHOPPERS TELL EACH OTHER ABOUT SUCCESSES AND FAILURES OF UNIONISM

By ROBERT DUNN.

Reports for the last month reaching the American Plan-Open Shop Conference from industrial associations in all parts of the country indicate the current ups and downs of the open shop movement. The condensed labor report issued by the association secretary from Salt Lake City headquarters contains the following items of news of interest to union labor:

Erie, Pa., open shoppers are operating a trade school for building trades apprentices, "general contractors cooperating; only fairly; sub-contractors not even so good . . . Public officials delightfully neutral; citizens generally apathetic. Contractors are working here, but under cover."

The secretary of the militant antiunion Employers' Association of Indianapolis reports: "Foundries still holding out against molders' union, which is demanding increased wages. Union has not yet dared to call strike . . . Unions trying to organize garage mechanics. This will be found to be the case in all large centers. Look out for it . . . Metal trades on Indianapolis 'pay roll' union; foundries 75% open. About 4000 unionists in a population of 360,000."

Salt Lake city sees "Brick layers demanding five day week. Strike appears imminent. Attempt made to organize machinists and garage mechanics . . . Public officials frightened by union bogaboo. Other interests favor open shop."

Other brief reports come from open shop industrial associations in Alliance, Beaumont, Chicago, Duluth, East St. Louis, Flint, Los Angeles, Omaha, Richmond, San Jose, Seattle, Stockton, Shreveport and San Francisco. In the last mentioned city the report says the recent defeat of carpenters' union "has given impetus to the open shop movement in this city."

The editor of these reports says they give a "true picture of labor conditions." He urges industrial executives to send in their stories regularly each month.

U. S. Loan of Millions To Finance Pilsudski Tyranny Almost Ready

WARSAW, April 7.—Negotiations for an American loan of $60,000,000 to Poland are nearing completion and the signature of the loan agreement is expected within a few days if a compromise can be reached on the extent and character of control over the Polish State Bank, which the American creditors are asking.

A rival offer of a loan from British financiers has been rejected.

The American loan will be floated by Blair and Company, the Chase National Bank and The Bankers Trust Company.

Dress Bosses Claim To Be "Impartial" In Injunction Hearing

Although the Association of Dress Manufacturers, Inc., has repeatedly declared that it would only recognize representatives of the reactionary right wing in dealing with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union its attorneys protested in the supreme court yesterday that the association was "not taking sides" in the present internal warfare within the union.

These protestations of impartiality were made in the attempt of the association to obtain a permanent injunction against the Joint Board which would prohibit picketing of shops called on strike by the Joint Board because of refusal of employers to recognize it. Business agents as official representatives of the union. A hearing was held on Wednesday morning before Supreme Court Justice Tierney, who asked both sides to present briefs and reserved decision.

Announcements of Meetings.

All furriers have been summoned to a "monster mass meeting" which will take place at Cooper Union and other halls on Thursday, right after work. Louis P. Walsh, chief lawyer of the Joint Board, and an eminent attorney, will speak at the meeting.

Meeting Tomorrow Night.

The progressive Italian workers have called a meeting to be held at 30 East 22nd street on Friday evening, right after work. The "Action Committee" which is looking after the interests of the Italian workers in the present situation, will give a report. Speakers will be A. Ragnuli, Ingeneer Cow and S. Amico.

U. S. Millionaires Give Private Navy For War On China

WASHINGTON, April 7. The United States tonight appealed to private ship owners to transport more troops to China if necessary and to evacuate Americans, it was learned.

This was made necessary by the fact that the government lacks quick means of transporting marines now being mobilized in San Diego.

The appeal was virtually a call to active service for such ships as are selected from the merchant marine, which is a naval reserve.

The Admiral Oriental and the Pacific mail steamship lines which operate from Pacific coast ports to the Orient and so have ships available in the Far East were the first appealed to. Stanley Dollar, president of the two lines, immediately offered to place 10 of the modern "president" class of ships at the disposal of the government.

Finnish Worker to Be Deported From The United States

DETROIT, Mich., April 7.—Kokko, a Finnish organizer of the Labor Sports Union at Detroit, Mich., has been arrested and charged with illegal entry from Canada. He is under bond and held for deportation. International Labor Defense is defending the case.

Protest Against White Terror In Hungary at Meet

The protest against the reign of terror practiced against the workers of Hungary by the white guard government of Horthy-Bethlen and Co., a mass meeting will be held this Saturday evening, April 9, at eight o'clock, at the Labor Temple, 243 E. Eighty-fourth street, under the auspices of the Hungarian Propaganda Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party.

Among the speakers that will address this very important meeting will be Robert W. Dunn, of the American Civil Liberties Union; Enea Normenti, editor of the Italian newspaper, The Il Lavoratore; John Kiss; Louis Serly and Vassily.

The Anti-Fascist League of North America, the International Labor Defense, the Socialist Labor Party and the Industrial Workers of the World have been invited to the meeting.

MEILIFF AND ANTONOFSKY CASES SHOW CRISIS IN RIGHTS ATTACK; BUY DOLLAR CERTIFICATES

Oscar Meiliff is the latest victim of the persecution in which Beckerman, McGrady, the bosses, Sigman, Schachtman and Rosalsky have joined.

His case, and that of Antonofsky show their determination to smash the militant needle trades unions at all costs. The present struggle is reaching a crisis. The rights are fighting more desperately as they feel their approaching defeat.

The Joint Defense and Relief Committee for cloakmakers and furriers is making a drive for a one hundred thousand dollar fund to relieve the tremendous burden of defense and relief from the Joint Boards.

It is the duty of every worker to help the defense in this great effort. At the present time one dollar certificates are being mailed out additionally.

It is the duty of every worker who is in sympathy with this great cause to send one dollar to the committee at once. The need is great.

Big Membership Meeting Launches Ruthenberg Drive

Workers Party Begins New York Recruiting

The Ruthenberg recruiting drive of the Workers (Communist) Party began with a bang at the general membership meeting held last night at the Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East Fourth Street.

The meeting was opened by Bert Wolfe, as chairman. In his opening remarks he stated that it is a long time since a general membership meeting was held.

Stood In Silence.

"Since the last membership meeting in New York," said Wolfe, "we have lost Comrade Ruthenberg." The meeting then stood in silence for one minute to pay tribute to the memory and work of Comrade Ruthenberg.

Continuing Wolfe declared that the meeting was not called alone to honor Comrade Ruthenberg, but to consider ways and means of continuing work for which he gave his entire life.

"Tonight we open the Ruthenberg drive and we hope, as a result of this campaign to make up, partially at least, for the loss we have sustained in the death of Comrade Ruthenberg.

"The drive will continue until July 9th, which is the birthday of Comrade Ruthenberg. We expect by that time that the party will display more activity than at any time in its history."

Widespread Campaign.

William W. Weinstone, general secretary of the New York district organization of the Workers (Communist) Party, in reporting for the District Executive Committee, outlined the plans for the three months' campaign.

As outlined it will have three phases.

One.—The building of the party; a concentrated membership drive based on various party campaigns.

Two—Activization of the party membership; more activity in the unions, mass functioning and activity on the part of every member in party work.

Three.—The raising of the ideological level of the party, with Ruthenberg as the symbol of the militant section of the working class. The understanding of the rule of the party as the leader of all oppressed classes and the ally of the colonial peoples.

Weinstone spoke of fresh attacks against the Soviet Union and the threat of another world war. There are warships and armed forces of imperialist powers in China, but there will be no official war. The same procedure is in vogue in China that was used in Russia in 1918-20, which was war without official declarations.

Bert Miller, business manager of The DAILY WORKER, was the third speaker, and emphasized the role of the paper as a means of carrying out the campaigns launched by the party and making successful the Ruthenberg drive for membership and ideological leadership of the working class.

Attack Sinclair Man To Ruin Mexico

MEXICO CITY, April 7.—A plot by American oil interests to kidnap A. E. Watts, rich president of the Sinclair Oil Corporation, has led to the arrest of General Frederico Cordoba and four other Mexicans.

The local newspapers state that an attempt was made to force Watts into an automobile in front of the Regis Hotel in the heart of the city, but that this attempt was foiled by the police.

General Cordoba formerly commanded the Sinclair Oil Company guards at Tampico. His name was mentioned in connection with the Jenkins kidnapping episode of several years ago.

A Well Street Trick.

The plot to kidnap Watts, was hatched in Wall Street, New York, according to El Sol, the Mexican Federation of Labor organ, which asserts today that police investigations prove that American petroleum interests had thus hoped to embroil the United States and Mexico.

El Sol claims to have some proofs of its charges with names of the American petroleum plotters in the hands of the Mexican police.

The Movies--They Don't Satisfy

Part 1.—Their Uniformity and Their Tricks.

By IVAN KULIK.

The American films impress one with their uniformity. And this in spite of their incredible technical possibilities. The American moving picture concerns have built large cities, such as the largest cinema city, Hollywood, near Los Angeles, specially for the production of their films. Everything is there—mountains, rivers, railroads, steamships, an entire air fleet. If a steamer has to be drowned or burned, they will sink or set fire to a real steamer. Not millions but billions are spent on the cinema industry. But it pays and brings profits. And what profits!

Don't Use Them.

But they are not to be envied. The American films do not know how to avail themselves properly of all these advantages. Maybe the market does not ask for an appropriate (from our point of view) utilisation of all these facilities. We repeat, the American films impress one by their uniformity. And here is the proof.

The American motion pictures can be divided into three categories: The trick films, the psychological films, and the psychological-trick films.

Poor Ideas.

The last type prevails. Not so long ago the American spectator was satisfied with mere tricks devoid of any psychological portent. Lately a certain change was noticed in the taste of the public. The spectator began to ask for deeper meaning and "ideas." However, psychological films devoid of tricks could not get any foothold. The mixed type prevailed. There are tricks to thrill the nerves and ideas to serve as mental food. True, the ideas are quite poor. All of them cut and dried.

What Kind of Tricks?

Let us consider the tricks in general and the production in particular. This will be quite appropriate because in America the tricks are of greater importance than the production itself. The pursuit of tricks often relegates to the background the fundamental idea, the general character of the production and the play of the various artists. Without tricks the picture seems dull to the American spectator. This is easy to understand. Having worked all day like a beast of burden, having killed all his thoughts by chewing tobacco and gum; dazed by the humming of the factory and the noise of the streets, the spectator calls for a mighty dose of tricks not to tickle but rather to tear and to pull at the nerves. This refers not only to the moving picture theatres. In all parks and entertainment places, in all "Coney Islands," it is understood that the car has to rush down from the top of the tower either into a precipice or into the water, that the turning disc has to throw you over the barrier, that the staircase must break beneath your feet, that the ball has to be aimed not at a wooden target but at the head of a living Negro.

But let us return to the cinema.

Circus Stuff.

We are not going to dwell upon the comic films, not upon the cowboy films which are entirely built upon acrobatic circus "stunts"; we will also omit all "chasing" films, whether they deal with automobiles, trains or steamers. It is not worth while to dwell upon all these, for it is extremely boring day after day to see those films in which the hero jumps with his horse from a high rock into an abyss, and escapes; in which the automobile with the hero, the motor and the wheels gone, nevertheless wins the race; in which only the hero and the heroine remain alive after the wreck of the steamer, in order to get married; or in which the hero safely jumps from under a train that is moving at full speed. The only variation being supplied by the fact that the comic hero gets under the train due to his slow wit, while the tragic hero does it to save his sweetheart or the daughter of a millionaire.

THE QUESTION.

Do You approve America's intervention in China?

THE BLACK,
West Farms and Boston Road.

THE ANSWERS.

I. Shroeuer, 1051 East Tremont avenue, storekeeper: "No. We have our own affairs to take care of and shouldn't interfere with the affairs of a foreign country. The Chinese can rule their country without our assistance."

John Griffiten, 1429 Daly avenue, chauffeur: "We've had enough fighting during the last war. This is China's private fight and it's none of our business to interfere."

William P. Mooney, 994 McLean avenue, taxi driver: "I do like it! It's just the rich men's good doings and the poor men's fight. Why should we send our troops to protect the property of the rich."

—R. Storey, 1553 Saint Lawrence avenue, soldier: "No. The Chinese should govern their own country. We wouldn't like to have any foreign country interfere in our affairs. We must, therefore, keep our hands off China."

Jean Nelson, 1095 East 180th street, student: "No. We have no cause to interfere in Chinese affairs. America for Americans and China for the Chinese."

H. Tepper, 1401 Bryant avenue, fur business: "No. It is a civil war and other countries should not intervene. Under the able leadership of the Kuomintang, China will soon come into its own."

Miniatures

Spook in Fifteenth Street

The house is a charnel-house, from cellar to garret full of the ghastly odor of dead aspirations, of fussy, solemn-looking idleness, outworn routine, and the petty graft of those who do not merit even the tiny pay they get.

The Library is closed until four in the afternoon, closed on Sundays, closed on holidays, closed to the students out of work during the day, closed to the employed on their off days . . . with an ignorant, underpaid girl as solid Ginie to the Perplexed. Important volumes are rotting on the shelves, their leaves uncut

The First Lord of the Circuitish prison offices uncommunicado well past himself, sits entrenched in a sanctum to the rear of the library. He gets his pay for treating lunatics and inquirers to the studied inevitables and prevarications of a pseudo-radical bureaucracy. He comes to work in lordly fashion, at the hour of two in the afternoon

In the evening there is stir and commotion. The softbeth men, the professors of half a dozen inexact sciences, are taking their vandeville turns. Bye and bye, the girls in the class-rooms are getting wise to them and leave them in disgust.

The ghost of an elderly, kindly-faced lady, in a faded silk dress of a bygone fashion, is walking the shady corridors, tremulously shaking her head and softly moaning. She might be one of the Nine Muses, or the embodiment of any real science, for anything the faculty members know about her when they brush past her on their way to the class-rooms. In life, she was known as Carrie Rand.

Economic Notes

By T. LOAF.

WHILE "war days are recalled" as marines depart for China another war phenomenon has appeared in our finance-ridden community; the "war chasers." It will be remembered that this was the name for the stocks of companies that dealt in various war materials and were the direct beneficiaries of the bloody business. The rise in the stock value of the Bethleham Steel Company and other war contractors on the declaration of war is still in the memory of Wall Street speculators who are just yearning for a repetition of that feast.

The recent rise in the value of the Bethlehem stock is a proof that these speculators do expect an enlarged demand for arms and ammunition, mainly for the "operations" of the American marines in China.

The fact that the American investments in China form only a fraction of the British and that the total amount is comparatively small is being used as a camouflage for American "disinterestedness" with regard to China.

According to the estimates of the Commerce Department, American business interests have approximately $70,000,000 invested in China, while approximately the same amount has been put by the same interests in "educating" the Chinese to the blessings of capitalist civilization, by means of missionary and philanthropic enterprises.

But we need only to glance at the names of the American concerns that are "interested" in China and at the amounts invested to see that the investment affair is not as simple as it is presented.

It was the "SOCONY," the Standard Oil Company of New York, whose name became most prominent in the bloody attack of foreign aggressors against China. Then it is the "SOCONY" that has the largest single investment in China that probably equals the total of all the other American business concerns; its one subsidiary corporation, the Standard Transportation Company, has a capital of over $7,000,000; it is not the only subsidiary that is operating in China, not speaking of the fact that also other Standard Oil Companies or their branches such as the Vacuum Oil Company, the Texas Company etc. are doing business there. But the "SOCONY" is doing incomparably more and, to facilitate the marketing of its products that are sold all over China it has invested much capital in warehouses, dockage facilities and so on.

As kerosene and petroleum are the principal commodities that are necessary in peace time and still more in war times, particularly in the case of China where armies because of lack of railroad transportation, must depend much more on motor equipment, the "interest" of "SOCONY" in the happenings and their outcome in China cannot conceivably be small.

Who knows the history of the Standard Oil, abroad as well as home, must know that it will "hold on" * * *

However, it is not only the actual investments but to a great extent also the foreign trade possibilities that engage into the "Chinese Problem" as far as the United States is concerned.

It is not our aim now to point out the necessity of an enlarging foreign trade for the capitalist economy of the United States. We shall speak some other time about the growing productive capacity of the country that causes in relative and real enlarging foreign outlets. As far as China is concerned, the total of American exports amounted in 1926 to $110,250,011 and showed even an increase as compared with 1925.

The great importance attached in this country to the Chinese trade can be seen from the fact of introducing the "China Trade Act" that exempts American trade companies in China from taxes on income earned in China. American "Chambers of Commerce" have been created in several Chinese trade centers, as in Shanghai, Peking, Hangkow, Tientsin and Harbin. In a word, preparations have been made to capture Chinese trade and to install American capital there for good.

So it is the potential trade that primarily is being jeopardized now by the recent developments. As expressed by one capitalist, the significance of the onward sweep of the Nationalist armies is . . . "that foreign markets for all nations will become more competitive and that competition will become more ruinous, that every-where groups that feel that they are being "exploited" will resist the operation of foreign capital in their respective territories. And he ends with the conclusion that the United States "must of necessity be one of the major victims", if such distrust of foreigners (read capitalists) should become prevailing among the peoples "whose territory is developed treat exploited by foreigners."

* * *

That outside of the potential trade also the actual American trade will soon begin to feel the results of the American "friendliness" toward China is more than probable. The American firms will then join the British in lamenting that "business came to a standstill" and will be as eager as they to "liquidate their outstanding contracts". Already the dispatches from Shanghai speak of the fact that . . . "many small foreign firms, chiefly agencies of American manufacturers, will be bound to close their doors . . ." Soon we shall hear more of the difficulties of American traders in China, which will, among others, throw a light on the value of the imperialists' threat of blockading China at a time when Chinese revolutionaries are quite efficiently blockading the capitalist exploiters and oppressors off Chinese territory.

Connecticut Labor Gets a Rough Deal

HARTFORD, Conn. April 7.—Compulsory unemployment insurance was rejected by the Connecticut legislature, without debate. The measure would have made employers take out insurance to compensate their workers during periods of idleness.

Employers are lining up their forces against the shorter work week bill for women sponsored by state labor organizations and the League for Women Voters. The bill to make 48 hours the limit per week in factories and 52 for women in stores is bitterly opposed by employers.

Read The Daily Worker Every Day

Unemployment in Lyons

We look in vain for any news of unemployment in "Progress" and "The News," the papers of Lyons. It is not "news" as present. It was talked about at one time, but as unemployment continues it is no longer interesting. And, besides, why trouble the lucrative, commercial efforts of the Lyons bourgeoisie at their majestic fairs?

Over the town, over the suburbs, the hills, the rivers, the Lyons mists lift their cold veils, covering the hidden misery.

The sound of spades and pickaxes. Fifty men who labor, dig, push wheelbarrows.

These are textile workers, dyers, metal workers, who are employed here at the work.

One of the workers, who seems to handle his shovel with difficulty: "At first," he says, "I could hardly stand it. I thought I would have to give it all up. What do you want, I am a dyer, it is not the same kind of work. My son is a soldier in Morocco. The two others are unemployed. My little girl, who is fourteen, is a textile worker and also unemployed. I am a widower. For three weeks it was out of work. I've got to work here. I've tried to feed the kids. . ."

For a bourgeois can chose his profession and live by it, but when capitalist crises come the workers are homeless, have to take it all in order not to perish. That is bourgeois law.

They make three francs an hour. In some shops they work only five hours. When it rains too much, one works a week in, two don't want us to work and "then don't pay us." "By scarce, hard work they manage to steal several hours a week from us. If we protest the employers are only too glad to discharge the refractory one, on the slightest pretext. This makes for economy."

Textile and metals are particularly hard hit at Lyons and in the suburbs. Thousands of French, Italian, Armenian, colonial and other workers are unemployed.

The mayors of the sections and the unemployment committees make up the lists and every day register more and more names. Men and women come to the soup kitchens, which now, thanks to the united front and the committees, are open to foreigners also.

Outside Lyons, in the chemical plants of Saint-Fons and Genissieux no help whatever is given to the unemployed, to the women or children.

One socialist mayor replied to demands: "The mayor ality is not a milk cow!" (sic)

Step by step our comrades of the unions and the unemployed are forcing aid from the municipality: 3 francs to the totally unemployed, nothing to the partially employed and to foreigners. A totally unemployed worker, with a family of three, receives 105 francs a week. A mere shade of advantage, one over the other, but it shows up the odiousness of refusing aid to the partially employed.

* * *

Still M. Herriot casts a few cents to the unemployed of Lyons. He is taking care of his little popularity and then there are communes in the suburbs where no aid is given the workless.

To a labor delegation, M. Herriot replied a short while ago: "You are right. The exploiters have made huge sums. Logically they ought to pay. But what can we do against the industrialists?"

A naive admission! What can the bourgeois radicals and reformists do against their masters, against their own government?

The Letter-Box

This is a report on the Weepah gold strike as reported by several of the local prospectors returned from there. They all say it is the hunk, the pay streak is about the size of a hat, as usually the case. Much of the news from there came via Tonapah, the Universal staff correspondent there is an eyeditor of the old Appeal to Reason, E. N. Richardson who used the prestige gained thereby to swindle thousands of workers by various stock swindles, such as oil, potash, a fake colony scheme, old prospect holes, after cleaning up here, he went to Tonapah where he is on the job as publicity man for a bunch of promoters of fabulously rich mines?

About 5 or 10 per cent of the money taken in on stock sales is applied to mining, the balance keeps these parasites in luxury as they continue promoting new ones. Without ever taking out a shipment of ore, even if they did take out ore of value the suckers would never hear of it. Look at the picture of Horton, the discoverer. You can see he is no desert rat as he has a bay window like a gambler. The real desert rat is so thin he always carries lumps of ore to keep the wind from blowing him away. He as a rule is a hard worker, knows his business and seldom sells a claim. He usually earns and spends his own money. Some of them really have good claims, but don't sell for stock.

Not one of the would stock n prospect where rich ore had been struck as it would pay its own way down from the Weepah location. As Horton discovered Weepah is selling stock, this fact alone proves it a fake. The writer has punched burros over thousands of miles of this desert country and knows just what he is writing. The miner and prospector belongs along with the rest of the exploited classes.

When he has ore to sell the railroads and the smelter trust get most all of it. For every dollar taken out of the ground probably $5.00 is spent looking for it. Some of us who know where good rich float is to be found will never quit looking for it. But we all say to hell with the tin horn.

Calls for Assistance in Workers' Daily Struggle.

Editor, Daily Worker:—As a member of the organized labor body, I would like to give my views on the issues confronting the labor movement.

Firstly, the slogan ought to be raised: "Honesty in the trade union movement." In the local to which I belong, No. 3 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, there was such grafting, corruption, bribery and betrayal of the members, that the average worker could hardly believe that such a situation could exist. Strange to say, all these fiend guilty were very conservative officials. I have yet to find a real rank and file leader of labor have a finger pointed at him as being crooked.

Secondly, to the Communists, the left wing and the labor movement in general, I say this—Do not rush too much Communism, but get down to the workers every day struggle for existence. Fight to raise the workers' standards of living so that he can have the better things of life. It was for these things that the pioneers of the trade union movement gave their lives.

Thirdly, I say to the progressives, radicals and the left wing; keep up the good work which you have done in Passaic, and are now doing among the dye workers and garment workers. Also I think one industry, the auto industry, ought to be organized by the radicals, because the A. F. of L. has been passing resolutions on the matter, and there is where they stop.

Never mind the Greens and Wolls, the Sigmans and their cohorts, worthy radicals, keep up the fight for unionism! I know it is a hard fight but after all anything worth fighting for is a good thing. Get the children of the working class, mold and shape them industrially and politically, and half the battle for a better labor movement and a better humanity is won.

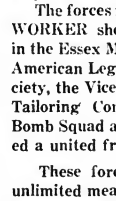
STANDARD OIL! MY STANDARD OIL.

(Commemorating the Bombardment of Nanking)

1.

We will not yield the dollar field, Standard Oil, my Standard Oil.
The rebel blood must be congealed, Standard Oil, my Standard Oil!
The heathen bends at our contr'd,
We own his body, damn his soul,
Now in his breast a gory hole, Standard Oil, my Standard Oil!



2.

Murder them or pumps will rust, Standard Oil, my Standard Oil,
Send heathen foes to blend with dust, Standard Oil, my Standard Oil!
Remember Calvin's noble stand, remember Kellogg's Wall Street hand,
Remember this—our cause is grand, Standard Oil, my Standard Oil!

3.

There is no blush upon your cheek, Standard Oil, my Standard Oil,
The churches meek, our gold they seek, Standard Oil, my Standard Oil!
For oil and god we'll use the rod
Ami stain with blood the Chinese sod,
And gentle Cal will sweetly nod, Standard Oil, my Standard Oil!

Repel the Attack

The forces marshalled against The DAILY WORKER showed themselves quite clearly in the Essex Market Court on Thursday. The American Legion, the American Patriotic Society, the Vice President of the International Tailoring Company, Mr. Jacob Cash, the Bomb Squad and the District Attorney formed a united front against our paper.

These forces are powerful. They have unlimited means at their disposal. They are determined in their efforts to check the work of The DAILY WORKER in its fight against American imperialism. We make no bones about the seriousness of the fight ahead of us.

The Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund will be used to defray the expenses necessary for this fight. Contributions to this fund will come at a much opportune time when they are needed most. We urge all comrades to act at once. No time must be lost. Swell the Sustaining Fund and build up our resources for the coming attack. Become a member of the Sustaining Fund now.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

SEVERAL years after the big flight from the socialist party desert, the wise men of what was left of the organization racked their brains for devices that would bring some of the wandering sheep back into the fold. Professions of loyalty to Americanism in contrast to the unpatriotic attitude of the Communists failed to make an impression on the deserters. They simply would not return no matter how many fatted calves were killed in their honor. The fact was that they found something more to their liking, an organization that was imbued with the missionary spirit they once that permeated the political soul of the socialist party. It was the K. K. K.

NOTING the successful methods employed by the K. K. K. organizers, methods that brought in shekels as well as souls, a socialist lawyer of Dayton, Ohio, conceived the idea that it would not be ethically wrong to follow the methods of the K. K. K. since the end justifies the means. He proposed that socialist organizers be turned loose on the population, work up a snappy sales talk and bring in the applicants subsequent to extracting from each individual who passed the pearly gates a fee not less than ten dollars.

A good percentage of this fee would go to the hustling organizer. The lawyer did not say where a subsidiary organization to manufacture robes, pillow cases, tar and feathers should be established to cater to the needs of the revitalized party. However, the recruits did not come. They paid their fees to the K. K. K. kleagles. The socialist lawyer lost heart and the paper he was writing drew a long curl, rolled its eyes, turned up its toes and started on the long journey.

It is said that the coming of spring is responsible for many budding fancies in youthful breasts but it is only a season of melancholy reflection for the aged. But there are exceptions. One would think that the socialists might be excused if they sloughed the responsibility of freeing the working class from their shoulders and passed their declining years smoking the pipe of peace by the fireside and entertaining their great-grand-children with stories of heroic deeds performed in the dim and distant past. But the socialist party would rather die than admit its impotence.

It is no longer fashionable to appeal to workers to join what is left of the socialist party with the inducement that organization in a class party would strengthen the worker's arm and help him better his conditions in addition to furnishing him with an organization that would fight to emancipate him and his class from the capitalist yoke. This would be offensive to the A. F. of L. bureaucracy and to the employing classes that would be disappointed if they discovered that the socialists had not completely reformed, that they were like a drunkard who only remained sober as long as liquor was unavailable. Then Oscar Wilde and Will Durant came to the rescue.

LET it be distinctly understood that Oscar Wilde's "Ballad of Reading Gaol" is one of the world's literary masterpieces, and Wilde's plays are extremely entertaining. Will Durant's "Story of Philosophy" is popular summer reading but the sex angle connected with Wilde, to what gets the lovers of rare literature. So the socialists of New York now offer a set of Oscar Wilde's complete works and Will Durant's "crime against philosophy as an inducement to voters"—not necessarily workers—to come and hear the message. We suppose Baccarcio's "Decameron" is passe but Frank Harris's "My Life and Loves" is reported to be saucy reading. With the aid of the bookleggers and Frank Harris's autobiography the socialists should be able to capture Tammany Hall.

A New York Times editorial writer succeeded in being exceedingly funny in a recent editorial on "Irish Unity." He rummaged the editorial morgue for hoary burlesque wisecracks on the alleged predelection of the Irish for a desire to commit mutual annihilation. Mr. Oh's bovine scribbler may be forgiven for filling space with this kind of nonsense but SHANGHAI, April 8.—The British Supreme Court here has sentenced three Indians to eighteen months of hard labor and deportation on charges of disseminating propaganda among the British troops.

PARIS, April 8.—The United States Great Britain, France, Japan and Italy will send a joint note to the Nationalist government protesting against the Nanking "outrages", according to the French foreign office. Because the imperialist powers have recognized only the Peking "government", a copy will also be sent to Peking.

Those in touch with the situation believe that Great Britain has definitely aligned the United States in making war on the Chinese Nationalist movement and the Soviet Union.

Soviet Union Cautious.

MOSCOW, April 8.—The Soviet Union government is proceeding with due caution and does not intend to be provoked into precipitate action by the raids on the Soviet legation in Peking, according to statements today by the official press.

Charges are openly made by Pravda, official newspaper, that the raids in Peking were instigated by the British, and similar charges are made by Isvestia, another official newspaper.

Try To Provoke Russia.

"This is a crime that borders on madness, said Isvestia, "a conspiracy that is nothing more than a desperate effort to provoke Russia to take a step that would untie the hands of the foreign powers for open intervention in China, but the Soviet Union has given several examples of having stronger nerves than those who try to provoke panic. It is useless to protest to Chang Tso Lin. This representative of reaction is unable or unready to be held responsible for his own acts. However we announce our protest against those who inspired Chang to this crime.

"Public opinion in the Soviet Union won't forgive this raid. We reserve to ourselves the right to repeat this protest again when we establish the real address to which the protest may be sent. We won't fail for this provocation. When we get the complete

Meiliff Sentenced On Frame-up Which Had No Witnesses

What is branded by dealers of the New York Joint Board of the Furriers' Union as the most brazen frame-up that has yet occurred since the reactionary right wing forces first launched their union-smashing drive, is the arrest and conviction of Oscar Meiliff who yesterday was given a six months sentence in Jefferson Market Court, by Judge Jesse Silverman.

"Threatened".

Meiliff is the fur worker who early this week was arrested by a member of the Industrial Squad on the word of A. Wiener, a right winger, who said he had been "threatened with assault." A technical charge of "attempted assault" was made, but this was changed yesterday to "disorderly conduct."

On this charge, which usually brings a small fine, Meiliff was sentenced to six months altho he has no record of previous arrests. There were no witnesses against Meiliff. Wiener's word was taken in the matter, and this bare frame-up was accepted be the court.

The union will appeal the case immediately and hopes to have Meiliff released very soon on bail.

The salesmen of Liebenstein's shoe store, 877 Prospect Ave., the Bronx, are on strike for the 12-hour day. In the past they worked 15 hours, from nine o'clock in the morning until twelve o'clock at night." They demand their hours to be from ten o'clock in the morning until ten at night.

"We never gave any money to the police, and we never told Matthew Woll, or anyone else, that we gave money to the police.

"Ever since the fifth week of our strike the reactionary leaders of the International Fur Workers' Union and the American Federation of Labor had been plotting to frame up the Joint Board leaders whom the workers elected and support.

Frame-Up To Get Leadership.

"They that if they charged us with graft they could railroad us to jail. This report, with its statements about bribery of the police, was made by Woll, McGrady and the others to injure us and help them to steal the leadership of the union."

This was the testimony of Isadore Shapiro, chairman of the New York Joint Board of the Furriers' Union and head of the Law Committee during last year's strike, who appeared yesterday before Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan in the Criminal Courts building to answer questions concerning the alleged bribery of the police which was charged in the report of the A. F. of L. investigating committee.

Samuel Mencher, chairman of the Strike Picket Committee, another witness, also denied that he had told the investigating committee he was responsible for bribing policemen, and declared:

"They made that all up because they had failed in settling the strike over the heads of the strike committee. If we were bribing the police, why did the police bust up our workers and arrest them by the hun-

French Die-Hards Try To Prosecute Doriot For Aid to Chinese

PARIS, April 8.—Fearing a revolt in Indo-China, French reactionaries are urging the criminal prosecution of Jacques Doriot, Communist member of the Chamber of Deputies.

An attempt will be made to prosecute Doriot before his return from China. It is alleged that Doriot has encouraged a sympathetic revolt in French Indo-China.

Smash the War Plot Hatched by Wall Street Government!

Wall Street government is driving this country to war. It is lying to the American masses. In Washington it denies joint action with other imperialist nations in China.

In China its diplomats, admirals and generals are acting jointly with the enemies of the Chinese liberation movement and the Soviet Union.

Wall Street government is following the classic method of imperialism—it is talking peace and making war.

Its policy is a WAR POLICY.

Its acts speak louder than its words.

The bombardment of Nanking in conjunction with Great Britain, now shown by such cables as that to the New York Nation to have been an act of murderous and unprovoked barbarism, the raids on the Soviet embassies in Peking and Tientsin, plotted and inspired at a joint meeting held in the American headquarters, the besieging of the Soviet consulate in Shanghai by the murderous offscourings of Kolchak's and Semenoff's counter-revolutionary bandit bands acting under allied imperialist auspices, the continual dispatch of American troops to China, the fact that the navy is being placed on a war basis, the joint occupation of Shanghai, Tientsin, Peking, joint action of American and British troops in the Hongkong area, the bloodthirsty tone of the American imperialist press—all this spells but one word—WAR.

Only fools can come to any other conclusion. It is because Wall Street and its government believes that the American masses are fools that it has as yet taken no drastic measures at home to suppress protest against its bloody plan in the Far East.

Let bs be clear as to the issues involved.

American imperialism, jointly with other powers, is making war upon the Chinese workers and peasants who are fighting to free themselves from imperialist oppression, militarism and a semi-feudal system which grind them into the mud. It is ready to make peace with Chinese capitalists but it turns its guns upon the trade union and peasant organizations.

Great Britain has organized the fascist governments of Italy, Poland, Hungary, Rumania, etc., against the Soviet Union. In the Far East another front of imperilism has been set up.

Peking, Shanghai, Tientsin, Hongkong are other cities that are occupied by imperialist troops acting jointly. War fleets of the imperialist powers patrol the Chinese coast and the rivers far into the interior of China.

Kellogg and Coolidge lie when they say there is no joint action with Great Britain and the other powers.

American workers and farmers must either call a halt on the murderous conspiracy hatched in the interest of this band of world robbers or find themselves chained as in 1917 to the gory chariot of the god of war.

Let Wall Street and its war mongers know that they cannot make murderers of the American masses.

Rally to the defense of the workers and peasants of China and the Soviet Union.

Smash the war plot of Wall Street and its government.

Join with the rest of the world's working class in a mighty protest which will make itself heard in the capital of every imperialist nation.

Hands Off China!

Hands Off the Soviet Union!

Withdraw all armed forces from China!

Build the United Front of the working masses against the war front of imperialism's murder bands!

NOTORIOUS SCAB GETS ONE MORE STRIKER JAILED

Rosalsky Sets $15,000 Antonofsky Bail

The same scab who caused the frame-up of Joseph Goretzky, manager of Local 35, yesterday brought about the arrest of Jack Scharf on the charge that he had committed assault and battery during the cloak strike of last summer.

Like all these cases connected with the strike, Scharf was arraigned before the notorious Judge Otto Rosalsky, who held him under $10,000 bail for the grand jury.

Spent The Money.

Evidently the judge was in a spending mood yesterday—that is a mood for spending the workers' money—for he put Louis Antonofsky under $15,000 when he came before the court on the frame-up charge that he had assaulted L. Katz, who made the complaint.

Antonofsky has been in the Tombs for two weeks waiting for a day when it suited Judge Posnisky to hear his case. He is one of the paraded cloak strikers who was put into jail by this judge because Katz, a scab provocateur, Antonofsky has witnesses, including the boss and the workers in his shop, that at the time of the alleged assault he was in the shop. This is verified by his time card.

Still In Jail.

Twice Judge Rosalsky has refused to listen to this testimony, and has sent Antonofsky in jail. Twice the boss and the workers have come to court, and spent their day waiting for the judge to hear them.

Yesterday, when Antonofsky started to tell his story, Judge Rosalsky said he was once more too busy to listen, and put him under heavy bail to await further hearing after his case of alleged assault against Katz is heard.

Ray Epstein and Ben'a Seid were arrested yesterday for picketing, and when arraigned by Jefferson Market Court, were placed under $500 bail each and are to appear for further hearing on April 12th and 13th.

Sardi, Selzman Arraigned.

In the Sixth Bronx District Court, Anthony Sardi and Martin Selzman, two cloakmakers were arraigned on charges of assault made by two brothers William and Louis Lubellsky.

Sardi who was arrested several weeks was held under $1,000 bail; Selzman was placed under $5,000 and $2,500, on separate complaints made by each brother. The case will be heard on April 14th.

FROM SUPREME COURT OF CAPITAL TO SUPREME COURT OF THE MASSES

Appeal for Unity, Solidarity in Fight for Lives of Sacco and Vanzetti

Statement Issued by James P. Cannon, Secretary International Labor Defense

CHICAGO, April 8.—The International Labor Defense, thru its secretary, James P. Cannon, has issued a statement on the Sacco-Vanzetti state supreme court decision, pointing out that no one but a fool would expect other action from the courts of the textile barons of Massachusetts, and appealing from that judgment to the judgment of the masses of the workers. The statement says:

"The black robed judges of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts have pronounced the doom of Sacco and Vanzetti. Evidence of frameup and conspiracy was piled high enough for the whole world to see, but the judges would not look at it. The New England bourbons want the blood of innocent men. This was decided from the first, only fools expected otherwise. Only fools put faith in the courts of the enemy.

"It is all planned and decided. Some day soon the two Italian workers will be taken into the Dedham Courtroom, where they were falsely convicted of murder six years ago by a packed jury, there sentenced by Judge Webster Thayer of the Superior Court to die in the electric chair at Charlestown for the crime of rebellion against the capitalists.

"They will take them from their cells and strap them securely in the chair, they will turn on the switch with the hope by when the deadly electric current burns and sears the warm flesh of the two rebel workmen, there will also be consumed within them the flames the cause they assumed for.

"Yes, they have deceived, and so they hope. But the game is not over, there is another jury yet to be empaneled. There is a higher court than that of the soldier reprobates who decreed the death of Sacco and Vanzetti. The laboring masses of America and the world have faith in Sacco and Vanzetti. It is time now to appeal finally to the masses. It is time for the workers to say their word.

"Such slender legal resources as yet remain must be utilized. This goes without saying, but the real hope for Sacco and Vanzetti must now be placed in the protest movement of the workers. Only the united protest movement of the workers can save Sacco and Vanzetti from the hands of the executioners.

"The defense of Sacco and Vanzetti is an issue of the class struggle. They are not criminals but the symbols and standard bearers of the mil-

MINERS ASSEMBLE FORCES TO STOP LATEST SCABBING

Avesta Coal Company in Open Shop Attempt

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 8.—Progressives in the United Mine Workers of America are now calling upon the rest of the miners in that union to rally their forces immediately and crush union organizers and active unionists into the non-union territory, to offset the attack made on them by the Vesta Coal Co., which has just gone non-union.

Steel Tributary

The Vesta Coal Company supplies the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation with bituminous coal.

Joseph Edwards, general superintendent, in making his announcement, estimated that 5000 would be affected, that number normally employed in the Vesta mines.

Earlier in the day the ominous suspension, the President Terminal Coal Corporation, one of the largest in western Pennsylvania announced it would operate with non-union miners after signing with the union for years.

Demonstrate For Union

AVELLA, Pa., April 8.—Rain and continued threatening weather could not prevent the mass demonstration arranged by the local unions of the U. M. W. of A. to celebrate the establishment of the eight-hour day for the miners, and to unveil a monument to the memory of the five members of the U. M. W. of A. that were tant labor movement. "The fight for Sacco and Vanzetti is the fight of the working class.

"The need of the hour is an organized, united basement of protest and solidarity on a national and international scale. In this movement unity must be the watchword. All partisan aims, all differences of opinion and all controversial questions must be put aside. All forces must be united without delay on the broadest possible basis for the struggle to free Sacco and Vanzetti. Organize the protest movement!

"Unite all forces!

"Free Sacco and Vanzetti!"

* * *

I. L. D. Calls for Conference.

The International Labor Defense in its statement, calling for the immediate organization of a national conference for Sacco and Vanzetti.

"A national conference embracing all workers' organizations and sympathizing bodies and uniting all forces for Sacco and Vanzetti must be organized without delay," says the statement.

"The necessity for this national expression of the workers' unity and protest is so obvious as to need no argument. Opposition to such a mobilization is assistance to the executioners.

Protest Can Stay Execution.

"The International Labor Defense firmly believes that a mighty protest movement of the masses can yet stay the hands of the murderers and bring about the triumphant liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti. All our energies and resources will be devoted to the organization of this movement."

Agitation Must Be Revived.

The national office of the I. L. D. has sent instructions to its local organization in 200 cities throughout the country to revive the agitation for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti on a bigger scale than ever before. The preliminary stages of this work of the I. L. D. leads as laid out by the national official calls for the holding of mass meetings and demonstrations, circulating petitions, distributing leaflets, stickers and posters printed by the national office of the I. L. D. and the sending of letters and telegrams to Governor Alvan T. Fuller at the state house, Boston, demanding the release of the two victimized agitators, alike."

They Must Not Die!

"The whole agitational movement," says the statement, "must lead up to the holding of a gigantic national conference at which the faith and solidarity of the masses in the cause of Sacco and Vanzetti will be dramatized before the whole country.

"SACCO AND VANZETTI ARE INNOCENT AND SHALL NOT DIE!

"This slogan proclaimed long ago by Eugene V. Debs is the slogan of our fight."

BOSTON, April 8.—World-wide appeals calling for the freedom of Nicola Sacco and Bartholomeo Vanzetti, rejected Gov. Alvan T. Fuller today. The executive chamber is being flooded with cablegrams from every corner of the earth.

Cablegrams arrived from the Red Aid, the German organization formed for the defense of class war prisoners and which is affiliated with the International Labor Defense in this country. Wires were also received from 20 members of the British parliament, whose names have as yet been made public.

General Strike in Buenos Aires.

Coincident with the appeals to the governor, word comes of a 24-hour general strike in Buenos Aires as a protest against the action of the Massachusetts courts in refusing to grant a new trial to Sacco and Vanzetti in spite of the overwhelming insistence of their innocence by millions throughout the world, including distinguished lawyers who have been stirred by the flagrant injustice of the case.

Expert Puts Spot Light on Gigantic Insurance Swindle

This Monday The DAILY WORKER, the only national labor daily, and "The Freiheit," Jewish Communist daily, with combined circulation of 75,000 in the metropolitan area, start off with a series of articles exposing the graft and corruption by which the Industrial insurance companies milk life insurance business dominated.

Writer Well Equipped.

Prepared and written by Charles Yale Harrison, intimately associated with insurance activities for a number of years, the articles which will run for 30 days will describe vividly and in a lively style the technique of the huge insurance combines in swindling millions of dollars from workers throughout the country.

Praised by Nation Editor.

Lewis S. Gannett, associate editor of "The Nation," after reading these articles in a preliminary form, declared that "this ought to start me other Armenstrong investigation!"

In 1917, R. P. Armenstrong, the late president of the late American Union Life Insurance Co., said: "Industrial insurance is a swindle of such gigantic magnitude that its literature should be excluded from the mails, its business suppressed and taken over by the state."

Lynchings Doubled in America During Last Year, Church Reports

WASHINGTON, April 8 (FP).—Lynchings nearly doubled in number in the United States in 1926 as compared with 1925, according to a summary made public by the Federal Council of Churches. While there were only 17 lynchings in 1925, there were 30 in 1926. Five states formerly on the "honor roll" of commonwealths in which no lives had been taken by mob violence, were the scene of deliberate mob killings, New Mexico was one of these. It had had no lynching in the previous years.

The churches' statement does not say what the 30 lynchings of the past year did occur, but indicated that they took place in 7 states, chiefly in the south.

Communist Position Towards China Given By Amter at Meeting

CLEVELAND, April 8.—The Chinese Community Association of Cleveland held a banquet to celebrate the capture of Shanghai by the National Revolutionary Party. About 100 persons were present, including Chinese students at Oberlin University.

Among the speakers were Mr. Lewis of the Y. M. C. A., Judge Mills and Captain Kirby. Mr. Lewis explained the demands of the Canton government, and ascribed some of the difficulties encountered to "communist agitators." Judge Mills assured the Chinese present that the American people are in sympathy with the "justified demands of the Chinese people for independence." He warned the Chinese that they must be wary, for the hardest period will come which may be a sending of letters and telegrams to Governor Alvan T. Fuller at the state house, Boston, demanding the release of the two victimized agitators, alike."

Captain Kirby told of his experience with the Chinese beginning with his acquaintance with two Chinese in New York. Very instructive as far as the present Chinese situation is concerned.

China's Friends.

I. Amter, district secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, began his address with the words, "Chinese comrades and American friends."

Amter blasted the so-called interest of Americans in the struggle of the Chinese people for freedom. He assured the Chinese that the workers were Soviet Russia and the Communist International, to whom Sun Yat Sen had sent a letter on his death-bed. In answer to the insinuation that Communists instigate looting, Amter said that the "Communist Party and the Young Communist League of China work hand in hand with the Kuomintang. The industrial workers of the capitalist countries and the oppressed peoples of India, Afghanistan, Java, Egypt and Morocco are friends and supporters of the Chinese revolution. 'Hands off China' must be the slogan emanating from the shores of China.

Wants Realism.

Mr. Mong, secretary of the Chinese Students Club, a Columbia student, begged the assemblage to come down out of the realms of idealism to the plane of reality. "It would be splendid if the American people were all in sympathy with the aspirations of the Chinese people. Unfortunately they are not. Theoretically, even business men are in sympathy, but practically the question is different. 'What is to become of our concessions, settlements, investments,' they ask. That is the hitch to the question." Mr. Mong explained in detail what is going on and what the Chinese revolutionary party intends to do.

The meeting closed with the adoption of a resolution demanding that the American warships and marines be withdrawn from China.

Pole Loan Strikes Snag; U. S. Bankers Want Govt. Control

WARSAW, April 8.—Negotiations for the $40,000,000 American loan struck a snag yesterday when the American representative, M. Monnets insisted on control of state finances, the management of the foreign policies of the Bank of Poland and the appointment of four of sixteen directors of the bank's board.

It is understood that the Polish Government had struck a tentative agreement with the American bankers providing for an American observer who would not be a member of the bank's board but who would act as adviser in all financial transactions.

Later, however, it was learned that the American bankers wanted greater control over Polish finances, and that M. Monnet was not authorized to sign an agreement on those terms.

Missionary Shot In China Drew A Gun, — "Nation"

The American killed at Nanking, J. E. Williams, vice-president of Nanking University, was shot as he drew a revolver on the threatening Chinese soldiers, according to a report cabled to the New York "Nation" from Shanghai. Four other Americans who were with Williams when the shooting occurred were not injured. G. A. Kennedy, an American resident in China and a graduate of the Columbia School of Journalism, is responsible for the statement.

Mr. Kennedy went to Nanking for the purpose of investigating the outrage. His report states that there were over 27,000 soldiers of the Northern army in Nanking when the first Nationalist soldiers entered the city at 3 a. m. on the 24th of March, and that it is impossible therefore to hold the Nationalists responsible for what occurred.

"The attacks on foreigners in the morning and afternoon of that day, resulting in the deaths of one American, two British and one Japanese, and the looting of the consulates of those countries, cannot be conclusively fixed upon the Nationalist soldiers.

"The first of the four foreign deaths, that of J. E. Williams, vice-president of Nanking University, occurred at 3 a. m. on the twenty-fourth. It has been proved that not four other Americans were with Williams at the time the soldiers threatened. Williams drew his revolver and was immediately shot dead. The others were not hurt. The three other foreign deaths occurred in the late afternoon before the bombardment, which was at 4:30 p. m. The Nationalist general entered the city at 5:30.

"The foreign houses burned or looted were all on the route taken by the disciplined demands of the Chinese people for independence." He warned the Chinese that they must be wary, for the hardest period will come which may be a sending of letters and telegrams to Governor Alvan T. Fuller at the state house, Boston, demanding the release of the two victimized agitators, alike."

"The physical effects of the bombardment by the British and American war vessels are comparatively slight. About fifty Chinese houses were wrecked, and one foreign-inhabited house was demolished. The number of Chinese casualties was probably under one hundred. But this is uncertain, as they have not yet been recorded."

Rank and File Miners Against Split Contract

killed in the march on Chicago on June 7.

Over fifteen hundred people gathered in front of the P. and W. Hall, and formed in marching order for the parade to the cemetary.

The parade was headed by the Lithuanian Band and was followed by children from the Avella schools, then came the local miners with the Avella band playing, then the women and friends of the miners, and in addition banners bearing appeals for funds for a general strike of the entire coal industry.

Slogans On Banners.

Other banners read:

"We want no sliding scale because it will always slide down.

"Organize the unorganized miners.

"No separate agreements. Keep the United Mine Workers united.

"We want a general strike of the entire miners for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti and many others."

When the crowd gathered around the monument to the Chicagoville miners, a truck was provided for a speakers' platform, and Fred Sidersi, president of Local Union 2861 U. M. W. of A., and candidate for district president on the ticket to save the Union Ticket" in the recent election, opened the Meeting.

Bloike Partial Agreements.

Sidersi pronounced the purpose of the meeting, among which was that of calling for a general strike of all mine workers, to defeat the bosses' lock-out of the miners of the central field.

David Pinkey, who spoke in the name of the district organization did not meet with success when he told the signing up of small mines on temporary agreements. He was interrupted with cries of "No separate agreements! Keep the mine workers united!"

Participants in the Chicagoville parade, as did also D. E. Farley of Pittsburgh, were the stars of the International Labor Defense, and to call attention to the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

Propose Illinois Conference.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 8.—Harry Hewick, president of District 12, U. M. W. of A., has invited the operators to a conference. President Rice Miller, of the operators' association, has replied that he will meet with the miners' officials only if they are prepared to discuss a reduction in wages.

The southwestern operators' association and the union officials of Kansas, Oklahoma, and other southwestern states have adjourned without an agreement. They are meeting in Kansas City. The conference will continue tomorrow.

dreds? I myself was arrested for no reason at all and was freed upon appeal to a higher court."

Shapiro also pointed out the unprecedented brutalities of the police up to the very end of the strike, and particularly the activities of the industrial squad. He told how workers were attacked by gangsters, and that these hirelings of the bosses were almost never arrested.

Police Attacks Brutal.

"We often heard that the police and the industrial squad could not do a better job if they were on the employers' payroll.

"Our lawyer took the matter up with several police officials whom he knew, and we protested to the General Trades and Labor Council, which sent a delegation to the mayor. But the brutalities went on just the same."

A. F. of L. Hearings Fishy.

Several times at yesterday's hearing it was mentioned as if had been by witnesses the precious day, that Matthew Woll was the only member of the investigating committee who was regularly present; and that on many occasions there was no stenographer present, or she was asked not to take notes.

Walsh Hits Woll.

Frank P. Walsh, attorney for the Joint Board, drew attention to the fact that Woll and Mrdanky had attempted to give the impression that the Joint Board leaders had asked for this withdrawal of the stenographer.

"Assuming that this inquiry is only to get at the facts in this case," said Mr. Walsh, "I believe, in the interests of fairness it should be brought out that it was Mr. Woll and the rest of the committee who asked the stenographer to leave."

At these times the sole recorder of the proceedings was Mr. Woll.

This was the case during Shapiro's appearance before the committee, and he declares that Woll made repeated efforts to force from him statements that he had paid money to members of the police force.

Woll Plays the Stoolpigeon.

"I told him over and over again that we did not pay any money," said Shapiro. "But he would come back to the subject and say, with a wink, 'Now come on, tell me how much you paid captains. Was it $250 a week? How much did you pay the members of the industrial squad?' Come on, tell me. This is just a conference on union affairs between friends. There is no harm in telling me.'

"And I would tell him, 'Mr. Woll, do you think we would be paying the police trial squad to beat up our workers and send them to the hospital? We never paid any money to any policemen or to any official.'"

Shapiro said he and other Joint Board leaders had strenuously objected to Hugh Frayne, the New York organizer, being a member of the committee.

"Mr. Frayne had proved himself disobedient to his orderings with this union and we objected to his being a member of the committee," said Shapiro. "Time and again he had refused himself to do not a representative of labor but a representative of employers. We did not trust him."

"Did you object to Mr. Woll or Mr. Mrdanky?" asked Assistant District Attorney Breslin.

"No, we did not know them then," said Shapiro.

Never Saw Own Testimony.

Questioned as to whether he had ever been shown what was alleged to be his testimony before the investigating committee, Shapiro reported that while Woll had promised that the minutes of the proceedings should be submitted to the members of the Joint Board for correction, they had never seen a copy of them, had never signed their names to them, and knew nothing at all about what they were charged with saying until the stories came out in the newspapers.

Explains Expenditures.

Shapiro was grilled about expenditures he had made during the strike in an effort to discover whether there was any money for which he could not account; but he explained just what had been done with the Law Committee's money and that vouchers for all of it were in the hands of the finance committee.

Asked about one particular receipt which the auditors said they could not find, Shapiro replied:

"Well there were a lot of things those auditors did not want to find."

Gold and Hyman Speak On Crisis in Needle Trades This Sunday

The present situation in the needle trades will be described to the workers of Boro Park tomorrow, by the leaders of the left wing.

Ben Gold and Louis Hyman, the Chairman of the Cloakmakers and Furriers Joint Boards and J. Borushowitz, Manager of Local 2, will be the chief speakers with Sam Lipzin of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers as chairman.

The meeting was arranged by the Boro Park Workers Club to acquaint the workers of this section of the city with the situation which is constantly growing in tensity.

The meeting will be held at Crystal Hall, 4214 14th Avenue, Brooklyn, tomorrow at 1:30 P. M. Admission will be free.

Shapiro Took Money From Speculators For Potato Co-op.

DETROIT, April 8.—The first direct evidence tending to support Henry Ford's charges that Aaron Sapiro tricked American farmers, was given the jury today at the million-dollar Ford-Sapiro libel suit in federal court.

Loans From Merchants.

Under cross-examination, Sapiro admitted he had obtained $4,000 in loans for a baby potato cooperative in Idaho from Wayl and Zuckerman, Los Angeles commission merchants. The notes, securing the loans, were made out to Sapiro but Charles Zuckerman, head of the commission firm, discounted them by signing the cooperative king's name.

Kidding the Farmer.

Reed, defending Ford, charged that this trickery was resorted to in order to prevent the farmers from discovering that the "cooperative" which was advertised to prevent speculation, was being financed by two well known speculators in potatoes.

Discuss Seniority Rule on Railroads

Attacks on the seniority rule of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks before the wage increase arbitration board were answered by the union officers, John A. Welber, New York Central Railroad vice-president, tried to tell the arbitrators that individual wage adjustments upward would have been made before if the seniority rule were inoperative.

Union officers J. A. Robertson and W. J. Winston, chairmen of the road's lines east and west, replied that the brotherhood was always ready to negotiate on individual cases where the company stated to give an employe a higher pay rate for greater efficiency or exceptional ability. Walker had argued that when the company was willing to pay an individual worker more, the seniority rule enforced the same rate for all in his grade, unless a special status were made for him.

Arbitrator William R. Wilson, chosen by the union, stated his belief that the seniority rule had generally increased the efficiency of the rank and file.

Current Events

there are certain alleged radicals who seem to forget that countries long under the yoke of imperialism, countries like China, India, Egypt and races like the Jews and the Negroes, are the victims of a propaganda designed to humiliate them and render them objects of universal scorn.

ENGLAND is a past master in this art. She is working it off on the Chinese just now, as well as on the Hindoos, Sans, English and Negroes, no objection to a United India or a United China if only the Chinese and Hindoos stopped killing each other! Indeed, England is engaged in the altruistic work of protecting the peoples of those countries from each other. In Ireland it was the catholic and protestant religions that prevented the Irish from getting freedom. The fact is that British money and British intrigue is the chief cause of the disunity of those countries which British imperialism holds for purposes of exploitation. She fastened the opium trade on China at the point of a gun, granted Chinese workers at the point of the bayonet and now tries to block the onward march of the Nationalist movement with warships, tanks and purchased Chinese generals.

THE same attitude is being developed here towards the Filipinos and Latin Americans. The idea is being planted in the public mind that those people cannot live together in harmony. The bayonets of American soldiers must be interposed between the perpetually warring factions. It is the old imperialist method under the slogan "Divide and Conquer." Radical workers must be careful not to ape the bourgeois flunkeys from the editorial scribblers to the buffoon comedians on the stage. The bulk of organized world imperialism will find the insulted, belittled, exploited and humiliated subject peoples lined up with the exploited workers and farmers of the so-called free countries against the common enemy, unless our stupidity throws them into the arms of the foe.

Dawes Decides Graft Probe Can Continue Reed Will State Plan

CHICAGO, April 8.—Plans of the Reed Senate Committee investigating campaign fund expenditures were expected to be announced today in Detroit by Senator James A. Reed, following the ruling here yesterday of Vice-President Charles G. Dawes that the committee did not lose its power with the adjournment of the sixty-ninth congress.

CARMENT WORKER PRISONERS WRITE LETTER TO COMMITTEE OF HUNDRED COMMENDING CAMPAIGN

The nine prisoners held at Hart's Island because of their activities in the cloakmakers' strike appealed to the committee of one hundred to "give us a helping hand" in a letter received yesterday by Ann Washington Craton, secretary of the committee.

Thank Committee.

The prisoners had read in the newspapers the attacks made by Morris Hillquit on the International upon the committee and his attempts to raise a defense fund to work for their release, and to give aid to their families. They declare in their joint letter "we are thanking you and wishing you success in this great undertaking which means our freedom."

Their letter is as follows:

New York Penitentiary
Hart's Island, New York.

Sec. of Committee of Hundred,
Civic Club, 18 E. 10 Street, N. Y.

Dear Miss Ann Washington Craton:

We, the undersigned prisoners of the recent garment strikes, at Hart's Island read a statement in the press that a committee of one hundred has been organized for the purpose of freeing the prisoners of the recent cloak and furriers strikes.

We wish and hope that the fair and liberal minded people of this great country will give you a helping hand morally and financially in order that your committee shall be able to carry out the great undertaking for our freedom.

In the names of our beloved wives, children and families whom we are so much in need of, we are thanking you and wishing you success in this great undertaking which means our freedom.

Joint Board Cares For Them.

We are also glad to inform you that the New York Joint Board of the Cloak and Dress Makers' Union at 130 East 25th St., N. Y., under the leadership of Louis Hyman and Joseph Borchowitz, Charles Zimmerman and Julius Portnoy are up to the present time taking care of us in prison and our families at home financially.

We will also appreciate a representative of your committee to call on us, or communicate, if any information is required.

Yours for our freedom, and hoping to hear some good news from your committee, Sincerely yours,

ANGLO-AMERICAN BANKS DRAW TRIBUTE FROM EVERY PART OF EARTH WHICH CAPITAL RULES

Those figures have no parallel in the history of any other country. The huge reserves of $25 billions in deposits easily crowd out competition from any and all other capitalist nations. Look at the first 10 banks:

1.	Midland, London	$1,785,000,000
2.	Lloyds, London	1,684,000,000
3.	Barclays, London	1,608,000,000
4.	Westminster, London	1,388,000,000
5.	National Provincial London	1,261,000,000
6.	National City New York	1,082,000,000
7.	Federal Reserve New York	924,000,000
8.	Chase National New York	852,000,000
9.	Bank of England London	625,000,000
10.	Bank of Montreal Montreal	536,000,000

The English banks rank first because they constitute the Big Five, with control over practically the entire banking structure of England. But the combined deposits of the 150 largest Anglo-American banks are split nearly 50-50 between the British and the United States, with $17,900,000,000 in 91 U. S. banks and $17,885,000,000 in 59 British Empire institutions.

The Farading Empire is represented in the 10th bank in size, the Bank of Montreal, Canada; the 12th, the Royal Bank of Canada of Montreal; the 15th, the Commercial Bank of Australia in Sydney; the 18th, the Canadian Bank of Commerce in Toronto; the 21st, the Imperial Bank of India in Calcutta and on down the empire banks with deposits of more than $200,000,000 are to be found in Hongkong, Manchester, Edinburgh and Halifax.

The only force which could ever overthrow such a colossus is that of the exploited peoples of the world. Already the workers of half of Europe and Asia, as represented in the Soviet Union and China have thrown off the possibilities of bondage to London and New York. Judge Considers Painter Bosses Injunction Plea

Supreme Court Justice Stephen Callaghan in Brooklyn yesterday reserved decision on the application of a group of boss painters for a temporary injunction to restrain the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, District Council 21, "from calling a strike, or from continuing a strike, if there is one."

About 4,500 painters went on strike last Monday morning for a wage rate of $14 a day. About 2,500 have already won their demends from the bosses.

Left Wing Workers To Make Merry at Big Ball Tonight

The attack of the right wing bureaucracy upon the needle trades union is producing quick results. The workers are learning that in nnity there is strength and the movement toward amalgamation is gaining new strength.

To-night, the Capmakers, Furriers, Cloakmakers, Dressmakers, Millinery Workers, Food Workers, Building Trades Workers and Office Workers will dance at the great Amalgamation Ball which is being held at the Star Casino.

All of the young, vigorous, determined left wing will be there which means that Schachtman, Sigman and Woll will give the place a wide berth. In itself this will be an event that will be long remembered by all those who participate.

This ball has been arranged under the auspices of the Trade Union Educational Leagues for the benefit of the defense and relief of the imprisoned Cloakmakers and Furriers.

Admission will be 50 cents for tickets in advance, on sale at the Joint Boards and all local unions.

Father Who Killed Doctor to Die

Raving like a mad man, Francesco Caruso, 36, who must die in the electric chair at Sing Sing for the murder of Dr. Cesper Pendola, raced his cell in murderers' row in Raymond Street jail, Brooklyn, yesterday and cried for his 6-yearlold son, Joseph.

It was because of the death of this boy that Caruso choked and stabbed Dr. Pendola to death February 13, last. The physician had been attending the boy, ill with diphtheria, and in an effort to save his life had administered antitoxin. The boy died and Caruso accused Pendola of having killed him with the injection.

DEMAND GROWS THAT KELLOGG LEAVE THE GOV'T

Mexican Scandal Breaks Over Administration

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Secretary of State Kellogg and his underlings in the State Department are stunned by revelations relating to the intrigue of this government in Mexico. It is now clear that the Calles government in Mexico is familiar with some of the secret documents relating to preparations for military invasion of this country in Mexico.

Just how the documents came into Calles' possession is a mystery, but when the record of the Harding-Coolidge regime is recalled it is not at all surprising. From the day it came into power in 1921 its record has been one long sordid story of graft and corruption. Doherty, Denby, Fall, young Roosevalt and the other luminaries of the early days of "revelry," have been replaced by those who have learned caution from their predecessors' experience, but no one here doubts that the same old game is being played. It is not unlikely that some of the oil interests in Mexico revealed the military plans and secrets of this country toward Mexico, with which they are familiar, in order to terrorize the Calles government into ignoring its own land laws.

Now that the conspiracies of the state department are known to the Mexican government, Kellogg and his staff are trying to evade the just denunciation that is their due by charging that some of the more damning documents that reveal the imperialist policy of the United States are forgeries.

It appears, from the information at hand, that the state department is hard put to get out of the fix they find themselves in because Calles, instead of yielding to their bluff, called it and exposed them.

A number of congressmen and senators still here, when they speak of the matter at all, express the opinion that there is nothing further for Kellogg to do but resign before the storm breaks over his head.

4,000 Flay U. S. War—"Hands Off China"—Slogan

Indignation at the imperialistic massacre of innocent Chinese civilians at Nanking, and demands that the United States cease its unauthorized war against the Chinese liberation movement, were contained in resolutions unanimously adopted by thousands of workers who joined in "Hands Off China" meetings at Central Opera House, 67th St. and Third Ave., and at Royal Palace, 16 Manhattan Ave.

Speak For Oppressed People.

The speakers included Ziang-ling Chang, Chinese consul general in New York; S. N. Ghose, executive secretary of the India Freedom Founda. tion; Richard B. Moore, of the American Negro Labor Congress; William F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER; C. T. Chi, Chinese student representative; Dorthy Wang, of Columbia, and Carl Weinberg of City College.

Raps Press.

Zian-ling Chang, consul general of China, after declaring that he fears that anything he might say will undoubtedly be exaggerated and garbled in the capitalist papers of this city, said that the present liberation movement in his country is the natural result of seventy-five years of concession-grabbing, extra-territoriality "rights," and other forms of imperialistic domination on the part of foreign nations.

"The future of the new China is very bright," he said, "but prospects for peace in the near future are considerably dimmed by the presence of the battleships and marines of Great Britain and the United States".

Fake China Reports.

In discussing the current dispatches appearing in the capitalist papers, Ziang-ling Chang warned that "the public in the United States is in serious danger of being misled by biased reports from China by way of different sources".

Greatest in History.

"History records no revolutionary movement of such gigantic proportions as is seen in China today," declared William F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER.

"One-third of the earth's population is in revolt against world imperialism. The Soviet Union and Rising China together hove 600,000,000 people.

"Unity of these two great groups of oppressed peoples will smash the imperialist offensive against both China and the Soviet Union."

Adopt Resolution.

The following resolution was adopted at the meeting held at Central Opera House and the Royal Palace Hall, Brooklyn:

WHEREAS, the Nationalist movement of China is struggling for the liberation of the Chinese people from the rule of brigand war lords and the oppression of foreign imperialists;

WHEREAS, The Nationalist cause is supported by the overwhelming masses of Chinese people who have awakened to new life and are passionately struggling for a "Free and United China."

WHEREAS, the advance of the People's Armies over the largest part of China has been marked by almost bloodless victories,

WHEREAS, Britain and our government are lauching a war against the Chinese people. Fifty-seven American battleships and thousands of marines are in China now exhibiting a display of armed forces unparalled since the world war, provoking the Chinese masses, and creating a feeling of resentment towards foreigners.

Ghastly Crime.

WHEREAS, the bombardment of Nanking by American and British battleships is one of the most ghastly crimes committed against the Chinese people. A city of one-half million people was set afire. Thousands of peaceful inhabitants were killed and mutilated by shells, and thousands of others were deprived of their homes,

WHEREAS, our government is still despatching armed forces to China, thus preparing for further massacres of the Chinese people, ultimately strangling the Nationalist movement and assisting the war lords and bandits to oppress the Chinese, and

WHEREAS, the mobilization by the great powers may at any moment lead to the outbreak of another world war; therefore be It

RESOLVED that we, several thousand people in mass meeting assembled at Central Opera House, New York City, most emphatically protest against the shameful and bloody perpetrated by our battleships against defenseless Chinese in Nanking, and be it further Withdrew Marines.

RESOLVED, that we demand the withdrawal of marines and battleships from China, the cancellation of unequal treaties which oppress the Chinese people and the recognition of the Canton National government, and be it further

RESOLVED, that this resolution be sent to the president of the United, the secretary of foreign affairs, Senator William E. Borah and the press.

Passaic Workers Get Brutal Jail Terms ond Fines

HACKENSACK, April 8.—Brutal jail sentences to five men and women, the imposition of fines on 19 others, —all followed by venemous speeches by the presiding judge,—these were the overtones heard today of the recent textile strike at Passaic.

Judge Displays Ire.

Adolph Wisenefski was sentenced to serve from five to twenty years; Paul Kovac and Nicholas Schilliei, from one to five years, all hard labor at the state penetentiary for charges growing out of the "bomb" case during the close of the industrial war in the mill town. Eleven workers were originally accused of being implicated in this case, 10 of whom are now serving terms of three years in the penitentiary the remaining one was acquited when he insisted on a trial and tangible evidence he brought against him.

Two Women Go To Jail.

Two small Italian omwen, mothers, were sentenced to three months each in jail. They were accused of assaulting members of the Passaic police force.

Aggregate fines of $1,250 were imposed on 19 men and women who were charged with "disorderly conduct" as a result of their participation in picketing activities.

The Right Wing is Defeated Twice in Two Days.

The right wing in the needle trades, in spite of the renewal of the drive on the rank and file under pressure of the American Federation of Labor's special union wrecking committee, has suffered two defeats in the last two days.

The first defeat was delivered by the membership of the Furriers' Union when 5,000 fighting workers jammed Webster Hall and Cooper Union to show in an unmistakable manner their loyalty to the leadership and program of the left wing and their hatred and contempt for the right wing, its allies the bosses and the stoolpigeon tactics of this array of cockroach capitalists and corrupt labor officials.

All reports agree that no more enthusiastic and determined meeting has been held since the right wing began its disruptive action.

The second defeat has occurred as a result of the flop which the "investigation" of police bribery engineered by Woll and Green and Frayne has become. Only the friendliness of the capitalist press to these three mouth fighting musketeers has prevented the whole affair turning into a public farce.

Neither Porthos Green, Aramis Woll nor D'Artagnan Frayne has been able to name even one policeman or detective to whom the left wing paid money. Since they charged that the Communists had whole police precincts and the entire industrial squad on the payroll, their failure to dig up even one lone "harness bull" who got the price of a drink of third-rail hooch lends color to the belief that they have been victimized by still more reckless liars—their socialist party officialdom allies.

But the actions of the two most prominent heads of the American labor movement and their man Friday Frayne in this situation are something worse than ridiculous and our laughter should not lead us to forget that these high-salaried frequenters of palatial hotels have spit on the one tradition above all which American labor held sacred, i. e. the tradition that under no circumstances and no matter what the provocation, no union member or official should unite with the police, bosses and courts against other union members and other sections of the labor movement in cases growing out of strikes and internal union struggles.

Green, Woll, Frayne, Sigman, Shachtman, Beckerman, joined by the officialdom of the socialist party and the Forward, have become part and parcel of the punitive machinery of Tammany Hall. They have forfeited their right to be looked upon as anything else than enemies of the labor movement. They are Civic Federationists.

They will be driven out of the labor movement just as soon as the workers know what their actions mean. No effort must be spared to the end that every trade unionist knows that in New York their officials are not fighting the bosses but have united with them and with all other enemies of the labor movement to railroad to jail the officers and members of needle trade unions who got the 40-hour week in the fur section of the industry.

It is to punish this crime against efficiency unionism and boss-controlled unions that Green, Woll, Frayne, Sigman, etc., have banded together with bankers, bosses, police, gangsters, spies and the capitalist press.

War Preparations Against China Increase

Developments in the Chinese situation are in two directions:

First, dispatches from as far north and west as Kalgan show that even in this remote section the anti-imperialist movement is alive and active. All China with the exception of Manchuria proper has combined to smash foreign domination.

Second, the imperialist powers, especially the United States, are strengthening their armed forces. The Dollar steamship line apparently has been requisitioned by the war department for the transportation of troops and altho there are contradictory rumors it seems certain that another regiment of marines and two batteries of artillery have been ordered to China.

The strikes which are taking place in Hankow and other large centers and which are directed principally against imperialist enterprises, are so effective that the foreign warships up the Yangtse River are having difficulty getting coal. Admiral Williams has informed the war department that it may be necessary to send all coal burning gunboats back to Shanghai for this reason.

At Changsha a boycott and strike against American firms has been declared. The crews on all Standard Oil boats have struck. This is only the beginning of a mass movement which will make American imperialism remember Socony Hill for a long time to come.

Postal workers, custom house workers, seamen and transport workers are striking in a dozen different cities. It is evident that the trade unions are directing their efforts to hampering the key services as much as possible and thereby tying the hands of the imperialist forces.

The published accounts of the notes sent to the People's government by the United States, Great Britain and Japan indicate that no ultimatums were delivered and this is at variance with the continued provocation and preparation for war by the imperialist powers. Their actions take on still more of a conspirative character in view of the sensational information cabled The Nation by one of its Chinese correspondents to the effect that the missionary Williams, and other foreigners killed in Nanking were killed by retreating Shantung war troops and that the soldiers of the Peoples Army were in no way responsible.

The events since the bombardment of Nanking all fit into one pattern—a war pattern.

There are now 28 warships of the imperialist powers anchored in the port of Hankow approximately 800 miles up the Yangtse River. Foreigners are leaving and if the statements of the capitalist press correspondents can be believed in this respect preparations are being made to bombard the city as soon as all foreign residents have left.

Stopping war on China is now the main task of the working class in the imperialist nations. The Hands Off China meeting

Economic Notes

By T. LOAF.

TWO so-called gentlemen slipped out recently quite unnoticed from New York, Messrs. Mlynarski and Krzyzanowski, members of a special Polish financial mission that had stayed here for about five weeks on a usual errand. As is customary with these missionaries, they "denied coming here for a loan." You see, they have not gotten it yet, or to put it differently, "the loan is likely later."

For prior to obtaining a loan the Polish government must accept the terms of a financial reorganization worked out by the now notorious American "economic consulting doctor," Prof. Kemmerer of Princeton University. The Polish government has suggested "certain modifications" in the Kemmerer program that to all appearances led to a greater financial independence of the Polish state and incidentally to a broader possibilities of graft and corruption on the part of the Polish officials. So or otherwise, the Polish missionaries apparently have not been able to obtain the desired changes, for—to put it in the Aesopian jargon of the financial newspaper scribes—"all difference regarding details in the report had been cleared up and the Polish government would soon give its approval in its entirety." A loan variously estimated at between $50,000,000 and $200,000,000 would then be its reward.

Incidentally, a certain Mr. Feitelberg is negotiating meanwhile with Polish officials about "revaluation" of some 8 per cent bonds, issued by the city of Warsaw in 1921 and sold to American investors. Mr. Feitelberg represents 2,000 out of 7,000 American bondholders who paid for the bonds $60,000,000 and would at the "revaluation" offered by the city of Warsaw, be able to cash in on them exactly one tenth of this sum, or $60,000. The bondholders propose a somewhat less lucrative "conversion."

IT was in the summer of 1926 that the "economic consulting doctor" worked out the plans for "reorganizing the finances" of Poland. His "recommendations" included even the drafting of the laws necessary for the execution of the reforms, leaving to the "sovereign" Polish nation the job of nodding the head and, of course, paying the expenses.

Since then Mr. Kemmerer left for South America where he succeeded already in "reorganizing the financial system" of Bolivia and is now in Bolivia "to aid the economic structure" of that country. Prior to that he reorganized the finances of Chile, Columbia, Guatemala, Philippines and other colonial and semi-colonial countries. It is but logical that he should have also participated in drafting the Dawes plan for Germany.

The secret of the "financial reorganization," mapped out by this agent of American imperialism is rather simple. Balance the budget, stabilize your currency on a gold basis among others (to give an outflow to the gold surplus of the U. S.), bind your exchange preferably to the dollar, accept the control of your financial (political as well) affairs by special (American) "financial advisers," and you may expect a flow of American dollars "to build up the country" and incidentally also hordes of American promoters and speculators to "get the gravy."

IT is a somewhat remarkable coincidence that just at present these are the fascist and reactionary countries that are on the list for getting American dough. Next to Poland that is right now busy suppressing her agrarian unrest by breaking up peasant organizations and jailing their leaders in spite of their supposed parliamentarian immunity, is Italy that is to get more than $100,000,000 in various municipal and industrial loans. Then comes Brazil and Peru, both countries whose governments excel in suppressing their labor movements and maintain themselves by sheer use of force. The role of American finance in safeguarding "democracy" by keeping in the saddle the most abominable suppressors of the popular masses is daily becoming more grateful.

Let's Fight On! Become a Ruthenberg Member

In the loss of Comrade Ruthenberg the Workers (Communist) Party has lost its foremost leader and the American working class its staunchest fighter. This loss can only be overcome by many militant workers joining the Party that he built.

Ford Workers Donate $100 to Ruthenberg Sustaining Campaign

DETROIT April 8. — Inclosed find a contribution of $100.00 to the Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund from the Ford Nuclei Central Bureau.

The comrades of the Central Bureau who are responsible for the publication of The Ford Worker, are fully aware of the importance of maintaining The DAILY WORKER, the most powerful weapon in our struggle against imperialism. It was Ruthenberg gave his life to the revolutionary movement and we can't build a greater monument in his honor than the building up of a powerful Communist Daily. We pledge to "close our ranks" and "fight on" to final victory in the spirit and determination of our great leader, Comrade Ruthenberg.

Yours in the bitter struggle,
Ford Nuclei Central Bureau.

"China Today," Topic At the Workers' School Forum Sunday Night

Samuel Sha, of the "Chinese Workers Alliance," will lecture on the Workers School Forum, 108 East 14th Street, this Sunday night (April 10), on the interesting problem which has been so much discussed in the press of the entire world during the past week, namely, the problem of The Inner Situation of the Kuomintang Party of China. The relationship between Communists and non-Communists, between workers, peasants, students, merchants, manufacturers and all the other complicated class problems which constitute the inner politics of the Kuomintang, will be taken up as well as the relationship between the political Bureau of the Kuomintang and the military staff of the People's National Army. The General title of Mr. Sha's lecture is "What is Happening in China?"

His lecture will be followed next Sunday night, April 17, by a lecture by Jay Lovestone, Acting General Secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, on "America and the Next War," and on Sunday, April 24, Joseph Freeman, proletarian journalist, who is returning from Russia on April 15, will lecture on "Russia in 1927."

Workers Party Membership Meeting.

NEWARK, March 8.—A special membership meeting of the Workers (Communist) Party will be held next Tuesday evening, at the Labor Lyceum, 808 So. 14th St. The Ruthenberg membership drive and the campaign for The DAILY WORKER will be the subjects to be especially considered. All members are urged to attend.

Reaction Must Not Crush The Daily Worker

For three years The DAILY WORKER has raised aloft the banner of militant opposition to American imperialism. For three years it has been in the forefront of the struggle for progressive trade unionism and for the organization of the unorganized. For three years it has maintained a sharp criticism of the institutions of American capitalism. Comrade Ruthenberg devoted himself unsparingly to the establishment and the strengthening of this weapon. And now reaction seeks to crush our paper.

The efforts of the National Security League, the American Patriotic Society, the Bomb Squad, and the District Attorney to crush The DAILY WORKER must not succeed. The DAILY WORKER means too much to the working class, for us to permit it to succumb under the iron heel of capitalism. The Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund has been launched to build a better and stronger DAILY WORKER. In the midst of this campaign we have been made the target of a vicious and powerful attack. We will utilize the resources obtained to fight against this attack. With the funds obtained we will not only repel these attacks but we will mobilize even greater resources behind our paper.

Now is the time when the paper needs your help most. Help to defend it against the attack of the exploiters. Help to build it in the interests of the working class. Contribute to the Ruthenberg Sustaining Fund. Act now!

HOW TO SET FOREIGN NEWS: A SHORT COURSE FOR AMBITIOUS LINOTYPERS.

The rule to go by is to use the biggest possible type for rumors, allegations, indications, maybes, and other matter that is obviously fake. Unless set big such material will be overlooked. It is therefore the duty of editors and linotypers to make it big, bold and impressive. The subsequent denials or corrections should be set in agate. The original story has by that time been forgotten anyhow; or else it has been repeated so often that a correction does no good anyhow. In either case there is no use wasting space and lead, so set small.

A few samples will illustrate the general technique and should be useful to the linotypers, even if one of them (the one who sets this column) calls us names for giving him a lot of trouble.

I.

WASHINGTON, March 32.—Incomplete reports from China indicate a murderous attack upon foreigners in Nanking in which a vast number of Americans and other foreigners perished. No estimate of the dead is available, but there were 150 Americans on the scene and responsible officials in Washington therefore confidently hope for the worst.

Well-informed circles believe that women were among those attacked, and judge from their past experience in such things that many have been violated. A report that many women are in the hospitals lends color to this belief.

* * *

SHANGHAI, March 32.—Many foreigners, mostly Americans, were killed and wounded by Chinese ghouls in Nanking today. American women were attacked and raped. The hospitals are overcrowded with women recuperating from attacks.

II.

SHANGHAI, March 33.—Exact figures on the number of dead and wounded Americans in yesterday's massacre are not yet available. Naval statisticians have been busy all day making calculations.

III.

NANKING, March 39.—One American was killed in the Nanking shooting, and another sprained an ankle climbing over a fence. Two American women have been in the hospital since January. They are tubercular patients.

A Christian Science Martyr Who Demonstrated Healing by Faith Though He Went Delirious and Died in the Attempt.—An obituary to Herbert B. Hanger, manufacturer of artificial limbs in Washington, D. C., appearing in "The Scalpel," a medical trade journal, gives the following graphic account of a heroic demise:

"On the Monday following Christmas he was taken violently ill during the afternoon with what appeared to be ptomaine poisoning. He was an ardent Christian Scientist, and from the beginning to the end he never faltered one iota in his belief that he would be restored. His faith was absolute. He was delirious at times, and at other times his sight, speech, and hearing were affected; but at all times when his mind was clear he refused all offers of medical aid and treatment. His character and determination of purpose were such that he would never entertain the thought of compromise. He lived and died in the faith he had chosen. Not a word of complaint nor the semblance of a sigh passed over his lips, even during the several periods when he must have realized that he was passing through the shadow of the valley. At other times, he stoically and without complaint went through extended though futile periods of the most intense suffering. IT WAS A MOST COMPLETE DEMONSTRATION OF THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE FAITH. He passed away on Wednesday, January 26th, at 7 o'clock in the evening."

The Triumph of Philosophy; For This Plato, Spinoza, Kant et el Lived and Labored.—The New York Telegram, famous for its philosophical outlook on life, announces in huge letters that Will Durant, who put a thrill in philosophy, will cover the Snyder murder trial. And its equally highbrow competitor, the tabloid Daily Mirror, is running a comic strip version of Dr. Durant's "Story of Philosophy."

Imperialist Etiquette.—After all the foreigners in Peking aren't as hard on the Chinese as people thought. Immunity from Chinese laws for the foreign embassies is one of the extra-territorial privileges that Great Britain, America and the rest hate to give up. But when it came to a test they relaxed. They gave permission to Chang Tso-lin's soldiers to raid the Soviet embassy, seize books and papers and arrest the personnel.

FROM A GALLERY OF FUTILITIES—

4. Courage and Convictions.

Bill is not among those who lack the courage of their convictions. Quite the contrary. He is simply bursting with courage. He would like to go out and smash things to hell. He wants to mount platforms and denounce something or somebody as they never have been denounced before. His eyes flash fire, and his gestures are fearless.

But he is unhappy. He, alas! suffers from the reverse complaint. He lacks convictions to match his courage. . . . He can find nothing in which he can believe hard enough and long enough to spend some of his fighting energy. It's killing him.

When Bill sees a new "cause" coming along he rushes to meet it. Maybe at last, he thinks, he will find something to fight for. But no . . . before he has so much as girded his loins to do battle, his faith ebbs and he finds himself high and dry looking for something else. He's tried nearly every thing, with the same result.

Bill, of course, likes to call himself a cynic.

Another Way To Be Comfortably Dead.—To the samples of luxury and ease possible for well-to-do corpses which we printed not so long ago, please add a third. The New York Mausoleum Association describes its "Cypress Hill Abbey" thus:

"A beautiful Mausoleum right in the city.
Location—Cypress Hills Cemetery.
Sponsored—By leading men of Brooklyn.
Approved—By leading Ministers.
Beautiful grounds—Ample fund for upkeep of building and grounds.
Cost—No more than first class ground burial. One cost only and that the first.
Beautiful Receiving Tomb for free use of Subscribers until building is completed.
A large percentage of space subscribed by leading families.
Terms may be arranged."

Settling the Nicaraguan Question.—Henry L. Stimson has been sent by President Coolidge to straighten the difficulties in Nicaragua. He is instructed to bring about peace. He was picked for the job, obviously, because he was formerly Secretary of War.

A Very Appropriate Choice.—"U. S. MAY SEND TROOPS TO CHINA BY DOLLAR LINE," a Herald-Tribune headline informs us.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

SEVERAL years after the big flight from the socialist party desert, the wise men of what was left of the organization racked their brains for devices that would bring some of the wandering sheep back into the fold. Professions of loyalty to Americanism in contrast to the unpatriotic attitude of the Communists failed to make an impression on the deserters. They simply would not return no matter how many fatted calves were killed in their honor. The fact was that they found something more to their liking, an organization that was imbued with the missionary spirit they once that permeated the political soul of the socialist party. It was the K. K. K.

NOTING the successful methods employed by the K. K. K. organizers, methods that brought in shekels as well as souls, a socialist lawyer of Dayton, Ohio, conceived the idea that it would not be ethically wrong to follow the methods of the K. K. K. since the end justifies the means. He proposed that socialist organizers be turned loose on the population, work up a snappy sales talk and bring in the applicants subsequent to extracting from each individual who passed the pearly gates a five not less than ten dollars.

* * *

A good percentage of this fee would go to the hustling organizer. The lawyer claimed any time a subsidiary organization for manufacture robes, pillow cases, fat and feathers should be established it would be subject to the needs of the socialist party. However, the scheme did not come. They paid their fees to the K. K. K. sleuths. The eagles' lawyer lost heart and the paper he was eating drew a long breath, rolled its eyes, turned up its nose and started on the long journey.

* * *

[illegible] and that the coming of spring responsible for many budding crimes in youthful breasts but it is only a season of melancholy reflection for the aged. But there are exceptions. One would think that the socialists might be excused if they sloughed the responsibility of freeing the working class from their shoulders and passed their declining years [illegible] picture of peace by the fireside [illegible] entertaining their great-grandchildren with stories of bygone days. [illegible] dined in the dim and distant past. But the socialist party would rather die than admit its impotence.

* * *

IT is no longer fashionable to appeal to workers to join what is left of the socialist party. With the gradual merging of organization in a class party would strengthen the worker's arm and help him better his conditions in addition to furnishing him with an organization that would fight to emancipate him and his class from the capitalist yoke. This would be offensive to the A. F. of L. bureaucracy and to the employing classes that would be disappointed if they discovered that the socialists had not completely reformed, that they were like a drunkard who only remained sober as long as liquor was unavailable. Then Oscar Wilde and Will Durant came to the rescue.

LET it be distinctly understood that Oscar Wilde's "Ballad of Reading Jail" is one of the world's literary masterpieces, and Wilde's plays are extremely entertaining. Will Durant's "Story of Philosophy" is popular summer reading but the sex angle connected with Wilde, is what gets the lovers of true literature. So the socialists of New York now offer a set of Oscar Wilde's complete works and Will Durant's crime against philosophy as an inducement to voters not necessarily workers—to come and hear the message. We suppose Bracco's "Bracconeri" is passe but Frank Harris's "My Life and Loves" is reported to be saucy reading. With the aid of the bookleggers and Frank Harris's autobiography the socialists should be able to capture Tammany Hall.

* * *

A New York Times editorial writer succeeded in being exceedingly funny in a recent editorial on "Irish Unity." He rummaged the editorial morgue for hoary burlesque wisecracks on the alleged predielection of the Irish for a desire to commit mutual annihilation. Mr. Och's bovine scribbler may be forgiven for filling space with this kind of nonsense but

Soviet Union Cautious.

MOSCOW, April 8.—The Soviet Union government is proceeding with due caution and does not intend to be provoked into precipitate action by the raids on the Soviet legation in Peking, according to statements today by the official press.

Charges are openly made by Pravda, official newspaper, that the raids in Peking were instigated by the British, and similar charges are made by Isvestia, another official newspaper.

Try To Provoke Russia.

"This is a crime that borders on madness, said Isvestia, "a conspiracy that is nothing more than a desperate effort to provoke Russia to take a step that would untie the hands of the Western powers for open intervention in China, but the Soviet Union has given several examples of having stronger nerves than those who try to provoke panic. It is useless to protest to Chang Tso Lin. This representative of reaction is unable or unready to be held responsible for his own acts. However we announce our protest against those who inspired Chang to this crime.

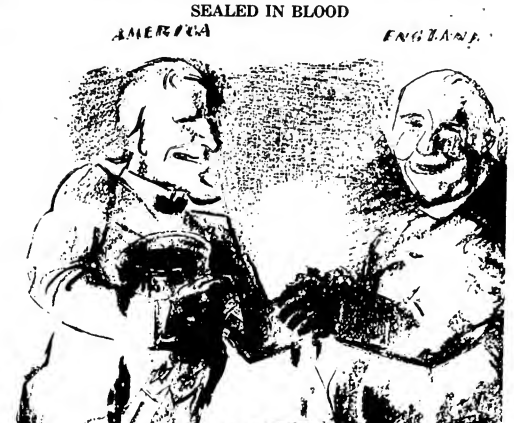
Americans Smuggle Opium Into China; Escape Punishment

LONDON, April 8.—A former United States District Attorney, Leonard Husar, and other prominent Americans in Shanghai are involved in an opium smuggling scandal, and exert influence powerful enough to throttle action in congress, according to the Manchester Guardian of March 20. Husar has been indicted on the charge that he destroyed evidence.

About a year ago an American citizen, by the name of Woodward, was charged in the Consular court at Bushire, Persia, with smuggling opium from Persia into China. He was found guilty and gave bond that in the future he would desist from opium traffic.

Destroys Evidence.



Woodward returned to Shanghai, and shortly afterwards the Consulate at Bushire was closed. The papers relating to the Woodward case went to Shanghai.

Leonard Husar, then American District Attorney, requested authority to look over the papers, which were given him and for which he gave a receipt.

When, some months ago, Husar's term expired, it was discovered that the Woodward case papers were missing. Meanwhile information has been filed against Husar in the Shanghai court, and he is said to be at liberty on $15,000 bail.

Labor Rallies to Save Sacco and Vanzetti

Smash the War Plot Hatched by Wall Street Government!

Wall Street government is driving this country to war. It is lying to the American masses. In Washington it denies joint action with other imperialist nations in China.

In China its diplomats, admirals and generals are acting jointly with the enemies of the Chinese liberation movement and the Soviet Union.

Wall Street government is following the classic method of imperialism—it is talking peace and making war.

Its policy is a WAR POLICY.

Its acts speak louder than its words.

The bombardment of Nanking in conjunction with Great Britain, now shown by such cables as that to the New York Nation to have been an act of murderous and unprovoked barbarism, the raids on the Soviet embassies in Peking and Tientsin, plotted and inspired at a joint meeting held in the American headquarters, the besieging of the Soviet consulate in Shanghai by the murderous offscourings of Kolchak's and Semenoff's counter-revolutionary bandit bands acting under allied imperialist auspices, the continual dispatch of American troops to China, the fact that the navy is being placed on a war basis, the joint occupation of Shanghai, Tientsin, Peking, joint action of American and British troops in the Hongkong area, the bloodthirsty tone of the American imperialist press—all this spells but one word—WAR.

Only fools can come to any other conclusion. It is because Wall Street and its government believes that the American masses are fools that it has as yet taken no drastic measures at home to suppress protest against its bloody plan in the Far East.

Let us be clear as to the issues involved.

American imperialism, jointly with other powers, is making war upon the Chinese workers and peasants who are fighting to free themselves from imperialist oppression, militarism and a semi-feudal system which grind them into the mud. It is ready to make peace with Chinese capitalists but it turns its guns upon the trade union and peasant organizations.

Great Britain has organized the fascist governments of Italy, Poland, Hungary, Rumania, etc., against the Soviet Union. In the Far East another front of imperilism has been set up.

Peking, Shanghai, Tientsin, Hongkong are other cities that are occupied by imperialist troops acting jointly. War fleets of the imperialist powers patrol the Chinese coast and the rivers far into the interior of China.

Kellogg and Coolidge lie when they say there is no joint action with Great Britain and the other powers.

American workers and farmers must either call a halt on the murderous conspiracy hatched in the interest of this band of world robbers or find themselves chained as in 1917 to the gory chariot of the god of war.

Let Wall Street and its war mongers know that they cannot make murderers of the American masses.

Rally to the defense of the workers and peasants of China and the Soviet Union.

Smash the war plot of Wall Street and its government.

Join with the rest of the world's working class in a mighty protest which will make itself heard in the capital of every imperialist nation.

Hands Off China!

Hands Off the Soviet Union!

Withdraw all armed forces from China!

Build the United Front of the working masses against the war front of imperialism's murder bands!

DEMAND GROWS THAT KELLOGG LEAVE THE GOV'T

Mexican Scandal Breaks Over Administration

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Secretary of State Kellogg and his underlings in the State Department are stunned by revelations relating to the intrigue of this government in Mexico. It is now clear that the Calles government in Mexico is familiar with some of the secret documents relating to preparations for military invasion of this country in Mexico.

Just how the documents came into Calles' possession is a mystery, but when the record of the Harding-Coolidge regime is recalled it is not at all surprising. From the day it came into power in 1921 its record has been one long sordid story of graft and corruption. Doherty, Denby, Fall, young Roosevelt and the other luminaries of the early days of "revelry," have been replaced by those who have learned caution from their predecessors' experience, but no one here doubts that the same old game is being played. It is not unlikely that some of the oil interests in Mexico revealed the military plans and secrets of this country toward Mexico, with which they are familiar, in order to terrorize the Calles government into ignoring its own land laws.

Now that the conspiracies of the state department are known to the Mexican government, Kellogg and his staff are trying to evade the just denunciation that is their due by charging that some of the more damning documents that reveal the imperialist policy of the United States are forgeries.

It appears, from the information at hand, that the state department is hard put to get out of the fix they find themselves in because Calles, instead of yielding to their bluff, called it and exposed them.

A number of congressmen and senators still here, when they speak of the matter at all, express the opinion that there is nothing further for Kellogg to do but resign before the storm breaks over his head and sweeps him from the state department, to take his place with the other oily statesman who have gone into the discard because their game was up.

Statement Issued by James P. Cannon, Secretary International Labor Defense

CHICAGO, April 8.—The International Labor Defense, thru its secretary, James P. Cannon, has issued a statement on the Sacco-Vanzetti state supreme court decision, pointing out that no one but a fool would expect other action from the courts of the textile barons of Massachusetts, and appealing from that judgment to the judgment of the masses of the workers. The statement says:

"The black robed judges of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts have pronounced the doom of Sacco and Vanzetti. Evidence of frameup and conspiracy was piled high enough for the whole world to see, but the judges would not look at it. The New England bourbons want the blood of innocent men. This was decided from the first, only fools expected otherwise. Only fools put faith in the courts of the enemy.

"It is all planned and decided. Some day soon the two Italian workers will be taken into the Dedham Courtroom, where they were falsely convicted of murder six years ago this summer, and there sentenced by Judge Webster Thayer of the Superior Court to die in the electric chair at Charlestown for the crime of rebellion against the capitalists.

"They will take them from their cells and strap them securely in the chair, they will turn on the switch with the hope that when the deadly electric current burns and sears the warm flesh of the two rebel workmen, there will also be consumed within those flames the cause they symbolize.

"So they have decreed, and so they hope. But the game is not over, there is another power yet to be considered. There is a higher court than that of the solemn reprobates who decreed the death of Sacco and Vanzetti. The laboring masses of America and the world have faith in Sacco and Vanzetti. It is time now to appeal finally to the masses. It is time for the workers to say their word.

"Such slender legal resources as yet remain must be utilized. This goes without saying, but the real hope for Sacco and Vanzetti must now be placed in the protest movement of the workers. Only the united protest movement of the workers can save Sacco and Vanzetti from the hands of the executioners.

"The defense of Sacco and Vanzetti is the issue of the class struggle. They are not criminals but the symbols and standard bearers of the mili-

MINERS ASSEMBLE FORCES TO STOP LATEST SCABBING

Avesta Coal Company in Open Shop Attempt

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 8.—Progressives in the United Mine Workers of America are now calling upon the rest of the miners in that union to rally their forces immediately and rush more organizers and active unionists into the non-union territory, to offset the attack made on them by the Vesta Coal Co., which has just gone non-union.

Steel Tributary

The Vesta Coal Company supplies the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation with bituminous coal.

Joseph Edwards, general superintendent, in making his announcement, estimated that 1,000 would be affected, that number normally is employed in the Vesta mines.

Earlier in the bituminous suspension, the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation, one of the largest in western Pennsylvania, announced it would operate with non-union miners after signing with the union for years.

AVELLA, Pa., April 8.—Rain and continued threatening weather could not prevent the mass demonstration arranged by the local unions of the U. M. "AS ONE UNIONIST TO ANOTHER" WOLL ACTED AS SPY, TRIAL SHOWS

A. F. of L. "Investigators" Tried to Bully Fur Leaders Into Police Bribe Admissions

"We never gave any money to the police, and we never told Matthew Woll, or anyone else, that we gave money to the police.

"Ever since the fifth week of our strike the reactionary leaders of the International Fur Workers' Union and the American Federation of Labor had been plotting to frame up the Joint Board leaders whom the workers elected and support.

Frame-Up To Get Leader-ship.

"They that if they charged us with graft they could railroad us to jail. This report, with its statements about bribery of the police, was made by Woll, McGrady and the others to frame up and help them to steal the leadership of the union."

This was the testimony of Isadore Shapiro, chairman of the New York Joint Board of the Furriers' Union and head of the Law Committee during last year's strike, who appeared yesterday before Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan in the Criminal Courts building to answer questions concerning the alleged bribery of the police which was charged in the report of the A. F. of L. investigating committee.

Samuel Mencher, chairman of the Strike Picket Committee, another witness, also denied that he had told the investigating committee he was responsible for bribing policemen, and declared:

"They made that all up because they had failed in settling the strike over the heads of the strike committee. If we were bribing the police, why did the police load up our workers and arrest them by the hun-

French Die-Hards Try To Prosecute Doriot For Aid to Chinese

PARIS, April 8.—Fearing a revolt in Indo-China, French reactionaries are urging the criminal prosecution of Jacques Doriot, Communist member of the Chamber of Deputies.

An attempt will be made to prosecute Doriot before his return from China. It is alleged that Doriot has encouraged a sympathetic revolt in French Indo-China.

itant labor movement. The fight for Sacco and Vanzetti is the fight of the working class.

"The need of the hour is an organized, united movement of protest and solidarity on a national and international scale. In this movement unity must be the watchword. All partisan aims, all differences of opinion and all controversial questions must be put aside. All forces must be united without delay on the broadest possible basis for the struggle to free Sacco and Vanzetti. Organize the protest movement!

"Unite all forces!

"Free Sacco and Vanzetti!"

L. L. D. Calls for Conference.

The International Labor Defense in its statement, called for the immediate organization of a national conference for Sacco and Vanzetti.

"A national conference embracing all workers' organizations and sympathizing bodies and uniting all forces for Sacco and Vanzetti must be organized without delay," says the statement.

"The necessity for this national expression of the workers' unity and protest is so obvious as to need no argument. Opposition to such a mobilization is assistance to the executioners.

Protest Can Stay Execution.

"The International Labor Defense firmly believes that a mighty protest movement of the masses can yet stay the hands of the murderers and bring about the triumphant liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti. All our energies and resources will be devoted to the organization of this movement."

Agitation Must Be Revived.

The national office of the I. L. D. has sent instructions to its local organization in 200 cities throughout the country to revive the agitation for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti on a bigger scale than ever before. The preliminary stages of the work of the I. L. D. locals as laid out by the national official calls for the holding of mass meetings and demonstrations, circulating petitions, distributing leaflets, stickers and posters printed by international office of the I. L. D. and the sending of letters and telegrams to Governor Alvan T. Fuller at the state house, Boston, demanding the release of the two victimized agitators.

They Must Not Die!

"The whole agitational movement," says the statement, "must lead up to the holding of a gigantic national conference at which the forth and solidarity of the masses in the cause of Sacco and Vanzetti will be dramatized before the whole country.

"SACCO AND VANZETTI ARE INNOCENT AND SHALL NOT DIE!

This slogan proclaimed long ago by Eugene V. Debs is the slogan of our hour."

BOSTON, April 8.—World-wide appeals calling for the freedom of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti reached Gov. Alvan T. Fuller today. The executive chamber is being flooded with cablegrams from every corner of the earth.

Cablegrams arriving from the Reichstag, the German organization formed for the defense of the two prisoners and which similar to the International Labor Defense in this country. Wires were also received from 20 members of the British parliament, whose names have not as yet been made public.

General Strike in Buenos Aires.

Coincident with the appeals to the governor, word came of a 24-hour general strike in Buenos Aires as a protest against the action of the Massachusetts courts in refusing to grant a new trial to Sacco and Vanzetti in spite of the overwhelming indignation in their innocence by millions throughout the world, including distinguished lawyers who have been stirred by the flagrant injustice of the case.

Expert Puts Spot Light on Gigantic Insurance Swindle

This Monday The DAILY WORKER, the only militant labor daily, and "The Freiheit," Jewish Communist daily, with combined circulations of 75,000 in the metropolitan area, lead off with a series of articles attacking the graft and corruption with which the Industrial (weekly payment) life insurance business is saturated.

Writer Well Equipped.

Prepared and written by Charles Yale Harrison, intimately associated with insurance activities for a number of years, the articles which will run for 20 days will describe vividly and in a lively style the technique of the huge insurance combines in swindling millions of dollars from workers throughout the country.

Praised by Nation Editor.

Louis S. Gannett, associate editor of "The Nation," in reading these articles in a preliminary form, declared that "this ought to start another Armstrong investigation!"

In 1917, R. F. Armstrong, the late president of the late American Union Life Insurance Co., said: "Industrial insurance is a swindle of such gigantic magnitude that its literature should be excluded from the mails, its business suppressed and taken over by the state."

Lynchings Doubled in America During Last Year, Church Reports

WASHINGTON, April 8 (FP).—Lynchings nearly doubled in number in the United States in 1926 as compared with 1925, according to a summary made public by the Federal Council of Churches. While there were only 17 lynchings in 1925, there were 30 in 1926. Five states formerly on the "honor roll" of commonwealths in which no lives had been taken by mob violence, were the scene of deliberate mob killings. New Mexico was one of these. It had had no lynching in the previous years.

The churches' statement does not say where the 30 lynchings of the past year did occur, but indicated that they took place in 7 states, chiefly in the south.

Communist Position Towards China Given By Amter at Meeting

CLEVELAND, April 8.—The Chinese Community Association of Cleveland held a banquet to celebrate the capture of Shanghai by the National Revolutionary Party. About 100 persons were present, including Chinese students at Oberlin University.

Among the speakers were Mr. Lewis of the Y. M. C. A., Judge Mills and Captain Kirby. Mr. Lewis explained the demands of the Canton government, and said that some of the looting at Nanking to "Communist agitators." Judge Mills assured the Chinese present that the American people are in sympathy with the justified demands of the Chinese people for independence." He warned the Chinese that they must be wary, for the hardest period will come when they have to establish law and order. They must be careful to institute laws that "would be equal to rich and poor alike."

Captain Kirby told of his experience with the Chinese beginning with his acquaintance with two Chinese in New York. Very instructive as far as the present Chinese situation is concerned.

China's Friends.

I. Amter, district Secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, began his address with the words, "Chinese comrades and American friends."

Amter blasted the so-called interest of Americans in the struggle of the Chinese people for freedom. He assured the Chinese that their friends were Soviet Russia and the Communist International, to whom Sun Yat Sen had sent a letter on his death-bed. In answer to the insinuation that Communists instigate looting, Amter said that the "Communist Party and the Young Communist League of China work hand in hand with the Kuomintang. The industrial workers of the capitalist countries and the oppressed peoples of India, Afghanistan, Asia, Egypt and Africa are the friends and supporters of the Chinese revolution. 'Hands Off China' must be the slogan emanating from the friends of China."

Wants Realism.

Mr. Moore, secretary of the Chinese Students Club, a Columbia student, heaped the coals of fire upon the heads of those who have been stirred by the flagrant injustice of the case. "What is to become of our concessions, settlements, investments," they ask. That is the hitch to the question." Mr. Moore explained in detail what is going on and what the Chinese revolutionary party intends to do.

The meeting closed with the adoption of a resolution demanding that American warships and marines be withdrawn from China.

Pole Loan Strikes Snag; U. S. Bankers Want Govt. Control

WARSAW, April 8.—Negotiations for the $80,000,000 American loan struck a snag yesterday when the American representative, M. Monnets insisted on control of the finances, the management of the credit policies of the Bank of Poland and the appointment of four of sixteen directors of the bank's board.

It is understood that the Polish government had struck a tentative agreement with the American bankers and that Monnet was not authorized to sign an agreement on those terms.

Missionary Shot In China Drew A Gun, —"Nation"

The American killed at Nanking, J. E. Williams, vice-president of Nanking University, was shot as he drew a revolver on the thousands-strong mob, according to a report cabled to the New York "Nation" from Shanghai. Four other Americans who were with Williams when the shooting occurred were not injured. G. A. Kennedy, an American resident in China and a graduate of the Columbia School of Journalism, is responsible for the statement.

Mr. Kennedy went to Nanking for the purpose of investigating the outrages. His report states that there were over 27,000 soldiers of the Northern army in Nanking when the first Nationalist soldiers entered the city at 3 a. m. on the 24th of March, and that it is impossible therefore to hold the Nationalists responsible for what occurred.

"The attacks on foreigners in the morning and afternoon of that day, resulting in the deaths of one American, two British, and one Japanese, and the looting of the consulates of these countries, cannot be conclusively fixed upon the Nationalist soldiers.

"The first of the four foreign deaths, that of J. E. Williams, vice-president of Nanking University, occurred at 3 a. m. on the twenty-fourth. It has been proved that four other Americans were with Williams at the time the soldiers threatened. Williams drew his revolver and was immediately shot dead. The others were not hurt. The three other foreign deaths occurred in the late afternoon before the bombardment, which was at 4.30 p. m. The Nationalist general entered the city at 5.30.

"The foreign houses burned or looted were all on the route taken by the Northerners in their efforts to escape from the city. Many other foreign houses not the only houses looted. Hundreds of Chinese were robbed and many killed by the soldiers, presumably, again, Northerners running amuck.

"The physical effects of the bombardment by the British and American gun war vessels are comparatively slight. About fifty Chinese houses were wrecked, and one foreign-inhabited home was demolished. The number of Chinese casualties was probably under one hundred. But this is uncertain, as they have not yet been recorded."

killed in the march on Charleston in 1922.

Over fifteen hundred people gathered in front of 416 Paul W. Hall, and formed the marching order for the parade to the cemetery.

The line was headed by the Lancaster Band and followed by the Lancaster Band from the Avella schools. Then came the local unions with the flags and banners of the union, and in addition banners bearing slogans calling for general strike of the entire coal industry.

Slogans On Banners.

Other banners read:

"We want no sliding scale because it will always slide down.

"Organize the unorganized miners.

"No separate agreements. Keep the United Mine Workers united.

"We want a general strike of American workers for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti, and many others."

When the crowd gathered around the monument to the Chittsville miners, a truck was provided for a speakers' platform. Here Vice-president M. Local Union 2881 P. M. W. of A., and candidate for district president on the Brophy "Save the Union" ticket for the recent election, opened the meeting.

Dislike Partial Agreements.

Siders recounted the purposes of the meeting, among which was that of calling for a general strike of all mine workers, to defeat the bosses' lockout of the miners of the central field.

David Hickey, who spoke in the name of the district organization did not meet with favorable response when he told the significance of settlements on temporary agreements. He was interrupted with cries of "No separate agreements! Keep the mine workers united!"

Participants in the Chittsville march spoke, as did also D. E. Farley of Pittsburgh, who took the stand for the International Labor Defense, and to call attention to the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 8.—Harry Fishwick, president of District 12, U. M. W. of A., has invited the operators in a conference, President Rice Miller, of the operators' association, has replied that he will meet with the miners' officials only if they are prepared to discuss a reduction in wages.

The southwestern operators' association and the union officials of Kansas, Oklahoma, and other southwestern states have adjourned without an agreement. They are meeting in Kansas City. The conference will continue tomorrow.

dreds? I myself was arrested for no reason at all and was freed upon appeal to a higher court."

Shapiro also pointed out the unprecedented brutalities of the police up to the very end of the strike, and particularly the activities of the Industrial squad. He told how workers were attacked by gangsters, and that these hirelings of the bosses were almost never arrested.

Shapiro also pointed out the Brutal.

"We often used to say that the police and the industrial squad could not do a better job if they were on the employers' payroll.

"Our lawyer took the matter up with several police officials whom he knew, and we protested to the Central Trades and Labor Council, which sent a delegation to the mayor. But the brutalities went on just the same."

A. F. of L. Hearings Fishy.

Several times at yesterday's hearing it was mentioned as it had been by witnesses the previous day, that Matthew Woll was the only member of the investigating committee who was regularly present; and that on many occasions there was no stenographer present, or she was asked not to take notes.

Walsh Hits Woll.

Frank P. Walsh, attorney for the Joint Board, drew attention to the fact that Woll and McGrady had attempted to give the impression that the Joint Board leaders had asked for the withdrawal of the stenographer.

"Assuming that this inquiry is only to get at the facts in this case," said Mr. Walsh, "I believe, in the interests of fairness it should be brought out that it was Mr. Woll and the rest of the committee who asked the stenographer to leave."

At these times, the sole recorder of the proceedings was Mr. Woll.

This was the case during Shapiro's appearance before the committee, and he declares that Woll made repeated efforts to force from him statements that he had paid money to members of the police force.

Woll Plays the Stoolpigeon.

"I told him over and over again that we did not pay any money," said Shapiro. "But he would come back to the subject and say, with a wink, 'Now come on, tell me how much you paid captains. Was it $250 a week? How much did you pay the members of the industrial squad? Come on, tell me. This is just a conference on union affairs between friends. There is no harm in telling me.'

"And I would tell him: 'Mr. Woll, do you think we would be paying the industrial squad to beat up our workers and send them to the hospital? We never paid any money to any policemen or to any official.'"

Shapiro said he and other Joint Board leaders had strenuously objected to Hugh Frayne, the New York organizer, being a member of the committee.

"Mr. Frayne had proved himself dishonest in his dealings with this union and we objected to his being a member of the committee," said Shapiro. "Time and again he had showed himself to be not a representative of labor but a representative of the employers. We did not trust him."

"Did you object to Mr. Woll or Mr. McGrady?" asked Assistant District Attorney Brothers.

"No, we did not know them then," said Shapiro.

Never Saw Own Testimony.

Questioned as to whether he had ever been shown what was alleged to be his testimony before the investigating committee, Shapiro reported that altho Woll had promised that the minutes of the proceedings should be submitted to the members of the Joint Board for correction, they had never seen a copy of them, had never signed their names to them, and knew nothing at all about what they were charged with in saying until the stories came out in the newspapers.

Explains Expenditures.

Shapiro was grilled about expenditures he had made during the strike in an effort to discover whether there was any money for which he could not account; but he explained just what had been done with the Landy Committee's money and that vouchers for all of it were in the hands of the finance committee.

Asked about one particular receipt which the auditors said they could not find, Shapiro replied.

"Well there were a lot of things those auditors did not want to find."

Gold and Hyman Speak On Crisis in Needle Trades This Sunday

The present situation in the needle trades will be described to the workers of Boro Park tomorrow, by the leaders of the left wing.

The meeting was arranged by the Boro Park Workers Club to acquaint the workers of this section of the city with the situation which is constantly growing in tensity.

The meeting will be held at Crystal Hall, 4214 14th Avenue, Brooklyn, tomorrow at 1:30 P. M. Admission will be free.

Dawes Decides Graft Probe Can Continue Reed Will State Plan

CHICAGO, April 8.—Plans of the Reed Senate Committee investigating campaign fund expenditures were expected to be announced today in Detroit by Senator James A. Reed, following the ruling here yesterday of Vice-President Charles G. Dawes that the committee did not lose its power with the adjournment of the sixty-ninth congress.

Sapiro Took Money From Speculators For Potato Co-op.

DETROIT, April 8.—The first direct evidence tending to support Henry Ford's charges that Aaron Sapiro tricked American farmers, was given the jury today at the million-dollar Ford-Sapiro libel suit in federal court.

Loans From Merchants.

Under cross-examination, Sapiro admitted he had obtained $4,000 in loans for a baby potato cooperative in Idaho from Weyl and Zuckerman, Los Angeles commission merchants. The notes, securing the loans, were made out to Sapiro but Maurice Zuckerman, head of the commission firm, discounted them by using the cooperative king's name.

Kidding the Farmer.

Reed, defending Ford, charged that this trickery was resorted to in order to prevent the farmers from discovering that the "cooperative" which was advertised to prevent speculation, was being financed by two well known speculators in potatoes.

Discuss Seniority Rule on Railroads

Attacks on the seniority rule of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks before the wage increase arbitration board were answered by the union officers. John G. Welber, New York Central Railroad vice-president, tried to tell the arbitrators that individual wage adjustments upward would have been made before if the seniority rule were inoperative.

Union officers J. A. Robertson and W. J. Winston, chairmen of the road's lines east and west, replied that the brotherhood was always ready to respond to individual cases where the company waited to give an employe a higher pay rate for greater efficiency or exceptional ability. Waller had argued that when the company was willing to pay an individual worker more, the seniority rule had enforced the same rate for all in his grade, unless a special case were made for him.

Arbitrator William B. Wilson, chosen by the union, stated his belief that the seniority rule had generally increased the efficiency of the railroad file.

Current Events

there are certain things that countries seem to forget that countries long under the yoke of imperialism, countries like China, India, Egypt and races like the Jews and the Negroes, are the victims of a propaganda designed to humiliate them and render them objects of universal scorn.

* * *

ENGLAND is a past master in this art., She is working it off on the Chinese just now, as well as on the Hindoos. Sure, England would have no objection to a United India or a United China if only the Chinese and Hindoos stopped killing each other! Indeed, England is engaged in the altruistic work of protecting the peoples of those countries from each other. In Ireland it was the catholic and protestant religions that prevented the Irish from getting freedom. The fact is that British money and British intrigue is the chief cause of the disunity of those countries which British imperialism holds for purposes of exploitation. She fastened the opium trade on China at the point of a gun, exploited Chinese workers at the point of the bayonet and now tries to block the onward march of the Nationalist movement with warships, tanks and purchased Chinese generals.

THE same attitude is being developed here towards the Filipinos and Latin Americans. The idea is being planted in the public mind that those peoples cannot live together in harmony. The bayonets of American soldiers must be interposed between the perpetually warring factions. It is the old imperialist method under the slogan "Divide and Conquer." Radical workers should be careful not to use the bourgeois flunkeys from the editorial scribblers to the buffoon comedians on the stage. The battle-array against world imperialism will find the insulted, bullied, exploited and humiliated subject peoples lined up with the exploited workers and farmers of the so-called free countries against the common enemy, unless our stupidity throws them into the arms of the foe.

CARMENT WORKER PRISONERS WRITE LETTER TO COMMITTEE OF HUNDRED COMMENDING CAMPAIGN

The nine prisoners held at Hart's Island because of their activities in the cloakmakers' strike appealed to the committee of one hundred to "give us a helping hand" in a letter received yesterday by Ann Washington Craton, secretary of the committee.

Thank Committee.

The prisoners had read in the newspapers the attacks made by Morris Sigman of the International upon the committee and its attempts to take a defense fund to work for their release, and to give aid to their families. They declare in their joint letter "we are thanking you and wishing you success in this great undertaking which means our freedom."

Their letter was as follows:

New York Penitentiary
Hart's Island, New York.
Sec. of Committee of Hundred,
Civic Club, 18 E. 10 Street, N. Y.

Dear Miss Ann Washington Craton:

We, the undersigned prisoners of the recent garment strikes, at Hart's Island read a statement in the press that a committee of one hundred has been organized for the purpose of freeing the prisoners of the recent cloak and furrier's strikes.

We wish and hope that the fair and liberal minded people of this great country will give you a helping hand in its $250,000,000 deposits, which enslaved to rule the Far East from its vantage point on the stolen island of Hongkong, already enters the eclipse. How soon before the Imperial Bank of India and the Central Bank of India in Bombay fall before the revolt of Asia's rising masses?

ANGLO-AMERICAN BANKS DRAW TRIBUTE FROM EVERY PART OF EARTH WHICH CAPITAL RULES

Those figures have no parallel in any other country. The huge reserves of $25 billions in deposits easily crowd out competition from any and all other capitalist nations. Look at the first 10 banks:

1.	Midland, London	$1,783,000,000
2.	Lloyds, London	1,684,000,000
3.	Barclays, London	1,508,000,000
4.	Westminster, London	1,384,000,000
5.	National Provincial London	1,261,000,000
6.	National City New York	1,063,000,000
7.	Federal Reserve New York	925,000,000
8.	Chase National New York	852,000,000
9.	Bank of England London	625,000,000
10.	Bank of Montreal Montreal	656,000,000

The English banks rank first because they constitute the Big Five, which controls 95 per cent of the entire banking structure of England. But the combined deposits of the 150 largest Anglo-American banks are split nearly 50-50 between the British and the United States, with $17,000,000,000 in 91 U. S. banks and $17,585,000,000 in 59 British Empire institutions.

The Far-flung Empire is represented in the 10th bank in size, the Bank of Montreal, Canada; the 12th, the Royal Bank of Canada at Montreal; the 17th, the Commercial Bank of Australia, in Sydney; the 18th, the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Toronto; the 21st, the Imperial Bank of India in Calcutta and Bombay. Other Empire banks with deposits of more than $200,000,000 are to be found in Hongkong, Manchester, Edinburgh and Halifax.

The only force which could ever overthrow such a colossus is that of the exploited peoples of the world. Already the workers of half of Europe and Asia, as represented in the Soviet Union and China have thrown off the possibilities of bondage to London and New York. The great Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, with

Nordics Only at Training Camps, Negro Informed

In spite of the eagerness of the war department to line up potential cannon fodder in the form of re-cruits schooled at the Citizens' Military Training Camps, it has barred Marsden V. Burnell, of 137 Edgecomb Ave., on account of the fact that he is a Negro.

The young man declares that when he was turned down he was advised to apply for admission to the government camp at Atlanta, but he learned subsequently that no provision was made at that place for the reception of Negroes.

Injunctions Will Not Stop Union Work in Jersey

NEWARK, N. J.—(FP)—Building trades union and the teamsters' brotherhood have formed an alliance in the five counties of northern New Jersey to unionize all trucking firms and building material and supply houses. This alliance will not be defeated by injunctions, say trade union organizers.

The organizers are referring to the injunction that Vice Chancellor Backes has indefinitely extended against a group of local unions that are carrying on an effective drive in the booming suburban sections of Bergen County, across the Hudson from New York City.

Hudson, Essex, Bergen, Passaic and Union counties all have strong organizations of carpenters, bricklayers and plasterers, hoisting engineers, iron workers and other building trades unions. In fact the iron workers are far better organized there than in New York City. But with the exception of Essex county, where the city of Newark is, the mill work is largely non-union. And Hudson County, containing Jersey City, is the only north Jersey section where the teamsters and truck chauffeurs are a hundred per cent organized.

The drive now to iron out the scab places is getting enthusiastic support. By solidarity between the building and hauling trades the workers expect to override all obstacles.

In granting the extension to his writ the vice chancellor raised the key of "boycott." The unions are enjoined from interference with the business of the plaintiff firms. They are charged with forcing builders to boycott all non-union material dealers and trucking concerns.

The injunction lists at least 500, teamsters and chauffeurs, and John Conlin, business agent of locals 825 and 825-A, steam and operating engineers, and Edward Shinn, business agent and the Bergen County Board of Business representatives. Complainant firms are the Tidewater Coal & Supply Co., the Comfort Coal Lumber Co., the John G. Wehrle Co., the Hackensack Gas Co., Weisberger & Sons, Inc., and F. Schultz & Sons. Employers from other counties are supporting the Bergen firms and the Bergen unions face the locking of the organizations outside.

"Prosperity" Wanes as Big Crop of Failures Is Reported for 1927

That the much-vaunted "prosperity," so widely advertised by Messrs. Curry and Coolidge, is on the decline is indicated by the great number of business failures for the first quarter of the year, according to the report of R. G. & Co.

The failures for the first quarter of 1927 totalled 6,651, while the failures for the same period in 1926 amounted to 6,961. The failures for the first quarter of 1925 were 5,969.

"America First" Slogan Fooled Chicago Voters

By THURBER LEWIS

(Special To The Daily Worker)

CHICAGO, Ill. April 8. — A few thousand short of a million votes were cast: "Big Bill" Thompson's eighty-three thousand majority was created by working class ballots; the republican "spoils committee" met Wednesday to divide the pork after an election on a plane lower than that of any election ever held anywhere—these are the outstanding post-election facts seen by Communist observers here, the death of whose candidate, the late C. E. Ruthenberg, made it difficult for the Workers (Communist) Party to effectively carry its message to the hundreds of thousands of workers duped by the flood of old party hokum.

Fake Issues.

The campaign was conducted on fake issues. No attempt was made by either the Thompson crowd or the Brennan democratic machine to present a platform. Personalities were made to stand out; religious and racial issues were arbitrarily injected by both sides; the questions of public utilities, rates and taxes around which municipal elections usually turn were subdued. The election was decided largely by showmanship, "Big Bill" proved to be the better Barnum.

It was plain thruout, however, that Thompson had the support of the working class districts. He also bid successfully for the votes of the South Side Negro wards which gave him huge majorities. Bever, on the other hand, had the unqualified endorsement of Chicago big business. The gold coast whooped it up for the incumbent mayor thruout. Bever conducted what his managers called a "dignified" campaign. But at the same time Chicago's Tammany spread dodgers and talk calculated to appeal to race prejudice on the ground of Thompson's Negro support.

Thompson Pulls "America" Stuff.

Thompson's strategy was to draw attention away from his eight previous and thereby rotten years as mayor by raising the slogan of "America First," posing as the friend of the "common people", slinging political vaudeville shows with himself as leading man, making wise cracks about King George, and promising to make the town swinging wet. It was the strategy of the showman—and it won.

This of course is not all. It was the machine on both sides that really counted. Brennan and his democratic ward heelers did their best to mobilize the underworld as "repeaters" and for purposes of intimidation. But States Attorney Crowe, Thompson's boss, seemed to have a better standing with the thugs and beer-runners. So far as money was concerned, there was a show of heavy funds in both camps.

Labor's Share In Contest.

But of special interest to The DAILY WORKER is labor's share in the contest. It was plain from the outset that organized labor was completely demoralized by the sell out of its own leadership—some to Thompson, some to Bever. The labor-smashing records of both would have stayed the bullets of thousands of trade unionists had there been a leadership prepared to lay bare the innumerable anti-working class acts of both previous administrations. The mud-sea of graft and corruption in the midst of which both Bever and Thompson have sat in City Hall would have turned the political stomachs of more thousands of workers, union and unorganized, if it had been exposed by an honest labor leadership.

Two examples are enough. John L. Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor comes out for Bever on the ground that Thompson's behavior when he was mayor was consistently anti-labor. Alderman Oscar Nelson, vice-president of the Federation, endorses Thompson and trams his guns on the anti-labor record of Bever. Boiled down, the situation simply means that there may as well have been no Federation so far as its defense of the workers' interests in the election was concerned.

With the exception of a few unions like the streetcar men who had special trade grievances against one or the other of the two candidates, organized labor at large was left entirely at the mercy of the heelers and the propaganda of the two machines.

Workers Are Victims.

Unprotected by even a pretense at putting forth the demands and needs of the workers, Chicago's hundreds of thousands of proletarian voters were the unsuspecting victims of two political machines unsurpassed in corruption and perfidy. Most of them were roped in by the Thompson method.

Many of them took seriously his yokel-yanking cry of the danger of King George, others took it as a good joke and voted for him because he made them laugh. He promised that no policemen would be allowed to "fan their mattresses for pints" under his administration and they liked it. He told them he would tear out the water maters that Bever put in their barcmants and they believed him also, of course, he won't do anything of the sort.

He told them that he will do away with the bread lines and put all the unemployed to work. There was no one to tell them that a mayor can't do this. He called Mayor Bever a high-brow and a pet of the gold coast while he labelled himself a cowboy and an ordinary guy, one of the boys, a member of the "common people."

He said he would kick out school superintendent Mackenzie who is hailed by all working class school parents. They were elated by this and unreminded of the fact that Thompson tried to break up the teachers' union, that his whole school board was indicted for graft.

Political Strategy.

Such was the strategy that won the working class vote. Just now, the spoils committee is divvying up at City Hall. The Crowe-Thompson cohorts are handling out the jobs and preparing to collect the kitty from the thousands of bootleg joints and cathouses that have been forking over to Brennan for the past four years. King George will be forgotten and when the next big strike rolls around strike-breaker Crowe will be on the job with his injunction again.

In the meantime there remains only one thing to be done about it. Four years from now there has to be a labor party in the field to spoil Thompson's next election gag—probably the "yellow menace" instead of King George or the Chicago Federation of Labor may as well move its headquarters to the city building and let the political bosses take charge.

Detroit Will Have "Hands Off China" Meeting for 14th

DETROIT, April 8. — The first "Hands Off China" meeting of Detroit has been arranged for Thursday, April 14 at 8 p. m. in Mack Square Theater, corner Woodward and Willis under the auspices of the Detroit Anti-imperialism Association. Admission 35 cts.

Among the speakers will be representatives of the Kuomintang, Hindu organizations, Labor Unions, Liberals, the Workers (Communist) Party and others.

The Detroit Anti-imperialist association has been formed as a permanent body to fight against invasion of China and other colonial and semi-colonial countries. The organization took place at a conference called recently by Young Asia at which the following were represented: The Kuomintang, Chinese Students Club, Filipino Association, American Negro Labor Congress, Hindu clubs, Society of Friends, Gaelic Club, Liam Lynch Club, Armenian Red Cross, International Students Club, Workers (Communist) Party, Women's Federation of Detroit, Young Workers League, International Labor Defense and individuals.

A wider conference of all workers, progressive and liberal organizations is called for Friday, April 29.

Workers Mass Meeting In Passaic Tomorrow

PASSAIC, N. J., April 8.—In support of the two working class candidates for city commissioners, Simon E. Bambach and Simon Smelkinson, a mass meeting will be held here Sunday afternoon, at 4 P. M., at the Russian National Home, Fourth and Hudson Streets.

The speakers will be William W. Weinstone, General Secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party of New York; Lena Chernenko, an organizer during the recent textile strike here and Enid Gardos.

'Talk and Look' Phone Perfected Here Yesterday

Every man ran in a room here today and watched the facial expression of Secretary Herbert Hoover as he talked over long distance telephone from Washington to President Walter S. Gifford of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company who was at the New York end of the wire.

It was the first formal demonstration of television—"seeing over the telephone."

Hoover could be seen and heard, distinctly, and at the same time.

An equally marvelous demonstration of "seeing over the radio" was then given. The audience saw the room in which they were sitting connected with the telephone company's station, located at Whippany, N. J., and within a few seconds were seeing and hearing at the same time a radio performance transmitted by television from Whippany.

Furrier Leaders Defy the Bosses At Huge Meetings

Walsh Brands Post Story False.

Frank P. Walsh last night categorically denied the story which appeared in the New York Evening Post yesterday that the leaders of the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union "will tell how they bribed police" during the recent strike.

Walsh, who is appearing as counsel in the present hearing before Magistrate Corrigan inspired by a coalition of reactionary officials of the International Fur Workers' Union, labor fakers of the A. F. of L., and active socialists, branded the Post story as a fake and declared that there was no justification for such a theory.

Five thousand furriers packed Cooper Union and Webster Hall last night and cheered their leaders as they declared that the employers would be forced by the strength of the workers to abondon their attempts to make an alliance with the officers of the American Federation of Labor and the International.

Don't Fear A. F. of L..

"As in the time of the strike, the workers declared the combination of the bosses and the International officials, so they will again defeat the combined forces of the right wing, and the American Federation of Labor and the employers and the gangsters, who are attempting to smash the union and enforce their control," declared Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board. He warned the employers against attempting to force the workers to register in a "fake union that the workers do not recognize."

Gold received a tremendous ovation when he appeared on the platform of Cooper Union, for the last time, before he goes to trial on Monday with other union leaders on framed up charges in the famous "Mineola Case."

Cannot Break Union, Says Gold.

Referring to his coming trial, he declared that it was the hope of the right wing that the Joint Board would disintegrate if it could succeed in placing Gold in jail. "The union cannot be broken by such tactics, either," he said. "If I have to go to jail, the management of the Joint Board will be turned over to a management committee of three leaders, S. Gross, chairman of the business agents, S. Lubowitz, assistant manager of the Joint Board, and Irving Potash, manager of the complaint and contracting department," he said.

Workers Intimidated.

The attempts of the International to intimidate the furriers into registering by surrounding them with gangsters were related by Fannie Warshawsky and other speakers. She told of an incident which occurred on Thursday, when the workers of the H. Heller shop, and the Weidenstein shop, both at 333 Seventh Ave., found themselves hemmed in by a cordon of guerillas and members of the International squad, who "steered" them to the offices of the "scab union."

Warning By Hyman.

Louis Hyman, manager of the Cloakmakers' Joint Board, warned the breakdown of union standards in cloak and dress shops because of the "willingness of the International officials to betray all of the interests of the workers in order to gain the support of the bosses."

Other speakers at the meeting included M. Arbeitlus, M. Lipsin, A. Liebowitz and Louis Cohen, of the furriers. Resolutions adopted at both meetings pledged the workers to "stand behind our constitutionally elected and tried representatives of the Joint Board."

Makes Plea for United Latin-American Front To Fight Imperialism

MADRID, April 8.—"The imperialism of the United States" was attacked in a lecture here by Professor Camilio Barcia, international law authority.

"If South America doesn't purify itself it will be obliged to follow the United States in imperialism," said Professor Barcia. "Petty nationalism in South America threatens the existence of the southern nations, which should unite to fight the common imperialist danger."

NINE MILLION PROFITS MADE FROM $25,000 IN SINGLE YEAR BY BREAD TRUST HIGH FINANCE

A wild tale of frenzied finance comes to light in a Wall Street suit which claims that $25,000 grew into $9,000,000 profits within 12 months. A few more millions will be added unless Kenneth H. Bristol, a partner in the enterprise who declares he has been defrauded, gets his. The deal involved the Continental Baking Co., better known as the Bread Trust, under the control of the notorious William B. Ward, whose son's marriage scandals have been front page stuff in the tabloids for years.

Ward, faced with Federal Trade Commission prosecution in the bread trust charges, framed up a new company to take over big flour mill interests which he owned. Two obscure Wall Street speculators, whose joint brokerage account was a little over $27,000, swung the deal, buying out a $3,500,000 company for $25,000 down payment. By certain financial hokus-pokus, other mills were added to the original deal until a $9,000,000 profit was obtained within twelve short months.

American Legion Gets Two Teachers Fired From Jobs

PHILADELPHIA April 8.—The American Legion rested from its labors in preparation for its revels in Paris during the forthcoming convention to be held in May, to get two professors at the Westchester normal school fired from the faculty.

Robert T. Kerlin, head of the English department and John A. Kinneman of the social science department were the victims of the chronic "patriotism" of the legionnaires.

The professors were charged with making remarks before the Liberal Club of the school "which expressed defiance to the feelings of citizens who still believe in patriotism and that our country is not always wrong," according to Samuel W. Long, commander of the local post of the warriors.

picture of events we will be able to make the necessary conclusions."

Seek British Hand.

Pravda in fact entertained in its comment. "Upheard of provocation and unprecedentedly virious deeds have been committed in China", said Pravda. "Outrages have been made, property stolen, employes arrested and submitted to humiliation. The workers of the Soviet Union will respond with indignation. Chang Tso Lin would not dare attack of his own initiative. He had the mandate of the head of the Peking diplomats. This substitute for England pursues evil Chang with permission. These diplomatic leaders are attempting to ignite a world-wide fire."

Cannot Break Union, Says Gold.

Protests Shanghai Insult.

SHANGHAI, April 8.—M. Linde, Soviet consul general, today lodged a protest against the action of the Shanghai municipal council in surrounding the consulate and searching everyone who enters or leaves. Municipal police and White Russians not only surround the consulate, but have also surrounded the Russo-Asiatic Bank.

Jingoists here are clamoring for the imperialist occupation of the native city of Shanghai. Whether or not British and American troops will dare to occupy the Chinese settlement is a matter of discussion in the international settlement.

Boycott Spreads.

Despatches received here indicate that the anti-American boycott begun in Changshu is rapidly spreading in Hunan Province.

Chang Continues Terrorism.

PEKING, April 8.—Chang Tso Lin is continuing his campaign of terrorism in the north. Yencheng University, an American missionary institution, located a few miles outside of Peking has been warned of a possible raid.

Holds Americans.

Mrs. Mildred Mitchell, formerly of San Francisco, and Wilbur Burton, formerly of Columbus, Ohio, Americans who had been captured by Chang Tso Lin in his raids are still being held by the Manchurian war lord.

Attempt To Provoke Russia.

LONDON, April 8.—Articles appearing in the British die-hard press seem to indicate that the raids on the Soviet embassy in Peking were inspired by Great Britain.

Taunting Soviet Russia and daring her to take action, today's Morning Post says, "A heavy blow to Soviet prestige has been struck by the raid on the Russian embassy compound at Peking."

Ship For Marines.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Arrangements are being made for a commercial ship to take to China the 1,500 marines now being assembled at San Diego, the navy department announced today. The last contingent will arrive in San Diego on Tuesday. Sailing orders are expected shortly.

If the Chinese situation does not "improve", the marine corps may recall some troops from Nicaragua and navy yards for Chinese duty, it was declared.

Passaic Communists Open Campaign This Coming Sunday Eve.

About 20 capitalist politicians are suffering themselves as candidates for city commissioners. Besides the former, strike-breaking administration, headed by the famous McGuire and Preiskel, we find about 15 opposition candidates of all shades. The majority of them do not see any other issues than graft, "clean city," slanders and boosting their own records. Even the two "friendly" candidates endorsed by the CLU, the manufacturer Cabell and the detective-head Turner are quiet about the real issues, unemployment, lessons of the strike, unionism, etc.

Only two candidates are the real representatives of labor, having a constructive program on every issue of the campaign, S. E. Bambach and Simon Smelkinson, endorsed by the Passaic local of the Workers (Communist) Party are fighting against the bosses city administration, to relieve unemployment, to build unions, for a labor party.

The opening rally of these "labor candidates with a labor program" will be held this Sunday, April 10, at 4 p. m. at Russian National Home, 4th and Hudson street. W. W. Weinstone, J. J. Engdahl, Lena Chernenko and Enid Gardos will be the main speakers. All workers are welcome.

Plasterers Strike In Gary Resulting In Many Victories

GARY, Ind., April 8.—The strike of the plasterers in this city is progressing successfully. Union representatives say they are well satisfied with the situation, declaring that more union men are working now than last week. All but seven contractors in the city have made verbal agreements for the $2 a day wage increase and the five-day week.

Arrest Two Pioneers In Akron for Giving Leaflets to Workers

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

AKRON O., April 8.—Peter Bunt and Walter Kornkowsky, the latter a Pioneer, aged 13 were arrested while distributing Workers (Communist) Party shop bulletins at the gates of the Goodyear, Tire and Rubber Co.

No charges were placed against them and they were released when they upheld their right to distribute literature on a public thoroughfare. Little Walter could not be intimidated by the questions of the detectives. He was a Pioneer, he said, and believed in organizing workers for better conditions.

At the other gates the distributors were not molested. About 2,000 bulletins passed into the hands of the rubber workers. They were well received, for they passed eagerly from hand to hand.

Tax Board Chairman Resigns.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Colgate Gilliam Keiser, Jr., today resigned as chairman of the United States board of Tax Appeals. He will retire on April 15.

The Right Wing is Defeated Twice in Two Days.

The right wing in the needle trades, in spite of the renewal of the drive on the rank and file under pressure of the American Federation of Labor's special union wrecking committee, has suffered two defeats in the last two days.

The first defeat was delivered by the membership of the Furriers' Union when 3,000 fighting workers jammed Webster Hall and Cooper Union to show in an unmistakable manner their loyalty to the leadership and program of the left wing and their hatred and contempt for the right wing, its allies the bosses and the stoolpigeon tactics of this array of cockroach capitalists and corrupt labor officials.

All reports agree that no more enthusiastic and determined meeting has been held since the right wing began its disruptive action.

The second defeat has occurred as a result of the flop which the "investigation" of police bribery engineered by Woll and Green and Frayne has become. Only the friendliness of the capitalist press to these three mouth fighting musketeers has prevented the whole affair turning into a public farce.

Neither Porthos Green, Aramis Woll nor D'Artagnan Frayne has been able to name even one policeman or detective to whom the left wing paid money. Since they charged that the Communists had whole police precincts and the entire industrial squad on the payroll, their failure to dig up even one lone "harness bull" who got the price of a drink of third-rail hooch lends color to the belief that they have been victimized by still more reckless liars—their socialist party officialdom allies.

But the actions of the two most prominent heads of the American labor movement and their man Friday Frayne in this situation are something worse than ridiculous and our laughter should not lead us to forget that these high-salaried frequenters of palatial hotels have spit on the one tradition above all which American labor held sacred, i. e. the tradition that under no circumstances and no matter what the provocation, no union member or official should unite with the police, bosses and courts against other union members and other sections of the labor movement in cases growing out of strikes and internal union struggles.

Green, Woll, Frayne, Sigman, Shachtman, Beckerman, joined by the officialdom of the socialist party and the Forward, have become part and parcel of the punitive machinery of Tammany Hall. They have forfeited their right to be looked upon as anything else than enemies of the labor movement. They are Civic Federationists.

They will be driven out of the labor movement just as soon as the workers know what their actions mean. No effort must be spared to the end that every trade unionist knows that in New York their officials are not fighting the bosses but have united with them and with all other enemies of the labor movement to railroad to jail the officers and members of needle trade unions who got the 40-hour week in the fur section of the industry.

It is to punish this crime against efficiency unionism and boss-controlled unions that Green, Woll, Frayne, Sigman, etc. have banded together with bankers, bosses, police, gunmen, spies and the capitalist press.

War Preparations Against China Increase

Developments in the Chinese situation are in two directions: First, dispatches from as far north and west as Kalgan show that even in this remote section the anti imperialist movement is alive and active. All China with the exception of Manchuria proper has combined to smash foreign domination.

Second, the imperialist powers, especially the United States, are strengthening their armed forces. The Dollar steamship line apparently has been requisitioned by the war department for the transportation of troops and although there are contradictory rumors it seems certain that another regiment of marines and two batteries of artillery have been ordered to China.

The strikes which are taking place in Hankow and other large centers and which are directed principally against imperialist enterprises, are so effective that the foreign warships up the Yangtse River are having difficulty getting coal. Admiral Williams has informed the war department that it may be necessary to send all coal burning gunboats back to Shanghai for this reason.

At Changsha a boycott and strike against American firms has been declared. The crews on all Standard Oil boats have struck. This is only the beginning of a mass movement which will make American imperialism remember Socony Hill for a long time to come.

Postal workers, custom house workers, seamen and transport workers are striking in a dozen different cities. It is evident that the trade unions are directing their efforts to hampering the key services as much as possible and thereby tying the hands of the imperialist forces.

The published accounts of the notes sent to the People's government by the United States, Great Britain and Japan indicate that no ultimatums were delivered and this is at variance with the continued provocation and preparation for war by the imperialist powers. Their actions take on still more of a conspirative character in view of the sensational information cabled The Nation by one of its Chinese correspondents to the effect that the missionary, Williams, and other foreigners killed in Nanking were killed by retreating Shangtungese troops and that the soldiers of the Peoples Army were in no way responsible.

The events since the bombardment of Nanking all fit into one pattern—a war pattern.

There are now 28 warships of the imperialist powers anchored in the port of Hankow approximately 800 miles up the Yangtse River. Foreigners are leaving and if the statements of the capitalist press correspondents can be believed in this respect preparations are being made to bombard the city as soon as all foreign residents have left.

Stopping war on China is now the main task of the working class in the imperialist nations. The Hands Off China meeting

Economic Notes

By T. LOAF.

TWO so-called gentlemen slipped out recently quite unnoticed from New York, Messrs. Mlynarski and Kszyzanowski, members of a special Polish financial mission that has stayed here for about five weeks on a usual errand. As is customary with these missionaries, they "denied coming here for a loan." You see, they have not gotten it yet, or to put it differently, "the loan is likely later."

For prior to obtaining a loan the Polish government must accept the terms of a financial reorganization worked out by the now notorious American "economic consulting doctor," Prof. Kemmerer of Princeton University. The Polish government has suggested certain modifications" in the Kemmerer program that to all appearances led to a greater financial independence of the Polish state and incidentally to broader possibilities of graft and corruption on the part of the Polish officials. So or otherwise, the Polish missionaries apparently have not been able to obtain the desired changes, for—to put it in the Aesopian jargon of the financial newspaper scribes—"all differences regarding details in the report had been cleared up and the Polish government would soon give its approval in its entirety." A loan, unriedly estimated as between $50,000,000 and $200,000,000 would then be its reward.

Incidentally, a certain Mr. Feitelberg is negotiating meanwhile with Polish officials about "revaluation" of some 5 per cent bonds, issued by the city of Warsaw in 1921 and sold to American investors. Mr. Feitelberg represents 2,000 out of 7,000 American bondholders who paid for the bonds $600,000 and would like the "revaluation" offered by the city of Warsaw, be able to cash in on them exactly one tenth of this sum, or $60,000. The bondholders prefer, somewhat less lucrative "conversion."

IT was in the summer of 1926 that the "economic consulting doctor" worked out the plans for "reorganizing the finances" of Poland. His recommendations" included even the drafting of the laws necessary for the execution of the reforms, leaving to the "sovereign" Polish nation the task of bedding the land and, of course, paying the expenses.

Since then Mr. Kemmerer left for South America where he succeeded already in "reorganizing the finances" of Bolivia and is now in Bolivia "to aid the economic structure" of that country. Prior to that he reorganized the finances of Chile, Columbia, Guatemala, Philippines and other colonial and semi-colonial countries. It is but logical that he should have also participated in drafting the Dawes plan for Germany.

The secret of the "financial reorganization," mapped out by this agent of American imperialism is rather simple. Balance the budget, stabilize your currency on a gold basis among others (to give an outflow to the gold surplus of the U. S.), bind your exchange preferably to the dollar, accept the control of your financial (political as well) affairs by special (American) "financial advisers," and you may expect a flow of American dollars "to build up the country" and incidentally also hordes of American promoters and speculators to "get the gravy."

IT is a somewhat remarkable coincidence that just at present these are the fascist and reactionary countries that are on the list for getting American dough. Next to Poland that is right now busy suppressing her agrarian unrest by breaking up peasant organizations and jailing their leaders in spite of their supposed parliamentarian immunity, it is Italy that is to get more than $100,000,000 in various municipal and industrial loans. Then comes Brazil and Peru, both countries whose governments excel in suppressing their labor movements and maintain themselves by sheer use of force. The role of American finance in safeguarding "democracy" by keeping in the saddle the most abominable suppressors of the popular masses is daily becoming more grateful.

"China Today," Topic At the Workers' School Forum Sunday Night

Samuel Shu, of the "Chinese Workers Alliance," will lecture at the Workers School Forum, 108 East 14th Street, this Sunday night (April 10), on the interesting problem which has been so much discussed in the press of the entire world during the past week, namely, the problem of The Inner Situation of the Kuomintang Party of China. The relationship between Communists and non-Communists, between workers, peasants, students, merchants, manufacturers and all the other complicated class problems which constitute the inner politics of the Kuomintang, will be taken up as well as the relationship between the political Bureau of the Kuomintang and the military staff of the People's National Army. The General title of Mr. Shu's lecture is "What is Happening in China?"

His lecture will be followed next Sunday night, April 17, by a lecture by Jay Lovestone, Acting General Secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, on "America and the Next War," and on Sunday, April 24, Joseph Freeman, proletarian journalist, who is returning from Russia on April 15, will lecture on "Russia in 1927."

Workers Party Membership Meeting.

NEWARK, March 8.—A special membership meeting of the Workers (Communist) Party will be held next Tuesday evening, at the Labor Lyceum, 808 So. 14th St. The Ruthenberg membership drive and the campaign for The DAILY WORKER will be the subjects to be especially considered. All members are urged to attend.

Reaction Must Not Crush The Daily Worker

For three years The DAILY WORKER has raised aloft the banner of militant opposition to American imperialism. For three years it has been in the forefront of the struggle for progressive trade unionism and for the organization of the unorganized. For three years it has maintained a sharp criticism of the institutions of American capitalism. Comrade Ruthenberg devoted himself unsparingly to the establishment and the strengthening of this weapon. And now reaction seeks to crush our paper.

The efforts of the National Security League, the American Patriotic Society, the Bomb Squad, and the District Attorney to crush The DAILY WORKER must not succeed. The DAILY WORKER means too much to the working class, for us to permit it to succumb under the iron heel of capitalism. The Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund has been launched to build a better and stronger DAILY WORKER. In the midst of this campaign we have been made the target of a vicious and powerful attack. We will utilize the resources obtained to fight against this attack. With the funds obtained we will not only repel these attacks but we will mobilize even greater resources behind our paper.

Now is the time when the paper needs your help most. Help to defend it against the attack of the exploiters. Help to build it in the interests of the working class. Contribute to the Ruthenberg Sustaining Fund. Act now!

Ford Workers Donate $100 to Ruthenberg Sustaining Campaign

DETROIT April 8. — Inclosed find a contribution of $100.00 to the Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund from the Ford Nuclei Central Bureau.

The comrade of the Central Bureau who are responsible for the publication of the Ford Worker, realize the importance of maintaining The DAILY WORKER, the most powerful weapon in our struggle against imperialism. Comrade Ruthenberg gave his life to the revolutionary movement and we can't build a greater monument in his honor than the building up of a powerful Communist Daily. We pledge to "close our ranks" and "fight on" to final victory in the spirit and determination of our great leader, Comrade Ruthenberg.

Yours in the bitter struggle,
Ford Nuclei Central Bureau.

HOW TO SET FOREIGN NEWS: A SHORT COURSE FOR AMBITIOUS LINOTYPERS.

The rule to go by is to use the biggest possible type for rumors, allegations, indications, maybes, and other matter that is obviously fake. Unless set big such material will be overlooked. It is therefore the duty of editors and linotypers to make it big, bold and impressive. The subsequent denials or corrections should be set in agate. The original story has by that time been forgotten anyhow; or else it has been repeated so often that a correction does no good anyhow. In either case there is no use wasting space and lead, so set small.

A few samples will illustrate the general technique and should be useful to the linotypers, even if one of them (the one who sets this column) calls us names for giving him a lot of trouble.

I.

WASHINGTON, March 32.—Incomplete reports from China indicate a murderous attack upon foreigners in Nanking in which a vast number of Americans and other foreigners perished. No estimate of the dead is available, but there were 150 Americans on the scene and responsible officials in Washington therefore confidently hope for the worst.

Well-informed circles believe that women were among those attacked, and judge from their past experience in such things that many have been violated. A report that many women are in the hospitals lends color to this belief.

* * *

SHANGHAI, March 32.—Many foreigners, mostly Americans, were killed and wounded by Chinese ghouls in Nanking today. American women were attacked and raped. The hospitals are overcrowded with women injured from attacks.

II.

SHANGHAI, March 33.—Exact figures on the number of dead and wounded Americans in yesterday's massacre are not yet available. Naval statisticians have been busy all day making calculations.

III.

NANKING, March 35—Some American was killed in the Nanking shooting, and another sprained an ankle climbing over a fence. Two American women have been in the hospitals since January. They are tubercular patients.

A Christian Science Martyr Who Demonstrated Healing by Faith Though He Was Delirious and Died in the Attempt.—An obituary to Herbert B. Hanger, manufacturer of artificial limbs in Washington, D. C., appearing in "The Scalpel," a medical trade journal, gives the following graphic account of a heroic demise:

"On the Monday following Christmas he was taken violently ill during the afternoon with what appeared to be ptomaine poisoning. He was an ardent Christian Scientist, and from the beginning to the end he never faltered one iota in his belief that he would be restored. His faith was absolute. He was delirious at times, and at other times his sight, speech, and hearing were affected, but at all times when his mind was clear he refused all offers of medical aid and treatment. His character and determination of purpose were such that he would never entertain the thought of compromise. He lived and died in the faith he had chosen. Not a word of complaint nor the semblance of a sigh passed over his lips, even during the several periods when he must have realized that he was passing through the shadow of the valley. At other times, he stoically and without complaint went through extended though futile periods of the most intense suffering. IT WAS A MOST COMPLETE DEMONSTRATION OF THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE FAITH. He passed away on Wednesday, January 26th, at 7 o'clock in the evening."

The Triumph of Philosophy; For This Plato, Spinoza, Kant et el Lived and Labored.—The New York Telegram, famous for its philosophical outlook on life, announces in huge letters that Will Durant, who put a thrill in philosophy, will cover the Snyder murder trial. And its equally highbrow competitor, the tabloid Daily Mirror, is running a comic strip version of Dr. Durant's "Story of Philosophy."

Imperialist Etiquette.—After all the foreigners in Peking aren't as hard on the Chinese as people thought. Immunity from Chinese laws for the foreign embassies is one of the extra-territorial privileges that Great Britain, America and the rest hate to give up. But when it came to a test they relaxed. They gave permission to Chang Tso-lin's soldiers to raid the Soviet embassy, seize books and papers and arrest the personnel.

FROM A GALLERY OF FUTILITIES—

1. Courage and Convictions.

Bill is not among those who lack the courage of their convictions. Quite the contrary. He is simply bursting with courage. He would like to go out and smash things to hell. He wants to mount platforms and denounce something or somebody as they never have been denounced before. His eyes flash fire, and his gestures are fearless.

But he is unhappy. He, alas! suffers from the reverse complaint. He lacks convictions to match his courage. . . . He can find nothing in which he can believe hard enough and long enough to spend some of his fighting energy. It's killing him.

When Bill sees a new "cause" coming along he rushes to meet it. Maybe at last, he thinks, he will find something to fight for. But no . . . before he has so much as girded his loins to do battle, his faith ebbs and he finds himself high and dry looking for something else. He's tried nearly every thing, with the same result.

Bill, of course, likes to call himself a cynic.

Another Way To Be Comfortably Dead.—To the samples of luxury and ease possible for well-to-do corpses which we printed not so long ago, please add a third. The New York Mausoleum Association describes its "Cypress Hill Abbey" thus:

"A beautiful Mausoleum right in the city.
Location—Cypress Hills Cemetery.
Sponsored—By leading men of Brooklyn.
Approved—By leading Ministers.
Beautiful grounds—Ample fund for upkeep of building and grounds.
Cost—No more than first class ground burial. One cost only and that the first.
Beautiful Receiving Tomb for free use of Subscribers until building is completed.
A large percentage of space subscribed by leading families.
Terms may be arranged."

Settling the Nicaraguan Question.—Henry L. Stimson has been sent by President Coolidge to straighten the difficulties in Nicaragua. He is instructed to bring about peace. He was picked for the job, obviously, because he was formerly Secretary of War.

A Very Appropriate Choice.—"U. S. MAY SEND TROOPS TO CHINA BY DOLLAR LINE," a Herald-Tribune headline informs us.

DRAMA

Jewish Peasant Life

"The Idle Inn," Based on Jewish Folk Tale, Produced at Irving Place Theatre

Reviewed By A. B. MAGIL

When in 1921 Jacob Ben-Ami made his debut on the English-speaking stage under the management of Arthur Hopkins, one of the plays he appeared in was Peretz Hirshbein's "The Idle Inn," which he had performed successfully in Yiddish. I didn't see the play, but if I remember correctly, it proved a flop. "The Idle Inn" was probably too intimately Yiddish for successful translation, lacking as it did the melodramatic appeal of "The Dybbuk."

Now Ben-Ami, back on the Yiddish stage again, has revived this classic of the modern Yiddish drama at the Irving Place Jewish Art Theatre. He appears in the leading role, alternating with Anatol Vinogradoff. The latter played the part on the night I saw the performance, handling it capably.

Steals Bride.

"The Idle Inn" is based on a folk tale and its people have an elemental simplicity and heartiness. Malta, a country girl, is in love with her cousin, Itzik, a gay, handsome, blustering lad. But her father, Bendek, has other plans for her and arranges a match with Lalbush, the son of a neighbor. There is an old fan, said to be haunted by evil spirits, which Bendek proposed to rebuild for the young couple.

At the wedding feast three mysterious merchants appear and bring gifts for the bride. While the celebration is at its height, Itzik steals her away from under the very nose of the bridegroom. They wander about in the forest, where in a scene of alternate lovemaking and recrimination, they are discovered by Bendek, who rescues his daughter after a struggle with Itzik.

In the final act Bendek, goaded by the evil spirits, becomes insane and sets fire first to the idle inn and then to his own house.

Yiddish Pastorals.

A simple tale, told with beauty and tenderness. Peretz Hirshbein is the poet among Yiddish prose writers. He is the first true pastoral writer in modern Yiddish literature and he has brought the gaiety and sadness of Russian Jewish peasant life upon the stage. Because he believed in the beauty of that life, in its earthy wholesomeness and spontaneity, he wrote with conviction and depth. He can be lyrical without growing maudlin, naive without being commonplace. In the third act of "The Idle Inn," the scene between Itzik and Malta in the forest, there is luxuriant writing, words that break into flame and smolder in the darkness.

The play's chief weakness is its unconvincing end. "The Idle Inn," for all its romantic wistfulness, is comedy, and the tragic conclusion bears no organic relationship to the spirit of the play.

Uneven acting, often strident and exaggerated mar the play's essential delicacy. Once more the Yiddish actor, trained in naturalistic schools with the emphasis on the individual rather than on the play, stumbles over any role that happens to be outside his particular genre. There is, however, good work by Helen Zelinskaia, as Malta, Anatol Vinogradoff, as Itzik, and Gershon Rubin, as Malta's grandfather.

FRITZ WILLIAMS

Plays the role of the Dollar-a-Year-Patriot, in "Spread Eagle," Jed Harris' new drama at the Martin Beck Theatre.

Rumor has it that Minnie Maddern Fisk and Margaret Anglin, with Otis Skinner as their guest star, are planning to produce "The Merry Wives of Windsor," as the first of a series of revivals to be offered here.

WHEN A FARMER BEGS FOR RELIEF

EDITOR'S NOTES

By ALEX BITTELMAN

Southern employers of labor are deeply alarmed over the prospect of mass migration of Negro labor from the south. And well they might be. The restlessness and dissatisfaction of the Negro masses in the "southern heaven of happiness" is continually increasing. Whether the east, north or west really offer the Negro masses better conditions of life, the Negroes seem to feel that by leaving the south they stand to lose nothing. In other words, nothing can be worse than what the Negro worker and farmer are getting in the south.

The impending movement of thousands of Negroes from the south to Chicago has moved the capitalists and their newspapers in Arkansas, Tennessee, Louisiana and Alabama to frantic measures to prevent what they term "a shortage of labor on the farms and in the factories of those states."

An appeal issued by the city commissioners of Mobile, Alabama, through Mayor Hartwell, says in part:

> Many Alabama Negroes are leaving the south, going to Chicago, with a promise of social favor and rich employment. Believing that there is a better understanding between the Negro and the white man of the south than of any other section, we request that the Negro seriously consider a movement of the character before taking action, especially in view of the fact that unemployment is so widespread in the city of Chicago. Statistics recently published reveals that there are more than 25,000 [illegible] of coal in the city.

In their anxiety to keep the Negroes from leaving the south, the capitalists of that section are even ready to "thacken" the good name of Chicago by presenting Negro life there almost in its true light. Which, however, does not in the least detract from the hypocrisy of their appeal to the Negroes. Just imagine: the understanding between the Negro and the white man (read: capitalists—A. B.) in the south is better than in any other section! Is there anything more brazenly hypocritical than this?

To counteract the urge of the Negroes to migrate, the Mobile chamber of commerce pictures in glowing terms the grand possibilities for prosperity in the south. It says in its bulletin:

> Mobile has just reached the point in its industrial development where it can ill afford to lose any of its workmen. With the completion of our $10,000,000 dock system new industrial enterprises have sprung up here which utilize Negro labor extensively. Any considerable migration of Alabama Negroes to Chicago such as already has begun, would hamper Mobile and the entire south. The chamber of commerce earnestly requests all employers and others who have the interests of Mobile and the Negro at heart to check the spread of the rumor that big paying jobs are awaiting the southern Negro in Chicago.
> No doubt the opportunities for profit by exploiting southern labor in industrial enterprises are [illegible]

The fear of losing Negro labor is not confined to the capitalists of the southern cities alone, but is affecting seriously the slave drivers of the southern plantations as well. So much so that the commissioner of agriculture of Arkansas, M. W. Wilkes, feels compelled to deliver himself of the following:

> Negroes in Arkansas are being told tales of rich jobs and high social favors that await them in Chicago. We do not want to find ourselves in the position of being shorthanded on our farms and plantations. Planters should use proper influence to counteract such political propaganda as is being foisted upon the Negro of the south.
> We do not know the source from which this "political" propaganda is emanating. But we will not be surprised to hear that the Communists have something to do with it. Not because there would be any ground for a charge of this kind, but on the general principle, so cleverly enunciated by the British government, that wherever the capitalists are in trouble, look for the Communists.

This a very convenient kind of a principle. Just recently our secretary of state, Kellogg, tried to make use of it in the Nicaragua and Mexican situations but burned his fingers on it. Presumably, because of lack of skill. We are quite hopeful,

The Common Enemy

The military successes of the national army have not yet compelled American imperialism to abandon its position of a "Liberal onlooker." Even the first stages of Britain's struggle to retain its concession in Hankow left the White House relatively calm. The victory of the revolutionary troops, the determined action of the National government against extra-territoriality, did not in themselves imply that those social forces which will upset the calculation of American capitalism for the peaceful conquest of China have ripened, taken definite form and become strengthened. Only when the activity and the persistence of the working class and its influence upon the progress of events were revealed was Washington aroused.

Of course, the United States has "no imperialist aims in China." The official declaration of Mr. Coolidge advances the pious formula of the protection of the life and interests of American citizens, but as experience in Nicaragua teaches, behind this sentence there trails a long train of gunboats. Washington liberalism is dead.

AT the time when the White House still complied the position of the impartial observer the British press could hardly conceal its irritation. The Washington correspondent of the "Times" writes: "If it were not for the amazing willingness to believe that the Chinese mob would distinguish between one red-headed barbarian and another, always to the advantage of the American, there would be less complexity in the present problem as the administration sees it." It is not the fear of the excesses of the mob, but on the contrary the undoubted proof that the state of organization and the activity of the workers will prevent the bourgeois elements putting a stopper on the revolution, that compels American imperialism to resort to threats of intervention.

What is the point of the proposals which the United States government has made about China? The key to the vague and contradictory statements of Messrs. Kellogg and Coolidge is provided by the "North China Star," which puts forward the following remarkable suggestion: "Chang Tso-lin, Chang Kai-shek and Feng Yu-hsiang being the strongest men in China at the present time should each appoint a delegate, who, in conjunction with the Chinese minister in Washington, Alfred Sze, should negotiate a new treaty between Shanghai and the United States." American imperialism not only strives for peace and harmony between the revolutionary government and the Mukden reactionaries, but also to revive the moribund Peking government of Wu Pei-Fu. At whose expense do the peacemakers of the White House propose to abolish the civil war on all fronts in China? In any proof required that it is to be at the expense of the workers and peasants, who are interested in uprooting the economic foundations of imperialist domination in China?

Only a few months ago when America had every ground for believing that if the Chinese revolution was left to itself it would inevitably come to a halt in the capitalist cul de sac, American policy may have been practical; and that is why the tactics of Washington differed from the tactics of London by appearing to be more "liberal." Now, however, this view is proving to be more and more Utopian, and the Washington government is not disinclined to borrow weapons from the London arsenal. The British slogan: to break the worker and peasant backbone of the Chinese revolution by the threat of intervention, or by direct intervention, is gradually being adopted by American imperialism.

OF all the imperialist powers, Japan alone has managed to maintain in China a powerful and as yet unshaken military base. Whatever the differences between Chang Tso-lin and Japan may have been over the speculation in currency and the super-predatory economic policy of Japanese capitalists in Manchuria, the Mukden militarists have nevertheless remained vassals to Tokio. On the other hand, the disintegration and internal quarrels within the Mukden camp must not be exaggerated. Chang Tso-lin's army still represents a powerful factor of covert Japanese intervention in China. This explains why Japan so magnanimously abstains from open intervention. Moreover, owing to her geographical situation, Japan does not need to make long preparations beforehand for intervention.

All this gives the Japanese, who are past masters in the art of intrigue, more chance to cause a split in the national revolutionary movement. There is perhaps no other government in the world which betrays so much zeal and ability in utilizing not only social antagonisms but also personal differences within the national revolutionary movement as Japan.

In this connection the "peace" program which Chang Tso-lin submitted to the national revolutionary government, published in the Chinese press, is characteristic. One of the four points of the program consists of a proposal that the Canton government shall not hinder Chang Tso-lin, with the aid of his own forces, from coming to an agreement with the army of Feng Yu-hsiang! Chang Tso-lin's sudden outburst of "nationalism," his recent protest against the landing of foreign troops at Shanghai, and his demand for the annulment of the unequal treaties should be placed in the same category. The ambitious aims of the Mukden depot will be satisfied with nothing less than the title of President of the Chinese Republic. But this would imply that Japanese imperialism had at last managed to get the Peking government into its own hands; Peking then would not be the impotent body it is now, but would be considerably strengthened. Preceding this danger, the British manoeuvre in China is already demonstrating his restrained attitude towards the Peking government, and refrains from any official communication with them in writing, but conducts all business he has with them verbally.

Of the disagreements which are to be observed at the present time in the camp of the imperialists, Anglo-Japanese disagreements are most acute. Nevertheless, a single aim may at a certain moment combine these two imperialisms. That man is: At all costs to prevent the Chinese revolution from becoming a victorious struggle against imperialist oppression in all its forms.

THE task of the international proletariat in this most serious moment for the Chinese revolution is, first of all, to prevent an open military attack, even at the cost of extreme sacrifices. But in developing the mass militant energy that is necessary for the fulfilment of this task the international proletariat will at the same time raise the significance and weight of the Chinese proletariat to the level necessary for it to assume the leadership in the revolutionary alliance.

The VII. Enlarged Executive of the Communist International pointed to two dangers which threaten the Chinese revolution at the present time. First, the formation of a counter-revolutionary alliance, with the aid of the imperialists, to crush the national revolutionary movement, and, secondly, the attempt on the part of the bourgeoisie in the ranks of the nationalist movement to secure into its hands the leadership of the movement, in order to put a stop to the revolution. This warning has been confirmed by the progress of events. During the formation of the Canton

"U. S. and Britain Split Over China"—DAILY WORKER. This reminds us of the fable about the lion and the wolf.

Once upon a time a lion and a wolf went a-hunting. Suddenly they came upon a lamb. With one blow of his paw the lion killed the poor little lamb. "Half the lion to the wolf, "I killed this lamb and I'm going to eat it." Said the wolf, "No, you don't." And so they both began to fight.

While they were fighting, a fox came along and took the lamb away.

Of course you can see that the lion and the wolf are the United States and the British governments, the lamb is the wealthy land of China while the fox stands for the Chinese people.

OUR LETTER BOX

IN SCHOOL

Dear Comrades: I am going to write a few things about my school. They weighed a boy in school and found he only weighed fifty-four pounds. They also weighed my sister. Then sent the boy to a fresh air school and they said if my sister doesn't eat more and drink more milk she will have to go too.

But now in the world could my sister eat more and drink more milk if the bosses CUT our fathrrs' wages. My father was sick for eleven weeks, he cannot work and doesn't get any money.

The workers should not let your children go to a fresh air school, but you should FIGHT against these rotten old bosses for more money so that you could buy more food for your children.—HELEN KERTESZ.

WAR AND FASCISM

By ANNA VALATKA

I now recall in my mind the past days of 1916. At that time I was but a small child, but now I do understand in reading and writing, and so I want to tell the readers the why of the world war and fascism.

It was held in 1914 all throughout Europe, and especially Germany and France, the working class organized in strong unions, that kept the capitalist class them on the balance. The industries weren't very prosperous for the ruling class, on account of the workers being well organized. So what happened? The capitalists found themselves in very bad conditions. On one side the poor population, the consumers, on the other side, the workers cried for more bread. So the capitalists had to find the way to get out of those conditions. July 29th, 1914 the spark of war had to explode. The capitalists' excuse for a war was the murder of Prince Ferdinand in Serajevo, Serbia. Two days later the Austrian army was marching to war on the Serbian boys.

On the other side we found Germay and France fighting the conquest of the world market. So it was a good excuse for those nations to join the contest. Germany joined the Austrian forces. The rest of the European countries were watching closely the movements in order to get, Serbia was losing ground. Russia found the proper moment to come in the fight. So Old Czarist Russia and the other European nations, each dragged with them the rest of the world. In the war that lasted four years, millions were killed, millions were crippled for life, millions were left without fathers and mothers that were in the war and themselves without jobs. Many of them were impoverished by the fascist terror that swept all over Europe after the war.

We find but one country where the workers and farmers broke the chains of slavery. That country we is called Soviet Russia, and it is well loved by the workers of the world. But not so by the capitalist class, that tries to overthrow that government. We find the rest of the world a ruling class that keeps itself in power, with fascism and white terror.

I'll invite the workers of all races, believing in fighting against war and fascism (that means hunger and starvation for the working class) to support with all their power Soviet Russia.

It can be seen from near and far.
It leans the Reds through troubles,
It leads them through all woe,
And it makes me stronger and braver,
As I help the Reds to grow.

2.

The bosses he hated, the Reds he loved,
He believed in nothing that comes from above
He believed in helping the Reds and succeeded too,
So if you love Lenin stick to the Reds and be true

3.

Whenever I think of slacking, of Lenin I do think,
And then I brace up fighting, the bosses that do stink.

I resolve to do all I can, in helping the reds win,
Lenin, my star it is always you,
Who helps me, help my kin.

The bosses all sid hate him.
And scared of him they were
Lenin, he never feared 'em.
But showed them Who we were.

LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE

The answer to last week's puzzle Number 8 is WE THE CHILDREN OF THE WORKERS WILL FOLLOW OUR LEADER COMRADE RUTHENBERG, AND FIGHT ON BY JOINING THE YOUNG PIONEERS. Here are the names of those who answered correctly:

Vera Rasinsky, New York City; Joseph Goldfield, New York City; Josephine Pichler, North Bergen, N. J.; Vincent Dryzga, Bayonne, N. J.; Max Fechter, New York City; Sylvia Dimow, Brooklyn, N. Y.

More Answers To Puzzle No. 7

A PIONEER

TO ELIZABETH RENSZEL

A Pioneer is the dearest friend
A man could wish for.
He is true and faithful to the end
When he did years for more.

The Pioneer friend sticks to you.
Got like a jar of glue,
Be sure and appreciate him too
For he'll do all he can, for you.

RUTHENBERG SUB BLANK

Comrade Ruthenberg's last words were "Let's Fight On!" We children of the workers can best FIGHT ON against the bosses' teachings in school, by subscribing to, and getting subscribers for, the Young Comrade. This is a wonderful, big children's monthly newspaper that costs only 50c for a whole year or 25c for six months. WE'RE MOVING

Next week on, The Young Comrade corner will no longer appear in the magazine section of the DAILY WORKER. It will be printed on one of the regular pages of the Saturday's DAILY WORKER. This is forced to do for the section next week in this paper as there is no magazine.

THE LITTLE GREY DOG

Little Benjamin lived three many sad days. His father was so unhappy that he no longer wanted to work, and many evenings he would return home with his back all bloody. Instead of the caressing and joy to which Benjamin was accustomed there was an unaccustomed silence in the house. Tom sat sadly on the ground, sometimes stroking sadly the lonely head of his little son, but never speaking. Only once in a while he would cry out, "Bastard!" and sigh deeply, while great tears rolled down his black face. And sometimes he would clench his fist, looking so angry that Benjamin took the little dog and crawled into a corner with him.

The overseer was always unsatisfied with Tom, he complained to the master of the laziness and obstinacy of the slave. Had poor Tom known the results of his dissotenience, he would have worked as industriously as he used to, in spite of his anger and unhappiness.

The rich man celebrated his birthday. There was a great feast, chickens and calves and lambs were roasted, rich foods could be smelled all then in the house, the servants brought countless bottles of wine and beer. After supper the guests went to the B. (Continued)

The Molly Maguires

By A. BIMBA

A GREAT labor fakir by the name of George G. Korson raises the question in the "United Mine Workers' Journal" of March 15, 1927, about the activities of the Molly Maguires, an active secret organization of the miners in the sections of the hard coalmines. There can be no doubt that the title upon the Molly Maguires in the official organ of the United Mine Workers has the approval of Mr. John Lewis and other misleaders of the miners.

It is a disgraceful attempt to besmirch the name of these brave fighters in the early days of the American labor movement, who sacrificed their lives in order to make it easier for the future generations of the working class to lighten their burden of toil and suffering.

Mr. Korson has the audacity to represent the Molly Maguires in the eyes of the miners as an organization of ordinary criminals and murderers. Here is what he says:

"They (the Molly Maguires) continued their reign of terror with ever-increasing boldness until about 1876 when the shadow of the gallows or of ostracism finally felt-cause their conscience and crushed them.

"Colliery buildings were set to the torch; into mpits were made to blow up bridges used to dynamite railroad trains; while men were murdered often in broad daylight, the criminals fleeing to the mountains which lay conveniently at hand. The taking of a man's life became a trivial an act as beating had been earlier. They found themselves ruling the crest of a mighty wave of blood and the question began to be asked, could the stop of their own tradition?

"It became plain, then, that if the lawless band was to be destroyed, the inner circle would have to be penetrated. With this thought in mind, Frank B. Gowen, president of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron Company, hired Allan Pinkerton, head of the National Detective Agency in 1873.

And now Mr. Korson makes accusation against the miners' organization of the seventies taking as it seems the report of the spies and murderers of the Pinkerton's National Agency. He takes their word for gold and brands the predecessors of the United Mine Workers' of America as criminals! Only the meanest scoundrel can fall so low in his hate against those who dared to raise their hand against the coal barons.

The Molly Maguires were not criminals neither in their deeds nor in their methods. It was an organization of workers, not a criminal one, as far as the labor movement is concerned. Of course, in the eyes of the coal barons the Molly Maguires were criminals just as today the brave fighters of West Virginia are branded as criminals and are being persecuted with sword and fire.

The Mollie Maguires sprang up as a secret organization and attained great prominence in the midst of the most inhuman conditions in the coal fields of the country. The anthracite coal miners led a bitter strike in 1874-1875 which lasted for seven months and the workers were crushed into submission. The more militant and powerful Workingmen's Association was entirely disrupted. Wages were reduced and the miners found themselves in a desperate situation. There could be no talk about a legal organization of the workers. A secret action was the only thing possible. Therefore, the miners united their forces under the banner the Mollie Maguires, a secret organization. For the Irish miners of those days a secret organization was not a new experience—in the old country they, or at least some of them, had belonged to the Ancient Order of Hibernians which had been formed to fight the landlords' dynamite, tallow and torture, while men were murdered often in broad daylight, the criminals fleeing to the mountains which lay conveniently at hand. The taking of a man's life became a trivial an act as beating had been earlier. They found themselves ruling the crest of a mighty wave of blood and the question began to be asked, could the stop of their own tradition?

For a Workers' Theatre

3.—By no means do we wish a gloomy theatre, or a solemn theatre, or a morbid theatre, or a high-falutin theatre. What we wish is a theatre where the typically bourgeois subject of individual, mainly sexual, "love" sufferings, conflicts and problems is relegated to the rear, if not entirely abandoned, while the wider aspects of life—social, economic, political, cultural—including the emotions of men and women, not sugar-coated but real and convincing in their truth—occupy the front. We do not wish a theatre that preaches. We detest moralizing pieces. But similarly we detest empty, senseless pieces, anecdotes in three acts with lingerie and interior decoration. We wish to see things that are full of significance, strong, vital, vibrant, stirring, not only showing the tragic face of life, but also ready to laugh, to mock, to ridicule, to construe a grotesque image, to grip the soul with a sun-lit vision. We wish a theatre that lives a full-chested life instead of talking polite words in a drawing room or in a country club. We wish to see both suffering and joy, injustice and triumph, sweeping passions and life-giving ideas, wisdom and mirth, blackness and rainbow-spanned horizons, childishness and manhood, love and sacrifice, victors and vanquished—all this not in the abstract, but incarnated in people, appearing in the actions of living men and women.

4.—It is obvious that a theatre of this kind will depart in its methods from the purely "speaking" theatre with painted accnery. It will certainly be a construct-vist theatre, employing all elements that go into the formation of theatrical art: drama, music, plastic motion, sculpture, painting, lighting. While it is impossible and hardly desirable to lay down a rule as to what kind of production we would like to see in the workers' theatre, it is safe to say, negatively, that such theatre will not imitate life, mimic or photograph life, that it will not confine itself to pretty sterilities or cut and dried polite mannerisms—positively, that it will be a creative theatre constructing for each piece its own forms of expression, searching for new means, ever groping, never resting on its laurels (the pre-Revolutionary Moscow Art Theatre was of this kind, though serving the needs of the Russian bourgeois intelligentsia under Tzardom).

The workers' theatre must be an embodiment of the modern forms of production enthroned and invigorated by fresh storm-swept material taken from the very heart of the present cataclysmic era. It needs not much proving that a theatre showing the sky-scraper and the blast furnace, the factory and the picket line, the naval monster and the grain elevator, the plantation Negro and the Kentuckian mountaineer, the railroad strike and the war of lethal gases, will not be able to confine itself to the methods of production of "The Great Gatsby," "Bride of the Lamb," Craig's Wife," or even "Desire Under the Elms" or "The Great God Brown." It must, however, be made a conscious task—to work collectively for new forms and new methods of presentation.

5.—This brings up the question of a staff. We picture the workers' theatre as consisting of a coterie of actors, painters sculptors, dancers, playwrights, musicians, lighting masters, all having contact with the masses, at least sympathetic to labor's struggle, some of them hailing from the ranks of labor, all of them working in cooperation for the creation of significant beauty, all animated with the striving for the higher art which is of necessity more human and more true than the commercial mummery or even the better "little theatre," which, after all, is a child of the more enlightened and artistically sensitive bourgeoisie. It is to be assumed that the formation of such a group of theatrical conspirators against the existing order will be a theatrical process extraordinarily, it will include a majority of younger men and women. Possibly, many an artist will only begin his career in the workers' theatre. Undoubtedly, the theatre will draw its mass vital power from the solid mass of workers.

What we wish to see is a theatre where the reverse of politeness is the rule. In a theatre without polite plays, where the very politeness of the "better society" is perhaps held up to ridicule, one cannot expect the participants to be moving and conversing like the drawing room mannikins we see in the average theatre. We picture a theatre full of action, motion, broad gestures, high intonations, clashes of light, reverberations of sounds, colorful groupings, words enhanced by music, music deepened by stirring light effects, light made a part of the whole performance. We wish to see a theatre where not only the truth is released through real artistic construction, but where the actor—in the broadest sense of the word—is released to greater freedom of expression.

5.—This theatre will have meaning only when it removes the barrier between the stage and the audience. Many an attempt must be made to achieve this (Reinhardt placing the stage in the center of and on a lower level than the audience, Meyerhold making some of the actors stand up in the middle of the audience and delivering a speech as if they were part of it, American producers sending out their performers into the aisles, etc.) but all these were mechanical means. To remove the barrier between stage and spectators means to create such an intimate understanding and community on emotion between performers and audience that the latter cease to be mere spectators. It must be admitted that the present writer never saw in the legitimate American theatre that abandon on the part of the spectators, that restless absorption in the proceedings on the stage, that hanging on every word of the players that he often found to emanate the clubs performing "for their own people." A workers' theatre must be a band (gang!) of men and women known to the working masses as "our own" and performing in such a spirit of mutual understanding between themselves and the workers as would render the theatre one emotional whole. Such closeness cannot be created artificially. It must be the combination of both one or several theatre studios where new players are being attracted to the work and new methods are being tested. We picture the studios as a connecting link between the theatre and the working masses, or rather as ramifications of the theatre reaching out into the masses. We picture hundreds of young working men and working women passing through these studios, acquiring the technique of theatrical self-expression, forming, as it were, the theatrical vanguard of the working masses (theoretically that vanguard can be increased to embrace a very large section of the class-conscious elements of the workers) spreading working class theatre ideas in all directions, from one another's theatre groups, etc. Instead of a theatre for the rich, we picture a theatre for the working class, a theatrical weapon in the hands of the masses in their class struggle. We imagine a detachment of the New York Workers' Theatre going out to Passaic to perform, in a hall or in the open air, for the textile strikers, not only to raise funds, but, mainly, to hearten the strikers and their children. We imagine a devil-may-care troup of young theatrical "frontiersmen" rushing out of things to Herrin, Ill., and to other coal mining districts to form the great theatrical event of the coal strike. We imagine workers' theatre artists decorating labor's convention halls and giving performances for the delegates. That such performances cannot, by the nature of things, be polite, that they must assume a sarcastic, anti-capitalist nature, will by no means lessen the value of the theatre in the eyes of the workers. The average workers' audience has no marring the artistic quality of a vital performance. But we welcome propaganda, i. e., directing thoughts and emotions in a definite channel, once it comes as a result of an artistic performance. By participating in the everyday life of the workers, the workers' theatre will gain that intimate connection with the workers which will make them rush to every new performance and watch the players with enthusiasm and adoration—provided the performances in themselves are worth seeing.

Pageants and performances for workmen's children must be a part of the program of a workers' theatre.

7.—The theatre must be a public undertaking financed either by labor unions or by the sale of shares among the workers (details of organization need not be here entered into) and making no profit. Its staff must consist of a nucleus of perfessionals with a large auxiliary force of thoroughly skilled and semi-skilled workers. It must be a repertory theatre with no stars. It must be a predominantly American theatre, admitting, however, exceptionally good foreign plays.

Is this a dream? It depends on the initiative of a few. There is an enormous potential audience; there are many intellectuals, who, being friendly to labor and disgusted with the bourgeois theatre, are aching to put their energy to the creation of something new and useful both for art and the workers. There are young actors and other artists ready to attempt the experience of collective work for a collective art. There are tokens in the air pointing the way: workers' art clubs, singing societies, dramatic circles, etc, mostly among foreign-born workers, who, of late, however, have grown to know English and will certainly welcome a workers' theatre in English.

There must be a crystallizing point to set the movement afoot. The aim of this article is to point out this need, and, perhaps, hasten the formation of such a point.

"Are you preaching proletarian art?" asks a disquieted questioner. Our answer is: Let nature alone. Let us do the thing. When it will have materialized and gone part of its road of development, we will have time enough to discuss where to class it. The end.

Correcting the American Mercury

By CHARLES ASHLEIGH

THE "American Mercury" costs fifty cents in America and a cent or two more in Europe. This means that its price is equivalent to the price of a dinner, with "Ping Flynn," which appeared in the "American Mercury" of December last. It's not my fault I'm so late.

The article is, on the whole, a good article, although a bit too superficial. But, then, if it were not, it probably wouldn't have got into the American Mercury. Comrade Allen manages to inject the frivolous-cynical quality, here and there, which is the rather monotonously all-pervading tone of the publication.

And, there is no reason in the world why an article shouldn't be written about Gurley Flynn. She is certainly good material, besides being an interesting and lovable individual. She is, I am glad to say, a friend of mine. I liked what Allen said about her.

But—there is such a thing as fa- to- -ct- -ll. And, I fear Allen, in writing his -rt-c-e -s -a- further than borrowing Elizabeth's scrap-book of newspaper clippings for a few days. And, some of his statements are inexcusable, in a writer who, presumably, takes the working class movement seriously, and writes sometimes for a Communist newspaper.

Before we come to the things which specially enrage me, let us take, as symptomatic, a smaller instance or two. In speaking of the famous Lawrence textile strike, of 1912, Allen says: "Strikes in those days were nothing like the somewhat polite affairs they have since been, with one or two exceptions, come to be. Neither side asked or gave any quarter."

Now, I have been a long time away from the United States; however, as a humble deportee, I keep my weather-eye intermittently on affairs there. I have not observed that the spirit of brotherly love now pervades American strikes. The Passaic strike, the beating up of girl pickets in New York, and similar occurrences, do not—at this long distance—savour over much of politeness. When did the politeness start. Not as late as 1919, with the steel strike, surely? And if tomorrow, the miners in West Virginia, or the Nesaba Iron Range miners, were to strike, is Allen able to guarantee that the bosses would conform strictly to the rules of courtesy?

But, when Allen says "Neither side asked or gave any quarter," he seems to intimate that such Lawrence strike there was violence on the part of the workers. Here, he is hopelessly wrong. Never was there a strike, on so large a scale, so masterfully conducted. Let him ask Giovannitti or Gurley Flynn. If that is so, what does he mean?

Later, still on the Lawrence strike, he says, "Gurley Flynn, who assumed command with Big Bill Haywood . . ." Incredible as it will seem to all old rebels, he does not mention Giovannitti or Ettor, who, together with Caruso, were on trial for murder; and who were just as prominent, if not more so, as Gurley Flynn and Big Bill Haywood. To describe the Lawrence strike and omit the Ettor-Giovannitti case, is like cooking ham and eggs without the ham.

Allen, in fact, altogether ignores the second anchinery of the Lawrence strike—the Strike Committee of fifty-odd members, with its language representation, and so on. Again, in speaking of the Paterson silk strike, he gives the impression that, alone and unaided, Gurley led the whole business. Now, I am certain that, when she read this, Elizabeth felt shunned uncomfortable, and rather than turning this young man who, for the sake of converting harsh fact into spurious newspaper-romance, swept grandly aside all the other leaders who played prominent parts in the Paterson strike.

Mind you, I wasn't in the Lawrence or Paterson officers who were striking me. This, because I was accused of a murder in the United States many A good reason, on a large ship then at Vlach Island, had landed me the uniform! No! I had never been foolish to surrender, but I would be treated by Bill Haywood as one does a child? And the same applies to my fellow-workers.

All together, there is injustice in Allen's remarks about Bill Haywood. He says: "Big Bill's conviction of treason against those who refused to pose in his martyrdom tableau, has been lost in grime and flight in Russia, and the bloody fortnights that broke out among his jailed disciples, were death blows to the I. W. W."

Now, this is poppy stuff with which to parade the bored liberals, and smart-alec intelligentsia who read the New Mercury. But it's damned bad taste, and some of it is lies.

My friend, Bill Haywood, happens to be an honored guest of the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union, and of the Communist International. If he is respected by the tried revolutionalists of Russia, and is their guest, naturally we dislike other revolutionalists—and I presume Allen is a revolutionist—reviling him for the anuse-ment of the gildy, but innocuous, Menckenites.

It wasn't Bill Haywood's "martydom tableau." And I hope a hundred old-timers, who served in Leavenworth, will read this, and write in to the same effect, and let Allen know what really happened in those days. It is a repetition of the slur that we all got pinched, and served time, because Bill Haywood told us to. Good Lord, how little Allen really knows about the I. W. W., internally, in those days! Once and for all, let me inform him that the tactics of those days—however wrong—were not designed to ornament Haywood, but WERE CONCEIVED BY REASONED DELIBERATION OF MANY RESPONSIBLE MEMBERS OF THE I. W. W. I held, at that time, emphatically to a National Organizer of the I. W. W. I was a travelling lecturer, writer and publicity agent for the I. W. W. I agreed with the tactics, and so did most of my companions.

As to Bill's jail-jumping, I will admit that that is a matter of opinion. Bill will probably admit it too, if Allen asks him. But, it must be remembered that, at that time, there appeared in the press a statement by a representative of the I. W. W. that they had agreed to the advisability of the step. And Bill had already become a Canonize. Also, Bill was a very sick man, at that time, however, I think it was a mistake. But I don't blame Bill for it. He left himself in the hands of others.

And now we come to an amazing statement. Allen refers to "the bloody fist fights that broke out among his jailed disciples." This, I definitely want to brand as a lie. During the three years that I was in prison—and my prison work at Leavenworth enabled me to maintain contact with all our boys throughout—I only knew of two fights. And these two both occurred in the Cook County Jail, within the same fortnight—while we were awaiting trial—and neither was on a matter of policy! One of them was when a member gave a thorough beating to his personnel friend, a well-known soap-boxer from the west (who afterwards became a sort of Tolstoyan mystic) because said soap-boxer went out, with a detective, to be interviewed by a dentist in Chicago, and returned drunk—the federal dick being only too glad to drink at the expense of the Wobbly, or, of course, of anyone else. And the other fight was between two very good fellows, whose nerves were overwrought by the hellish life we lived in that Chicago prison clocked, three in a cell, for twenty hours out of the twenty four), and was about some perfectly petty personal matter. The minute after this nervous explosion, they shook hands, and the matter was finished. Those were the only two fights in the jail. As to the penitentiary, even if they'd want to indulge in "bloody fist fights," the opportunities were extremely small. And the prison discipline was such that, if our boys had fought much, the whole damned lot would soon have been in "solitary." I differed materially from some of the I. W. W. men in there, on several points—on Communism, on the advisability of accepting reductions in sentence, if no recantation was involved, and other matters—but we never dreamed of fighting. It is deplorable that Allen should make such statements. They appear to be curiously animated by malice towards Haywood, which I cannot understand. Surely Allen is too young—or too young in the movement—to Eke or dislike Haywood personally?

I am a Communist. I think much of the I. W. W. theory in which I then implicity believed, was wrong—namely, their attitude towards politics and towards the A. F. of L. But, they were an organization which believed in the class struggle, and which fought in the class struggle. They spread wide in America the idea of Industrial Unionism; and they brought organization and consequent betterment into the lives of the migratory workers. On occasion, as Allen deigns to acknowledge, they travelled hundreds of miles, through parched desert or bitter cold, to help the boys out. They risked jail and beatings on the way, in order to fight for the workers, in some conflict with the authorities. Their speakers often had to sleep on the floors of the halls, when their evening's propaganda was done. Their editors worked for a scanty living wage, and never augumented their income by titillating the afternoon sensibilities of the readers of fifty-cent magazines. Perhaps they weren't clever enough; or perhaps they didn't think it quite decent.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE raid of Chang Tso-Lin's police on the Soviet embassy in Peking shows to what extremes the imperialists are ready to go to strike at the Nationalist revolution. It is believed in authoritive quarters that the raid was carried out under British instructions. The Manchurian bandit would not have dared commit such an unprecedented act without the sanction of the powers. The dean of the diplomatic corps gave Chang's brigands permission to enter the foreign legation quarters of the city.

AS the fortunes of the imperialists in China are sanning the prospects of intervention loom larger on the political horizon. Those birds of prey hoped that they could split the Kuomintang Party and thus block the onward march of the emancipation movement. It seems that the expectation that Chang Kai-Shek would be able to deliver the goods for them is no longer considered a probability. England is evidently ready to make a bargain with Chang Tso-Lin and pay that brigand's price for again selling his country.

THE raid on the Soviet embassy in Peking and the threatening attitude of imperialist police in the international settlement in Shanghai towards the Soviet consulate indicates that a supreme effort is about to be made by England to involve the Soviet Union militarily in the China civil war. England was never faced with a more serious crisis than confronts her today. Her rule in India is sitting on a volcano that seems to be about to resume activity. Her Sikh troops in China are disaffected and several of them have been executed for anti-British propaganda. The whole of the Orient is liable to go up in a revolutionary blaze at any moment. This would indeed mean the beginning of the end for British imperialism and to a lesser degree for world imperialism.

RAMSAY MACDONALD, right wing leader of the British Labor Party, has shown his true imperialist colors in the crisis over the Chinese situation. Like the notorious charlatan, Lloyd George, MacDonald exonerated the tory government of wrong doing in dispatching thousands of troops to China. The presbyterian socialist, or socialist presbyterian, prates about the necessity for defending British subjects tho he knows quite well that the question at issue is not the protection of the lives of British subjects in China but the protection of British pounds invested there.

ACCORDING to London dispatches John Wheatley is a candidate for the leadership of the parliamentary labor party, a position which MacDonald is liable to lose as a result of his repeated acts of treachery to the workers. Wheatley speaks in the language of a left winger, but his words must be taken with a pinch of salt. He is a catholic. Tho he was one of the first to take up the Communist suggestion that British labor should organize workers' defense corps for the protection of the trade unions against the attacks of the fascists and other extra-legal arms of the government he was rather silent during the general strike, while MacDonald, Thomas and Snowden were busy selling out the miners. Nevertheless his candidacy indicates that the opposition to MacDonaldism is assuming concrete form. That is good.

THE avalanche of bills pouring into Albany, aimed ostensibly at obscenity in the press and in the theatre is certain to be used against the working class. It was to be expected that Governor Smith would sign the bill permitting the padlocking of theatres convicted of having staged plays considered lecherous, obscene and lascivious by a New York policeman. This law can be stretched to padlock any working class club or hall that will meet with the disapproval of the authorities.

CALVIN COOLIDGE fates to see the Filipinos afflict the torture of being forced to submit to a referendum on the question of independence from the United States. The Filipino legislature passed a referendum bill and Governor-General Wood promptly vetoed it. The legislature then promptly passed it over "Leary Soap's" veto. Then the referendum collector from Vermont turned down his thumb on it. Yes, the United States is determined to save the Filipinos from themselves. Perhaps the Filipinos may soon look to Hoover rather than to Washington for help.

VANZETTI PROVES CLASS BIAS OF JUDGE

SACCO AND VANZETTI, HEADS HIGH, SPIRIT UNBROKEN BY SEVEN YEARS OF PHYSICAL AND MENTAL TORTURE, MEET THE DEATH SENTENCE WITH WORDS OF FIRE THAT MAKE A GLORIOUS PAGE IN HISTORY OF THE WORLD'S WORKERS

They Shall Not Die! They Shall Be Freed!

Wall Street government, Lee, Higginson and Company—Massachusetts rulers—the textile barons, the shipping interests and the decadent and vicious Back Bay aristocracy, were stripped bare before the whole world Saturday by two workingmen whose figures, worn thin by seven years of imprisonment and medieval torture, were darkened by the shadow of the electric chair to which Judge Thayer sentenced them in the dingy courtroom which has become a symbol of the brutality and arrogance of American plutocracy.

Weak in body but with minds like fire flashing thru crystal, Sacco and Vanzetti, with words that etched themselves as vitriol eats copper, into phalanxes of workers' battalions forming for struggle, gave blow for blow, tho their hands were manacled, to the Massachusetts murderers, to American capitalism and all its agents.

Sacco and Vanzetti spoke quietly and calmly but the whole world heard. Thru the windows of the court room, over the heads of the hangmen assembled there, past the mercenaries who guarded its portals, the words of Sacco and Vanzetti, magnified a billion times by the gigantic microphone of the class struggle, were transmitted to the hundreds of millions of workers and farmers of all lands.

The masses heard and understood. The Chinese toilers heard the indictment and appeal above the battle clamor. All thru the European continent, echoing and re-echoing from pillared facades of the capitals, the words of Sacco and Vanzetti were heard by the workers and the workers answered.

In Latin America also the answer has been given. In the Soviet Union it needed no further appeal to bring the Russian masses to their assistance. From Great Britain where the class struggle is fiercest comes protest solidly backed by the labor movement.

The Workers of the United States cannot lag behind the workers of other countries in support of the worker victims of American justice.

It remains for the labor movement of the United States to take the burning words of Sacco and Vanzetti as their battle cry in the fight for their freedom.

No differences shall stand in the way of unity in this struggle. The labor movement has been challenged. Its enemies intend to make the bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti, blackened and charred by lightning harnessed for murder, the symbol of American labor turned into a burnt offering on the altar of Wall Street government.

There must be no more such sacrifices. Sacco and Vanzetti shall not die.

One solid front of American labor to free these workers!

Let the world of capitalism know that this time at least American labor fights for its own and is determined to strike the manacles from their hands and return them to the ranks of the working class.—W. F. D.

DEDHAM, Mass., April 10.—Sacco and Vanzetti, who were sentenced to death by Judge Webster Thayer yesterday morning, both proclaimed their innocence in impassioned speeches and analyzed the social factors mobilized against them. Vanzetti's speech follows:

Vanzetti—Yes. What I say is that I am innocent, not only of the Braintree case, but also of the Bridgewater crime. That I am not only innocent of these two crimes, but in all my life I have never stole and I have never killed and I have never spilled blood. That is what I want to say. And it is not all. Not only am I innocent of these two crimes, not only in all my life I have never stole, never killed, never spilled blood, but I have struggled all my life, since I began to reason, to eliminate crime from the earth.

Everybody that knows these two arms knows very well that I did not need to go in between the street and kill a man to take the money. I can live with my two arms and live well. But besides that, I can live even without work with my arm for other people. I have plenty of chances to live independently and to live what the world conceives to be a higher life than not to gain our bread with the sweat of our brow.

Could Have Escaped.

My father in Italy is in a good condition. I could have come back in Italy and he would have welcomed me every time with open arms. Even if I come back there with not a cent in my pocket, my father could have give me a position not to work but to make business, or to oversee upon the land that he owns. He has wrote me many letters in that sense, and other well-to-do relatives have wrote me many letters in that sense that I can produce.

Well, it may be a boast. My father and my uncle can boast, themselves and say things that people may not be compelled to believe. People may say they may be poor when they are to consider to give me a position every time that I want to settle down and

Introduce Measure To Compel United States Open the Vanzetti Files

BOSTON, Mass. April 10.—The letter written by Congressman Emanuel Celler, of New York, in which he plans to introduce a measure at the next session of congress to compel the U. S. attorney-general to open his files on the Sacco-Vanzetti case to the Massachusetts courts, was received today.

McDonald Sails to America, Boasting Will Crown Prince

LONDON, April 10.—Sending word ahead to America that, the socialist, he is still a monarchist, and will put the Prince of Wales on the throne, Ramsay McDonald prepared to visit New York and New England.

McDonald, just before boarding the Aquitania with his daughter, dictated a statement of his reasons for visiting the Sacco-Vanzetti frame-up scene, which he called, "My Greeting to the American People."

"I am coming to look around several of your old historical places, especially in Massachusetts, of which state I am particularly fond. I have the most lively recollections of American hospitality when I was in your country before, and I look forward with interest and relish to seeing my American friends."

Sacco-Vanzetti Protest Demonstration at Union Square, This Saturday

A Sacco-Vanzetti protest demonstration will be held Saturday, April 16th, one p. m. at Union Square. The list of speakers will be announced later.

Fascists Conduct a Bloody Riot On Paterson Streets

PATERSON, N. J., April 10.—Several busloads of fascist male and female hooligans, armed with loaded canes, whips and clubs arrived here this afternoon and started a melee outside the Alexander Hamilton Hotel. One man was stabbed during the disorder and a number beaten. The local police made six arrests.

The fascists, dressed in black shirts and the other grotesque regalia of their kind, drove up in busses and a number of them were shouting fascist slogans in Italian. An Italian working man on the street replied to a remark made to him by one of the occupants of a bus, whereupon a number of other hoodlums piled out and began beating him with their weapons.

Chinese Nationalists Rush Troops North

MOSCOW, April 10.—The Union of Socialist Soviet Republics virtually broke off diplomatic relations with the Peking government last night and recalled its entire embassy staff at Peking. Despite the unparalleled provocation of the raid on the Soviet compound, the Soviet government will take no military action.

"Any imperialist government," says the note of protest delivered to Chang Yen-si, Peking charge d'affaires, here, "would resort to cruel reprisals, but the Soviet government, while possessing the technical means for repressive measures, nevertheless declares it definitely rejects such a step."

Asks Release of Officials.

The note, signed by Max Litvinoff, assistant commissar for foreign affairs, makes the following demands without fixing any time limit or making any threats against the Peking government:

"1.—Immediate withdrawal of Peking troops who are occupying the buildings in the Soviet Embassy compound.

"2.—Release of all Soviet officials arrested in the raid.

PLAN VANZETTI, SACCO PROTEST NATIONAL SCALE

New York Workers to Strike for One Hour

The first mass demonstration in the renewed campaign to free Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti from death in the electric chair will be held this Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock in Union Square.

Plans are now also under way for one-hour work stoppages in all the trades of the city.

The Saturday open-air demonstration is planned as a preliminary to hundreds of similar meetings in every large city of the United States.

Defense Plans.

DEDHAM, Mass., April 10.—Following Judge Webster Thayer's death sentence yesterday of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti defense forces were today considering all possible resources to save them.

Thus far these two Italian workers, framed on a charge of a payroll robbery and murder as a sure method of disposing of them as radicals, have been kept from death by the unceasing agitation on their behalf by millions of workers throughout the world for over six years.

Six Appeals.

The sentence by the senile, malicious old judge, symbolic of the icy labor-hating "conservatism" of Boston and New England, followed six unsuccessful appeals for new trials by the lawyers for the two victims of the tyranny of class persecution.

Never did a modern Pontius Pilate listen to such a contemptuous, scaring, and loftily ironic speech as that which Bartolomeo Vanzetti, "unlettered" Italian immigrant laborer, addressed to the marble-faced, frightened little judge who sentenced him and Sacco to die.

All Know Innocence.

Vanzetti did not dwell long on his innocence. That has too long been taken for granted by millions of workers throughout the world; by humanitarians who have been revolted by the flagrant injustice and class persecution which the trial displayed; and by numerous distinguished and disinterested lawyers, like Prof. Felix Frankfurter of Harvard, who examined the "evidence" brought against the two workers.

Fought Official Crime.

He said, simply, that he never committed a crime in his life. He has struggled ever to eliminate crime from the earth—not merely the crimes "that the official law and the official moral condemns, but also the

"Big Four" Swindle 40 Million

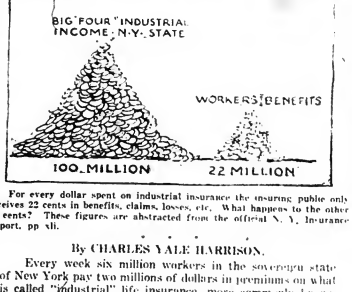
THE TWO BILLION DOLLAR INSURANCE FRAUD EXPOSE STARTS TODAY

Daily Worker Bares Cold Facts of "Big Four" Fraud Hidden Twenty Years

Twenty years ago the country was startled by the now famous Armstrong Insurance Investigation. The investigation committee consisted of eleven members headed by Charles Evans Hughes. The life insurance business was rotten with graft and corruption. But the most corrupt and odorous branch of the business was what is known as "industrial" or weekly payment life insurance. There are 40 million workers in the United States who are covered by this form of petty larceny insurance.

The day before the "industrial" companies were to come up for investigation it was moved that the committee adjourn to draft its report. "Industrial" weekly payment insurance was never investigated.

The "Big Four" industrial life insurance companies were and are the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, the Prudential Life Insurance Company, the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company and the Colonial Life Insurance Company. These companies are still running rampant. We know that capitalistic looters do not reform of their own free will.



After the hullabaloo died down and the smoke cleared this is what happened. Charles Evans Hughes, the counsel for the committee, was made counsel for the Equitable Life Insurance Company.

James McKeen, the assistant counsel, was afterwards made general counsel for the Mutual Life Insurance Company with a salary of $20,000 per year for life.

Senator William J. Tully of the committee was made solicitor (whatever that may be) for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company at a salary of $20,000 for life. It is now twenty years since the notorious investigation. Since then Tully has had his pay raised to $30,000 per year. This good and faithful servant of the "Big Four" has now drawn upwards of a half a million dollars for his long work on the committee. The Metropolitan is a "mutual" company, that is to say that its policyholders are supposed to participate in the earnings of the company. We wonder how this $500,000 should be doled to the "mutual" policyholders.

Assemblyman Robert Lynn Cox, also a member of the committee, was made counsel and general manager of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents, a novel lobbying device. Mr. Cox's salary was set at $25,000 per year. Apparently $20,000 was the union scale.

Twenty years is a long time, much water has flown under the Brooklyn Bridge, much working class money has flown into the coffers of the "Big Four"—the time is ripe for an investigation into the activities of these companies. Demand it!

For every dollar spent on industrial insurance the insuring public only receives 22 cents in benefits, claims, losses, etc. What happens to the other 78 cents? These figures are abstracted from the official N. Y. Insurance Report, pp xli.

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON.

Every week six million workers in the sovereign state of New York pay two millions of dollars in premiums on what is called "industrial" life insurance, more commonly known as "weekly payment" life insurance. When the year has rolled around, they have paid One Hundred Million Dollars into the coffers of the four gigantic insurance companies which specialize in the sale of this form of life insurance.

At the end of the same year this vast army of workers have received in return for this enormous premium payment only twenty-two million dollars in death claims, losses, etc, etc. Or in simpler terms the industrial life insurer only receives in value about 22 cents for every hard-earned dollar he spends on his family's life insurance.

Above are the official figures for 1925 recently published by the New York State Department of Insurance. They are true to a varying extent for the past twenty years. There are no bad years in the life insurance business. The even death rate takes care of that.

"Life insurance may be divided into two groups. These groups are technically known as "industrial" and "ordinary" life insurance. "Ordinary" insurance premium payments are paid weekly at the home of the insured to the company's collecting agent.

"Industrial" life insurance is so called because it was designed for the industrial classes—people who lack the nice conveniences of the capitalist and middle class, banking facilities for instance, and money to bank, and therefore cannot make their premium payments quarterly or even monthly. So the insurance companies argue. This type of petty larceny insurance is sold to that unfortunate portion of the public which buys many of its necessities on what is sometimes humorously called the "easy"-payment plan.

The four companies referred to above are namely, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, the Prudential Life Insurance Company, the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company and the Colonial Life Insurance Company. For purposes of easy identification we propose to refer to this valiant little band as the "Big Four."

The rich have their tradespeople

BIG FOUR SWINDLE FORTY MILLION

call 'on them at their homes, their tailors, barbers, caterers, etc. But not their insurance agents. That is a privilege reserved for the workerinsurer. The "industrial" insurer is therefore given the high honor of having the company, in the person of its duly authorized agent, call on him at his home. The "Big Four" industrial life insurance companies whose assets run into billions of dollars condescend to call weekly at the homes of the poor. And why not? It pays! And how!

It is well to remember that the "Big Four" are so-called "mutual" companies. They are supposed to operate in the interest of their policyholders. All profits are (in theory) to be turned back to the millions of policyholders who are the stockholders in these colossal corporations. We propose to prove that these assets which now run into THREE AND A HALF BILLIONS OF DOLLARS are kept in a reserve fund and expertly manipulated to the advantage of a very select board of directors.

It will be shown during this expose that these allegedly "altruistic" companies carry on their business with a complete contempt of even common commercial decency. It will be further shown that the "mutual" meaning of American workers' lives is carried on with a more than goodly sprinkling of commercial chicanery, swindle and deception.

The "Big Four" have total assets amounting to THREE BILLION SIX HUNDRED MILLION DOLLARS. When it is recalled that the world famous allied Ford enterprises are capitalized at a little over One Billion dollars, the tremendous reality and power implied in these figures becomes apparent.

These assets legally belong to the American workers, but the possession and manipulation of them are so logged by the railroad, bank and steel barons who sit on top of the heap that in actuality this enormous sum of money is being used for the further exploitation of the worker here and abroad.

And so the vicious circle is completed. Underpaid in the factory, mine and mill, and in order to save the small store brought home than it is raided and looted by "mutual" life insurance companies back it goes into the "assets" to begin the merry circle again.

Life insurance statistics make interesting reading. There are 77 billions of life insurance in force in the United States covering 80 million people.

Of this amount 19 billions of dollars are the "industrial" or weekly payment plan, covering over 90 million workers' lives.

Its average cost per thousand dollars "insurance" yearly payment is $12. The average cost per thousand on "industrial" weekly payment plan is $40. There is no sound reason for this wide discrepancy. The difference between the two rates costs the American worker 253 million dollars every year. The weekly visit is a costly one—to the worker.

The idea of Industrial Life Insurance is an English one. The British Industrial life insurance companies were organized about 1840, and were originally nothing more than burial societies. In 1875 the Prudential Life Insurance Company sent representatives to England to study this novel and highly profitable method of working class pilferage and shortly afterwards it was inaugurated in this country.

There are sixteen companies writing this sort of insurance in the United States today but the "Big Four" control more than 95 per cent of all the business.

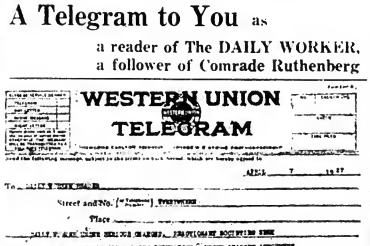
Last year the "Big Four" put two billion six hundred milllion of new industrial life insurance on their books, during the same year one billion three hundred million of "Big Four" Industrial life insurance lapsed, an amount equal to half of the new business. It must be remembered that an industrial lapse means a total loss to the worker-insurer. Conservatively estimated these lapsed policies represent 80 million dollars in forfeited working class money.

Weekly payment life insurance policies do not have a cash surrender value until they have been in force on the company's books for ten years. Ten long years before the insured can draw a cent on his policy. Think of it! And the average life of a weekly payment policy is less than five years.

The following table shows how the millions of industrial life insurance policies terminate every year:

Death Claims	3%
Maturity (endowments)	1
Surrender (cash values)	3
Other Causes	3
LAPSE (total loss)	75

Lewis S. Gannett, associate editor of The Nation in a letter to me on this series of articles said, "If you do plan to publish it . . . my personal advice to you would be to lead with the percentage of lapses among industrial policies. That point, I think, is unavailable and is your strongest point of attack."



The tens of millions of dollars which is realized by the "Big Four" on these terrific forfeited monies are piled into the "assets" and manipulated to the benefit of the finance committees who are also directors in the various railroads, banks and public utilities in which these legally prescribed "assets" are invested. All of which shall be proven in due course of time. (To Be Continued).

Organize the Traction Workers!

ARTICLE XVI.—THE 1926 STRIKE—VICTORY FROM DEFEAT

By ROBERT MITCHELL.

Every means was exhausted by the Interborough to divide the men and prevent the strike from spreading. The Transit Commission was likewise playing a part, still a neutral one at this stage of the game. The strikers were willing to arbitrate but as we have seen, Hedley refused the offer on the ground that the "Brotherhood" would not permit the dealing with an "outlaw" group.

When the Transit Commission asked to meet with the Brotherhood, Hedley was forced to concede the request. The Commission had asked to meet the General Committee. Instead Quackenbush sent Connolly, Mangan and Kelly with the instructions to say that they represented the whole Brotherhood in an agreed upon plan. Thus was the Transit Commission also hoodwinked.

The strike began as per schedule on Tuesday, 1 A. M., July 6th. The walkout of the subway motormen was practically 100%. But the efforts and deception resorted to on the part of the Company and the intimidation carried on by the Company Union and its delegates prevented the other workers from joining their brothers.

Nevertheless, the strike practically shut down the subway.

Fighting a most heroic battle against the most overwhelming odds Ed. Lavin early recognized that the help of the Labor Movement was essential to victory. His appeals to the officials of organized labor remained practically unheeded. A committee of the Central Trades and Labor Council was selected not to speak on the floor. Hugh Frayne, now making himself infamous for his opposition and his vicious attacks on the militant unions, openly raved against the strike, giving the opinion that it was but a move to increase fares.

The first help which the Consolidated Railway Workers of Greater New York received was in the form of a telegram of sympathy from Passaic signed by Albert Weisbord. A second help was an unsolicited letter from the Joint Board of the Furriers Union, enclosing a check for $200. The latter said in part: "The fur workers have always been animated by a profound feeling of solidarity for all workers struggling against their employers. . . . We pledge our moral and financial support to your courageous strikers. . . ." The letter was signed, Ben Gold, Manager.

But the Tammany labor officials remained quiet. Even the organizers of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees who were then in conference with Lavin and his committee made no definite attempt to take over the situation.

One of the outstanding events in the early conduct of the strike was the walkout of the powerhouse men under the leadership of James F. Walsh. For a moment it seemed as if the blow would cripple the Interborough, but the Company Union stepped into the breach, working the men 18 and 20 hours a day and managed to maintain some semblance of service.

Walsh by this act, however, showed himself to be the honest, fearless fighter which he has since proven himself.

The New York Press began its expected attack on the strike. Daily its propaganda increased in viciousness and misrepresentation. But the spirit of the motormen and switchmen held firm. When the Interborough saw that it could not break the strike as easily as it had thought by means of finks and the Company Union, it resorted to "diplomacy."

Into the limelight stepped one Herman A. Metz, former city comptroller and now one of the Interborough Directors, with an offer of mediation. This offer had of course to be accepted by the men but it was revealed very quickly, in the fight as "an outstretched fair wedge."

There was one outstanding difference between the conduct of the 1926 strike and the conduct of those which preceded it. The workers were very careful to examine this difference because upon it depends the whole strategy and victory of the present.

The leadership of the 1926 strike, recognizing that the walkout had been premature, sought at all times to tie up whatever forces was at their command to advantage in the fight to send back its army unbroken. Hedley had already "displayed" all the strikers. But such was the success of the conduct of the strike that by Thursday, July 22nd, the Company agreed to take back all the strikers.

Previously a mass parade was held downtown to give the strike a more dramatic touch. The mayor was forced to see the strikers and made some pretence of being on their side although later as may be expected, he completely repudiated his early "sympathy" and left the strikers "cold."

A mass picketing demonstration was organized, this too as a move to secure better terms from the Company. These forces had the desired effect. The Company agreed to take back all the workers. On Friday they marched back to work in a body.

But the Interborough's long habit of double-crossing reasserted itself. When the men appeared before the 149th St. barns, Keegan, Vice President of the Interborough thought he saw an opportunity, and sought to discriminate against some of them.

Keegan, however, had overstepped the mark. The men, in a rage, turned about to renew the strike. Therefore it was conducted with redoubled energy.

The same tactics was employed as before, the attempt to secure such terms as would not enable the men to renew the struggle at a more fitting time when the whole body of the strikers would come out together.

That night, while the strikers were peacefully dispersing from their meeting, they were set upon by the armed gangsters of the Police Industrial Squad and unmercifully beaten up. It was openly charged that the police aimed the members of the squad received one thousand dollars. Quackenbush bears the responsibility for the dirty, murderous attack as if he himself had done it. The city did nothing to correct the injustice. The governor of the state was appealed to but he, too, remained silent.

From these facts the workers were quick to draw the lesson that in the existing capitalist society no justice can be gained by the workers' strike.

(To Be Continued).

United Protest on U. S. China Policy At Boston Meeting

BOSTON, April 10.—Fifteen hundred people jammed the Tremont Temple Friday night to protest against American intervention in China. Airplanes flying over the city distributed a hundred thousand leaflets denouncing that America withdraw her troops and marines from China.

Protesting against the bombardment of Nanking and the recognition of the Nationalist government as well as the withdrawal of troops from China, the meeting unanimously adopted a resolution voicing its demands.

All shades of political opinion were represented at the meeting. Alice Stone Blackwell, Henry W. L. Dana, Charles Fonge of the Boston Komsomol tag, Bertram D. Wolfe of the Workers (Communist) Party, Alfred Baker Lewis, secretary of the Socialist Party, V. C. Ho, student at Harvard and John A. Van Vaerenwyck, president of the States Branch of the Federation of Labor, Harold F. Gray, a missionary in China, A. Fergan, cathedral priest and A. W. Manning of the Society for the Prevention of Capital Punishment were among the speakers. Fred T. Douglas, member of the Kunmintang and the Fellowship of Youth for Peace, was chairman.

certie Alexander Hamilton Hotel came to the rescue of their comrade and forced the fascists to flee into the hotel.

Meanwhile Chief Tracey's police force, noted for their labor hating activities in Paterson strikes, arrived on the scene to the number of a hundred or more and began mauling the strikers of Paterson who resented the invasion by the fascists.

As other buses arrived the police formed a cordon around the invaders and scattered them easily through the lines of the people who gathered to voice their objections to the tactics of the disciples of the criminal monster, Musselini.

The crowd was incensed at the police aiding such creatures and showed its displeasure by a chorus of shouts and cat-calls as the "visitors" entered the hotel.

A heavy police guard was thrown about the hotel while the fascists conducted their business on the inside.

Preparations are being made for a public meeting to protest against the invasion of Paterson by the fascists and their protection by the police.

M'MURRAY REPORT SHOWS HE JOINED RAID ON EMBASSY

Ambassadors in China Violate Own Theories

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, April 10. — The raid on the Soviet Russian embassy in Peking the other day and the amazing report by American Minister McMurray on the affair discloses an astounding bit of treachery.

Despite the refusal of State Department officials to discuss the matter it is now unquestionable that the representatives of the powers in Peking authorized the raid without advising the U. S. S. R. embassy that such action would be taken. It is an almost unbelievable affair.

Adjoins U. S. Legation.

The embassy, a duly accredited representation to the Peking government, is located in the same area as are the other embassies. In fact its grounds adjoin the British and American legations. The Ambassador of the Soviet Union is one of the ranking diplomats in the foreign group.

Yet despite all these facts, these representatives, without calling him into conference, without even notifying him of their action, violated the Boxer international agreement on the sanctity of foreign legations and told Marshal Chang Tso-lin, northern bandit war lord, that he could attack.

Use All Means.

The alibi was alleged "subversive Soviet agitation."

The whole affair is a vivid example of what lengths the reactionary powers are willing to go to attack Russia. The whole issue in China from the point of view of the powers is that the Chinese are jeopodizing foreign life and property, yet they are perfectly willing to order just that against foreigners they hate.

Of course the whole affair is an English plot. To mask Great Britain's hand, the English and McMurray, the American interventional minister, prevailed upon the petty Dutch minister to issue the order permitting the raid. No one can read the official report published by the state department as coming from McMurray without seeing through the whole affair.

Perfect Hypocrisy.

This report is a beautiful specimen of official documents covering treachery and criminality. (It has been published in full in previous issues. —Ed.)

Anglo-American Scheme.

The raid was executed by the bandditi of Chang Tso-lin, but it was actually an Anglo-American attack upon the Soviet Union. The latter's powerful position in China has aroused the ferocious bitterness of the powers.

England particularly has seen its prestige lost to the U. S. S. R. and the Tory government is becoming hysterical. Besides desiring to injure Russia the affair is part of the scheme of Great Britain to entangle America and whatever other nations it can in its policy.

If the United States won't openly go hand in hand, the British are determined to make it clear to the Chinese people that there is no difference between the attitude of the two nations.

Another factor emphasized by the affair is the danger of having such a man as McMurray representing the United States in China. McMurray is one of the so-called "career men" of the State Department. He is supposed to be a professional diplomat.

He is a thoroughgoing reactionary, an aper of British thought and methods and a strong advocate of intervention. He participated in the Peking raid on his own authority.

Thus whatever may be the intention of Coolidge or even Kellogg, bit by bit he is forcing their hand to the British policy in this he is following Page's practice as ambassador to London before and during the world war when he cooperated so closely with the British in their efforts to force the United States into the war on their side as to advise them when they wrote notes to Wilson and the means of violating American neutrality.

NON-UNION BERWIND-WHITE MINERS DEMAND CHECKWEIGHMAN, PAY RAISE

Form United Front Committee; May Strike All Of Somerset County; Meetings Held

WINDBER, Pa., April 10.—Strike sentiment in the non-union fields of Somerset County is again active. A preliminary meeting in Windber (first) took the Berwind-White Coal Co. unionwaxers, brought demand for no immediate walkout from 500 miners who had hastily assembled. Speakers restrained them until a committee could be elected to present demands to the corporation. The meeting was called by the United Front Committee of Windber Miners and addressed by Powers Hapgood and Tony Minerich.

Don't Trust Company

As with all preceding miners their first demand was for check-giphan to prevent the company from cheating the men on coal. They also demand union wages, retroactive to February 15.

Somerset County walked out in the great 1922 strike, along with non union Westmoreland County and the non union coking coal fields of Fayette and Greene counties, adding a total of 70,000 workers temporarily to the United Mine Workers. The men of the four counties were not included in the national settlement of that year but Somerset continued the struggle into 1923.

Men Blacklisted

Since then wages have been considerably reduced the guards system remains supreme over and men are blacklisted if they complain at robbery by the company weighmasons. The 1922 Somerset strike, it is pointed out, was after a picketing and marching of several hundred Windber men, that led to the walkout of 1000 Berwind-White men, the strike then sweeping over the union fields of Fayette, Greene and most of the Westmoreland coal fields. crime that the official law and the official moral sanctions and sanctions of the state and the suppression of man—and if there is a reason why I am here as a guilty man, if there is a reason why you in a few minutes can deem me, it is this reason and none else."

Sacco, less familiar with the English language, spoke more briefly. "I never knew," he told Judge Thayer, "never heard, even read in history anything so cruel as this court. After seven years prosecuting they still consider us guilty."

"I know the sentence will be between class es," Sacco said, "the oppressed class and the rich class."

Try Another Appeal.

BOSTON, April 10. All possible grounds for appeal are being considered by lawyers for Sacco and Vanzetti. This may take the form of habeas corpus proceedings in the federal courts; a petition for a writ of certiorari, within the discretion of the court. These motions may be made any time between now and the next three months.

Coolidge Worries.

WASHINGTON, April 10. The fact that the United States government is keenly aware of the world interest in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti is indicated by the cables just sent by the state department to American diplomats and consuls abroad, warning them that European labor which is strongly in favor of freeing the two framed-up workers may stage demonstrations against them.

Vanzetti Proves Judge Biased

for a family and start a settled life. Well, but there are people maybe in this case court that could testify to what I have say and what my father and my uncle have say to me is not a lie, that really they have the means to give me position every time I want it.

"Not Right to Exploit Man."

Well, I want to reach a little point further, and it is this: That not only have I not been trying to steal in Bridgewater, not only have I not been in Braintree to steal and kill and have never steal or kill or spill blood in all my life, not only have I struggled hard against crimes, but I have refused myself the commodity or glory of life, the pride of life of a good position, because in my consideration it is not right to exploit man.

I have refused to go in business because I understand that business is a speculation on profit upon certain people that must depend upon the business man, and I do not consider that is right and therefore I refuse to do that.

Now, I should say that I am not only innocent of all these things, not only have I never committed a real crime in my life—though some sins, but not crimes—not only have I struggled all my life to eliminate crimes, the crimes that the official law and the official moral condemns, but also the crime that the official moral and the official law sanctions and sanctifies—the exploitation and the oppression of the man by the man, and if there is a reason why I am here as a guilty man, if there is a reason why you in a few minutes can doom me, it is this reason and none else.

Tribute To Debs.

I beg your pardon (referring to paper).

There is the more good man I ever rest my eyes upon since I lived, a man that will last and will grow always more near and more dear to the people, as far as in to the heart of the people so long as admiration or goodness and of sacrifice will last. I mean Eugene Debs.

I will say that even a dog that killed chickens would have found an American jury to convict it with the proof that the Commonwealth has produced against us. That man was not with me in Plymouth or with Sacco where he was on the day of the crime. You can say that it is arbitrary, what we are saying, that is good and he applaud to the other his own goodness, that is incapable of crime, and he believed that everybody is incapable of crime.

Well, it may be like that, but it is not. It could be like that, but it is not and that man has a real experience of court, of prison and of jury, not because he went the world a little better he was persecuted and slandered from the beginning to his old age, and, indeed he was murdered by the police.

He know, and not only he, but every man of understanding in the world, not only in this country but also in the other countries, know that we have provided a certain amount of a record of the times. They all stick with us, the flower of mankind in Europe. The better writers, the greatest thinkers of Europe have pleaded in our favor.

Thousands Believe In Innocence.

The scientists, the great scientists, the greatest statesmen of Europe have pleaded in our favor. The people of foreign nations have pleaded in our favor. Is it possible that only a few of the jury, only two or three men, who would consider their motive for possible honor and for earthly fortune—It it possible that they are right because what the world, the whole world says say it is wrong, and that I know that it is wrong.

If there is one that should know it, it is right or if it is wrong, it is this man. You see it is seven years that we are in jail. What we have suffered during these seven years no human tongue can say, and yet you see me before you, not trembling, you see me looking you in your eyes straight, not lessoning, not changing color, not ashamed or in fear.

Eugene Debs said that not even a dog—something like that—not even a dog that kill the chickens would have been found guilty by American jury with the evidence that the Commonwealth have produced against us. I say that not even a leprous dog would, once his appeal refused two times by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts not even a leprous dog.

Thayer "Cruel, Prejudiced."

They have given a trial to Madeiros for the reason that the judge had either forgot or omitted to tell the jury that they should consider the man innocent until found guilty in the court or something of that sort. That man has confessed. The man was tried and has confessed, and the court have him another trial. We have proved that there could not have been another Judge on the face of the earth more prejudiced and more cruel than you have been against us.

We have proven that; still they refuse the new trial, we know, and you now in your heart, that you have done against us from the very beginning, before you see us. Before you see us you already know that we were radicals, that we were undesirables, that we were the enemy of the institutions, that you can believe in good faith in their goodness—I don't want to condemn that—and that it was easy at the time of the first trial to get a verdict of guiltiness.

Proof of Judge's Bias.

We know that you have spoke your hostility against us with friends of yours on the train, at the University Club of Boston, at the golf club of Worcester, Mass. I am sure that if the people who know all what you say against us would have the civil courage to take the stand, maybe your honor—I am sorry to say this because you are an old man, and I have an old father—but maybe you would be beside us in good justice at this time.

When you sentenced us at the Plymouth trial you say to the best of my memory, of my good faith, that crimes were in recordance with my principles—nothing of that sort, and you take off one charge, if I remember it exactly, from the jury.

The jury was so violent against me that they found me guilty of both charges, because there were only two. Before they would have found me guilty of a dozen charges against your honor's instructions. Of course I remember that you told them that there was no reason to believe that if I were the bandit I have intention to kill somebody, so that they will take off the indictment of attempt to murder. Well they found me guilty of what? And if I am right, you take out that and replace in only for attempt like that. But, Judge Thayer did give more to me for that attempted robbery than all the 448 men that were in Charlestown.

All of these that attempted to rob, all those that have robbed, they have not such a sentence as you gave to me for an attempt at robbery. I am willing that everybody that does believe me that they can make commission, they can go over there, and I am very willing that the people should go over there and see whether it is true or not.

These are people in Charlestown who are professional robbers, who have been in half the prisons of the United States, that they are steal, or hurt the man, shoot him. By chance they are here, he did not die. Well, the most of the guilty without trial, by self-confession, and by asking the aid of their own partner and they got eight to ten, eight to twelve, ten to fifteen. None of them has twelve to fifteen, as you gave men for an attempt at robbery.

Clean Life.

And besides that, you know that I was not guilty. You know that my life, my private and, public life in Plymouth, and wherever I have been, was so exemplary that one of the worst fears of our prosecutor, Katzmann, was to introduce proof of our life and of our conduct. He has taken it off with all his might and he has succeeded.

You know if we could have Mr. Thompson, or even the Brother Mc-Charney, in the trial in the court in Plymouth, you know that no jury could have found me guilty. My first lawyer has been a partner of Mr. Katzmann, as he is still now. The first lawyer of the defense, Mr. Vahey, has not defended, and has sold me for thirty golden money like Judas sold Jesus Christ. If that man had not told to you or to Mr. Katzmann that he know that I was guilty, it is because he know that I was not guilty.

Judge Prejudiced Jury.

That man has done everything indirectly to hurt me. He has made long speeches with the jury about things that the matter nothing, and on the point of essence to the trial he has passed over with few words or with complete silence. This was a premeditation in order to give to the jury the impression that my own defender has nothing good to say, has nothing good to urge in defense of myself, and therefore go around the leash on little things that amount to nothing and let pass the essential points either in silence or with a very weakly resistance.

We were tried during a time that has now passed into history. I mean be that, a time where there was a wave of resentment and hate against the people of our principles, against the foreigners, against slackers, and it seems to me—rather, I am positive of it, that both you and Mr. Katzmann has done all what it were in your power in order to work out, in order to agitate still more the passion of the juror, the prejudice of the juror, against us.

Witnesses Coached.

I remember that Mr. Katzmann has introduced a witness against us, a certain Ricci. Well, I have heard that witness. It seems that he has nothing to say. It seemed that it was a foolishness to produce a witness that has nothing to say. And it seemed if he were called by the Commonwealth to tell to the jury that he was the foreman of that laborer that was near the scene of he crime and who claimed—and it was testified in our behalf—that we were not the men and that this man, the witness Ricci, was his foreman, and he has tried to keep the man on the job instead of going to see what was happening, so as to give the impression that it was not true that the man went toward the street to see what happened.

But that was not very important. The real importance is that that man say that it was not true. That a certain witness that was the water boy of the gang of laborers—and he testified that he take a pail and go to a certain spring, a water spring, to take water for the gang. It was not true that he go to that spring, and therefore it was not true that he was the bandit, and therefore it was not true that he can tell that either I nor Sacco were the men. But it was introduced to show that it was not true that that man go to that spring, because they know that the Germans has poisoned the water in that spring. That is what he say on that stand over there.

War Hysteria.

Now in the world chronicle of the time there is not a single happening of that nature. Nobody in America—we have read plenty things bad that the Germans have done in Europe during the war—but nobody can prove and nobody will say that the Germans are bad enough to poison the spring water in this country during the war.

Now this, it seems, has nothing to do with us directly. It seems to be a thing by incident on the stand between the other thing that is the essence here. But they jury were hating us because we were against the war, and the jury don't know that it makes any difference between a man that is against the war because he believes that the war is unjust, because he has no country, because he is a cosmopolitan, and a man that is against the war because he is in favor of the other country that fights against the country in which he is, and therefore a coward, and commits any crime in the country in which he is in behalf of the other country in order to serve the other country.

We are not men of that kind. Nobody can say that we are German spies or spies of any kind. Katzmann know very well that. Katzmann know that we were against the war because we did not believe in the purpose for which they say that the war was done.

Opposed To All War.

We believe it that the war is wrong, and we believe this more now after ten years that we understand, day by day, the consequences and the result of the after war. We believe more now than ever that the war was wrong, and we are against war more now than ever, and I am glad to be on the doomed scaffold if I can say to mankind, "Look out, you are in a cataclysm of the floor of mankind. For what? All that they say to you, and that they have promised to you—it was a lie, it was an illusion, it was a cheat, it was a fraud, it was a crime.

They promised you liberty. Where is liberty? They promised you prosperity. Where is prosperity? They have promised you elevation. Where is the elevation?"

War In Vain.

From the day that I went to Charlestown, the misfortune, the population of Charlestown has doubled in numbers. Where is the moral good that the war has given to the world—Where is the spiritual progress that we have achieved from the war? Where are the security of life, the security of the things that we possess for our necessity?

Where are the respect for human life? Where are the respect and the admiration for the good characteristics and the good of the human nature? Never as now before the war there have been so many crimes, so many corruption, so many degeneration as there is now.

In the best of my recollection and of my good faith, during the trial Katzmann has told to the jury that a certain Coacci has brought in Italy the money that, according to the State theory, I and Sacco have stole in Braintree. We never stole that money. But Katzmann, when he told that to the jury, he knows already that that was not true. He knows already that that man was deported in Italy with the Federal policeman after our arrest. I remember well that the Federal policemen with him in their possession—that the Federal policeman has taken away the trunks from the very boarding house where he was, and bring the trunks over here and look them over and found not a single money.

Fake Evidence

Now I call that murder to tell to the jury that a friend or comrades or a relative or acquaintance of the charged man, of the indicted man, has carried the money to Italy when he knows it was not true. I can call that nothing else but a murder, a plain murder.

But Katzmann has told something else also against us that was not true. If I understand well, there have been agreement of counsel during the trial in which the counsel of defense shall not produce any evidence of my good conduct in Plymouth and the counsel of the prosecution would not have let the jury know that I was tried and convicted another time before in Plymouth.

Well, I call that a one-sided agreement. In fact, aven the telephone poles knew at the time of this trial at Dedham that I was tried and convicted in Plymouth; the jurymen know that even when they slept.

Jury Prejudiced by Press.

On the other side the jury have never seen I or Sacco and I think they have the right to incline to believe that the jury have never approached before the trial any one that was sufficiently intimate with me and Sacco to be able to give them a description of our personal conduct. The jury don't know nothing about us. They have never seen us. The only thing that they know is the bad things that the newspapers have said when we were arrested and the bad story that the newspaper have say on the Plymouth trial.

I don't know why the defense counsel have made such an agreement, but I know very well why Katzmann has made such agreement, because he know that half of the population of Plymouth would have been willing to come over here and say that in seven years that I was living amongst them that I was never seen drunk, that I was known as the most strong and steadfast worker of the community.

As a matter of fact I was called a mule, and the people that know a little better the condition of my father, and that I was a single man, much than the State and say, "Why such work like a mad man in that way when you have no children and no wife to care about?"

Katzman Lied.

Well, Katzmann should have been satisfied on that agreement. He could have thanked his God and estimate himself a lucky man. But he was not satisfied with that. He broke his word and he tell the jury that I was tried before in this very court. I don't know if that is right in the record, if that was take off or not, but I hear with my ears. When two or three women from Plymouth come to take the stand, the women reach that point where this gentleman sit down over there, the jury were sit down in their place, and Katzman asked this woman if they have not testified before Vanzetti, and they say, "Yes," and he tell to them, "You cannot testify." They left the room. After they testified just the same. But in the meanwhile he tell to the jury that I have been tried before. That, I think, is not to make justice to the man who is looking after the truth, and it is a frame-up with which he has split my life and doomed me.

Five Years of Persecution.

It was also said that the defense has put every obstacle to the handling of this case in order to delay the case. That sounds sweet for you, and I think it is injurious because it is not true. If we consider that the prosecution, the State, has employed the entire year to prepare our life, one of the five years that the case has last was taken by the prosecution to begin our trial, our first trial. Then the defense make an appeal to you and you waited, or I think that you were resolute, that you had the resolute in your heart when the trial finished that you will refuse every appeal that we will put up to you.

You waited a month or a month and a half and just lay down your decision on the eve of Christmas—just on the evening of Christmas.

Verdict on Christmas.

We do not believe in the fable of the evening of Christmas, neither in the historical way nor in the literary way. You know some of our folks still believe in that, and because we do not believe in that then it don't mean that we are not human. We are human, and Christmas is sweet to the heart of every man. I think that you have done that, to hand down your decision on the evening of Christmas to poison the heart of our family and of our beloved.

I am sorry to be compelled to say this, but everything that was said on your side has confirmed my suspicion until that suspicion has changed to certitude. So that you see that one year it has taken before trying us.

Then the defense, in presenting the new appeal, has not taken more time than you have taken in giving us that. Then there came the second appeal, and now I am not sure whether it is the second appeal or the third appeal where you wait eleven months or one year without an answer to us, and I am sure that you have decided to refuse us a new trial before the hearing for the new appeal began.

You take one year to answer it, or eleven months—something like that—so that you see that out of the five years, two was taken by the State from the day of our a rest to the trial, and then one year to wait for your answer on the second or the third appeal.

Defense Placed at Disadvantage.

Then on another occasion that I don't remember exactly, Mr. Williams was sick and the things were delayed, not for fault of the defense but on account of the fault of the prosecution. So that I am positive that if a man take a pencil in his hand and compute the time taken by the prosecution in prosecuting the case, and the time that was taken by the defense to defend this case, that prosecution has taken more than that the defense.

And there is a great consideration that must be taken in this point, and it is that my first lawyer betrayed us—the whole American population were against us. We have the impertinence to take a man from Californ[illegible], and he came here and he was introduced by you and by over authority, even by the jury, and he so much as that no part of Massachusetts is immune from what I would call the prejudice—that is, to believe that each people in each place of the earth is more prone to be the better of the world, and they believe that all the other are not so good as they.

So of course the man that came from California into Massachusetts to defend two of us, he must be licked if it is possible, and he was licked all right. And we have our part, too.

Attacks First Lawyer.

What I want to say is that: Everybody ought to understand that the first defense has been terrible. My first lawyer did not stick to defend us. He has made no work to collect witnesses and evidence in our favor. The record in the Plymouth court is a pity. I am told that they are almost one-half lost. So that the defense had a tremendous work to do in order to collect some evidence, to collect some testimony to effect and to learn what the testimony of the State has done. And in this consideration, it must be said that even if the defense take double time of the Stats without delay, double time that they delay the case, it would have been reasonable; whereas it took less than the State.

Well, I have already said that I not only am not guilty of these two crimes, but I never commit a crime in my life—I have never steal, and I have never kill, and I have never spilt blood, and I have fought against his crime, and I have fought and I have sacrificed myself, even to eliminate the crimes that the law and the Church legitimate and sanctify.

This is what I say: I would not wish to a dog or to a snake, to the most low and misfortune creature of the earth—I would not wish to any of them what I have had to suffer for things that I am not guilty of. But my conviction is that I have suffered for things that I am guilty of. I am suffering because I am a radical, and indeed I am a radical; I have suffered because I was an Italian, and indeed I am an Italian; I have suffered more for my family and for my beloved than for myself; but I am so convinced to be right that you could execute me two times, and if I could be reborn two other times I would live again to do what I have done already. I am convinced; that's all.

Nicola Sacco—Yes, sir. I am not an orator. It is not very familiar with me, the English language, and so I have not the gift to speak as my comrade Vanzetti will speak many long, so I thought to give him the chance.

I never know, never heard, even read in history anything so cruel as this court. After seven years prosecuting they still consider us guilty. And these gentle people here are arrayed with us in this court today.

Class Verdict.

I know the sentence will be between two classes, the oppressed class and the rich class, and there will be always collision between one and the other. We fraternize the people with the books, with the literature. You persecute the people, tyranize over them and kill them. We try the education of people always. You try to put a path between us and some other nationality that hates each other. That is why I am here today on this bench, for having been the oppressed class. Well. You are the oppressor.

You know it, Judge Thayer. You know my life. You know why I have been here, and after seven years, we that you have been persecuting, me and my poor wife, and you still today's sentence to death. I would like to tell all my life, but what is the use? You know all about what I say before, and my friend—that is, my comrade—will be talking because he is more familiar with the language, and I will give him a chance.

Tribute To Sacco.

My comrade, the kind man, the kind man to all the child, you sentence him two times, in the Bridgewater case and the Dedham case, convicted with me, and you know he is innocent. You forget all this population that has been with us for seven years, to sympathize and give us all the energy and all their kindness. You do not care for them.

Among that peoples and the comrades and the working class there is a big legion of intellectual people that have been with us for seven years, not to commit the iniquitious sentence, but still the Court goes ahead. And I think I thank you all, you people, my comrades who have been with me for seven years with the Sacco-Vanzetti case, and I will give my friend a chance.

I forgot one thing which my comrade remember me. As I said before, ments, money and property seized in the raid."

The withdrawal of the embassy will leave only the Russian consulate staff in Peking.

John Bull Foiled.

"Announcing Russia's refusal to be drawn into a war by the imperialist powers, the note declares, "The Soviet government fully understands that irresponsible foreign imperialists are provoking Russia to war, and fully understands that the Peking cabinet has become a tool in the game played by foreign imperialist groups.

"Therefore, the Soviet government is and will be guided in its policy by the interests of the workers of the world, as well as by the interests of the Chinese nation.

Wants World Peace.

"Responding to the Peking accusation, the aim of which is to spoke worse the international situation and transform the hostilities at the present time led by several imperialist powers into a new world war, the Soviet government declares it will not allow itself to be provoked by anybody, but will by all means defend the peace between nations.

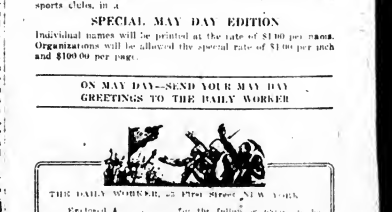
"The Soviet government has no doubt that in its desire for peace it will find support by all workers of all countries, and first of all by the people of China and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics."

Britain Inspired Raids.

PARIS, April 16.—The raids on the Soviet embassy in Peking and on the consulate at Tientsin were inspired by the imperialist powers, according to M. Rakowsky, Soviet ambassador.

Declaring that Chang Tso-Lin would never have dared to raid the embassy unless he had been supported and encouraged by the powers, he said, "These incidents in Peking appear to be merely preliminary to a large scale armed intervention which is now preparing in China. We do not intend to have Russia made the goat for what has happened, nor for what is going to happen in China."

Hush Nationalist Troops North.



SHANGHAI, April 16.—Altho wild reports of Nationalist defeats at Pukow and Yangchow are flooding the city, no reliable information about the Nationalist drive northwards has been received.

Reports from the front seem to indicate that the Nationalists have suffered slight reverses along both fronts, Chiang Kai Shek's divisions at Shanghai are being rushed to Pukow and Yangchow to reinforce the Nationalist lines. Troop trains departed from the North Station all day long, and Chiang Kai Shek himself is reported to have left for the front.

Feng Ready to Strike.

In the meantime General Feng Yu-hsiang with his well-trained battalions is hovering in the west, ready to swoop down on Peking at an opportune moment.

Judicial Vengeance in New Jersey

The frightful sentences meted out to active workers in the Passaic strike again brings before the working class the necessity of continuing the fight against the textile tyranny that dominates every branch of state government, from the bullying constable to the judges upon the bench and even reaches into the senate at Washington where Edwards and Edge represent the scab shop gang in that august assembly.

Adolph Wissenefski was sentenced to serve from five to twenty years in the penitentiary and Paul Kovac and Nicholas Schilliei were sentenced to serve from one to five years. The charges against them was the notorious "bomb" fake that was invented to be used against the strike as it was drawing to a close. Ten other workers are already serving terms of three years on charges of being implicated in the same case. On the same day the three men were sentenced, two small Italian women were given three months each on charges of "assaulting Passaic policemen." Heavy fines were also imposed upon 19 other men who were accused of "disorderly conduct" for picketing.

This judicial savagery is a part of the campaign of vengeance that has been waged for more than a year in Passaic against the workers for daring to organize themselves into a union and challenge the power of the mill owners to enslave them.

Passaic workers have learned how to fight on the picket lines against the industrial tyranny of the bosses. Those who are permitted to vote now have an opportunity to rebuke the political defenders of the mill owners by rallying to the support of the labor candidates running on a labor platform in the coming municipal elections in that city. Passaic has the "non-partisan" commission form of government, hence the candidates run as "individuals," but they all have a common platform. Five city commissioners are to be elected. Three labor candidates are already in the field. They are Albert Weisbord, leader of the strike; Simon E. Rambach and Simon Smelkinson.

Passaic has set the pace for industrial organization of the unorganized masses in the industries of New Jersey. It is to be hoped the present election campaign will establish as firmly a local labor party and thus lay the basis for a state labor party, and give impetus to the growing demand for a national labor party.

Meanwhile no stone must be left unturned to aid the victims of the judicial marionettes who, at the behest of the mill owners, are bent upon jailing as many workers as can be brought into their clutches.

Only the power of the working class, fighting on all fronts, can finally wipe out the blot upon the face of the earth that is the mill owners' Passaic.

Kellogg's Bluff Called by Calles

The state department at Washington maintains a discreet silence on the latest developments in Mexico in relation to the alleged stolen and forged documents containing military plans against Mexico.

Those familiar with the wiles of what passes for diplomacy at Washington will not be deceived by the claims of Kellogg. The documents were neither stolen nor forged. While we do not know precisely what occurred it is nevertheless possible to reconstruct the crime through familiarity with the methods of the criminal—in this case the state department.

For a long time Washington has been trying to bluff the Calles government into abandoning its antagonism to certain American interests, particularly the oil interests. Failing to achieve the desired results through ordinary channels, it is plain that the plans of the government toward Mexico were revealed to Calles in order to frighten him into yielding to the demands of Wall Street. Evidently Calles called the bluff and demanded explanations from American Ambassador James R. Sheffield. Confronted with its own duplicity the state department at Washington now tries to conceal its perfidy with the crude invention that the documents were stolen from the American embassy and then forged in order to arouse distrust on the part of Mexico against the United States.

The only thing that is now required of the miserable corporation lawyer in the state department is his resignation and his return to private life to take his place with Dougherty, Denby, Fall, young Roosevelt, and the other heros of Elk Hill and Teapot Dome.

His resignation, however, will not remove the menace of a predatory war against Mexico in the interest of American oil, mining and land interests. But the expose of his policy ought to reveal the sinister machinations of American imperialism in Mexico and help create a determination on the part of the American masses to energetically fight against any move toward conquest of that territory.

All is Grist That Comes to the Fascist Mill.

John Thomason, a 17-year-old youth of Phoenix, inadvertently threw a match on oil-coated waters at Canyon Lake, Arizona, causing a fire which resulted in the destruction of the Italian seaplane commanded by the fascist aviator, Francesco de Pinedo, which was resting on the lake.

Always alert to find an excuse for fresh outbreaks of violence against those courageous elements in Italy that still fight against the black reaction of fascism, the brigands who supported Mussolini immediately denounced the destruction of the plane as an anti-fascist plot and began a series of "reprisals" against its enemies.

The bloodthirsty fascist papers that demanded more bloodletting in Italy were ably assisted by the asinine American ambassador to Rome, Henry P. Fletcher, who referred to the affair as "an act of criminal folly" without having the slightest information on which to base his opinion.

The serious fighters against fascism in the United States and throughout the world do not have to resort to incendiarism to voice their protests against the monstrous regime in Italy. Its crimes are known to every enlightened worker. Serious fighters are too busy organizing mass sentiment against the black shirt tyrants and mobilizing the workers to give aid to a mass movement in Italy that will eventually sweep from power a regime despised by the vast majority of Italian workers and which only exists through frightfulness, to stoop to the level of the fascists even in fighting against them.

Coolidge Philippine Veto

By H. M. WICKS

THE history of the Philippine policy of the present administration is an odious record of systematic suppression of the native legislature, which unquestionably reflects, though sometimes inadequately, the overwhelming sentiment of the Filipinos for independence from the ravages of the imperialist plunderers of the United States.

Every act and every utterance in relation to the Philippine problem on the part of the Coolidge administration has indicated a vicious suppression of the will of the people of those islands. The veto of the independence plebiscite bill is the climax of a whole series of acts of despotism against the legislature of the islands. Coolidge, in his message to congress last year declared:

"There are indications that more authority should be given to the governor-general, so that he will not be so dependent upon the local legislative body to render effective our efforts."

The swash-buckling military despot, Major General Leonard H. Wood, wanted a free hand to enable him further to increase his autocratic rule. Even Col. Carmi H. Thompson, who went on a roving expedition to the Philippines in the interests of imperialistic America, reported that the Wood regime was a blunder and urged that the governor general's office be demilitarized by substitution of capable civil officers for soldiers. Of course, Thompson is not in favor of independence, but thought that a softer policy could better serve the interests of the American investors than the policy of violence carried out by Wood. But the Coolidge government would not even consider the Thompson recommendations. Its policy is the iron fist.

THE next move in the Philippines came when the legislature passed a bill demanding the right of the people to vote on the question of independence. Wood vetoed it. It was repassed by a two-thirds' vote of the legislature in spite of the fact that Wood and the low renegade and traitor, Aguinaldo, tried to mobilize all available forces against it and even went so far as to bribe members of the legislature. After being passed over the veto of General Wood it then went, under the provisions of the Jones act, to the President of the United States. Coolidge also vetoed it and that veto is final as far as the confines of legality are concerned.

LIKE Torquemeda, the dungeon builder of the Holy Roman inquisition, who assured his victims at the stake that their bodies were being burned that their souls might be cleansed, Coolidge tells the Filipinos that it is his sacred duty to force them to abandon all hope of independence for their own good. Their manifest destiny, if they are to be saved from themselves, is to abjure agitation against their benefactors in the United States and grow rubber fer Americans, raise sugar cane for the sugar trust and tobacco for the American tobacco trust, besides guaranteeing dividends to the American investors in public utilities.

Says Coolidge in his message that vetoed the independence bill:

"In the calendar year 1926, 761,000,000 pounds of sugar were imported into the United States from the Philippine Islands. The duty waived on this sugar was slightly less than $17,000,000. Of this $3,000,000, approximately, accrued to the producers of sugar in the Philippine Islands in the increased price thereof. The large producers of sugar appreciate this."

Indeed they do! But how about the slaves who produce the sugar? Of what interest is it to them that the banking and industrial capitalists who invested money in order to enslave the workers of the Islands benefited because the duty was waived on this commodity? In the first place the duty was waived by the United States government not for the benefit of the inhabitants of the Islands but in order to benefit the capitalist exploiters whose money is invested in sugar plantations. That there is a small class of native capitalists who profit from sugar and other industries, goes without saying. It is a well-known phase of imperialist policy to bribe through distribution of stock, certain favored natives, who can thereby be relied upon to support the policy of the predatory nation.

The same is true of tobacco which is shipped duty free into the United States, and the motive is the same. In the same vein the president explains the Filipinos with the matchless benefits derived from the absence of duty on cocoanut products, cotton and other commodities, concluding with the observation:

"Briefly there was waived on Philippine products entering the United States duty amounting to $42,000,000."

He does not mention the fact that most of these commodities are held by the great American trusts. Nor does he draw the logical conclusion that even though independence were granted the Islands these trusts would not permit their government of the United States to force them to pay heavy duty for the entrance of their Philippine products into the American market.

IT is not the present holdings alone that the government at Washington is concerned about, but the fact that the Philippine Islands are still capable of absorbing enormous amounts of investment capital and the American bank capitalists want the exclusive privilege of exploiting the rich natural resources of that territory. A native Philippine government might permit the investment of other foreign capital, or even develop its own resources for the benefit of the Filipino masses, which would be unthinkable from the standpoint of the American plunderhund.

IN summing up his reasons for the veto Coolidge states that such a vote, if taken, would be unconvincing. George III of Britain said identically the same thing about the demand for independence on the part of the American colonists of 150 years ago. But the colonists began organizing secret, conspiratorial revolutionary "committees of correspondence," which eventually penetrated every part of the Atlantic seaboard and "convinced" his Brittinic majesty in a most salutary manner.

Coolidge further reveals his notions of independence and its effect upon suppressed peoples by the observation:

"To submit to a man the question whether he desired to be independent, or not, is really trifling with the sacred feelings inhate in humankind."

What would a former president of the United States who more than a hundred and fifty years ago sat down and penned that document that began "When in the couse of human events" say about this miserable apology for despotism from Heaven of the puppet in the White House at Washington today?

But we have travelled a long way since the Declaration of Independence. Jefferson and the revolutionists who wrote that document were the leaders of the struggle against the reaction of their day. Their proclamations were virile, dynamic with the indignation of a rising class entering the conflict against its oppressor. Today Coolidge personifies the reactionary tendencies of a class that no longer serves the forces of progress but is trying, with all means at hand, to maintain itself against the course of history.

THE veto of the demand of the legislature of the Islands for a vote of the people upon the question of independence is also dictated by the general policy of the United States in the Pacific. Certainly American imperialism now endeavoring, with other powers, to crush the national liberation movement in China, is not going peacefully to surrender control of the Philippines. If useful for no other purpose the Islands would serve as they do serve for a naval and military base for operations in the Far East.

Furthermore, independence for the Philippines would give the natives a free hand against their own exploiters and the probability is not remote that they would follow the lead of the nationalist movement in China, that, in the course of the struggle, is developing toward a workers' and peasants' government.

Coolidge has said that more demands from legislative bodies are "unconvincing." Such demands on the part of the nationalists in China were equally unconvincing. Today their arguments, fortified by the organized might of the Kuomintang, are decisively convincing.

It is to be hoped that the Filipino masses soon generate that accumulation of force and energy necessary to convince even Calvin Coolidge that they mean what they say when they demand independence. In this they will have the loyal support of the vanguard of the working class in this and every other country.

PROGRESSIVE MACHINISTS ISSUE STATEMENT ON ELECTIONS COMING UP IN THEIR UNION

With the approach of the elections in the International Association of Machinists, the progressive and militant members have begun to consider candidates in opposition to the present misleaders already in the field. The Progressive Machinists' Group has issued the following statement:

The Machinists Election.

The progressive machinists group representing the militant and progressive forces in our union throughout the country calls upon the membership of the I. A. of M. to support the candidates who stand for a militant policy of struggle as against the ruinous policy of surrender to the bosses pursued by the present administration.

Only those candidates who have shown in action that they stand for progressive policies should receive support from the progressive forces in our union.

For executive council, United States, Peter Green, Lodge 402, Chicago; for executive council, United States, A. T. McNamara, No. 1341, Baltimore, Md.; for executive council, Canada, J. E. McGovern, No. 692, Montreal; for delegate to the A. F. of L., J. Weudert, No. 390, Chicago; for delegate to the A. F. of L., W. Waterworth, No. 115, Chicago; for law committee, U. S. A., J. Friedrich, No. 66, Milwaukee.

The progressive group make no recommendations on the other executive dates. We take the same position relative to the delegates to the A. F. of L. and the law committee. We support only the candidates as stated above, who are the only ones who have expressed themselves on any progressive issues facing our union and the labor movement in general.

A Fighting Policy.

The policies proposed by the progressive group are well known to all militant and progressive members of the I. A. of M. The program we consider of utmost importance at this time for our union can be briefly stated in the following points:

1.—A general wage increase of wages in the entire industry, on the broadest by restoration of the 1920 wage scale.

2.—Immediate organization campaign to organize the unorganized machinists upon a united drive of all the crafts both on the railroads and in the machine shops generally, the union to pay more attention to the unskilled and semi-skilled specialists and also take the initiative to organize the auto industry.

3.—Amalgamation of all the craft unions in the metal industry.

4.—Militant struggle against company unions and the B. & O. plan, Watson-Parker Law and other forms of class-collaboration.

5.—Removal of racial bars on account of race, color, etc.

6.—Freedom of political expression in the union.

7.—Bi-annual conventions.

8.—Militant struggle against injunctions by the union supporting and participating in the movement for a labor party.

The above mentioned candidates have expressed themselves at numerous occasions for most of points in this program and have carried on a consistent struggle for its realization in our union. We will call upon the rank and file to actively support these candidates in order to be able to give expression to a real progressive polley in the leadership of the I. A. of M.

Administration Policy and Candidates

The rest of the candidates can be divided into two groups, although it must be understood that these groups are not divided due to a difference in policy, but as we have stated on numerous occasions, it is the old story of the "ins" and "outs".

One group consists of the administration slate currently headed by Bill Johnston and now by Wharton with the same old reactionary policy of surrender, only more brazenly pursued.

Wharton is ably assisted by the present secretary-treasurer, E. C. Davison, who is well known for his role in the ballot stealing during the last election, and the new addition to the grand lodge machine in the person of Vic Gauthier, expulsion expert from Toledo who had to get the militant fighters expelled in order to protect a few reactionary grand lodge pets in office. The additional "eyesmen" Pete Conlon, Nicherson, Thorpe, Davis et al, add no prestige to the administration slate. This administration has pursued a policy which can in the long run lead to the complete ruin of the union. It is more militant in fighting the progressive members of the union than in fighting the bosses.

The Company Unions System.

The B. & O. plan after having been proved a failure to accomplish anything substantial for the workers in the railroad shops is now being introduced into the contract shops with the aid of the bosses. Instead of appointing capable organizers, the Wharton administration appoints such "pensioners" as Bill Johnson and Reilly as additions to the already long list of lame ducks parading as organizers.

Instead of taking the initiative to organize the auto workers after the last convention of the A. F. of L. our officials pursued a policy of "do nothing" thereby leaving it to the rank and file that only hot air was furnished by them in Detroit together with Green & Co.

For Arbitration.

The Wharton administration supports the Watson Parker law and have not done anything to stimulate the rank and file demand for restoration of the 1920 wage scale in spite of the fabulous profits of the railroad corporations.

Although our action is committed in favor of amalgamation, the present administration launches war against any member who insists upon this policy being put into effect.

For a Militant Policy.

The above mentioned candidates are putting their policies into effect with the blessings of our so-called "leaders."

Convention decisions and established policies do not amount to anything to the present administration and it is due time for the rank and file to refuse to vote them into office.

Other Candidates.

While the administration has a complete slate the rest of the candidates—with the exception of the progressives—are composed of a number of individuals who have no policy and who are only carrying on a communication campaign in which not a word is said about the needs of the union and while contain no criticism of the present administration.

It is more striking when among these candidates we find such outstanding figures as Anderson who led the opposition to Johnston during the last election and who at least at that time claimed to be in opposition to some of the more reactionary policies of the Johnston administration.

Fry With Wharton.

The former Anderson group in Chicago, led by Fry, has practically gone over to the Wharton machine and are pursuing a more reactionary policy than ever carried out by the Johnston group in District No. 8, although for a while they professed to stand for certain progressive measures during the last election campaign.

The progressive group has made several attempts to force these candidates of the former Anderson group to express themselves on policy before the membership and help build one united opposition movement against the reactionary administration, but have not been able to get any satisfaction which makes it impossible for the membership to see the difference between the candidates except for those who stand for a militant policy as outlined by the program of the progressive group.

During all elections the progressive group has refused to carry on its agitation among other lines that for a definite and fundamental policy as against personal polemics. We shall continue to carry on our campaign to acquaint the membership with our program and carry on this struggle to make the I. A. of M. an effective instrument in the service of the class struggle. BUY THE DAILY WORKER AT THE NEWSSTANDS

In spite of the fact that our preamble states clearly "that the I. A. of M. favors independent political action of the workers" the administration continues to support the old bankrupt policy of "rewarding our friends and punishing our enemies" and carries on a unceasing warfare against these members who dare belong to a working class political party while the reactionary elements of the republican and democratic bosses' parties are putting their policies into effect with the blessings of our so-called "leaders."

Convention decisions and established policies do not amount to anything to the present administration and it is due time for the rank and file to refuse to vote them into office.

CO-OPERATIVES

SUCCESS OF CO-OPERATIVES EVEN IN THIS COUNTRY IS DISCLOSED BY THE REPORT OF UNITED STATES LABOR DEPARTMENT

By LELAND OLDS (Federated Press).

The vitality of the consumers' co-operative movement in the United States is revealed in a U. S. department of labor report on co-operation in 1920 and 1925. According to the report those co-operatives which survived the 1921-22 depression have more than held their own. Compared with 1920 they show a 29% gain in membership and a 22% increase in the real value of sales per member.

The 473 co-operative societies reporting in 1925 showed sales aggregating $40,710,788. They numbered almost 150,000 members. The average sales per member were $334.

The typical American co-operative is the retail general merchandise store. There were 324 of this type in 1925. In addition there were 49 retail groceries, 38 combination retail groceries and meat markets, 11 student supply stores and a considerable miscellaneous group including co-operative bakeries, laundries, boarding houses, restaurants, etc.

Minnesota Leads.

Minnesota leads in the number of co-operative societies and in membership. It reports 129 societies with 23,889 members. Other outstanding states are Massachusetts with 32 societies and 21,676 members, Ohio with 16 societies and 13,494 members and Illinois with 28 societies and 9569 members. California, Wisconsin, New York and Kansas report more than 5000 co-operators apiece.

The department has complete data covering 204 co-operatives. These did a business of $28,544,465 in 1925, of $21,592,079 at the low point of the 1921-22 depression and a business of $27,993,735 in 1920. The total sales, average sales per store and average per member in 1925 for the various types of co-operative in this group were:

Crops in 1925	Total sales	Per Store	Per member
Retail stores
General merchandise	$16,090,343	$119,188	$528
Groceries	1,691,073	73,525	305
Groceries and meats	2,702,242	142,223	199
Student supplies	819,434	163,887	87
Other commodities	274,221	91,407	372
Total	$21,577,313	$116,624	$334
Wholesale societies	2,453,521	819,840
Bakeries	164,391	82,195	246
Laundries	25,393	25,306	141
Boarding houses	86,479	28,826
Restaurants	230,286	76,765	296
Water-supply societies	726	726	21
Miscellaneous	3,690,828	1,223,276	372
Grand total	$28,541,165	$139,924	$352

Majority Made Profit.

A majority of the co-operatives operated at a profit which was distributed to the membership as a rebate on sales or in some other way. Of the 341 societies giving data 317 had a profit, 87 broke even, 15 were operating on a cost-plus plan and 24 lost money. The profit of the co-operatives aggregated more than a million and a half dollars.

On the social benefits derived from such co-operation the department comments, "Many a community has found the coop a real check upon the profiteering tendencies of local merchants and a power in raising the quality of the goods sold. It pays fair wages to labor and so tends to raise the level for workers in other stores in the locality. By inaugurating such features as reading rooms, club rooms, lectures, libraries, etc., the co-operative society may exert an influence in developing not only a wider social but higher cultural tone in the community.

ATHEISTS WILL SUE STRATON FOR LIBEL

The feud between the Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton and the officers of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism took a new turn today when Freeman Hopwood, general secretary of the atheist organization, announced the intention of instituting legal action against the clergyman for alleged libelous utterances against the association. Dr. Straton, according to Mr. Hopwood, called the atheists "scofflaws," and stated that they had "the black ranks of immorality behind them," and based these allegations to be published.

"I have just received a wire from Mr. Smith, our president, in which he says he will return here after forming branches in Oklahoma City and Tulsa. He is ready to meet Dr. Straton and his legal office boy, Mr. Sumner, of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, in the courts," Mr. Hopwood declared.

"I shall now proceed in behalf of the association to the moment Dr. Straton has his summons served on Mr. Smith. His statements are plainly libelous, and we have a clear case, for the name of our association, which is a registered New York corporation, has suffered as a result. 'A minister should be the last man in the world to talk of "scofflaws" in view of the fact that so many clergymen have been convicted of notorious crimes."

Mr. Hopwood can be reached on Cortlandt 5460 at 12 noon, and on Audubon 1290 in the evening.

THE MOVIES—THEY DON'T SATISFY.

PART 2.—THREE OUT OF THOUSANDS.

The readers having already seen the "Thief of Bagdad," I am not going to dwell much upon that picture. I will only say that very little has remained in the film from the wonderful story of Shahrazad and its chimerical fantasy. In vain do we look for the mysterious character of the oriental tale and for the work of the producer.

Good Properties Again.

"The Lost World" is a kind of scientific utopia on the basis of a story by Conan Doyle. Professor Challenger maintains that prehistorical beings have been preserved in the jungles of South America. Notwithstanding the skepticism of his fellow scientists, he succeeds in equipping a small expedition which reaches the heart of Brazil and finds there cavemen and pre-historic monsters, such as the brontosaurus, the pterodactyl and so on.

He brings one of these animals as an evidence to London, but the animal flees from its cage, walks upon the streets of the city destroying everything in its path, and finally, reaches the sea by way of the Thames.

Everything was given in this picture except the utopia. The jungles, the savages, the monsters, all this was so real that one could not help admiring the masterly art of the property man. But there is no trace of the work of the producer as an artist. Slavishly, to the smallest details he was carrying out everything that was demanded in the letter of the scenario. And the result was an inert and "genre" play with unrequited love and kisses.

Charlie Acts Well.

Finally "The Gold Rush" Produced by Charlie Chaplin who plays in it the chief part. The idea of the film is more or less idyllic. A good-for-nothing gold-seeker goes to Alaska, where, after many comic and tragic adventures, he becomes a multimillionaire and wins his beloved girl.

The comedian, Charlie Chaplin, in his unusually gifted acting occasionally shows so much sincere and tragic pathos that it is impossible to look at the screen without trembling for the fate of the hero. The other artists are also executing their parts splendidly. The film was photographed not in decorative pavilions but in Alaska itself. Everything is real and appears lifelike on the screen.

But it is exactly this that spoils the picture. There is no indication of the creative imagination of the producer, nothing to left to the imagination and to the emotions of the spectator. For even when one of the heroes, crazed by hunger suffers hallucinations and in place of his partner sees a turkey whom he wants to kill and to eat, the screen shows a man dressed like a real turkey so that it is impossible to count all the feathers of his tail. Well said the effect was of quite an ordinary live turkey, but by no means suggestive of the hallucination of a half-crazed human being.

Too Exact for Art.

Thus the American film is only performing the task of a living photography, or rather of a moving photography. There is no screen craftmanship in America, there are no artistic achievements which would compel the imagination of the spectator to ponder over the screen performance.

There are capable screen actors, there are skillful property men, there are magnificent technical facilities, but there are no master producers, there is no screen art.

Beginnings of Art.

I meant to say, there is practically none. For I have already seen on the American screen the first inceptions of artistic productions, of real artistic productions.

True, there were only two of them, or at any rate I know of only two of such films. The first art film, "The Unknown Purple," passed almost unnoticed, and the press did not write much about it. I don't know the name of the producer. Here is the plot: A young scholar gets into prison due to the crime of his wife who had stolen church money that was in his trust. From a fellow prisoner he learns who was the cause of his plight, not having suspected before that his own wife had committed the theft together with her lover. He swears to avenge himself. Some time passes. His wife had married the other man.

In the meantime a prominent scholar wins world fame abroad through a number of inventions. He goes to America. After his arrival there starts a series of robberies committed by an elusive and invisible criminal who signs himself "The Unknown Purple." It goes without saying, that the "Unknown Purple," the famous scholar and the recently imprisoned chemist are the same person.

He had discovered rays that make a man invisible—only a spot of purple light can be seen instead. To take revenge he kills,—with the help of his former prisonmate,—the new husband of his former wife, persecutes her with terrible phantoms, and finally, having taken away his children, goes abroad forever.

Restraint.

In this film, one is impressed first of all by the decorative effects. In addition to real houses, gardens, etc., there is a wealth of hints and allusions which leave the rest to the imagination of the spectator. When the prison is to be presented, only a dark and heavy outline of the building is shown, as well as two shining grated spots, the eyes of the cells—behind which the figures of the two prisoners are dimly visible.

When phantoms are to appear, the spectator does not see real human beings in the air, but hazy outlines of shadows in which sometimes a few details are discernible, such as for instance the eyes and some features of the face, compelling the wife (and the spectator) to ask whether it is or is it not he.

However, I admit that this film should not be exaggerated. After all, it is only a mystery story better executed than other pictures of its kind.

The Artist Revolts.

Better than most of these films, but still bourgeois in point of view, is the Bergman on Horseback produced by the gifted James Cruze. This production calls to mind the best films of the new Soviet theatres. True, the same tone was not maintained throughout the picture, maybe because the scenario was written by two authors, and the producer had to reckon with their contradictory wishes.

The film presents both reality and dream. The farmer is presented in realist colors with occasional exaggerations. The dream was obviously the work of another artist; it is a real dream, a nightmare, and the skill of the producer had ample opportunity to unfold itself. The whole is a satire on capitalist America.

The State Department Under Kellogg

(By Our Staff Correspondent).

Washington, D. C.

It is related of Senator Borah that at one of the White House breakfasts to which he was invited Mrs. Butler he urged President Coolidge to take an independent and hands-off stand in his Chinese policy. It is said he bluntly warned the president that if he followed the British he was piling up trouble for himself and the United States.

To these observations Coolidge is declared to have nasaled:

"Well, the British usually know what they are doing in foreign affairs. They use their heads."

"Yes, they may use their heads," Borah is quoted as replying, "But the trouble with the British right now is that those who are running their affairs either have no heads or are letting their Tory prejudices undo their reasoning."

Using "British" Methods.

The story is interesting for the light it throws upon the Coolidge-Kellogg foreign policy, not only in China, but elsewhere. For not only is the United States playing the British game in China, but we are using British methods and administering British policies in Central America. One particular British practice the Coolidge-Kellogg administration has taken over.

That is, conducting what literally amounts to war in various places, particularly against helpless peoples, without the authorization of the national legislature to do so. In two hemispheres United States troops and battleships are today engaged in warfare. Of course it is not called that. Just as the warfare these troops and armament are conducting is not called war. So 4th degree so too are the subterfuges and lies mouthed by Coolidge and his palsied Secretary of State, Kellogg.

"To protect American lives and property," is the favorite outcry. Second to it, but only by the narrowest of margins is the one about, "Bolshevistic revolt, red danger, world revolution."

In years past it was the complaint of American military and naval officers that the United States of all the great powers, never offered no regular foreign service to its soldiers. Unlike France, Germany, Italy, England, always engaged in putting down revolt or conquering a new colony, the United States offered no such opportunity for adventure. It is true that there were Negroes to massacre in Haiti and natives to shoot-up in Nicaragua, but these were hardly manly-like jobs.

Troops Are Massing

But today the services are bright-ened up. There is talk of "going in" in China. Of "taking over" Mexico and "Cubanizing" Nicaragua. Today, American newspapers abound with pictures and pictures of troop movements. Marines, sabres, doughboys, artillery to China, to Nicaragua, to the Mexican border. Troop trains are amassing. Any man in uniform or seen on the streets, in the movies. Talk is of war. The business of fighting is picking up.

All this time, Mr. Coolidge through the shine of his alleged "spokesman" is pontifically proclaiming his good intentions and every time "Nervous Nellie" Kellogg gets ready to trot out another batch of soldiers and ships, he orates speciously of peace and settlement.

Certainly the history of the American State Department is not one of many outstanding examples of decency and intelligence, but seldom in the 150 years of its existence has it sunk to the depths it has attained under Kellogg. It is as-palsied an agency as is its so-called Secretary. No he is to petty or too bald for Kellogg and his underlings to put forth and solemnly reiterate; no pretenses too small for them to engage in.

While Congress was in session, Kellogg curbed to heel if the protesting became too insistent. When he would hear that Borah was getting restless, he would dash out to see him, and craftily tie him up with conferences. But with congress gone, and Borah only languidly interested in calling the Senate Foreign Relations committee into session during the recess in order to consider foreign affairs, Kellogg has in his nerves excitement taken a bolder stand.

Denying Important Facts.

Last week during one of his press conferences he was queried concerning his conference with the returned Mexican Ambassador, Tellez. It had developed he had held a conference with Tellez, though he had denied doing so when asked about the matter the day previous. Kellogg bridled under the questioning after insisting that he had not denied he had seen Tellez, and finally broke off the controversy with the remark:

"Do you think I would lie to you about a small matter like that, or about if it were an important proposition I might, but about this little thing—why bother."

Perhaps he was right in his contention about seeing Tellez, but right or wrong, his views about lying were most illuminating.

The internal affairs in the State Department are in as low estate as is its reputation, about which Washington relished an amusing story some weeks ago. During a debate in the Foreign Relations committee on the Norris resolution to investigate the source of the Associated Press story, broadcast by it early in the year about an alleged Mexican Bolshevist plot to capture control of all of Central-American, ponderous Senator Willis from Ohio, arch wind-bag and reactionary, offered this objection to favorable action on the resolution:

"Everyone knows that the State Department gave the A. P. that story," he was quoted as saying, "but what's the use of putting the State Department and Kellogg more in bad than it is now. It's discredited enough and I for one am opposed to smearing it with more mud."

Apparently this was the way the rest of the Republican majority of the committee felt, because the resolution was reported unfavorably to the senate and was never acted upon.

Morale Is Shattered.

The morale of the Department is badly shattered. The intelligent and hard-working young men are rapidly leaving. For the most part those running affairs are social climbers, spat wearers and cane carriers. The inefficiency and incompetency encompassing other bureaucracies. An insight of what was going on was given recently by the outbreak of Lawrence Dennis, American Charge de'Affaires at Managua, Nicaragua. He flared up when refused promotion and issued a statement charging "a Harvard clique" with control of the department and that promotion and elevation was obtainable only through social prestige and wealth. Instead of disregarding him, he was urged to return to Washington, take an extended leave of absence and assured him that his "suggestions" would receive due attention. Dennis issued further fulminations in which he accused the department of "high hatting" newspapermen—the expression is the one used by him. However when he returned to Washington, after leaving the ship secretly at New Orleans upon orders from Kellogg, he declined to go further into his allegations, particularly those concerning alleged secret instructions to American consuls throughout Central America to support the marine-protected Diaz regime in Nicaragua.

Kellogg a Weakling.

The matter was dropped for the time being. That it developed one of the greatest importance, however is corroborated what has long been bruited about, that the department was at loggerheads within itself. Kellogg, a weakling, indolent, irascible, without the capacity for comprehension to make up for the abysmal lack of information and experience with which he has armed him, has by his countless stupidities disturbed the usual equanimity of the department and demoralized its elan.

Kellogg's cronies are those of outsiders. A lawyer representing oil operators in Mexico boasted of his influence with Kellogg. He would hold long conferences with Kellogg, write voluminous memoranda which he, the reactionary Washington Post, to have what he thus published eventuates as the department's policy within a few days. In China, Kellogg disregarding completely the great opportunity for taking a courageous, humane position, played second fiddle to Great Britain.

The "Mistake Department."

Everything he has put his palsied hand to, has suffered. In Washington they refer to the department as the "mistake department" or "Kellogg's fake department." There is talk that he is soon to get out. It has even reached the point of discussing his successor. Ambassador Houghton, to England, and Charles Beecher Warren, former Ambassador to Mexico are most prominently mentioned.

Just, while this talk is going on, it is known that Kellogg assured Borah very recently, that he had no intention of getting out. Unless he is pushed out, it is hardly likely that he will leave voluntarily. If he retires he is nothing. In his home state, Minnesota, he is a discredited politician. Elsewhere he is a laughing stock. His name as Secretary of State has been distinguished solely by its stupidities, its lack of understanding of the great human streams, of progress and of the underway, his frightful and pitiful blunders.

Despised In Washington.

During a period in the world's history when he, and Coolidge too, with ringing words of decency and a courageous insistence for fair-playing might have rehabilitated the nation and the world behind, he has blundered and faltered.

It is really an astonishing fact, that even here in Washington, he is despised and condemned. Even the Washington Post, turned on him, and during the Dennis episode carried amazing articles charging the department with incompetence and Kellogg with lying.

No better comment, on the state of affairs within the State Department as at present managed, is needed than the strange story that became known during the past week concerning the passing off as secret official department documents forgeries that nearly caused a rupture between the United States and Mexico. Certainly in a State Department where such frauds are possible, matters must be very bad.

Ford and Sapiro—Brothers Under the Skin

PART I.

By STIRLING BOWEN.

Facts brought out in the $1,000,000 suit of Aaron Sapiro against Henry Ford are of great interest to workers and farmers.

The Dearborn Independent, a weekly magazine in which is printed "Ford's Own Page," operates with a deficit. Henry Ford makes up the deficit out of his profits as chief stockholder in the Ford Motor Co. All Ford Motor Co. dealers are required at one time or another to participate in the distribution of the Dearborn Independent, which has a circulation of 900,000. By these means Henry Ford, author of the phrase, "history is mostly bunk," is able to influence public opinion.

E. G. Liebold is secretary to Henry Ford. He is also vice president of the Dearborn Publishing Co., publisher of the Dearborn Independent. Henry Ford is president of the Dearborn Publishing Co.

Sen. James A. Reed insists that in spite of these facts Henry Ford is the one who is now responsible for material published in the Dearborn Independent.

* * *

Jews form from a half to two-thirds of the spectators at the trial. Most of them are middle class Jews. A few belong to the intelligentsia. And there are a few proletarians every day, men who can't get work at the Ford Motor Co., or any other company. Apparently they sympathize with Sapiro.

Sapiro is as great an enemy of the Jewish worker as Henry Ford. He is a lawyer, an organizer of farmer co-operative associations, a fee grabber, a coupon clipper, a millionaire, a capitalist.

For the purpose of his suit for $1,000,000, Sapiro in this trial is posing as a misjudged under-dog who is in reality a benefactor to society, a benefactor particularly to the farmer. To this end in his testimony he dwells eloquently on his humble origin, his early years in an orphanage, his struggle to overcome the dual handicap of race and poverty. Actually he is a shrewd trader in the toil of the farmer, a suave profiteer on the labors of the hewers of wood and the drawers of water. He should be classed with the dependent that Sapiro and a ring of Jewish bankers were exploiting the farmer were hurting Sapiro's business more than his pride. This suit is a business proposition, and no wage earner, whether he be Jewish, American, Polish or Janitorial has any business taking sides, unless he believes that Ford is more immediately powerful, more dangerous to the working class, and therefore should be helped, for the sake of whatever such a beating may be worth.

If Sapiro wins this suit, it will not be a verdict for the Jewish workers.

"Ford's Own Page" is NOT Ford's Own Page. It is written by William J. Cameron, editor of the Dearborn Independent. Ford merely uses Cameron's job.

In the 15 years that have elapsed since he began organizing farmer co-operatives, Sapiro's peak year was 1922, when his income was $61,513.21, according to his own testimony. It was about that time that articles attacking him as a parasite on agriculture began appearing regularly in the Dearborn Independent, the articles being written by Harry H. Dunn, of California, on assignment from the editorial office. According to Sapiro's testimony, his income decreased after 1922 to $46,000 annually in 1923, $35,000 in 1924, $25,000 in 1925. Sapiro attributes the to the Dearborn Independent stories and seeks to hold Ford and the Dearborn Publishing Co. liable. While on the stand before Judge Fred M. Raymond, of Chicago, Sapiro testified that his income by years as follows: 1916, $10,000; 1917, $18,000; 1918, $15,833.33; 1919, $17,278.11; 1920, $30,237.28; 1921, $46,201.27; 1922, $61,513.21; 1923, $95,357.20; 1924, $56,000; 1925, $40,949.55. This is an average income of approximately $46,000 a year and a total income for the 11 years of approximately $500,000.

Sen. Reed in his opening statement to the jury charged Sapiro with using his co-operative marketing activities were about $1,000,000 in that period.

"To operative marketing associations are organizing in which the farmers confine to sell their products through a central office, "Sapiro testified in describing organizations, farmer co-operatives. Sapiro has traveled all over the country, from east to west and north-west in which he participated, either as organizer, consulting expert or attorney. "I had been making a study for years before being admitted to the bar. And I continued it, with reference to growing and marketing oranges, lemons, grapefruit, raisins, almonds, walnuts, lima beans, potatoes, asparagus, deciduous fruits, olives, wheat, barley, tobacco, hay, eggs and other commodities. I didn't evolve any new ideas but simply picked out certain things that seemed to be characteristic of previous co-operative enterprises that were successful and certain things that appeared to be characteristic of those that failed. The chief thing was that all the organizations that had failed seemed to be organized on a locality basis, whereas those that had succeeded had been organized on a commodity basis in which the growers of a single commodity had organized geographically as widely as possible.

"The efforts at co-operative marketing heretofore had been virtually all local efforts and virtually all had failed," Sapiro continued.

"Also I introduced a plan whereby the producers sold their eggs or tobacco or cotton to the association without any price named. Under the sale and re-sale plan the association was bound to pay them whatever seemed to be a reasonable and safe advance. The association then pro-rated the net proceeds according to the amount the growers delivered to the pool and according to grade."

In a typical instance under a plan in use before Sapiro's time, in which the producers sold to the association at a fixed price, the witness said, a commodity calling for a 50 cent rate to the grower had once gone down to 4 cents, Sapiro said at Fresno. He implied the association in this case failed.

Sapiro said he was also the author of a "standard co-operative marketing bill" which was eventually adopted in entirety or with some modification in 30 states.

"There is no allegation in the petition that the witness has been injured in character as a lobbyist," Sen. Reed drawled after Sapiro had testified that he had appeared before legislative bodies in several states in behalf of such a law.

* * *

"In the case of tobacco," Sapiro went on, "I suggested, first, that the tobacco should not be sold by the individual farmer; second, that it should not be sold without the farmer knowing the grade; third, that all the tobacco should not be dumped on the market within a few days after it was cut; fourth, that sales should be made through a central organization dealing with the big buyers in a merchandizing way—on graded tobacco. I then recommended one organization without capital stock, which would be composed of growers. The growers would be bound by long-term contract to deliver their tobacco and have it graded and sold. I recommended also that separate warehouse corporations be formed in the various districts to receive the tobacco."

The Youth Column

Big Business in the Colleges

By a Student.

That big business has a big finger in the pie that passes as college education is a matter of little doubt. If any proof were needed, the recent appointment of Dr. Frederick B. Robinson as the President of the College of the City of New York would be testimony sufficient.

City College—as this so-called institution of higher learning is known—is supported by the proud city of New York. And since big business pays most of the taxes of our fair municipality, big business has a right to know how that money is spent—for so is the law and these are the ethics in capitalistic society the piper calls the tune, you know). And business men want efficiency in their colleges, even if they have to give professors a living wage. Modern business men demand college graduates with a big business outlook and a practical knowledge of what's what in the gentle art of separating mankind from the products of their toil.

So, it is quite obvious, the man who delivers the goods for the lords of Wall Street will get quite a few sizable crumbs. The aforementioned Freddy Robinson has delivered the goods (learning, truth, science, etc.) up to the counting table of Mammon and now is the white-haired boy and not far from the political arena.

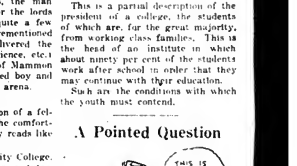
His rise from the position of a fellowship in the college to the comfortable seat of the presidency reads like a Horatio Alger novel.

He was a graduate of City College, later a fellow there, then a tutor, next an associate professor, full professor and head of department, dean of the business school, and then president. Of course a matter of knowing the right people at the right time is a factor that we will not introduce, being a matter of small consequence. And neither is the proper marriage of so very much importance. Nor does it matter which temple a man goes to, as long as it's a fashionable one. Which all goes to show you how far you can get with an honest face and a willingness to serve.

Dr. Robinson's attitude toward education is brazenly indicative of what modern society wants from a college man. Modern society, that is to say, big business, wants practical men, bankers, bookkeepers, accountants, managers, efficiency experts. And Dr. Robinson is going to give big business what it wants. The old type of young man who used to go thru college to learn something will be eliminated. This is the machine age, and men must be Fordized.



"Sure, let them think, but not out loud. I'm a liberal." That is the attitude of the snappy young president. Let nobody make any fuss and let's all be good fellows. We've gotta get our appropriation from Tammany and if we get a bunch of Bolsheviks up here we'll never get a cent. And if we never get a cent then Freddy Robinson won't make a rep for himself. If Freddy don't make a rep for himself then Freddy will never be a candidate for the governor of New York. So boys, not a murmer, not a syllable.

This is a partial description of the president of a college, the students of which are, for the great majority, from working class families. This is the head of an institution which about ninety per cent of the students work after school in order that they may continue with their education.

Such are the conditions with which the youth must contend.

U. S. WAR DEP'T RAISES RACE ISSUE

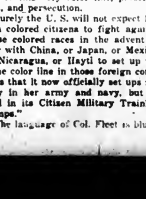
By P. FIELD.

When I was in the CMTC at Plattsburg, N. Y., in Aug. 1925, I did not see one Negro youth amongst the 2,500 young workers and students there. When I approached a sergeant and asked him why there were no Negro youth present in the camp, he answered: "What in the hell do we want niggers here anyway?" In today's New York Times (Wednesday, April 6) we find an official explanation of the attitude of the U. S. War Dept. towards the Negro youth of America.

A young Negro student, by the name of Burnell, made application to attend the CMTC in the second corps area. His application was returned with the following letter:

"March 11, 1927.

"Marsden V. Burnell, 137 Edgecombe Ave., N. Y. C.



"Dear Sir: Your application is being returned. We are not permitted to accept colored young men in the CMT camps in this area. The same army regulations as apply to enlistment in the army govern acceptance in a CMT camp; that is, colored men must enlist in colored regiments. There will be camps for colored men in southern states, and, of course, you are eligible to attend altho it will not be possible to pay your way the entire distance from New York to the camps.

"I suggest that you send your application to the CMT officer, Fourth Corps Area, Red Rock Building, Atlanta, Georgia.

"With kind regards, I am, very truly yours,

"H. W. FLEET.
"Lieut. Col., Inf., CMT Officer."

A Mr. Harris, editor of the New York News sent a letter to President Coolidge protesting against the action of the Second Corps Area of the CMT in excluding Burnell. In his letter to Coolidge there appears some very strong arguments that may change the policy of the war department regarding the Negro youth and militarism. He states: "The white world is on the verge of war with the colored world. America has not a friend amongst any of the colored races in Africa, Asia, or America, due to this very color line, proscription, and persecution.

Surely the U. S. will not expect her colored citizens to fight against those colored races in the advent of war with China, or Japan, or Mexico, or Nicaragua, or Hayti to set up the same color line in those foreign countries that it now officially set ups not only in her army and navy, but as well in its Citizen Military Training Camps."

The language of Col. Fleet is blunt.

We are not permitted to accept colored young men." The Negro youth is not good enough to attend the same camps as the white youth. This is the basis of Negro segregation. This is the basis of Jim Crowism in the south.

The youth of America is being militarized. In the R.O.T.C. in the colleges, where military training is compulsory, the Negro students are just as much drawn into the tentacles of militarism, as the white students. In case of war, the Negro workers will be drafted and shipped to some foreign battlefield just as their white fellow-workers will be, and used by the imperialists and militarists of America what the color of the cannon-fodder is, just as long as there is enough of it.

The war department has raised the race issue. It is possible that more far-sighted politicians, and defenders of Wall Street investments will reverse this policy and include Negro young workers and students in the CMTC. The Negro youth, together with their white fellow young workers and students must be goaded by the propaganda of the workers party, and by mass action against militarism. The struggle against militarism is the struggle against capitalism.

SUNSHINE MINUS SUN

By A Young Worker

Wherever you go on the elevated, subway or street car, you will see this fine proclamation and well paid advertisement that the "Sunshine Biscuit Factory makes its biscuits in a thousand-wind-swept factory." The outside world would think that we workers employed there are bathing all day in sunshine. The truth of the matter is that all the windows are covered with various pipes and machines.

We have to work all day by electric lights, every day, in the year. We can't do a thing in the factory with natural daylight, whether it's a sunny or a rainy day. While the bosses spend ten and hundreds of thousands of dollars for advertisements about what "Mrs. Jones in Iris. Smith says about the biscuits made there, we, the workers, get a starvation wage. Our hours are even ten and we can hardly live on the money we make. At the present time there is no sun and we have to work so hard, that when we come home from work we are so tired that we can hardly eat our suppers, or read a book. We must go immediately to sleep. We are also supposed to work, officially, 48 hours a week, but never has it happened. It's three years already since I work here, and we never work less than 50, and when it is busy we work 64 hours a week.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE death sentence has been duly passed on Sacco and Vanzetti and those two working class leaders are brought several more steps nearer the gallows. Despite the almost universal belief among individuals even in capitalist circles that still retain a vestige of a social conscience, that those two workers are innocent of the crime of which they were convicted by a prejudiced jury, Judge Thayer finished his part of the gruesome conspiracy. It is now the working class of the United States and of the world arrayed against the judicial hangmen of this country in the struggle over two proletarian lives.

THOUSANDS and hundreds of thousands of workers into whose consciousness the first rays of class feeling have not yet penetrated display an appalling callousness to the fate of Sacco and Vanzetti. Their minds have been prejudiced against them by capitalist propaganda agencies for several years. Many of those who shout: "Hang them!" have never read the scanty and generally misleading story of the trial given in the capitalist press. Yet they consider themselves qualified to pass on the question of their innocence or guilt.

IT is assumed by many people that the long period that elapsed between the arrest of Sacco and Vanzetti and the date on which the death sentence was pronounced, is proof that they were given every possible opportunity by the legal machinery of the state of Massachusetts to prove their innocence. Nothing could be farther from the truth. What the two doomed men sought was a new trial conducted by competent and honest counsel and in an atmosphere free from the class hatred that was injected into the first farcical trial by Judge Thayer. This right was denied them.

* * *

THE great majority of the people still have a childish confidence in the fairness of our legal machinery. Even where class is not arrayed against class it is undoubtedly true that judges are sometimes open to influence in deciding points of law. Citizens who have been burnt know this. All who have had experience with capitalist political organizations take no stock in the illusion of legal rectitude. The legal system was established to bolster up the economic system which is based on the exploitation of wage labor. Those who appear in court as the enemies of that economic system are considered guilty until they are proven innocent and not the other way around.

* * *

TAKE the case of Tom Mooney as one horrible example! Even president Wilson's investigator had to come to the conclusion that Mooney was the victim of a frameup. But the murderous capitalist crew that held and still hold California in their grip ignored all evidence and the pleas of prominent citizens who could not by any stretch of the imagination be considered radical. Mooney was saved from the death chair by the solidarity of the working class. But he is still behind the gray walls of San Quentin. The employers could not forgive him for his efforts to organize the workers into militant trade unions. That is the crime of Sacco and Vanzetti.

IN the city of Boston, the headquarters of the interests that want to railroad Sacco and Vanzetti to death there are thousands of willing workers walking the streets looking for work. They grumble and declare there is something wrong but if you mention the cause of their misery or suggest a solution that has been cursed by the clergy, they show signs of terror or exhibit a strong inclination to slice your anatomy with a jack-knife. If Gov. Fuller's price of a newspaper they will glance over the headlines which tell of the imposition of the death sentence on two fellow-workers and then turn to the sporting pages. They do not realize that those who want to inject an electric current into Sacco and Vanzetti are responsible for their lack of employment.

* * *

THIS state of affairs should not breed pessimism. It should only generate a determination to work harder at the task of carrying the message of a new order of society to the befuddled workers. Their instincts are good. In the shop the most ill-informed workers believe in sticking together against the boss. The exception is looked on with scorn. But against this healthy instinct is arrayed the mighty influence of the capitalist press, the schools and the pulpit. Those agencies are busy preaching the gospel of obedience and meekness to the workers. The

Organize All Support for Sacco, Vanzetti by a National Conference

The tremendous wave of protest against the legalized murder of Sacco and Vanzetti must not be allowed to subside until they are free.

The nationwide resentment which the determination to execute these two innocent workers to glut the class bloodlust of Massachusetts capitalism has created must not be allowed to fritter itself away in scattered and futile denunciation of capitalism in the abstract or criticism, no matter how keen, of the persons responsible.

Every ounce of energy that is now devoted to well-meant but more or less unorganized efforts in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti must be organized into one irresistible drive which will open the prison doors and bring Sacco and Vanzetti back to the working class and the labor movement.

There is no time to lose. American capitalism's judicial and punitive machinery works swiftly when the rulers will it so. It takes more time for the labor movement to mobilize.

There must also be a common program—no effort must be wasted because of lack of a common program—no effort must be wasted because of lack of a common directing center.

Saving the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti is a huge task but it can and will be done. The issue moreover is something far and greater than the lives of two workers—precious as these lives are.

It is the American working class that has been on trial these seven long years and it is the spirit of defiance and the will of the workers for struggle, crystallized in the persons of Sacco and Vanzetti, that the rulers of America intend to destroy.

The International Labor Defense has a practical program. It proposes that a national conference representative of all elements willing to unite to demand and force freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti be called. At such a conference delegates would come from unions, fraternal societies, cooperatives, liberal organizations, working class political parties, etc. Properly organized this conference can become the synthesis of the mass protest, able to apply the full pressure of millions of workers, farmers and all other liberty-loving groups. It will make out of mass protest the most powerful movement possible. Movement is what is needed. The American masses must move in the same direction, determined and disciplined, concentrated in their millions upon one objective—wresting Sacco and Vanzetti from the clutches of the capitalist executioners.

This national conference can work out the details of the campaign. In the meantime let the agitation centering around the case take the form of preparing the masses and their organizations for a national assembly which will be so huge, determined and representative that the ruling class must recognize it as the expression of millions who will not be denied.

A National Conference to save Sacco and Vanzetti!

Organize to open the prison doors!

WORKERS MUST SAVE SACCO AND VANZETTI, SAYS PARTY C. E. C.

The full bench of the supreme court of Massachusetts handed down a decision sustaining the action of Judge Webster Thayer in denying a new trial to Nicolo Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

With this decision a legal battle ends which has all along been really a political battle. The authorities of Massachusetts, in league with the federal authorities, had determined to "get" Sacco and Vanzetti for their activities as revolutionary workers. Because these activities did not provide a legal basis for prosecution against them it was decided to fasten a crime upon the intended victims. They were charged with murder. The prosecution was so conscious of the weakness of its frameups that while it indicted Sacco and Vanzetti for murder, it tried them for their revolutionary opinions and activities.

The press was flooded with "anti-red" propaganda against them. The stage of the trial was set against a now existent danger of a revolutionary coup. The jury was pumped full of "patriotic" insanity. After it was convinced that Sacco and Vanzetti were "enemies of the U. S. government," the jury brought in a verdict of guilty of murder against the defendants. The frame-up was so outrageously obvious that even outspoken capitalist papers could maintain their cloak of respectability only by demanding a new and a "fair" trial for Sacco and Vanzetti.

But a mere damand for justice and fairness for Sacco and Vanzetti cannot induce capitalist Massachusetts to release its victims. Webster Thayer was never judge in this case, but hangman. The supreme court of Massachusetts was never a legal body in this case, but executor. The Sacco-Vanzetti case was never a legal but always a political case. Legally Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent of the crime charged against them. They could not be convicted. Politically they are "guilty" of having fought for the workers against capitalism. For this crime capitalist Massachusetts decided to murder them. As an obedient hangman of capitalist Massachusetts Webster Thayer decreed the murder. And as an efficient tool of capitalist Massachusetts the supreme court of that state now approved of this decree.

Save Sacco, Vanzetti.

Workingmen and workingwomen: Sacco and Vanzetti are to be murdered because they are of us and for us. We cannot permit this. It is an act of class war of the capitalist class against the working class. The courts of Massachusetts acted in the name of capitalism against our comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti. We workers must act unitedly for our comrades. Our solidarity with our politically persecuted comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti, must be expressed in a united and irresistible demand: "Freedom For Sacco and Vanzetti!"

Capitalist Massachusetts has used its legal machinery against our comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti, as a political weapon to condemn them.

Mass Movement.

We workers must use our political will, transformed into a united mass movement, as the only power left to get the legal freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent! Their execution is murder!

Wa demand freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti!

STATE QUIZ INTO SACCO-VANZETTI TRIAL DEMANDED

Court is Attacked by Harvard Professor

BOSTON, April 11.—The immediate appointment of a commission to examine and review all acts and proceedings of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts against Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, under sentence to die in the electric chair during the week of July 10, was demanded in a resolution presented to the legislature by Roland D. Sawyer, congregational minister.

Nation-Wide Protest

Meanwhile, with huge mass meetings and protest demonstrations announced in large cities thruout the United States, members of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, representatives of trade unions, and humanitarians convinced of the innocence of the two Italian workers, are conferring to determine means of freeing them.

Fight For New Trial

Some of the present legal possibilities are: (1) appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States; (2) Appeal to Gov. Fuller of Massachusetts, and (3) the impeachment of Judge Thayer, on grounds that he showed intense prejudice during the trial and subsequent hearings for appeal.

National Option

Plans are also announced for the distribution of millions of leaflets in hundreds of cities, for huge protest meetings in the large industrial cen-

500,000 in N. Y. Back Vanzetti and Sacco Protest

New York workers will join in a mass protest against the threatened execution of Sacco and Vanzetti this Saturday at 1 o'clock in Union Square.

Represent Half Million Workers.

A large number of the most important trade unions in this city, speaking for more than 500,000 workers are now actively represented in the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, which is arranging the huge protest on Saturday.

The intense resentment against the decision of Massachusetts Supreme Court in refusing to grant a new trial to the two framed-up Italian radicals will be expressed at this mass demonstration. The committee expects the demonstration to be attended by many thousands.

Campaign Gains Momentum.

Realizing that only the powerful force of the combined protests of the workers throughout the country will succeed in freeing the two persecuted men, a relentless campaign of mass demonstrations, the distribution of leaflets calling attention to the brazen class injustice of the case, and other means calculated to bring pressure upon the legal authorities in Massachusetts, is being commenced at once.

Many Speakers.

At the demonstration on Saturday, which will be followed by many others on successive days thruout the city, a large group of speakers will call for huge national protests thruout the United States in an effort to free Sacco and Vanzetti, who are now facing death in the electric chair.

These speakers will include James P. Cannon, national secretary of the International Labor Defense, which has been leading the campaign for the release of the two workers; Forrest Bailly, director of the American Civil Liberties Union; William W. Weinstone, secretary of the New York Workers (Communist) Party; and Moissaye J. Olgin, Carlo Tresca, Charles Kline, and Leonard Abbott.

Labor Active In Protest.

The Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, of which Elizabeth Gurley Flynn is secretary and Robert W. Dunn treasurer, announced that additional speakers will be announced shortly.

Some of the labor organizations who have joined in arranging Saturday's demonstration are the Joint Board of the I. L. G. W. U., Joint Board of the furriers' union, Shoe Workers' Protective Union, Window Cleaners' Union, Architectural, Bronze and Iron Workers' Union, Amalgamated Food Workers' Union.

Active support to the campaign to free the two workers is also being given by Il Martello, Italian weekly and the Anti-Fascisti Alliance of America.

Ben Gold, Ten Others Bail Revoked, Held For Trial Tomorrow

MINEOLA, L. I., April 11.—Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union, together with 10 other fur workers, are in the Nassau county jail following the revocation of their bail, $10,000 each, pending their trial in connection with the so-called "assault" case of last spring.

Only three workers were originally accused in this case, which is declared by the union to be an obvious frame-up, but the nine others were subsequently dragged in as an afterthought with the admit of the notorious Bassoff, stool-pigeon of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Joseph R. Brodsky, labor attorney, described the action of the judge as "scandalous," and declared holding defendants without bail pending their trial is an unheard of procedure, even in cases of the most serious nature.

The trial of the 11 men will begin tomorrow morning.

U. S. Closer To War.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—With the presentation of a stern note on the Nanking "outrages" to the Nationalist government today, the United States moved closer than ever to open war on China.

Threatening to "take appropriate measures" unless the imperialist demands are promptly met, the note, issued simultaneously with the British, French and Italian notes, calls for the punishment of the commanders of troops responsible for the "outrages," apologies by Chiang Kai-shek and "complete reparations for personal injuries and material damages done."

In an effort to precipitate a split within the Kuomintang the powers have despatched a copy of the note to Chiang Kai-shek as well as to Eugene Chen, Nationalist foreign minister.

The British foreign office demanded an even sterner note, it is reported, and only the reluctance of American finance capital prevented the administration from joining Great Britain in a war-like ultimatum to the Nationalist government. TAMMANY CONDONES INDUSTRIAL INSURANCE SWINDLE ON WORKERS

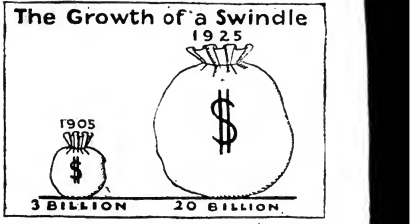
Corruption of Senators and Assemblymen Comes To Light in Insurance Expose

"BIG FOUR" ROB MILLIONS.



Today's is the second article of a series which The DAILY WORKER is printing, exposing the trend of industrial (weekly payment) life insurance. Yesterday's article stressed the fact that last year the "Big Four," i. e., the Metropolitan, Prudential, John Hancock and Colonial Life Insurance Companies collected 100 million dollars in premiums and paid only 22 million dollars in death claims, losses, etc. What happened to the other 78 million dollars? Of all policies which terminated last year only one in a hundred was an endowment policy. Of all terminated policies are lapsed for non-payment of premiums. What happens to the tens of millions of dollars which these octopus "mutual" corporations make on forfeitures? There are 40 million industrial policyholders in the United States and Canada.

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON.

Business was good with the "Big Four" last year. New business put on the books amounted to about two billion six hundred million dollars. Lapses (which do not include death claims or matured endowments) came to one billion three hundred million dollars. These lapsed weekly payment policies are a dead loss to the seven million erstwhile insurers. Giving the insurance companies the benefit of every doubt, they pocketed fifty million dollars on this little deal alone.

Sapiro Denies Getting Big Fee For Farm Speech

DETROIT, April 11.—A series of controversies which marked the activities of Aaron Sapiro in organizing Colorado potato growers, were revealed to the jury trying the million-dollar Ford-Sapiro libel suit.

The Colorado story closely paralleled Sapiro's career among Idaho growers, when he finally sued for fees through a clerk. He also sued the Colorado growers for fees in the same manner after having told them he would accept whatever compensation they offered for his services.

Denies $1,000 Speech.

Then turning to the Colorado Potato Association, Reed sought to learn whether Sapiro was paid $1,000 for a speech to Colorado farmers. Sapiro denied it. The cooperative leader said he spent three days in Colorado, in 1923, at the request of Governor Wm. Sweet, launching a drive to organize a state cooperative. It was concluded by his assistants.

"Were you not employed personally to do this work?" Reed demanded.

"There was no such stipulation made that I should look after the business personally," Sapiro replied.

Sapiro also declared he had never been employed by the Colorado Potato Bureau, when the latter agreed to draft organization papers for the potato cooperatives. Sapiro declared this was his work and refused to agree not to transgress. All this was given the jury through the introduction of letters and telegrams.

Reed first finished an inquiry into Sapiro's connection with the Idaho Potato Growers' Association. This organization went to the wall shortly after Sapiro sued it, through a clerk, for $2,500 in fees and collected.

Reed then brought out that the Idaho farmers were unfriendly to Wagy and Zuckerman, Los Angeles commission men, whom Sapiro helped secure employment as selling agents for the cooperative.

The commission men had financed the organization of the cooperative through Sapiro. Most of the farmer-members however did not know this when they joined the cooperative.

MINERS UNION TO MAKE TEST CASE OF FOUR ARRESTS

Pickets Jailed by Coal Company Police

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 11. A test case will be made of the arrest of four pickets of the United Mine Workers of America, by police of the Pittsburg Coal Company, attempting to operate non-union during the present lockout of union miners.

The great Crescent mine of the Pittsburg Coal Co., in Finleytown Pa., and the largest mine of the Vesta Coal Co., subsidiary of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, are in the same town, are still trying to break the union.

Four pickets were on the public road leading to the properties of the mine engaged in the lockout, and were peacefully attempting to persuade strike-breakers not to go to work, when arrested by armed company police, and accused of being a mob.

Frank Dobbins, in charge of the union forces in the Canonsburg district, provided bail for the four pickets under arrest and they will be arraigned before a justice of the peace in Washington county.

"We intend to waive hearings in the cases of these men," said Fagan, "and let them go to court to give us a chance to prove that the coal and iron police have no right to arrest these men on the public highway. The pickets were not boisterous or disorderly. They were not on the property of the coal company. They were standing quietly in the middle of the road. The coal and iron policemen mighthave well arrest any citizen on the public road."

TAMMANY CONDONES INDUSTRIAL INSURANCE SWINDLE ON WORKERS

"Industrial" or weekly premium policies have no cash value until they have been "in force" (paid on) for ten years. The John Hancock Insurance Company limits the period of bondage to only five years. The other three companies all insist upon a ten year surrender clause.

No Cash for 10 Years.

At the expiration of this ten year period the policy must be surrendered and lapsed in order to receive its paltry cash value. This cash value is in all instances less than one-third of what has been paid in. This is perfectly legal. The New York state department of insurance has said it is. So it must be.

If, due to unemployment, sickness or ill fortune, the ill-fated policyholder cannot keep up his payments for ten years he "is out of luck"—as his agent will tell him.

To illustrate by an actual case: An "industrial" whole life policy is bought by a man 20 years of age. Its weekly payments come to 35 cents, 55 cents a week is $18.20 a year. He is protected for $553. He pays for ten years. Then, due to illness or unemployment, he needs cash. Let us see what happens.

Robbed of $122.

During the ten years he has deposited $182. Under the terms of his unfair policy all that he is entitled to and receives is $60. The contract is then lapsed and he has lost $122. If he still needs insurance for the protection of his wife and children he must be reinstated at increased rates due to his increased age. If during this ten years he has contracted an incurable disease, he is a "poor risk" and will be rejected.

Now this same man could have bought a $1,000 policy instead of one for $553) on the "ordinary" (yearly) plan for precisely the same annual premium—payable in monthly installments instead of weekly. At the end of ten years his borrowing capacity (loan value) would be $161, instead of $60, and his contract (policy) would still remain in force.

No Loan Values.

One notes with bitterness that whereas an "industrial" policy has no surrender value until it has been in force for ten years, an "ordinary" policy has a loan value after two years. Why this should be will take a lot of explaining by the publicity departments of the "Big Four."

The weekly payment policy is the "sucker" policy. The "ordinary" policy is the "stiff collar" policy. The quality of poverty in insurance is one we must submit humbly to the capitalist system on a gigantic scale.

However simply explained insurance is more or less a bewildering subject to the average person. Insurance subjects have been overlaid with tons of technical buncomb and the public as usual falls for the academic austerity implied in a column of figures.

Directors Make Graft.

Ever since the introduction of industrial life insurance into this country the laws governing this type of insurance have become more and more complex and unintelligible. Assets, more than any needs, have piled up, and finance committees, those who "take care of these funds for 'mutual' policyholders—have gathered in many harvest.

Investigators Bribed.

In 1906 the famous Armstrong Insurance Investigating Committee forged "ordinary" insurance of its erstwhile company. The same committee was under the screw of the "Big Four" and the day before the "industrial" companies were to be probed, as the public would have it, the investigation was called off.

Bribed With $20,000

As a result, several of the alleged "investigators" were, it is logical to assume, handsomely take care of. For instance, Senator "Bill" Tully was appointed solicitor for the Metropolitan Life (the leader of the "Big Four") at a yearly salary of $20,000. Since then he received a $10,000 raise, some graft.

Charles Evans Hughes, he of the whiskers), was appointed counsel for the Equitable Life, and Assemblyman Robert Lynn Cox was appointed general manager of the association of life insurance presidents, a sort of official lobbying device. Mr. Cox, who is a liberal in congenial, a good-hearted conservative in business, is now a second vice president of the Metropolitan at a modest salary of $78,000 a year.

Calls "Big Four" Swindlers.

After these appointments were made, the department of insurance was aware of them because the companies must report all home office expenditures over $1,000.

As long as the insuring of workers' lives will be done under the merciless system which now exists, fraud, swindle and corruption will be dominant. Nothing short of state ownership will ever serve as an adequate substitute.

P. B. Armstrong, the late president of the late American Union Life Insurance Company, said, "Industrial insurance is a swindle of such gigantic magnitude that its literature should be excluded from the mails; its business suppressed and taken over by the state, and the very poor given insurance at cost."

Yet in this state alone, 15,000 "industrial" agents are assembled in the various branch offices of the "Big Four" every Saturday morning (Saturday is "pep" day) and pounded at, begged, implored, cajoled and threatened, "to go out and put up an 'industrial' record." And out they go, with faces alertly on the make, and economic necessity being what it is, this industrial record is made. So much so that in 1925 the "Big Four" wrote and put on their books ten million additional policies for nearly three billion dollars—nearly half of this new business lapsed within twelve months—eloquent testimony of the methods employed in securing "industrial" business.

Poor Woman Defrauded.

I once heard an industrial life insurance agent say to a bewildered scrubwoman whom he was soliciting for new business, "Do you know that Rodman Wanamaker carried seven million dollars of insurance on his life —if it's good enough for him it's good enough for you!" P. S. She bought the policy. But did she get the type of insurance which Wanamaker received, the same protection per dollar expended, the same cash values, the same liberal and equitable terms?

She did not.

And so throughout the entire country from the defrauded coast of Maine to the swindled slopes of California the game goes heartlessly on. The ignorant foreigners, little accustomed to high pressure sales methods, fall for the misleading solicitations of the loyal henchmen-agents of the "Big Four."

Most Policies Lapse.

Yes, the harrassed scrubwoman bought the policy. But one thing was a certainty. If she went the way of all "industrial" flesh, her policy would, due to its harsh conditions, lapse at the first chill wind of unemployment. Or else it would be surrendered at a terrific loss at the expiration of ten years of scrimping and saving.

Sight must not be lost of the fact that 75% of all policies which terminate each year lapse before they accumulate a cash value. As far as these temporary measures are concerned three years of premium payments are lost—irretrievably lost.

I am informed that the Republican National Committee is looking for something to pin on to Tammany. Well, Tammany has permitted the "Big Four" to fleece millions of workers years after year during its tenure of office. The superintendent of insurance, a Tammany creature, has been sitting by complacently watching the mulcting of millions of perfectly good voters.

To the Republican National Committee I offer the above information, gratis. Use it if you can. Please don't use it if you can't. It's too potent.

Verdict Shows Class Bias.

"Group loyalty on the part of the Massachusetts Supreme court was brought into play to save the face of a judge subject to public criticism".

This was the charge made last night by Prof. William E. Hocking, of the philosophy department of Harvard University before a huge audience consisting of members of the community church, held in Symphony Hall last night.

Disgrace Speaker Charges

Attacking the supreme court for its denial of a new trial to the framed-up Italian workers, Prof. Hocking declared:

"We have the incredible, essentially disgraceful situation that men may be sentenced to their death in Massachusetts because the courts refuse to hear revelent and important evidence.

"The excluded evidence in this case is such," he continued, "as would convince four out of five, if they could hear it with unbiased minds, that Sacco and Vanzetti had nothing to do with the murder with which they are charged."

"Judicial Murder"

Dr. Hocking described the sentence of death on Sacco and Vanzetti as "judical murder," and said that "the caste feeling of solidarity" played an important role in the verdict.

Labor Candidate Fined.
(By Worker Correspondent).

HACKENSACK, April 11.—When Simon E. Bambach, labor candidate for commissioner in the forthcoming Passaic election, appeared in the Bergen county court for sentence on a disorderly charge growing out of activity in the recent strike, he was sentenced to pay a fine of $25.

Don't Want Labor Officials.

The judge and the prosecution are fully aware of the fact that the textile union has no funds with which to pay fines and consequently Bambach would have to remain in jail. It is apparent to many here that Bergen county officials seem to be working in harmony with the bosses to prevent any worker from being elected to office in Passaic.

Court Granted Injunctions.

The same court issued an injunction against the Teamsters, Engineers, Structural Iron Wockers, and the board of business agents of Bergen county. There is an obvious conspiracy on the part of the courts here to prevent uninnization of the unorganized workers and the establishment of union working conditions. The court took a heavy toll from the textile workers who went thru their heroic strike. Twenty-one were sentenced to jail for terms ranging from 30 days to 6 months, and were fined from $25 to $150.

Strike In Building Trades.

ASBURY PARK, April 11. — Asbury Park is one of the playgrounds of the business men and bosses. They come here in the summer for vacation and play. It naturally is a stronghold of reactionary and anti-union residents.

Ask Dollar Raise.

Building labor increased in the past five years. At the beginning of last week 200 hod carriers and cement mixers went on strike for an increase in wages of one dollar a day. They are now receiving $7. This demand was refused by the bosses. As a result all the building trades workers have gone out in sympathetic strike to force the contractors to concede the demands of the workers.

Will Organize Workers.

Meanwhile some of the building contractors are getting a little work accomplished by non-union workers and scabs. The Building Trades Council is determined to organize Monmouth county, which is a stronghold of the Republican machine. Here Boss Stevens, the notorious county leader, has always reposed aside for labor to such labor legislation.

Police Act As Strikebreaker.

Lyon declares that one of the company cabs that reached the 14 Pershing Road, is in possession of a tobacco car containing three Weehawken policemen.

Thugs From New York.

The union reports also that one of that the only union cab company now operating is North Hudson was the Capitol Taxi Co., which he said had the lowest rates and worst conditions. Lyon also charges that thugs and professional strike-breakers from New York are helping the "Black" company in trouble.

Will Organize Men.

Meanwhile the union is pushing the drive to organize the taxi drivers in North Hudson and meeting will soon be held for that purpose.

All chauffeurs and cab drivers are urged to stay away from Weehawken until the strike is over and prevent strike is won.

New Construction

NEWARK, April 11.—Building and construction work is going on at the Kenna Terrinital Port Newark. Non-union carpenters are working at the rate of 85 cents per hour. This fact is causing the carpenters' unions of Newark considerable trouble. A drive is on to unionize all the men working on the job or to get the contractor to replace the non-union men with union carpenters. Building trades contractors all over the state of New Jersey seem to have organized a systematic campaign to kill the building trades unions by hiring non-union workers on jobs and by attempting to introduce the American plan of company unionism, somewhat famous in San Francisco where all the building trades unions have been crippled. The employers and bosses spent $1,000,000 to break the power of the building trades unions.

PASSAIC HEARS WEISBORD SPEAK TOMORROW EVE.

First Address Since Strike Ended

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

PASSAIC, N. J., April 11.—Albert Weisbord, leader of the recent textile strike in this city, will speak here for the first time since the end of the strike. He will address a meeting Wednesday evening at 7:30 p. m. at Ukrainian Hall, President St., the only available hall here.

Workers Eager to Hear Him.

The local workers and especially the 16,000 textile workers are extremely eager to hear Weisbord and it is expected that Ukrainian Hall will be full long before the opening of the meeting. The arrangements committee is preparing for overflow meetings. None of the larger halls were available due to political pressure here on behalf of Governor Fisher's manager of public safety and the other local political leaders.

Campaign to Elect Labor Candidates.

At the opening rally of the Workers (Communist) Party held here yesterday in connection with the forthcoming local election at the Ukrainian National Home, a telegram was read from Weisbord, announcing his eagerness to speak here. It was received with hearty applause by the assembled workers.

It reads as follows, "Heartily endorse candidacy of Bambach and Smelkinson. Workers of Passaic must establish Labor Party and support Labor candidates.

"Will be glad to address meeting arranged for me Wednesday in Passaic. Am now preparing campaign platform, and candidacy of Bambach and Smelkinson, in election."

Many Unemployed.

Yesterday's meeting was addressed by Enid Gardner, who discussed the issues of the campaign. He told of the unemployment situation, in which "seven workers being out of every five of those who here are unemployed. He also told how the capitalist candidates for the commissioners, including the liberals make no mention of the terrible conditions among the brutal beatings and arrests of the textile workers.

Cheer Strike Leader.

Jack Dombrosky, packer head during the strike, was greeted with tremendous applause. She opened her remarks by saying, "I am a Communist." She recited the lessons of the strike, pointing out the anti-working class character of the local authorities and the necessity of the workers participating in independent working class action.

Bentall Speaks.

J. D. Bentall, who edited the Textile Strike Bulletin during the strike, spoke on the program that Bambach and Smelkinson are running on and the need of all workers giving their utmost support.

Simon Smelkinson also addressed the meeting. Bambach was unable to speak, being in the Essex County jail for his activities during the strike.

MINERS IN HARD COAL REGION IN FAVOR OF STRIKE

was formed and it was this committee that organized the mass meeting. The miners of this city could not hold any mass meeting since they lost the strike in 1922.

Surprise to Operatocs.

The mass meeting came as a surprise to everyone except the committee in charge. Early in the morning before the men went to work the committee, headed by Powers Hapgood, well known progressive miner of Cresson Pa., and Tony Minerich of North Bessemer Pa., distributed the announcements for the meeting in the trains carrying the miners to work and at the mines. The news of the meeting spread rapidly through the several mines of the company.

Demand Union Wages.

The announcement of the meeting pointed out that now is the time to demand the wages of $7.50 a day and $4.28 a ton pick coal and 50c a ton machine coal. The last paid by the company since Feb. 15 is $6.00 a day to day men and $1.01 a ton pick coal. The announcements also called that the men be paid for dead work and that a provision be made for the men to get an honest weight.

Serve Notice on Company.

Despite the fact that the mass meeting proved a huge success, Powers Hapgood and Tony Minarich were the main speakers and explained to the meeting the conditions existing in the non-union fields. A lively and heated discussion followed from the floor and a demand was made for an immediate strike. However, at the close of the meeting it was agreed unanimously that a committee shall communicate with the company first, before the question of strike is decided upon. The committee was also authorized to confer with the United Mine Workers of America.

Will Continue Organization Work.

The mass meeting elected a provisional committee to function until the miners of each mine of the Berwind-White Coal Co. will have an opportunity to elect a mine committee. The committee elected at the last meeting was instructed to call another mass meeting on Sunday to which the men of several mines that could not be reached for the first meeting were invited to come. The committee will serve notice on the company and if no satisfactory reply is received from the company a strike will be declared. The miners of the Berwind-White Coal Co. are very much dissatisfied with the cut in wages which was declared on Feb. 15, and are also encouraged by the strike of the bituminous miners in which the miners are determined to fight to the very end for their demands and for the recognition of some kind of an organization.

Die-Hards Saddle Britain With Huge Militarist Budget

LONDON, April 11.—Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the exchequer, rose before a packed house of commons this afternoon and declared that what was perhaps the most discouraging budget message Great Britain has had since the days of the World War.

Stressing the statement that great injury was done to trade and the exchequer by the general strike of last summer, Churchill declared that although "we meet under the shadow of last year it is not the time to bewail the past, but it is time to pay the debt."

Churchill reported that revenue for 1926 decreased more than £17,500,000 (approximately $87,000,000), while expenditures increased more than £14,500,000, (approximately $72,000,000).

Expenditures for the year 1927-28 are estimated by Churchill to be £818,300,000 (approximately $4,061,950,000).

Pointing out that the balance of trade is still against Great Britain, Churchill declared that "we are clearly not advancing among the nations of the world at the present rate and we are not advancing as rapidly as some other peoples of the world."

Churchill announced that the government does not intend to renew the American gold credits which it has maintained.

Liveright, Publisher of Forbidden to Put Play

Further production of "The Captive", one of the three plays raided by police in their stage clean-up campaign, was officially prohibited today when the appellate division of the supreme court unanimously refused to enjoin the police from interfering with the performance, holding that the play might have a "lecherous influence" over certain types of people if permitted to resume.

The injunction was sought by Horace B. Liverwright, publisher, who acquired right to the play after police had raided it.

Soviet Keeps Peaceful Attitude.

MOSCOW, April 11. — Although Alexis Tchernykh, Soviet charge at Peking, is returning to Russia today and a vigorous protest has been made to the North China government against raids on the Soviet legation in Peking. The Soviet government is going to do its utmost to avoid open war with China.

The official newspapers here point out that although the charge in Peking has been recalled there has been no full break in diplomatic relations and the Soviet government is adopting very cautious tactics to "avoid traps laid by the imperialists in China."

See Thru British.

"We must make it less easible for provocateurs to carry out their plans," says Pravda, the official newspaper. "The outbreak of war would give the a chance for open intervention. They are burglars and robber and we might use other means, but the refrain is the name of peace. Our note of protest will figure in diplomatic history as a document of peace with which we have answered a policy of war and provocation."

Premier Rykoff wrote a fiery note for the All Russian Congress of Soviets last night, declaring that Russia will strive to maintain peace.

Soviet Tactful.

"The fight in China will be won by the government with the strongest arms," said Rykoff, "but it will be won by the one with the strongest nerves, and their, the Soviets with stronger nerves than our government. We have hardened them by many battles against imperialists. Any other country would have sent troops long ago to China to avenge the famous raids upon our embassy."

Chang Holds Russians.

PEKING, April 11.—Chang Tso-lin, Manchurian war lord, has taken active steps for the release of the Russian and Chinese prisoners seized in his raids on the Russian embassy compound or for the return of property seized, as demanded by the Russian note.

In another appeal for American aid, Chang said, "I am puzzled by the attitude of the American government. Why should it confine itself to negative action? Why does the Peking government not fully support my efforts to shoulder the burden of protection by American interests."

Powers Helped Raids.

Admitting that his raids on the Soviet embassy had been aided by the imperialist powers, Chang continued, "I wish to reiterate that a clash between Chinese and foreign powers would be disastrous. Therefore, it would be wiser for the powers to back me indirectly and financially, making it possible for me to fight the 'communist elements'."

Chang Tortured Women.

Details of Chang's raids on the Russian embassy available for the first time indicate that the twenty-two Russians taken in the raids were severely beaten by mongolian troops. Women and children whom the soldiers met during the search were robbed and stripped.

Guard Our Front Line Trenches

The enemies of the labor movement are on the march. They have begun the assault on the entire labor front—against the Furriers, against the Joint Board, against the Miners' Union, against the textile workers—and against The DAILY WORKER. The attack of the New York patriotic societies upon The DAILY WORKER is no isolated incident. It is part and parcel of the entire assault—an assault which is inspired not only by the sharpness of the struggle against the trade unions but also by the crisis in which American imperialism finds itself in China, Nicaragua, Mexico and other countries. It is an attack upon our front line trenches.

You must beware that The DAILY WORKER is maintained as a vital weapon for this struggle. The DAILY WORKER becomes the target of attack because it has demonstrated its ability to sink its sharp teeth into the fleshy flanks of American capitalism. Let no efforts of the exploiters succeed. They shall not silence The DAILY WORKER. The DAILY WORKER must live and grow to carry on the struggle, in the words of Comrade Ruthenberg, "TO FIGHT ON!" Line up with your fellow workers. FILIPINOS' FIND WALL ST. ORDERS VETO OF FREEDOM

Say Exploiters Dictate Veto of Plebiscite

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 11.—President Coolidge's veto of the Filipino independence referendum bill, passed by the Filipino legislature over the veto of Gov. General Wood, is met by Resident Commissioners Guevara and Gabaldon, who speak for their people in congress, with denial of his arguments and defiance of his purpose. They say the independence movement will only be made the more serious by his denial of their right to a vote on the issue. Moreover, they suggest that this act of official arrogance will bring into closer sympathy the peoples of all Asia, now led by the Chinese in throwing off western imperial control.

First Veto.

Coolidge's veto is the first ever given by a president of the United States to an act of the Philippine legislature.

Guevara replied that the Coolidge veto robs the Filipino people of the right of petition to the government of the United States, which was the object of the plebiscite. It shows, moreover, he said, that Coolidge does not care to find out the true sentiment of the Filipino people with regard to independence, despite the fact that this government has been listening to charges made by a few people here in the United States that the Filipinos do not want independence.

"In a word, the veto means that the government of the United States cares to listen to petitions of the few, but does not care to listen to a petition from 12,000,000 Filipinos.

Imperialistic Designs.

"I believe that this veto expresses the policy of the government of the United States to continue with the powers in their imperialistic designs in the Far East. The veto is of course a part of the policy of those big powers in the Far East. It will have the effect of draining the peoples of the Far East into closer sympathy."

Replying to Coolidge's claim that the independence movement is due to a greed for more political power at the cost of the economic welfare of the Islands, Guevara said that modern economic history proves that the greatest economic development has accompanied the greatest degree of political freedom and independence. Even Nora agrita, he said, "shows wonderful economic progress without the 'benefit' of free trade with the United States."

He added that Philippine trade is suffering from the artificial conditions imposed upon it by American control; its trade would naturally flow in other directions tending to its increase if it were free.

Wall Street Bidding.

Gabaldon ironically observed: "The president attempts to point out the unattractiveness of an independent form of government. But can he name one South American or any other republic in the world today, possessing the independence that he pictures as a danger to us and embarrassing, that is willing to give it up?

"Independence seems to be fairly satisfactory to those peoples now enjoying it.

"President Coolidge's actions are not in the interest of the American people, whose sons died in the fighting of America became involved in the Orient through retention of the Philippines, but in the interest of Wall Street financiers who have their millions invested there."

Gabaldon, on his recent return from Manila, made a speech in which he pointed to the Chinese revolution as a force which was rallying the peoples of the Far East for their mutual protection.

Russian Aid to Farmer Stressed by Knutson

PENTYWOOD, Mont., April 11.—Large numbers of farmers are burning up about what Russia is doing for the farmer from Marvel Knutson, editor of the United Farmer, who is giving a series of lectures in Sheridan County.

Knutson, who has returned from Russia where he attended a conference of the Farmers' International, is describing the rapid recovery that Russia is making.

"Cities like Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev and Kharkof are safer than New York or Chicago," he said.

Declaring that the Chinese revolution is a movement against foreign and native exploitation, Knutson said that through the movement Russia a great deal of inspiration from Russia. Russia does not dominate it and did not instigate it.

Marching Song of the Nationalists

Translated by Whittaker Chambers

This is the song to which the Nationalista troops swung on to Shanghai. It shows, as no report ever, the character of the Revolution, the spirit of the soldiers, the class-consciousness of the rank and file. The translation is from the German paraphrase of kurt Kläber. (W. C.)

We are marching on Shanghai!
We, the textile workers of Canton!
We, the textile workers of Wuchang!
We, the textile workers of Anking!
And Changsha!
We are marching on Shanghai!
Shanghai is our big brother!
Shanghai is a door and a gateway!
Shanghai is a road into the world!
We are marching on Shanghai!
We, the textile workers of the Provinces!
When we reach Shanghai,
All China will be conquered!
When we reach Shanghai,
We'll oust the foreign robbers!
When we reach Shanghai,
The sun will rise.
Will rise on China!
On the poor textile workers'
March! March! March!
On Shanghai,
Textile workers!

Housewives Active in Austrian Co-ops.

VIENNA, April 11.—The "Freie Genossenschaftler," organ of the League of Consumers' Co-operatives, on January 1st, furnished statistics concerning the activity of women in the Vienna Consumers' Co-operatives.

It states that in the executive there are four women, and the same number are in the supervisory councils. Among district chairmen there are five women. In the branch committees there are 87 women presidents, 89 women vice presidents, 90 recording secretaries. Among the 1,059 functionaries of the Vienna Consumers' Co-operatives, there are 581 women and 478 men.

Concerning these women functionaries the "Freie Genossenschaftler" states that here are no empty names here. "These women go from house to house, from one mother of a family to another, and try to convince each of them that it is their social and family duty to spend the money which the man earns by hard and laborous toil, in the interest of the whole. These women visit tenants' meetings, section and factory meetings and use every opportunity they recruit for the co-operative idea. . . ."

Detroit Federation Of Labor Raps U. S. Imperialist Policy

DETROIT, Mich., April 11.—The Detroit Federation of Labor has gone sled-length against United States intervention in China and against the shelling of Nanking by United States war vessels.

In a resolution passed unanimously at the federation's annual installation of officers the federation went on record in favor of the immediate withdrawal of all land and sea forces from Chinese soil and waters.

Frank X. Martel, president of the federation, moreover, was instructed in the resolution to speak as a representative of the federation at a mass meeting called for April 14 at the Majestic Theatre in protest against the Nanking shelling. The resolution also named Martel as the federation's delegate to the Detroit anti-imperialism association, which called the mass meeting. The association was formed at a conference of representatives of 19 organizations called by Young Asia.

Coming before the installation program, the discussion on the resolution consumed an hour and a half. A judge invited to administer the oath of office to the incoming officers waited that length of time in an anteroom.

No dissenting voice against the resolution was heard. Adams, an international organizer for the machinists, said Americans went to China either to travel or for dollars.

"And everyone knows that when troops and warships go into China they go to protect the dollars," he said. "American labor is not interested in supporting such protection."

Among the members of the Detroit Anti-Imperialist Association are the American-Irish Republican Club, the Gaelic League, the Kevin Barry Club, the Liam Lynch Club, the Detroit branch of the Kuomintang, the Ford Chinese Students' Club, the Filipino Association of Detroit, the Hindustan Citizenship Committee, the International Club of Detroit, the International Labor Defense, the American Negro Labor Congress, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Society of Friend, United Negro Improvement Association, United Indin League, Greek Workers Educational Club, American Educational Club, Detroit Federation of Women's Clubs, the Federation of Working Class Women and Young Asia.

Chicago Tries To Forget About the Dead of World War

By CARL HAESSLER

CHICAGO, April 11.—A parade of crowds for a dead soldier passed a handful of professional politicians [illegible] stood around the statue of Lincoln, a pending an [illegible] and musicians about the negligent to organize patriotic these were the reminders in Chicago of America's entrance to the war to end war [illegible] ago.

The most militarist and imperialist American newspapers the Chicago Tribune carried a declaration [illegible] on the 10th anniversary of [illegible] to April 6 edition. With the presence of Hoodlehead and Sam pretties in Los Angeles arena, the little skirmish in Europe that brought the Uncle Sam share of the world's gold supply to United States bankers was not to be bothered with by the Trib. The following day it carried a picture of the men who have mannered themselves to the top of the Chicago social heap—men's organizations, 25 [illegible] in front of the Lincoln monument in Grant Park.

Saved From Pauper's Grave.

The Chicago Daily News, afternoon organ of big business, came to the meat of its story near the bottom of an inside page with the paragraph:

"A rifle salute and taps sounded this afternoon over the grave of a former soldier who died at Elgin and who, except for the aid of Portage Park post of the legion, might have been buried in a pauper's grave. The [illegible] a burial place in the soldiers' lot in the grave of his father and Sunday [illegible] received a firing squad of regular soldiers from Fort Sheridan.

That typifies the attitude of the dominant groups of Chicago as the era that others fought for them recedes into [illegible] and loss accounts of long ago. The cemeteries find a place in the [illegible] under Lincoln while the hotel's lighter goes to the poetry [illegible] to dies, save as an occasional veterans' post in a working class quarter like Portage Park learns about it and gives him better burial.

The big dailies hardly keep up a pretense that the war they shouted for and whipped into devastating flame in any of the uplifting ennobling significance they conformably claimed for it.

GENEVA, April 11.—Open pessimism was expressed today in the league of nations preparatory disarmament conference during a discussion of proposals for limitation of military expenditures which are being opposed by all United States and Great Britain.

Japanese Kill Many At Hankow; Chinese Keep Calm Attitude

(Nationalist News Agency).

HANKOW, April 11.—The regrettable incident which occurred in the Japanese concession on Monday was the result of a drunken Japanese sailor stabbing to death a Chinese who, it is reported, remonstrated with another sailor who had kicked a rickshaw coolie over a question of fares. A large crowd gathered. The Japanese landed forces which further provoked the crowd.

Firing by the Japanese resulted in heavy Chinese casualties. The Chinese authorities immediately sent police as well as military reinforcements which quickly restored order. As a precautionary measure the Japanese placed their nationals on board ships.

Although the Japanese primarily were responsible for the incident, it is believed that the Chinese authorities will continue their present calm and restrained attitude. Stringent orders have been issued by the Chinese authorities not only for the protection of the Japanese concession, but for the protection of all Japanese outside of the concession as well.

13th Soviet Congress Open in Moscow; Mourn Djerjinsky and Krassin

MOSCOW, April 11.—The thirteenth Congress of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics opened last night in Moscow in the State Opera House, which was packed from the floor to the seventh gallery by the 1,495 members of the famous parliament.

An illuminated banner and [illegible] placed in front of the giant geographical globe was flanked by a couple Dan [illegible] on either side of the rostrum. The chairs are hung with red.

Mourns Djerjinsky Krassin.

The funeral hymn for the dead was played by an invisible orchestra in commemoration of the death of Comrades Krassin and Djerjinsky while the Congress stood.

The President, elected by a show of hands, stood beside the President of the Soviet Union, M. I. Kalenin, who presided while the delegates, workers and peasants, Kalmucks and Tartar-, women in faded silk or cotton skirts with birch-bark shoes on their feet, took their places on the rostrum. Joseph Stalin and other prominent Communists were present.

No War With China.

Alexei I. Rykoff, Prime Minister of the Union, made the first political speech stating the attitude of the Soviets to the Peking Government. The tension of the Chinese situation was in the air and made this Congress even more impressive than usual.

NO SPLIT IN THE KUOMINTANG SAYS CHINESE SPEAKER

Sha Scores Biased News In Capitalist Press

Denying that there is any split in the Kuomintang, Samuel Sha, young representative of the Chinese Workers' Alliance, scored the efforts of the foreign imperialists to precipitate an internal conflict in the Kuomintang in an address at the open forum at the Workers' School, 108 East 14th Street, Sunday night.

Although Samuel Sha is a member of the Kuomintang, he does not represent it officially, officials of the local Kuomintang said last night. The DAILY WORKER had previously published statements denouncing Sha as spokesman for the Kuomintang.

Sees Imperialist Hand.

"Although there are differences of political opinion within the Kuomintang," he said "all of its members agree on certain fundamental principles which they are willing to adhere. Differences about minor political issues cannot create a split. The capitalist newspapers are trying to create such a split in order to prevent the alignment and the unification of China. They will not succeed."

Branding the [illegible] which have been appearing in the capitalist press as lies, designed to draw the United States into a war against the Chinese national movement, Sha stressed [illegible] the news appearing in American papers is inspired by the British Foreign Office. He pointed out that the head of the Associated Press in China is the head of Reuter's British News Agency.

"Unless the United States is careful," he said, "she will find herself engaged in a war to protect British interests in [illegible] the Yangtze valley."

Raps Philippine Policy.

Sha's speech was followed by a denunciation of Coolidge's Philippine policy by Harry Weeks of The DAILY WORKER staff. Coolidge's recent veto of the bill providing for a plebiscite on the independence question was stamped as a move in the interests of the American sugar, tobacco and rubber barons. The United States must maintain the Philippines as a military base for further aggression in the Pacific, he said.

Stop the War on China

The international murderbund is getting ready for war on China. 172 warships are patrolling the Chinese coast, anchored in the harbors and steaming up and down the rivers.

There are 35,000 foreign troops in Shanghai alone and 10,000 more are on the way. This will make a total of two soldiers for every foreign resident.

According to Thomas Millard, now China correspondent for the New York World, the imperialists are considering two plans for the invasion of China:

(1) To occupy the principal ocean ports and river ports as far up the Yangtse as Changshi, above Hankow. This is intended to place the principal river and industrial districts of China under foreign control.

(2) Complete occupation and "pacification" of China necessitating an army of half a million to a million troops and Manchurare over a ten or fifteen year period.

The DAILY WORKER for weeks has been warnings its readers that war on China was the inevitable outcome of the series of events culminating in the cold-blooded bombardment of and slaughter of the civilian population of Nanking.

"Every deed has its logic" and the mobilization of troops and navies, the ceaseless flood of lies and half-truths, the continual incitement against the Chinese liberation movement and the People's government indulged in by the capitalist press, speaks just as loudly and accurately of imperialist intentions as a declaration of war.

Great Britain is doing anything and everything possible to unite around her program of wholesale aggression the governments of the United States, France, Italy and Japan. The American state department, while publicly disclaiming any intention of joint action, continues to dispatch troops and gunboats to China.

It is further established that the recent raids on Soviet Union embassies, consulates, railroad and shipping offices were plotted jointly by the American and British representatives.

Great Britain, with the fascist bloc of Italy, Hungary, Roumania and Poland organized against the Soviet Union under her auspices, now tries with the formation of a new imperialist bloc to crush the Chinese liberation movement and attack the Soviet Union from the east.

This is counter-revolution on a world scale.

Even the United States and Japan, because of their conflict with Great Britain, do not formally take part in such a monstrous and bloody adventure, they will nevertheless send huge forces to China to "safeguard their national interests" and every ship and every soldier they send will weight the scales against the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union and China.

Wall Street government in such a situation will place the whole country on a war basis and the few liberties that survived the last war will disappear.

The time to stop war is before it starts—now.

Every trade union, every workers' fraternal society, every co-operative, every mass organization whose members have nothing in common with the financial and industrial potentates and warlords, should demand and continue to demand the withdrawal of all armed forces from China, recognition of the Hankow government and a public declaration by President Coolidge against war on China by any power or combination of powers.

Let Wall Street government know that the American masses will not fight its battles and that they have nothing but sympathy and admiration for the heroic struggle for freedom waged by the Chinese workers and peasants in alliance with the masses of the Soviet Union.

Boosting Presidential Candidates

The hack writers of the reptile press, ever alert to grovel before the political agents of the master class are now engaged in a fierce contest in an effort to anticipate who the two major parties will choose for their presidential candidates.

Governor Al Smith, President Coolidge, William G. McAdoo, United States Senator James A. Reed and ex-Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, are all objects of eulogiums by the pen valets of capitalism. The slightest knowledge of politics and history eliminates all but one of the present outstanding candidates. Smith is a Roman Catholic, which makes his candidacy on the democratic ticket impossible, for the simple reason that the stronghold of democracy is in the south, the heart of the protestant bible belt and the seat of the Ku Klux Klan movement. It is questionable if he could carry a single southern state. Then again, Tammany Hall, the political parent of Smith is for Wall Street and against the petty bourgeois elements in the democratic party in both the South and the Middle West. Democratic candidates, particularly Wilson, have been able to hoodwink the middle class elements, but Smith cannot hope to do it. His nomination would sound the death-knell of that party and its leaders outside of New York know it.

Coolidge is automatically eliminated because of the fact that his candidacy will be interpreted as seeking a third term. He is also in bad repute with most of the republican party leaders. The defeat of his man, William Morgan Butler, in his own state of Massachusetts exploded the myth that the president has any prestige anywhere. His game is up and the party leaders know it.

McAdoo, the heir apparent of the Wilson dynasty, is fast fading from the picture and cannot secure the nomination.

Lowden is branded as a political swindler and corruptionist because of the exposure of his agents who were caught buying votes in Missouri in an effort to secure for him the 1920 presidential nomination.

Of the present candidates only Senator Reed of Missouri remains a probability. But he will encounter almost insurmountable difficulties. He has incurred the undying enmity of the eastern section of the democratic party because of his long fight against the Morgan policy on League of Nations and the World court. He speaks for the middle class elements of the Middle West and Wall Street will unquestionably organize its forces against him. Unless it abandons the democrat party to the petty bourgeois as hopeless and concentrates on the republican party Reed has no chance to secure the nomination.

There is another candidate, however, whom the capitalist scribblers are not playing up at present. He is not an Easterner, but is one of the pampered favorites of Wall Street. At the same time his business connections with the LaSalle street banking houses in Chicago and his support by the Harvester trust, make him a logical medium for uniting the two antagonistic forces in the republican party. Foat man is Vice-President Dawes. His candidacy is being cleverly manipulated. In the first place there is no public clamor about it. Secondly he plainly shows his disagreement with the Coolidge farm policy and pretends to look kindly upon the Lowden crusade among the farmers. He will, at the proper moment, cash in on the Lowden sentiment among the well-to-do farmers. Thirdly he is a fascist, a labor-hater, a strikebreaker who can be depended upon to carry through savage campaigns of suppression against the workers at home and fight relentlessly against any attempt of the oppressed colonials to rise against dollar despotism.

If capitalism's candidate is not Dawes, it will be someone like him, no matter on which ticket he runs.

Within the two old parties there is no hope for the workers. Only a party of labor can speak for us.

CHICAGO ELECTION PROVES FAILURE OF THEORY LABOR SHOULD "REWARD OR PUNISH" OLD PARTIES

By ARNE SWABECK.

The recent Chicago elections will undoubtedly go down in history as the closing chapter of one of the greatest mud-slinging contests ever staged by the "celabrated" American political parties. But its pages will also record the monstrous joke of the present official political policy of the trade union bureaucracy of rewarding friends and punishing enemies translated into practice. When considering, however, the thousands of workers who ultimately become the victims of such jokes, the situation rather stands out as a dismal tragedy.

Told On Each Other

Recriminations of which such invectives as crooks, rats, skunks, etc., were amongst the most moderate used added filth to the stinking atmosphere of the whole campaign. These invectives hurled may all be true. At least the "sovereign" American voter seems long ago to have accepted the possibility of it being so—witness the certain turnout of almost 1,000,000 votes cast.

The Workers Voted

This record vote clearly indicates the extensive degree of working class activities, as far as the mail and file trade unioners are concerned, is merely the one of tying them more solidly to the lie of corrupt capitalistic politics. Their votes were delivered to the bosses in the interest of the bosses.

Labor Split

The Chicago trade union leader show was divided into two camps, each claiming to faithfully carry out the American Federation of Labor political policy. The Cook County Wage Earners League, headed by Oscar F. Nelson, vice-president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, endorsed "Big Bill" Thompson in the name of the American Federation of Labor policy.

Another "unionized" array of officials headed by Victor A Olander, Secretary of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, endorsed William E. Dever also in the name of the American Federation of Labor policy. John Fitzpatrick, the President of the Chicago Federation of Labor took the stump for Dever.

Dever With Lambs

The Cook County Wage Earners' League claimed that Thompson had always given the working people and all elements of the city a square deal. He had been constructive. He had widened more streets and paved more alleys, and accomplished more public improvement than any other mayor ever did.

They charged that 27 members of the "citizens committee" to enforce the Landis Award were members of the Dever Campaign Committee and that Dever is controlled by big business.

Thompson Cut Wages

The other committee of trade union officials endorsed Dever claiming he was a union man, a friend of labor, that during his term of office no injunctions had been granted against labor, and that business men had confidence in his administration and had, therefore, kept up the general prosperity.

They charged that Bill Thompson had been placed on the unfair list and that he had helped to cut down the wages of the streetcar men, and so forth.

Labor Votes Sold

The monstrous joke of this election campaign should now be clear to all. The great mass of labor being fooled by its leaders has come to occupy a miserable position. Their votes were merely bartered as pawns by corrupt labor leaders and used to support their favorite candidates.

The policy of supporting friends and punishing enemies has no connection with working class issues. It is not a class policy and is therefore not a labor policy. It is no longer, and for that matter never was, a question of friend of labor and foe of class, but the friends of certain labor leaders to be rewarded or their enemies to be punished.

It is simply a matter of personal friendship between corrupt capitalist politicians and their tools, the corrupt labor leaders. On that basis the rank and file working masses are ordered and lined up like that policy execution squads with machine guns in front.

A Corrupt Bargain

In trade union life a similar corrupt practice has already set in. Those labor leaders who have the greatest political machines to back the final analysis are controlled by the big business institutions. It is clear that as long as this policy remains in force there can be no possibilities of the trade union leadership leading a militant struggle against the bosses against the big capitalist aggression for even the everyday needs of the workers, not to speak of freedom from the misery of wage slavery.

PARTY WORKERS' MEETING IN NEW YORK DISTRICT HERALDS SUCCESS OF RUTHENBERG DRIVE

Judging by the last party workers' meeting held on April 5th which was the largest in the history of the district and the meeting of the whole Party workers held here on Sunday afternoon, the Ruthenberg Drive in the New York district will be the greatest campaign BUILD THE PARTY ever undertaken by the Party in its history.

The following were present at the conference: all section organizers and all members of the section executives, all sub-section organizers, party editors, the secretaries of the language bureaus and the members of the district organization committee consisting of representatives of all the departments, work among women, work among Negroes, anti-imperialist committee, DAILY WORKER, literature department, co-operative department, and the Young Workers' League, and also the Agitprop and the industrial departments.

Reason For Drive.

Comrade Jack Stachel, the district organization secretary, reported for the district executive committee.

Comrade Stachel spoke on the loss to the party in the death of Comrade Ruthenberg and the importance of intensifying every phase of the party activity in order to overcome this loss.

The basis of the Ruthenberg drive will be the most important campaigns of the year against the imperialist war danger, particularly against war on China, the Sacco-Vanzetti defense, the struggle against the reactionary bureaucracy in the trades unions and also the campaign to organize the unorganized, and the present drive for foreign born. The three principal campaigns facing the party membership.

The section machinery is charged with the responsibility of mobilizing every party unit for the Ruthenberg Drive.

A general discussion followed the report of Comrade Stachel in which more than a dozen functionaries participated. Among them were Gejdy, Bimbin, Schwartz, Dirba, Benjamin, Gurdon, Lifshitz, Mass Eva Broido and Wm. F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER.

The DAILY WORKER.

Comrade Dunne spoke about the difficulties of the Daily not only from a managerial point of view but the handicaps under which the editorial department has to function. He pointed out that the party membership does not devote enough attention to the distribution of The DAILY WORKER and also other Party literature. He said that now with all the struggles that are taking place, particularly the Sacco, Vanzetti defense, the party has great opportunities of developing and spreading The DAILY WORKER.

Finnish Communist Daily Celebrates On 6th Birthday

WORCESTER, Mass., April 11.—Preparations are being made by our Finnish Daily "Eteenpain" (Forward) for celebration of the sixth anniversary on April 16 and 17. "Eteenpain" was founded six years ago by revolutionary Finnish workers, who later joined into the Workers (Communist) Party, after they lost their former paper "Raivaja" to reactionary socialists. During the first year "Eteenpain" was published in New York City and printed in the same shop that The DAILY WORKER is printed now. Five years ago the paper was moved to Worcester, Mass., which is a more central location for the circulation of "Eteenpain." Every day with other organs of our Paty, "Eteenpain" has struggled for the liberation of workers and poor farmers from the influence of bourgeois and socialist traitors and creating Communist influence amongst the masses.

Reactionary Frame-up.

Two years ago a court action was instigated against "Eteenpain" by a certain Finnish preacher, Lillicha, of Brooklyn, N. Y., behind which were all the Finnish reactionary white guard government, by Klux Klan ele. And eighteen months ago, a Boston court gave the decision, by which "Eteenpain" is to pay $5,000 to Rev. Finnish preacher. Since that case has appealed, the Massachusetts State Appeal Court, which has not yet handed down a decision. All Finnish reactionary forces above to the social traitors have required in the defeat "Eteenpain" suffered in this court case. But the masses of Finnish workers and farmers rally Rocked stronger than ever to support your paper, so much so, that "Eteenpain" is financially on a firmer basis than before.

This is sufficient cause of celebration. And Finnish comrades all over eastern states are expected to gather here to take part in the sixth anniversary. An excellent program has been arranged. Main speakers will be Wm. Weinstein, business manager of "Eteenpain" and H. Puro, secretary of the Finnish Bureau and former editor of "Eteenpain."

A special publication, containing brief history of "Eteenpain" and much valuable material about the significance of revolutionary newspapers of workers, has been published.

Pittsburgh to Have Big May Day Meeting

PITTSBURGH, Pa. The Workers (Communist) Party and the Young Workers (Communist) League are arranging a huge celebration for May 1st, it was announced by the Labor Lyceum 25 Miller Street, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The celebration is of great importance in the workers in the Pittsburgh district as it can be recalled that last May Day, J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, and A. Jakira, organizer of this district, who were to speak at the May Day meeting, were arrested and served five days in the Allegheny County Jail, when they attempted to speak after the police had closed the hall and stopped the meeting.

Won Victory.

The Communists won a victory at that time over the police, and since then the police have made a ruling that meetings can be held without a permit and the halls cannot be locked. It is also important from the point of view of the coal miners' strike which is now going on in the coal mining region of Pittsburgh district. 45,000 coal miners are out on strike against the coal barons who have started an open shop and wage reduction campaign. The speakers at the meeting will be Alex Bittelman and W. J. White, members of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Communist Party. There will also be Young Workers' League, Pioneer and Jewish speakers. Frank Borich will speak in South Slav.

Letters of invitation are being sent out to organizations asking them to participate in the meeting.

Communist, Anarchist Debate.

CLEVELAND.—An interesting debate will be held in Cleveland on a question that is agitating the people of the entire world, "Has the Russian Revolution Been a Success?"

L. Anton, district secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, will endeavor to prove that it has been a full success, while Sh. Marcus, anarchist writer and lecturer, will contend that is has not.

The debate will be held at the Insurance Center Building, Assembly Room A, 1836 E. 11th St., on Tuesday, April 26, at 8 p.m. Admission 75 cents. The debate is being held under the auspices of the Workers Educational League.

Circus Opens at Madison Square Garden This Afternoon

Led by "Pahwah," the white elephant from Burma, the grand entry will take place this afternoon at Madison Square Garden where the Ringling-Barnum & Bailey circus opens an engagement of some four weeks. Performances will be given twice daily except Sunday.

Many new acts have been added to the circus this year. The feature acts of last season have been rejuvenated and revamped and the entire program rearranged with many new and spectacular ideas incorporated into it in its entirety.

This year there are with the Ringling shows, 1,000 persons of whom 350 are performers, there are 1,009 wild animals, the largest menagerie in captivity, there are more than 900 horses used with the circus. The herd of elephants includes 42 and camels galore.

May Wirth and Lillian Leitzel are again headliners with the big show and their acts will again draw the attention of all in the vast Garden. Berta Benson is here again with that aerial act. Then there are the sensations that juggle; bears who ride bicycles and trained tigers, lions and leopards. And the freaks of course.

Broadway Briefs

The Shuberts will present on April 25th, on Great Neck, Margaret Lawrence in "Mixed Doubles," a new comedy by Frank Stayton, with a cast including William Exille, Marcella Swanson, John Williams, Roy Cochran and Russell Morrison. The attraction is due in New York Monday, April 25th.

Another production planned by the Shuberts will have Mitzi as the star, "The Madcap," a new musical comedy, adapted from a French farce by Gladys Unger, with music by Maurice Rubens and lyrics by Clifford Grey, will open in Washington next Monday and come here a week later. The cast includes Sidney Greenstreet, Ethel Intropodi, Ethel Morrison and Ely Plankett.

The Lee & Bell Players will revive "Hallowe'en and Son," Otha Sowerby's comedy, at the Little Street Theatre, this evening.

This week the program will begin an engagement at the Central Theatre next Monday evening, instead of April 25 as previously announced.

Helen Chandler and Gavin Muir entered the cast of "The Silver Cord" replacing Margalo Gillmore and Earle Larrimore, who take over an important role in "The Second Man" at the Guild.

Party Members of Los Angeles Plan Campaign To Boost Daily Worker

LOS ANGELES, April 11.—At a general membership meeting for all members of the Party and Young Workers League, the political campaign into which the party is entering was discussed and plans for mobilizing the party were laid out.

The drive for The DAILY WORKER was taken up in detail, with many non-Party members of The DAILY WORKER BUILDERS CLUB present and participating in the arrangements. The concert to be given on Saturday, April 16th, for the benefit of The DAILY WORKER, is expected to be a great success and net several hundred dollars.

Plan for the opening of a membership drive were also presented at this meeting, in connection with the Party activity in the Sacco-Vanzetti campaign, to be carried out jointly with the Young Workers' League.

Capitalist Forces Organize to Fight Workers in Frisco

By HOWARD HARLAN.

San Francisco was at one time known as the best union town on the Pacific coast. But this was "long ago and far away." Even now, we know of no other town on the coast that would be likely to steal away this enviable title, as they are all trying to outdo each other in the direction of the universal open shop. But 'Frisco appears to take the lead from all of them in the matter of crushing unions, and giving to the Industrial Association the dictatorship of the coast.

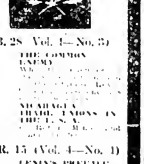
At present the boss assault is levelled at the molders and carpenters in particular, with the chances of dealing with the other crafts pretty bright if successful, with the ones already mentioned. Two members of the molders' union are now awaiting trial on the charge of murder, being accused of shooting and killing an open shop molder last July.

Another Frame-up.

The union molders receive the charge that any of their members have been hired or delegated to inflict physical injury on those who refused to join the union. They are preparing a good defense fund for the men accused and in this they are supported by the other unions.

The union carpenters Gus Staaksen and George Pauley are now on trial for the murder of a non-union carpenter during the time of the big carpenters' strike last summer. The accused men are well defended by two noted 'Frisco lawyers and are receiving moral and financial support from the unions in general.

No Union Men Wanted.



More than a week has already been taken up with the selection of a jury, which is far from being completed at this moment. The prosecution, in questioning prospective jurors, is manifesting great anxiety over their labor affiliations. Anyone admitting reading even the tamest kind of a labor paper automatically disqualifies himself from serving on the panel. Complete ignorance of working class political or industrial activity is the badge of competence in our capitalist courts. Any worker now playing signs of mental awakening appears dangerous, and must be prohibited from passing on the guilt or innocence of a fellow worker accused of crime.

DETROIT, April 11.—The bazaar held on March 26th for the I. L. D. by the Detroit Federation of Working Class Women's Organizations proved a great success, although times are hard in Detroit, with men working two or three days a week, the amount netted is close to a thousand dollars.

TAX RETURNS FOR 1925 REVEAL RAPID GROWTH OF MILLION DOLLAR INCOMES AMONG IDLE RICH

By ARLAND OLDS, Federated Press

207 persons are reported by the U. S. commissioner of internal revenue with incomes in 1925 of more than $1,000,000. They average more than 1000 times what they would have got if the national income had been distributed equally among the 44,000,000 gainfully employed as reckoned by the national bureau of economic research. These multimillionaires received a combined gross income of $468,011,633, equivalent to 236,000 shares of a national income estimated at $96,600,000,000.

The 207 personal incomes of more than $1,000,000 piled on in 1925 as a record in the outpouring of blessings upon the investing class. In 1924 only 74 incomes of this size were reported. In 1916, the peak year of war profits, there were 206 million-dollar incomes.

At the very top of the country's pyramid of wealth the commissioner shows 7 financial barons whose net incomes after all deductions exceeded $5,000,000 each. They reported a combined net income of $61,382,863. In 1924 only 2 such mammoth incomes were reported and their total net was $27,955,310. What the 7 largest incomes totaled before deductions is not known.

The bulk of these very large individual incomes comes from profit on the sale of securities held for more than 2 years and from dividends. This is shown in the following table which divides the total income of the 207 having a net of over $1,000,000 and that of the 478 with a net between $500,000 and $1,000,000 according to the sources from which they were derived.

	207 with	478 with
Largest incomes divided according to source (1925)	$1,000,000 and over	$500,000 to $1,000,000
Wages and salaries	$7,807,217	$16,738,652
Business	1,742,198	3,325,900
Profits from sale of assets held less than 2 years	27,113,000	24,141,419
Profit from sale of assets held more than 2 years	156,538,850	136,721,511
Rents and royalties	5,850,613	4,062,372
Interest	17,301,811	17,167,936
Dividends	197,901,270	126,268,202
Fiduciary	3,571,908	3,236,056
Total income	$553,011,653	$560,382,949

What They Really Earned

Wages and salaries represented only 1.65 per cent of the largest incomes and only 4.57 per cent of the incomes between $500,000 and $1,000,000 yet they averaged more than $35,000. If we include only the income from wages, salaries, business and partnerships these 685 persons would have averaged over $125,000 apiece, undoubtedly all they could claim to be worth to the country.

The huge remaining income from property, about 90 per cent of the total, comes as a gift from the nation out of surplus production, or rather as a tribute exacted from the workers by men who control the country's economic arteries.

LAWRENCE TEXTILE STRIKERS REFUSE TERMS OFFERED BY BOSSES; DEMAND TIME CARDS GO

(Worker Correspondent.)

LAWRENCE, Mass., April 11.—A mass meeting of the Pacific Mill dye-house strikers, and other workers of the plant, held in the French Social Hall under the auspices of the American Federation of Textile Operatives, had as a speaker John J. Ballam, general organizer of the National Textile Workers Progressive Committee. Timothy Sheehan president of the Dyers and Finishers local on strike, was chairman.

Ballam Rouses Spirit.

John Ballam was the first speaker. He urged the strikers to continue their strike and call out other departments of the mill. He stressed the need of unity.

Time and again he was greeted with much applause.

The young workers are anxious to continue the strike. They have been militant throout the strike and with the proper leadership the strike could be won.

The union voted today to try and extend the strike to other departments of the plant. The following leaflet is to be distributed tomorrow at the mill gates to all Pacific Mill workers:

Weavers, Spinners, Carders, Cemers, Slashertenders, Drawtenders, Loom-fixers, Repair-men, Finishers!

All workers of Pacific Mills— No. 20 Mill, Upper and Lower Pacific, Print Works:

The Dyers are on strike against the Time Card System. We have been out for three weeks. The boss refuses to grant our just demand. We are united and determined to win.

The fight of the dye house workers is your fight!

Every department of the Pacific Mills should support the Dyers.

If we lose you lose.

Let us unite and organize the Pacific from cellar to roof.

The boss can not lick us—you will be next.

Here is the management's answer to our demand.

1. That the strike be called off.

2. The mill agrees to take men back to work as fast as possible under present conditions, which mean:

(A) Time cards to remain in operation.

(B) The rearrangement of the work is to continue, which means the multiple arch system.

(C) The men now employed who are capable of doing the work are not to be interfered with. Which means that scabs are to stay.

Our answer is that we cannot accept these humiliating terms.

Workers of the Pacific Mills we now call upon you to join forces with us. Or we will all be reduced to serfdom.

We now demand:—

1. Abolition of the Time Card System throughout the mill.

2. Recognition of the Union.

3. No discrimination against strikers.

4. A 10% increase in wages for all departments.

5. Time to run while waiting for work. (To apply to all departments).

Other departments will formulate their own demands.

All together—now!

Let us show the Pacific that we are men and women.

ORGANIZE! UNITE! PREPARE!
DON'T SCAB ON THE DYERS!

NEGRO WORKERS IN EAST HARLEM SUFFER MOST BY SEGREGATION PLUS HIGH RENTS

By HILDA ABEL.
(Journalism Class, Workers School)

The recent recommendations of Governor Smith's Housing Commission will give small comfort to the problem of workers in New York City. But the class that is hardest hit by the housing problem are the Negro families of the east side of Harlem. For them the problem is almost unsolvable.

This section extends roughly from 99th Street to 130th Street and from Third Avenue to Madison Avenue. Here the landlords. Apartment houses (tenements would be more correct) are set apart, and the rents are raised when a new tenant moves in. The white workers are forced to leave because of the high rents. He must find cheaper quarters elsewhere. Negro workers who are discriminated against in other sections of the city are forced to take these rooms, having no other choice.

* * *

They are compelled to sublet some of them, so that frequently as many as five or six families can be found living in a single six-room flat. And their's not the worst condition that can be cited. In many of these flats double sleeping "shifts" prevail. Some sleep in the daytime, while others occupy the sleeping quarters at night. The Negroes are not the only ones who are discriminated against in this way. The Porto Ricans, who are now settling in the east side of Harlem, face similar problems.

* * *

The new tenement houses which are now being constructed are practically all of the $20 a room type. Those workers who are unable to pay on the basis of $20 a room are forced to remain in the old houses. These are notoriously known to be damp, dark, and unsanitary—and are fire-traps besides.

* * *

If the recommendations of the Housing Commission go into effect (and there is every probability that they will), the problem of how to live will be more unanswerable than ever for the Negro workers. When rent takes away $80 a month from the average income, food and clothes become luxuries—not necessities.

The morale and health of the workers will be materially affected and thus his work will suffer and his life crippled.

United Front For May Day in San Francisco; Arrange Big Picnic

By L. P. RINDAL
(Worker Correspondent.)

LOS ANGELES, Calif., April 11.—A United Front May Day Conference was held at 118½ So. Spring street. Five working class organizations took part, namely: International Labor Defense, the Workers (Communist) Party, I. W. W., the Central Labor Defense Committee and the Sacco-Vanzetti Conference.

It was decided to hold a picnic, May 1, at Plummers Park, Hollywood. The money made at this affair will be divided as follows: Centralia Defense Committee 30%; Sacco-Vanzetti Conference 30%; I. W. W. 20%; and the Workers (Communist) Party 20%.

It is the first time in the history of Los Angeles that such a united front movement has been agreed upon by so many workers' organizations.

Tom Conner, formerly secretary of the General Defense, San Francisco, and one of Judge Busick's many victims, who has just been released from San Quentin, Calif., is chairman of the May Day Conference.

Longshoremen's Bill Will Not Be Effected By Shortage of Funds

WASHINGTON, April 11 (FP).—Failure of congress to provide an appropriation for administering the longshoremen's accident compensation law, which was signed on March 4, will not make that measure a dead letter during the present year, says the U. S. Employes' Compensation Commission, which will handle the work.

The commission has planned to ask the budget bureau to adjust one-half of the administrative fund of the commission for the last half of 1927 —the longshoremen's act takes effect July 1—to its use in administering this law. When congress meets in December it will ask for an emergency appropriation to replace this money for its regular fund and to provide for adequate handling of the new work for longshoremen. In the meanwhile it will put four or five men in the field to look after claims filed under the new act.

Besides longshoremen engaged in loading and unloading vessels, the workers protected by the new act include ship repairmen such as plumbers, steamfitters, painters, upholsterers and machinists.

Lithographers Strike For Union and 46-Hour Week in Cleveland, O.

CLEVELAND April 11—250 union lithographers are striking to get a reduction of hours from 48 to 46. They are not asking for increase of wages.

The men are distributed among several concerns in the city. One firm, the Western Reserve Lithographing and Printing Co., according to reports, was compelled to close its lithographing department.

Almost all of the large lithographing establishments of the city employ non-union men, and the firms that have been struck announce that henceforth they too will employ unorganized labor. The strike, therefore, becomes one, not only for the shorter work-day, but also for the life of their union. The international is supporting the strikers.

Miller, Steel Boss Favors Increased Production by Men

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

GARY, Ind., April 11.—"Nathan L. Miller, who may be the next head of the United States Steel Corporation, sees a growing bulge in the dinner-pail of his workmen."

The above is from the Gary Post Tribune.

Mr. Miller said: "Wages will rise as business advances, and healthy increases are ahead. Wages can increase until they reach a point where they curtail production, then they stop . . .

Now the steel workers will feel happy and everybody will work harder anticipating a raise. Speed up boys, don't be lazy.

SAN FRANCISCO April 11.—With 18 men aboard, the steamer Kacanicum is sinking off Coos Bay, Ore., according to word received by local marine agencies today. The freighter sprang a leak when she ripped off her rudder on a bar, the wireless messages said.

Dividing the United Mine Workers

(By A Miner)

The United Mine Workers of America, once a united fighting powerful organization which bettered the conditions of the mine workers by hard and long struggles, is now being systematically disintegrated.

A Few Years After J. L. Lewis became International President the first great blow in dividing the anthracite from the soft coal union was struck in the 1922 strike settlement.

Split In Two.

For the anthracite an eleven month and for the soft coal fields a two year agreement was made, which came to union into two, when it came to strikes each part had to go out alone.

A few days before the last anthracite strike came to an official end, that is, before the ratification convention in Scranton, Feb. 16, 1926, the president of one of the largest coal companies presented a bouquet of flowers to J. L. Lewis and called him a "statesman" and leader in the world and a second Lincoln.

The rank and file does not yet know sufficiently the "true greatness of their leader." It will be a Republican task to make the rank and file acquainted with the accomplishments of J. L. Lewis—for the operators. The 1919 strike came to an end because of government intervention. Lewis told the miners "we cannot fight our government."

President Harding's republican administration (Wall Street's political power) intervened to help the operators break the miners' union. Lewis himself being a republican and the operators a part of Wall Street, they had easy sailing.

Lewis did not tell the miners and labor in general that the operators made use of the government to drive the first wedge into the miners' union for further destructive work. He therefore is guilty in helping to deal the first death blow to the miners' union to the United Mine Workers of America and he is guilty in letting opportunities pass without trying to unite the union.

Three Weeks Vacation.

As we go on we will see a systematic effort on the part of Lewis and the coal operators to destroy the fighting ability of the United Mine Workers of America.

Eleven months after the 1922 strike, in 1923 the anthracite agreement came to an end and a three weeks suspension, a vacation, as the miners called it, took place.

The miners called it a vacation because they were forced to spend eleven months in the pits shoveling from twenty to thirty tons of coal a day, a suspension of three weeks during which time it will put four or five men in the field to look after claims filed under the new act.

Besides longshoremen engaged in loading and unloading vessels, the workers protected by the new act include ship repairmen such as plumbers, steamfitters, painters, upholsterers and machinists.

Lithographers Strike For Union and 46-Hour Week in Cleveland, O.

CLEVELAND April 11—250 union lithographers are striking to get a reduction of hours from 48 to 46. They are not asking for increase of wages.

The men are distributed among several concerns in the city. One firm, the Western Reserve Lithographing and Printing Co., according to reports, was compelled to close its lithographing department.

Almost all of the large lithographing establishments of the city employ non-union men, and the firms that have been struck announce that henceforth they too will employ unorganized labor. The strike, therefore, becomes one, not only for the shorter work-day, but also for the life of their union. The international is supporting the strikers.

Miller, Steel Boss Favors Increased Production by Men

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

GARY, Ind., April 11.—"Nathan L. Miller, who may be the next head of the United States Steel Corporation, sees a growing bulge in the dinner-pail of his workmen."

The above is from the Gary Post Tribune.

Mr. Miller said: "Wages will rise as business advances, and healthy increases are ahead. Wages can increase until they reach a point where they curtail production, then they stop . . .

Now the steel workers will feel happy and everybody will work harder anticipating a raise. Speed up boys, don't be lazy.

SAN FRANCISCO April 11.—With 18 men aboard, the steamer Kacanicum is sinking off Coos Bay, Ore., according to word received by local marine agencies today. The freighter sprang a leak when she ripped off her rudder on a bar, the wireless messages said.

Split In Two.

For the anthracite an eleven month and for the soft coal fields a two year agreement was made, which came to union into two, when it came to strikes each part had to go out alone.

A few days before the last anthracite strike came to an official end, that is, before the ratification convention in Scranton, Feb. 16, 1926, the president of one of the largest coal companies presented a bouquet of flowers to J. L. Lewis and called him a "statesman" and leader in the world and a second Lincoln.

The rank and file does not yet know sufficiently the "true greatness of their leader." It will be a Republican task to make the rank and file acquainted with the accomplishments of J. L. Lewis—for the operators. The 1919 strike came to an end because of government intervention. Lewis told the miners "we cannot fight our government."

President Harding's republican administration (Wall Street's political power) intervened to help the operators break the miners' union. Lewis himself being a republican and the operators a part of Wall Street, they had easy sailing.

Lewis did not tell the miners and labor in general that the operators made use of the government to drive the first wedge into the miners' union for further destructive work. He therefore is guilty in helping to deal the first death blow to the miners' union to the United Mine Workers of America and he is guilty in letting opportunities pass without trying to unite the union.

Three Weeks Vacation.

As we go on we will see a systematic effort on the part of Lewis and the coal operators to destroy the fighting ability of the United Mine Workers of America.

Eleven months after the 1922 strike, in 1923 the anthracite agreement came to an end and a three weeks suspension, a vacation, as the miners called it, took place.

The miners called it a vacation because they were forced to spend eleven months in the pits shoveling from twenty to thirty tons of coal a day, a suspension of three weeks during which time it will put four or five men in the field to look after claims filed under the new act.

The first chance was missed in 1923 after the great 1922 strike for a short agreement running out simultaneously with the soft coal agreement and no effort was made to unite the anthracite with the soft coal miners.

Another opportunity was passed by when in 1924 the soft coal agreement came to an end. At this time again an agreement could have been made to expire with the anthracite agreement made for two years in October, 1923. Instead the famous Jacksonville, three year agreement was made, and when in 1925 the anthracite workers went on strike for five and a half months, they were fighting alone while their brothers in the soft coal fields produced coal for the operators with which the anthracite miners were beaten into the present five year agreement plus an arbitration clause.

Bad Leadership.

The anthracite mine workers attributed their ten per cent increase in wages in 1923 to the leadership of J. L. Lewis. They did not understand the favorable economic situation of this country or in the world as a whole; they did not know that the disorganized economic condition of Europe was the cause of prosperity in this country. Here finances and industry were in better shape than in any other part of the world.

The operators knew that the wave of prosperity would slow down in the ratio, or even faster, as the European countries progress in reorganization of production and finances; that is why we had such a pleasant vacation in 1923 in the anthracite and not because Lewis the Great had anything to do with it.

Crooked Deals.

The operators wanted to make hay while the American sun shone and therefore the quick agreement and therefore also the increasing pressure on the miners by the operators for more production during the life of this agreement and that is the why and wherefore of the many petty strikes in the anthracite during this period.

When the 1925-26 strike was well under way our great leader came to Nanticoke to address a mass meeting of miners. The International Vice-President, who also spoke at this meeting, devoted most of his speech to the miners' unity question. He had in mind the unity which has the same international officials and the consequent financial ease thereof. He said that the anthracite operators want to first divide and then destroy the union. At this point Lewis, who was seated behind Murray, looked at him and moved uneasily evidently not liking the dangerous subject about which Murray spoke.

His Purse Was Full.

Lewis is an actor with a good voice. He told the miners how the Nanticoke high school students, boys and girls, presented him with flowers, and how they pleaded with him to carry on a fierce fight for an agreement which would make it possible for their fathers to give them a real start in life.

"Out of the fullness of his heart" he promised those children to do everything possible so that they could get an education and would not have work as hard as their fathers. We will see later how he kept his promise.

Not Truthful.

It was some time in January, 1926, when the miners heard Lewis. The strike dragged on into the fifth month. The situation looked bleak.

The miners wanted to hear their leader's opinion on the outcome of the strike. From the beginning and all during the strike streams of propaganda were let loose on the miners—they were confused—Lewis must speak.

A mass meeting was arranged in Town Hall in Scranton with Lewis as the main speaker. The hall was jammed with miners, five thousand or more were present. In his speech he gave himself away without being aware of it. He told the miners that they were now stronger than ever before—what a lie! In 1922 when the anthracite and the soft coal miners went out a hundred thousand unorganized miners were on strike with them. They were stronger than in all the history of the United Mine Workers of America. He double-crossed them twice, first by making separate agreements and second by not organizing the unorganized miners into the U. M. W. of A., leaving them without an agreement. Those workers could have been brought into the organization with one swing.

Poor Excuses.

He went on to tell the miners that they would gain more this time than before; and then, as if excusing himself, he added that the operators wanted to smash the union and that they (this he brought out meekly) did not want to sign a longer agreement in 1922 which would run out simultaneously with the soft coal agreement. He must have sensed the strong desire for unity of the two parts of the union.

The miners went home with some hope and in better spirits. It was only a few weeks after this meeting when the present anthracite five year arbitration clause, with no closed shop agreement was made.

Lewis Do It.

Already the anthracite miners feel the pressure of the coal barons for more production. Into this last agreement no co-operation and efficiency clause was placed at the ratification convention. Some of the delegates made fun of this clause and the officials smiled at it.

The miners must know by now that it meant more work for how for the same pay. The operators do not need to reduce wages at the present time and arouse much noise about it; it does not fit into their union smashing plans.

Let Lewis first divide the soft coal miners by separate district agreements. Once divided the soft coal union will be practically powerless and with the non-union mines on the increase the operators will have easy sailing to smash the most powerful unit of the U. M. W. of A., the anthracite union.

Hard Coal Miners Work.

The same thing will take place as in the anthracite strike of 1925-26, only perhaps on a larger scale. The anthracite workers will work now to pile up plenty of coal while Lewis chains the soft coal union and then a shutdown in the anthracite will be on the order of business. Nothing can make the operators run their mines if they don't want them to run. They can keep the miners out until they see fit to let them go back to work. This will take place when the piled up coal is sold you may think, but—

In 1925-26 the anthracite operators did not only sell dirt for anthracite at big profits. They also sold soft coal for big money because they also control bituminous mines. While the miners used up their savings the operators filled their pockets.

Rank And File Fights.

The rank and file in the U. M. W. of A. is of a fighting quality. If a strong minority can be made to see the true position of their union, into which our great leader J. L. Lewis has maneuvered it, then much can be saved of the organization and no second Lewis will be able to repeat such union-wrecking. The rank and file must learn the truth thru the pamphlets, leaflets and press of the Save the Union bloc.

From 1922 when the first deliberate breaking up of the union took place, it could have been repaired in 1923 with a short anthracite agreement; again in 1924 when a short soft coal agreement had been made; also in the 1925-26 anthracite strike a short agreement could have been made if the interests of the miners' union would have been the first consideration of the International officials. If this policy had been carried out the miners would now be united when facing the operators. Instead the U. M. W. of A. is headed for the rocks and it will go a considerable way in that direction before the progressive elements can turn the tide.

The Movies—They Don't Satisfy

PART 3.—ONE PICTURE WITH PROMISE.

A young composer is writing a serious symphony and a less serious pantomime. Poverty does not permit him to finish these, because he has to do all kinds of hack work for cabarets and jazz bands.

His artist-sweetheart is helping him. A friendly physician gives him the advice "to marry for money" which would enable him to devote himself to serious creative work. A fiancee is at hand, It is a pupil of the composer, the daughter of a billionaire.

The composer visits the billionaire, the family of the latter return the visit. A typical family of upstarts. The daughter—hysterical; the son—a degenerate and hypochondriac; the mother—a vulgar gum-chewing woman; the father—a man who every minute interrupts his "social" conversation, to take up the telephone to buy, to sell, to watch the stock market and to add to his billions. They have a luxurious palace with scores of lackeys, silly, insipid ornaments, and a player piano which is winding off the latest jazz pieces.

All this, presented in a caricatural form, provokes the disgust of both the spectator and the composer. However, under the influence of the physician and his sweetheart who self-sacrificingly renounces her own happiness, the composer offers over telephone his "hand and heart" to the billionaire's daughter and is accepted.

Great Dream.

Altogether tired out and unnerved, the composer falls asleep on his chair. A terrible, crazy dream follows.

This is 250 per cent of "Lake Liul" and Meyerhold, plus the American chapter of Maiakovsky's "150,000,000," multiplied by Bedlam and Coney Island.

It is impossible to describe the entire dream. One can only single out some particular details. In his dream the composer has married the billionaire's daughter, and is drawn into the whirlpool of the disgusting life of bourgeous philistinism which is presented as even more foolish, noisy and empty than it is in reality.

The cigar and the telephone of the father-in-law assume improbable proportions; and so does the foolishly shaped necktie of the degenerate son, as well as the tasteless ornaments of the daughter's dress. Instead of scores, there are hundreds of lackeys.

The father-in-law draws his son-in-law into his office. In the middle of the screen, against a dark background, there appears a rectangular platform, straight in the air; above it elevators are running up and down; but the elevator into which the father-in-law and his son-in-law enter, is motionless; the counterweights are moving instead.

A conference of the directors of the enterprise. The composer is telling an instructive tale of how he has worked up from a worker to a millionaire—a satire upon the widely current autobiographies and interviews of American petrolch-nick millionaires.

Bad Conditions.

The composer's hopes for a quiet life and for bearable conditions for his work afire his marriage with the [illegible] daughter vanish. There is neither time nor [illegible] he has to "make money," to receive [illegible] wife's great aunts and nephews, he has [illegible] an opportunity to devote himself to art. [illegible] wife has born to pieces the unfinished [illegible] of his symphony, the composer decides, upon [illegible] of his friend, the physician, to kill his wife [illegible]. There is a weapon at hand—his own [illegible] that had assumed improbable dimensions. [illegible] the only swings it and does not [illegible] would have been done in an ordinary [illegible] at every one of his tormentors. [illegible]-overseer, Policemen start out to chase [illegible] the screen is empty; there is only one [illegible] policemen is running on it waving their [illegible] running way; they are running but remain [illegible].

Capital Too Stupid To Die.

[illegible] is empty again; the composer is fleeing. [illegible] committed the crime; he is running—but [illegible] on the same place.

The forces of the composer give way; the screen [illegible] both sides—presenting him and the policemen; they catch and drag him to the court.

The setting of the court is fantastic. The judge—stint [illegible] the same father-in-law with a wig on his head, sitting on [illegible] platform; the cigar and the telephone are [illegible]. The prosecutor—a gum-chewing lady. The [illegible]—the mother-in-law, the wife, her brother. They have not died from the blows—capitalism remains alive.

Would Offer Proof.

The composer defends himself; if they only would hear his symphony, they would understand. But he cannot produce his symphony—the manuscript has been torn—so he will show them at least his pantomime. The prosecutor pulls out their pillows and indignantly he does to sleep. The composer plays, everything disappears—the screen shows the pantomime.

The pantomime has been concluded. The court declared the composer guilty.

He is condemned!

"I will carry an appeal to the higher court."

All Courts Alike.

This [illegible] terrible. The same floor with the billionaire father-in-law present; that is the superior court. The composer finally declared guilty and is condemned to a life term of hard labor in a jazz factory.

Next we see the jazz factory. Iron cages, like in a menagerie. Wheels are moving under the ceiling, transmission belts are flying, the factory is in full swing. The cages are occupied by artists, poets, musicians. One of them belongs the composer. The spectators—again the billionaire and his family. Upon their request the artists compose [illegible] "artistic" produce while the public is [illegible] on. But when the composer's turn comes, [illegible] to write jazz music; he has to finish [illegible] a comic time. In vain. This is the revolt of a real human being behind bars. They tell him: "Why here to work here is your very death!"

The Sun Appears.

[illegible] Then he prefers to die immediately. This is [illegible] "The physician (the same as before), and his sweetheart are ready to help him. The familiar paper-knife [illegible] He has borrowed [illegible].

[illegible] through the air. Not one knife—a thousand knives!

[illegible] knives are no knives—these are simply sun rays that have penetrated the studio through the window.

[illegible] is over. The rays have awakened the composer.

[illegible] Great, [illegible] Grotchne happens as it ought to happen [illegible] in American film. The daughter of the [illegible] is not a [illegible], the sweetheart returns [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] everywhere, a check for a considerable [illegible] everybody is happy.

Too Much Dream.

[illegible] is unusual for America. But even here there are not a few genuine American features. The short duration of the reality as compared with the dream; the excessive caricaturing of the millionaire's family, which suggests the idea that this is only an exception and not a type; the petty-bourgeois treatment of art, as illustrated by the pantomime, the happy ending: virtue [illegible] rewarded with money and a wedding. This is only a step, and not a very courageous one, towards the creation of a real screen art not contaminated by bourgeous ideology. And maybe it is only half a step.

AS HENRY FORD REPORTS HIS ACCIDENT

Henry Ford, expecting to be summoned any day to testify as an "hostile witness" in the suit against him of Aaron Sapiro, had an "accident." He says he was pushed off the grade while riding in a coupe belonging to his own company, by two men in a Studebaker. Boys who say they saw the scene, report that they saw Henry run off the grade, and that some one was in the car with him. The "accident" effectively postponed Henry's appearance on the witness stand.

America and the Inexorable Law of Imperialism

BY I. LYONS.

WE HAVE reached a critical stage since the days of 1917 when we entered the World War to fight for "democracy." It was to be a war to end all wars. We were going to [illegible] of American [illegible] a war which would [illegible] that we are [illegible] reasons [illegible] have learned [illegible] cal.

HOWEVER [illegible] Santo Domingo [illegible] yet been [illegible] and [illegible] seen [illegible] the [illegible] staging of the [illegible] Bolshevik [illegible] Mexico [illegible] who knows [illegible] with [illegible] complish wonders and thus may be able even to put the [illegible].

The New York Times of March 23rd in news item appeared to the effect that the capacity of the Panama Canal has nearly reached its limit and the two alternatives for meeting the situation are the construction of a third canal to be added to the Panama Canal or the building of a canal across Nicaragua.

NOW something about Nicaragua. Although through the so-called Bryan-Chamorro treaty in 1916 the Nicaraguan government gave to the United States the right to construct a canal across Nicaragua connecting the Atlantic with the Pacific oceans; political disorders in Nicaragua [illegible] did make it difficult for this government to carry out the project, especially if an authority hostile to the United States were established." (Quoted, N. Y. Times, page 1, March [illegible], boldface type mine.)

THUS we have a whole story in a nut-shell!

NOW we know (if we didn't before) why the U. S. marines are [illegible] the patriotic duty of helping Dan Kees out of office pacana. [illegible] a legal right to the presidency [illegible] Nicaragua can be disputed only by [illegible] imperialists and their [illegible].

THE "Nicaraguan question" is still hanging fire. But the national consciousness of the Nicaraguans has been aroused. Diaz will not have as easy a time in making presents of the resources of Nicaragua to the [illegible] imperialists as Chamorro did. Nicaragua and the newly awakened nationalist elements will put up a fight. If Diaz and his clique have the powerful guns of the U. S. behind them, Sacasa has the backing of the majority of Nicaragua (if we may take the last elections and recent victorious battles as a guide).

It is not necessary for the U. S. government to declare war in every instance. It has sufficient forces in Nicaragua now to keep Diaz in power and to protect American interests (railroads, banks, etc.).

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Wall Street Ant "War Heroes."

Editor, The DAILY WORKER:

I've noticed pictures in the papers of boys who are leaving here to go to kill Chinese, who are invading against American and British exploitation. The boys look very cheerful; they won't look that way when they get back.

I fought in the World War and I came back sick and broken. I'm out of a job now. But they won't get me again. I'd rather kill myself than fight Wall Street's battles again. Capitalism threw me out like a dirty dog, after I fought its battles. That's how it treats "our boys."

Tribute to Ruthenberg.

To the Editor of The DAILY WORKER:

It is not for me, whose work and thought have proceeded along such different lines to usurp a great degree of time and space in paying tribute to our late Comrade, C. E. Ruthenberg. But it was my fortune to be associated with him at one time—during the period when we were fellow members of the Twenty-fifth Ward Branch, Cleveland Local, of the Socialist Party.

It was there that I became acquainted with his real character, so far different from the one with which the newspapers slandered him. His force was not less but greater, because it was contained within a quiet habit of speech and demeanor. He did not exaggerate, he did not rant, he did not sneer. He knew his facts, and was conscious of the strength of his position.

It has been ten years since it was my privilege to be associated with him. But the notice of his death in the papers brought me a shock of personal grief. Let me add my tribute and my tears to yours—for I am acutely conscious that there has passed from our comradeship a friend, a worker, an uncompromising fighter for the workers' cause, a man whom friends could not scare nor flattery corrupt.

He is one of those who live though he is gone;
Leave to his ashes—but his flame burns on!

Go Easy on Farmer Warning to Egg Men

CHICAGO, April 11 (FP).—Don't exploit the farmer too ruthlessly while he's down or you will lose by it in the end, is the warning former secretary of agriculture E. T. Meredith extended to the big Chicago egg men at a trade meeting April 6. He explained that if the farmer is drained dry he will be unable to buy manufactured goods and then the city workers will lose their jobs and purchasing power and nobody will be left to buy eggs from the big Chicago egg men. Go easy, said Meredith to his hardboiled hearers, and be a little fair with the farmer. It will pay later on.

Ford and Sapiro—Brothers Under the Skin

PART II

The agreement for the formation of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Association, as read into the record, showed that no organization was to be formed unless the growers of three-fourths of the Burley tobacco in Kentucky, Indiana, Tennessee and Ohio became members. Prior to the organization of this association, the witness testified, he explained the contract to divisional meetings of bankers in three cities and to public meetings of growers in 12 cities. He added that the association was formed with about 60,000 members.

The following are excerpts from a letter of protest written to Ford personally by Walton Peteet, former secretary of the national council of the National Farmers' Co-operative Associations, after the publication of a Sapiro story in which Peteet was mentioned:

"This is intended as a personal letter to you because I have become convinced that your employes on the Independent either ignorantly or wilfully are pursuing in your name a course of action wholly at variance with your policy and philosophy of life. The subject-matter is important enough to receive the attention of a man as busy with large affairs as you are, if truth, justice and honor between men are cardinal virtues.

"Your attitude on co-operative marketing by farmers is another matter. Of my personal knowledge, I tell you that many of the statements about it in the Dearborn Independent are untrue and the philosophy and aim of the movement have been grotesquely misrepresented.

"It is strange indeed that your employes should, in your name, seek to destroy a movement which seeks to do for agriculture what you are trying to do for industry. It seems to be another case of paid writers writing what they think will please and twisting the facts to that end and keeping you away from men who know the real facts. But the co-operative movement can take care of itself."

This portion of the letter was admitted in evidence over the violent protest of Ford's attorneys.

* * *

Sen. Jim Reed has spent hours bringing out the size of the fees Sapiro received as attorney, expert and organizer for the various co-operatives. The jury must have seen the irony therein. The largest total of fees paid by any organization over a year's period to Sapiro is undoubtedly niggardly when compared with the fat retainer Missouri Jim must have received from Ford for his services (and his reputation in this one case. And the total income of Sapiro for all the years in question in this case would be no money to Reed's client, Ford. There would be no money in this of course if Reed were not trying to sling mud in the event of the exploitation of which he charges Sapiro is guilty. Exploitation being not only charged but emphasized, the comparison is almost automatic.

Behind this case is gainful the uncompromising absolute jealousy of a ruler of power in this anarcho capitalistic system in which so many try to overthrow and almost none succeed by improper means. Though Ford has made his billions and his reputation as an industrialist, he has always remained part farmer. He is not of the type of the landed aristocracy of pre-revolutionary Russia or the [illegible] gum-chewing gentleman-planters on the Old South in the United States. He is the son of a Michigan dirt-farmer. It remained for Burley Ford's son to break at heart entirely away from the soil. First he [illegible] developed the tractor. It was partly country sentiment that caused him to name it the Fordson tractor. He wanted his son, too, as he believed, a sentiment to the farmer. Then he experimented with soy beans [illegible] effect on the soil of the rotation of crops. Through machinery, electricity, zoology and arithmetic he would introduce the eight-hour day and the equivalent of industrial efficiency into the production of crops. [illegible] effort to get control of Muscle Shoals he foresaw himself privately benefitted financially and publicly acclaimed as the farmer's friend. Since [illegible] public acclaimed as the farmer's friend would also turn out to be financially, this was no much the better. Ford [illegible] developed a hatred of Jews, presumably because [illegible] he was in a desperate financial situation two or three years after the war certain Jewish bankers refused to lend him money on his own terms. When Sapiro became prominent as an organizer of farmer co-operatives, Ford saw in him not only a rival for the position of farmer's friend, Aaron Sapiro was also [illegible] Jew. Sapiro had contacts moreover with certain Jewish financiers, Jacob [illegible] even had been cracked in the Ford offices about the nice fertilizer Sapiro, Barney Baruch, Eugene Meyer, Jr., and other Jews stood much of mowed down by a Fordson tractor. At any rate it was the best thing was to attack Sapiro's motives, character and very face in the Dearborn Independent. [illegible] was the kind of thing Ford bought [illegible] Dearborn. [illegible] for. Whether the Dearborn Independent told the truth about Sapiro's motives and character or libelled him is for the jury to decide. All we need to know is this: the Dearborn Independent would never have concerned itself about Sapiro, the co-operative movement, Ford had not set out to become the one and only farmer's friend.

To Ford, organization for the sake of exploitation has become a mathematical abstraction. Ford and the organization of 100,000 which he controls he is as inhuman, in the strictly psychological sense, as a man can become. Putting it in another way, this organization of Ford and the men who control Ford are the machines they operate. To Ford, the men are subordinate to the machines. The machines remain. They continue to run. So long as the machines continue to operate the men may come and go. Their coming and going simply raises the question of the cost of the labor turnover as shown on the monthly balance sheet.

These facts are significant, only when we realize that Ford himself is a product of the final stage of capitalism, the stage of imperialism and both vertical and lateral trusts. In this stage of capitalism Ford could not attain his success by other means. He is at the same time a product and a leader of the capitalist class. Puns are pleasant diversions. Then Aaron Sapiro and Henry Ford in this capitalistic school are class-mates. The economic analysis must be the final analysis at this time in those matters. Henry and Aaron are brothers under the skin. Sapiro, on the marketing end, and Ford, on the producing end, are merely on different ends of a cross-cut saw. Both are cutting their profits from the labor of others. And it can only be said for Sapiro that partly in the name of a racial minority he has fought back against the anti-Semitism of Ford. Even then it must not be forgotten that the anti-Semitism Ford [illegible] been manifesting against Sapiro is in general directed against the Semitic financier, the Semitic capitalist. Sapiro is of Ford's economic class, Ford's capitalist class. They are brothers under the skin.

There is only one other kind of Jew that would get under this skin of Ford's. That is the Communist Jew or the class-conscious left winger or progressive in a trade union. When the American Federation of Labor starts organizing the automobile industry there will be Jews on the picket line, shoulder to shoulder with the descendants of some of the dirt farmers of Michigan that Henry Ford's father and his grandfather went with to husking bees.

BOOKS

A YELLOW JOURNALIST DISSECTS THE "RED" PROBLEM IN U. S. A.

How Red Is America? by Will Irwin, J. H. Sears & Co., Inc. $1.50.

A member of a socialist local in the days when such institutions existed in the United States, one evening startled his comrades who were in branch headquarters discussing how many capitalists could be purchased out of business for a million dollars, by asking them to define socialism to his satisfaction in three words.

Most of the assembled members couldn't if they would and wouldn't if they could, so the irate member declared that socialism would never make any headway in America until it could be explained to the workers in three words, left headquarters in disgust and returned to the catholic church. Had Will Irwin been in that club room at the time, the seeker after synthetic knowledge might have continued to pay dues a little longer. Irwin could fill the order in one word.

Irwin has written a book for the brainless banker and the tired business man. In a style which is a cross between the fiction of a private detective literate enough to use the English language, and that of a war correspondent trying to prove that the accidental killing of one preacher in Shanghai was a massacre and that the slaughter of 600 Chinese was a Chinese outrage. Irwin essays to tell how the "Reds" of various brands came and went in the United States.

* * *

Irwin holds no brief for patriotic organizations like the National Security League or the American Defense Society. They did not pay him to write a book exposing the "Reds." He is not an extremist. This erudite author tells us that Marx and Engels at one time favored the common ownership of women, tho he declares that afterwards Engel became a champion of woman suffrage. Mr. Irwin is twice wrong in the same place. Mr. Irwin knows that Foster's first name is John, not William, tho without the William, Foster would not mean any more to the average reader than Ford without the Henry.

* * *

On a few facts Mr. Irwin works off his anti-radical spleen for 219 pages. The book is not worth a stick of chewing gum.

TREASON'S REWARDS AND ITS METHODS.

The Labor Lieutenants of American Imperialism, by Jay Lovestone, Daily Worker Publishing Co., 10 cents.

The Threat To the Labor Movement; The Conspiracy Against the Trade Unions, by William F. Dunne; Daily Worker Publishing Co., 15 cents.

Labor "leadership" in the United States has become a vested interest. Despite the fact that Sam Gompers and others have indignantly denied that labor is a commodity, the trade union officer sells his labor power just as well as any worker does. These officials consider themselves highly skilled individuals. They place their commodity for sale in the labor market.

Hence the membership is made to bid against the employers for the purchase of this commodity, for the hiring of these "able" men.

In The Labor Lieutenants of American Imperialism is to be found listed categorically the various rights, privileges, salaries and some of the incidental swag enjoyed by the ruling quacks of the American Federation of Labor. Quite clear, incidentally, will then become the motives behind the present campaign against left-wing control of the trade unions.

* * *

Most of the $100,000,000 paid annually by American trade unionists to their organizations goes towards the payment of wages "expenses," and salaries of high-priced officials. (Pres. Bro. Locomotive Engineers, $25,000; Pres. Railroad Trainmen, $14,000; Pres. Teamsters and Truckdrivers, $15,000; Pres. UMWA, $12,000.)

With labor "leadership" thus on the auction block the present conspiracy against honest trade unionism inspired by a coalition of employers, reactionary union officials, the government, and the capitalist press, with moribund socialists tagging in the rear, appears quite logical.

In The Threat To The Labor Movement, Dunne shows by documentary evidence, whose authenticity cannot be questioned, that the campaign against all progressive tendencies in the labor movement which was launched at the A. F. of L. convention in 1923 has entered a new phase in which there is a more open combination of these forces than ever before.

Three reasons are given by the writer for this new offensive: (1) The desire of the capitalists to suppress all struggles which interfere with the development of American general dead level of docility; (2) the desire of the trade union officialdom to force on the unions a policy which will make them the docile organizations which the capitalists will accept; and (3) the desire of both the capitalists and their labor-agents to drive the most conscious and active left wing workers out of the unions and destroy their influence in the labor movement because they are trying to rally all workers for struggle on a program of immediate and necessary demands.

* * *

Both pamphlets are written in an easy, lively style. They are crowded with facts vital to every worker who is eager to be informed of the embattled forces that are at work in the American labor movement.

THE NEW CANDOR IN SEX.

Sex And The Love-Life, by William J. Fielding. Dodd Mead & Co., 1927.

Fielding's work takes its place at once as the most lucid and persuasive presentation of the tangled facts of sex and love and marriage now available in English.

The unique combination of frankness and sobriety, the fine intermingling of naturalness and charm, make "Sex And The Love-Life" not only eminently readable but, in the best sense, instructive.

Every vital fact of conceivable interest to men and women is cited and illustrated and dwelt upon for the enlightenment of the sexually-benighted (whose number is legion).

The author assumes both the permanence and high desirability of marriage as a monogamic union and on this basis proceeds to give sane hints to married lovers for the creation and continuance of sexual felicity. His emphasis on the physiology of love makes for an especial honesty in treatment. Nothing is so wholesome nowadays (thanks to the "science" of psychoanalysis) as the bright frankness of the intelligentsia regarding the sexual question.

When we bear in mind the audience of repressed, modest, self-conscious and ecstatically "illiterate" man and women for whom "Sex And The Love-Life" is intended, we can appreciate its importance scientifically, hygienically and therapeutically.

* * *

I commend Fielding's work as one of extraordinary competence in scholarship and fine delicacy of feeling in handling erotic themes. It is a splendid supplement to Marie Stopes' "Married Love."

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE Southern Labor Review insists that it is "not an agitator but an educator." The paper is published in Birmingham, Alabama. At the bottom of the first page there is a line which reads: "Read J. A. Bryan's sermon on page two in this issue." This is the bunk, particularly for a labor paper. An educator is necessarily an agitator. When one turns a new idea loose among a flock of antique notions there is bound to be trouble. And if the new idea conquers the old ones retreat.

THIS fake labor sheet is catering to the prejudices that have been cultivated in the minds of the masses by the capitalist rulers of this country and of all countries where capitalism is the dominnnt economic system. Those who now rule fear the agitator who comes along with the message of mass emancipation. This is a mighty good system for those who live on the labor of others. Being only a small minority of the population they know that once the workers realize that they are being fleeced and that they have the power to stop the fleecing, their day will have seen its last sunset.

THERE are several hundred rags of this sort posing as labor papers in the United States. They bear the same relation to the trade union movement that maggots bear to a sheep. They suck the life blood out of it. Their owners derive their living on the advertising racket, shoveled out of local business. The American Federation of Labor supplies them with boiler-plate labelled "labor news." The keynote of this press is that agitators and that those who would urge the workers to fight for a betterment of their living conditions must be crushed.

* * *

THE denizens of the bible belt may be excused for being engaged in the business of publishing antique ideas. There is a possibility that a modicum of honesty may be mixed with their ignorance. But honesty in this case is synonomous with simplicity and simplicity being ignorance is the explanation for the position of servitude in which the workers are today. There is no such excuse for the acts of labor bureaucrats like Mnt-thew Woll or William Green. Those gentlemen are conscious agents of the capitalist class. Whether they get paid directly by the employers or indirectly thru their investments in business the fact remains that they are sharers in the loot that capitalism exacts from the working class.

* * *

NOW we have the spectacle of Mnt-thew Woll, a vice president of the American Federation of Labor organizing a committee to investigate Communist activity in the United States. This committee will not be exclusively composed of trade union officials. It will be a conglomeration of "representatives of the church, the legal profession, of business organizations, of educational institutions, of associated employers and organized labor." And it will assist the civil authorities in suppressing "communist" strikes. Which means that it will play the role of a glorified stool-pigeon agency. It is safe to say offhand that no labor official in the history of the trade union movement, not actually on the payroll of a detective agency took the step that Mr. Woll proudly announces he is taking.

* * *

WHY are the capitalists and the trade union bureaucrats so frightened of the Communist movement? In the United States since it is admitted by both friend and foe that the movement is very weak numerically here? The capitalists and their spokesmen tell us that the American worker will never swap his "glorious institutions" for the Communist system. Yet they are worried. The capitalists, because they fear for the stability of their system, and the trade union grafters and bureaucrats because they know that an intelligent and militant rank and file would speedily replace them with leaders who would fight the enemies of the workers.

* * *

IT is true that the capitalist system in the United States is comparatively healthy. It is still on the upgrade. But the system is on the decline internationally. And the Soviet Union is a perpetual nightmare to the capitalists of the world. It is a nightmare to the labor fakers. When the latter are warring on the Communists in the American trade union movement, they are striking a blow for capitalism and particularly for American capitalism all over the world. Note that the A. F. of L. has not raised a voice in behalf of the Chinese people who are being crucified by foreign imperialism. The reason is that Wall Street wants the A.

ACCOUNTS FAKED BY "BIG FOUR" INDUSTRIAL INSURANCE GRAFTERS

Coolidge Okays Swindle; Schwab Named in Case; Exposed Company Officials Silent

PAST EVENTS OF INSURANCE EXPOSÉ

The ensuing is the third of a series of articles which are being written for The DAILY WORKER exposing the swindle of weekly payment insurance. Previous articles pointed out that the "Big Four," i. e., the Metropolitan, Prudential, John Hancock and the Colonial Insurance Companies are hand in glove with corrupt Tammany officials. That the "Big Four" make tens of millions of dollars on lapsed policies which are never returned to its "mutual" policy-holders. That 40 million weekly payment insurers are swindled by this giant insurance trust which operates with the connivance of Tammany-creatured State Department of Insurance.

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON

Life insurance, as we know it in this country today, originated about 80 years ago with the incorporation of the Mutual Life Insurance Company. Since that time it has increased in popularity, until today, 245 companies insure 60 million lives for 77 billion dollars.

In 1876 "industrial" (weekly payment, life insurance was imported into this country from England by the famous Prudential Life Insurance of New Jersey. "Strong as the Rock of Gibraltar"—and as hard—in dealing with its worker-insurers.

Ever since this red-letter insurance year "industrial" insurance companies have multiplied like rabbits. Today there are scores of them, big ones, little ones and a spattering of tinpot outfits. The "racket" was a good one and the odor of the flesh-pots smelled good from afar.

Today, in this year of grace 1927, however, the "Big Four" control 90 per cent of the business in this country. This is, one must remember, an age of centralization. During the past ten years or so, the "Big Four" and notably the Metropolitan have been swallowing up little insurance companies, either by consolidation, "re-insurance" or outright purchase.

A few of these little Jonahs were, The Liberty Life, the Washington Life, Niagara Life and the Vermont Life Insurance Company.

The founders of the institution of life insurance were honest men. That was in the day before "high finance" and Wall Street control of the necessities of life. Those were the good old days before there were 11,000 millionaires in this land of the free and the brave. These men sought a practical method whereby in the event of death, the dollars and rents value of a human life, might to some degree be restored. Usually the breadwinners were the lives protected.

These men acted upon the most human motives, instituting a mutual system by means of which poor people could, by the quickest and surest means of cooperation make after-death provision for those dependent on them for support.

Finance Committee Dishonest

Honest life insurance is a simple idea; a schoolboy can grasp it. Modern "high pressure" industrial life insurance is so befuddled with financial hokus-pocus that only an expert can make out what it's all about. What it's about is this: "Reserves" and "assets" have been pyramiding more than twice as fast as decently necessary, finance committees have become fabulously rich through the manipulation of these "mutual" funds—and our old friend, The Public, in this case 40 million workers, are left holding the bag.

$50,000,000 Lost

"Industrial" (weekly payment) life insurance was originally intended to be an institution of social and economic convenience, such as savings banks for instance; but whereas one

Boston Protests The Shelling of Nanking by U. S.

BOSTON, April 12.—Following the mass meeting held here in Tremont Temple where over 1,500 people demonstrated against intervention in China, the Boston local of the Kuo Min Tang party held a joint celebration with other organizations on the fall of Nanking and Shanghai.

At the headquarters of the Kuo Min Tang Party at 17 Hudson street the celebration was held. The headquarters were decorated with Chinese flags and pictures of Dr. Sun Yat Sen and other leaders in the liberation movement of China.

Many Speakers.

The speakers were Gus Shklar, district organizer of the Workers (Communist) Party, Frank Manning of the socialist party, R. Shohan of the Young Workers' League, and Marion Perkins of Dennison House. In addition the following Chinese speakers addressed the audience: I. Sun, Mrs. P. A. Chan, Dr. P. A. Chan, and T. Goon.

The speakers denounced world imperialism and protested the bombing of Nanking. The mention of the fact that Union of Socialist Soviet Republic is friendly to Cantonese and attacks imperialism was greeted with enthusiastic applause.

Denounce Missionaries.

Missionaries were denounced for their subservance to the Standard Oil Co., and other corporations. The speakers ridiculed the rumors that there is dissension in the ranks of the Kuo Min Tang Party

Adopt Resolutions.

Fred T. Douglas, English secretary for the committee, read resolutions of protest, demanding the withdrawal of battleships and marines from China, demanding the recognition of the Nationalist government in China and protesting bombardment of Nanking.

SENTENCE BRINGS PROTESTS

Latest photos of Bartolomeo Vanzetti (left) and Nicola Sacco, whose sentence of death, pronounced by Judge Thayer of Dedham, Mass., has renewed virtual world wide protests against their conviction on July 14, 1921, of murdering a paymaster. The state supreme court has just upheld this conviction and the date of execution has been named as the week of July 10. The protests assert the two men were convicted during anti-radical hysteria and on prejudiced and flimsy evidence, the convicted men having taken part in radical move-

SACCO-VANZETTI WORLD PROTEST SWAMPS MASSACHUSETTS GOVERNOR

Demands Include Impartial Commission For Inquiry Into Vital Facts

BOSTON, April 12.—The Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee today formally placed a request for an impartial investigation into every aspect of the case into the hands of Gov. Alvan T. Fuller.

At the same time, another branch of the state government, the legislature, was considering a similar proposal, in the form of a resolution introduced yesterday by Representative Roland D. Sawyer, a congregational minister of Ware.

Ask For Thorough Investigation.

The committee, which has waged an unceasing campaign for the freedom of the two Italian radical workers since they were first framed on a murder charge in 1920, based its appeal to the governor on his constitutional power to intervene in cases denied by the supreme court.

Asking that five impartial citizens be named to conduct a thorough inquiry, the Defense Committee declared it concluded its clients "can derive no benefit from any further proceedings in the courts of Massachusetts.

World Protest Continues.

Meanwhile the flood of letters, telegrams, and cablegrams which began to arrive immediately following the decision of the Massachusetts superior court, denying an appeal for a new trial, was made last week is continuing to pour in from all parts of the world.

Hungarian White Terror May Kill Szanto and Others

BUDAPEST, April 12.—Thirty-one Communists and left wing leaders face death today when they come up before a special court just created by the Horthy white terror. The court has absolute power to pass a death sentence which means that the condemned person is hanged within two hours.

Former Commissar Zoltan Szanto and the thirty others on trial are charged with merely distributing Communist pamphlets.

Labor throughout Europe is watching Hungary for the decision of the court. Hungary's alliance with fascist Italy and the brutal treatment accorded to other critics of the Horthy terror leave little room for hope for Szanto and other leaders.

The urging of immediate protests against the imminent execution of Szanto and 20 other Hungarians, active radicals, whose trial on a charge of "attempting to overthrow the state," began before a court-martial of white-terror Horthyites at Budapest yesterday, was contained in a cablegram received by the New York district of the Workers (Communist) Party last night from the International Press Correspondence at Vienna.

Telegrams by James P. Cannon, national secretary of the International Labor Defense were sent today to Senator William E. Borah, chairman of the committee on foreign relations, F. H. LaGuardia, republican congressman from this state, and Victor L. Berger, socialist of Wisconsin, pointing out the necessity for immediate intercession in behalf of the victims of the white terror in Hungary.

Communications were also wired to U. S. government officials at Washington by the Hungarian-Jewish Federation, and the Anti-Horthy League.

Sapiro Says Baruch Was Involved in Scheme to Extend Power to South

DETROIT, April 12.—Continuing his cross-examination of Aaron Sapiro in the famous million dollar Ford-Sapiro libel bult, Senator James A. Reed brought out the fact that Sapiro had entered into a conference with the New York capitalist, Bernard M. Baruch, for the purpose of extending the "cooperative" movement in which Sapiro was interested into the tobacco fields of the south. Reed soft-pedaled this part of the examinatinn because Baruch is one of the props of the democratic party and he may need his support in the 1928 convention where he hopes to secure the nomination for president of the United States.

CHANGE OF VENUE ASKED IN TRIAL OF FUR WORKERS

Martial Law Continued In N. Y. Fur District

Lawyers for Ben Gold, manager and eight members of the New York Joint Board of the Furriers' Union now in jail at Mineola, L. I., appeared yesterday morning before Supreme Court Justice Callahan, in Brooklyn, and asked for a change of venue.

Bitter Against Workers.

The bitter prejudice existing in the fashionable suburb against the defendants was cited by Henry A. Udohart and George Medalli, their lawyers.

Protests were also registered against the revocation of the bail of the fur leaders, and their jailing at Mineola.

Hearing Continued.

Decision was reserved by the court, and the hearing will be resumed this morning.

It was Judge Smith of Nassau County who sent the fur leaders to jail on Monday but it is William Green, Matthew Woll, Edward F. McGrady, Hugh Frayne of the A. F. of L. machine who have plotted for the past six months to get them behind prison bars.

Prosecutor Praises Machine.

The proxid of this frame-up was unmistakable in the court proceedings at Mineola Monday. In the presence of the prospective jurors, before the full courtroom, the district attorney, Elvin Edwards, demanded that the judge withdraw bail from the 11 workers who were to be placed on trial; in his fervid appeal to the court he stated that there is a fight going on between the American Federation of Labor and the Joint Board "whom these people represent," and "the Joint Board is using methods of terrorism which the American Federation of Labor is trying to do away with."

Withdrew Bail.

In spite of the fact that the case of Gold and Shapiro was ready for trial, which had been set for this morning, Judge Smith withdrew bail from all the defendants and ordered them to jail.

Martial Law In New York.

What amounts to martial law was established in the New York fur market Monday and continued yesterday by members of the police force and the industrial squad.

When workers came to their shops in the morning, they found an officer posted at every door and if two workers stopped on the street they were quickly shoved on and told to keep moving.

This same guard was present at noon and at five o'clock, and during the lunch hour, Fanny Warshofsky, a member of the Furriers' Joint Board was arrested for distributing leaflets announcing a meeting of the shops in the building at 130 West 30th Street.

She was released when arraigned in Jefferson Market Court on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Reactionaries Aid Police.

With this open cooperation of the police force, the reactionary right wing forces of the A. F. of L. and the International Fur Workers' Union are proceeding with their efforts to force workers to registration.

When even methods of intimidation fail, they announce that certain shops have registered, whether they have or not.

NATIONALISTS TO ASK REPARATIONS FOR RAIDED CITY

Chen Wires Approval of U.S.S.R. Peking Note

1. Boycott of imperialist powers starts as retaliation for Nanking bombardment and blackmailing notes.
2. Nationalist government indicates demands for reparations for damages done by shelling and raiding will be made on imperialist powers.
3. Eugene Chen wires approval of action taken by U. S. S. R. following Chang Tso-lin's invasion of embassy at Peking.

SHANGHAI, April 12. — China called her most effective weapon against the foreign imperialists—the boycott—into play today.

Angered by the demands of the notes delivered by the powers yesterday and by the chronic violation of her sovereignty, the boycott was launched in Canton, Hongkong and in the native section of Shanghai today.

This move was voted by the nation-wide Anti-British League which was organized at a meeting attended by representatives of the Kuomintang, the Women's Association, the Tramworkers' Union of the International Settlement, the Telegraph Operators' Union, students of the Shanghai Uni-

MORE MINERS IN NON-UNION FIELD VOTE TO STRIKE

Pittsburgh Terminal Co. Begins Evicting

PITTSBURGH, April 12.— The great coal lockout continues unabated. The number of mines signing up to work thru the period of the lock-out is negligible. All proposed conferences between miners' union officials and operators' associations are at present either postponed, or admittedly hopeless as means of settling the struggle.

"Win the Strike"

The miners are beginning to rally around the fighting slogans of the "Save the Union" blue in the late United Mine Workers' election which has now become a "Win the Strike" idea, and concentrates on the task of getting the non-unions fields out on strike. The rank and file of the union realizes that only the extending of the lock-out into a general nation-wide coal strike will beat the mine owners and prevent the weakening of the union, but that strike would assure a victory for the men.

Daisytown local of the United Mine Workers of America at its last meeting adopted a resolution calling upon the district and international officers of the UMWA to proceed with the organization campaign in the coke region of Fayette and Green Counties.

The resolution also asks that the local unions adjacent to the unorganized coke fields and which are now on strike shall be authorized to elect a joint committee for the purpose of making a survey of the situation in the coke region and for the purpose of establishing preliminary connections in that region.

The local at the same meeting adopted a resolution demanding of the United States government to follow a llands off China policy.

CONFERENCE IN FIGHT TO AID THE FILIPINOS

Denounce Coolidge Veto In Strong Terms

CHICAGO, April 12.—The Conference for Filipino Independence, a national organization with headquarters here, has sent a letter to Messrs. Gabaldon and Cevara, resident commissioners of the Philippine Islands in the United States, wherein they state plainly that their organization defies the government in its attitude toward the Islands. They severely censure President Coolidge for his veto of the Philippine request to vote on the question of independence and add that "we stand with the Filipino people and against the United States government."

Rebuke Government.

The letter, addressed to the resident commissioners at the House Office Building, Washington, D. C., follows:

"My dear Commissioner:

"I have read with indignation the message of President Coolidge vetoing the bill for plebescite of the Filipino people on the question of independence.

"We wish to say that we know that the President's reason for not allowing a vote, is that the vote will go against him. We know this latest repressive act is the culmination of a whole series, pointing to the preservation of American Imperialist rule in the Philippine Islands. We know also that the Filipine people are demanding their independence. In the name of the Conference for Filipino Independence, an organization with local committees in the large cities scattered over the United States, I say to you that we stand with the Filipino people and against the United States government. All we can do to further the immediate, complete and absolute independence of the Filipino people, we pledge shall be done. Very sincerely yours, LUCY ANN WHITAKER, Sec."

Has Wide Influence.

The Conference for Filipino Independence is composed of loosely organized committees composed of active labor men, farmers and prominent liberals and has wide influence throughout the country. The national and local committees include Clarence Darrow, Robert Morss Lovett, Albert Coyle, Waldo Frank, Ernest Untermann, Scott Nearing, Professor Ellen Hayes, Manuel Gomez, President Frank Webber of the Milwaukee Federated Trade Council, Secretary-Treasurer Henry Teigan of the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party; Assistant City Attorney Richard Wiggin of Minneapolis, Jack Frederick of the International Association of Machinists and many others.

Urge National Conference

Plans are being completed for a national conference in the near future to take up the question of Philippine independence and to organize sentiment in this country to fight against the shameful imperialist policy of Wall Street and its minions at Washington and give aid and comfort to the Filipinos in their fight to drive from the Islands their oppressors.

Chilean Mussolini in Complete Control

SANTIAGO Chile, April 12.—With a two months "vacation" forced upon President Emiliano Figueron-Larrain, General Blanco, Chilian Mussolini, has established a complete dictatorship in Chile.

In addition to arresting Senor Xavier Figueroa-Larrain, brother of the nominal president and head of the Supreme Court, Ibanez has requested the resignation of Beltram Matieen, Chilean Minister to England. Judging by his success in the past, General Ibanez will get it.

Conservatives and liberals as well as Communists have suffered from the terrorism of the Ibanez dictatorship. Wholesale deportations have been among the results of his coup d'etat.

Plan Trans-Atlantic Flight.

Floyd Bennett, who flew over the pole with Commander Byrd, will try to negotiate the Atlantic in a non-stop flight to Paris next month, as pilot for the monoplane, "America."

Earl Carroll on Way To Jail; Wants His Wife Near Him There

Earl Carroll, knight of the bath tub is on his way to Atlanta prison where he will serve one year and one day for perjury.

Carroll broke down and wept yesterday after he surrendered to United States Marshall William Hoehi at the federal building here. Tears rolled down his face and he sobbed.

"I want my wife near me in Atlanta, when I'm down there," he cried.

Chinese Nationalists Announce Demands

versity and many others.

The following resolutions were adopted at the meeting:

1.—That all organizations affiliated with the league carry on propaganda against British imperialism.

2.—That "actual steps be taken to examine British merchandise beginning next week." This is interpreted by Kuo Tai-chi, Nationalist foreign minister here, as a precaution against the entry of arms.

3.—That the Committee of the Severance of Economic Relations with the British meet tomorrow. The committee will lay plans for the boycott, it is understood.

SHANGHAI, April 12.—The Nationalist government has expressed surprise that the imperialist powers have demanded reparations for the Nanking "outrages" without making any effort to fix responsibility or to estimate the damage done.

Protesting against the raids on Chinese territory by British airplanes, the cutting of Chinese military wires by imperialist troops and the advance of the British lines outside of the "international settlement," Nationalist officials intimated that they had claims of their own to make. A raid by British troops on the Great China University is also declared to be a violation of China's territorial integrity.

Beat Students.

The raid on the university occurred at 5 o'clock on the morning of April 9th, when, a protest addressed to the British consul general says, 200 British soldiers equipped with field guns, searched the building, beat students with the butt ends of their rifles, destroyed equipment and robbed the university of some money.

Scoring the raid as a violation of China's sovereignty and as a violation of all international law, the protest addressed to the British consul general says, "We must therefore lodge a strong protest and demand a guarantee that such a thing shall not occur again and demand full reparation for all damages.

Demand Apology.

"Furthermore, we must demand an apology for the desecration of our flag and for the British troops crossing the boundary into Chinese territory."

The note to the British consul general, sent by Kuo Tai-chi, Nationalist commissioner for foreign affairs in Shanghai, protests against British airplanes flying over Chinese territory as a violation of international law.

Chen Scores Peking Raids.

MOSCOW, April 12.—The Soviet foreign office today, received a telegram from Eugene Chen, foreign minister of the Nationalist government, giving assurances that "the government would take the strictest measures to prevent the international scandal, the atrocious outrage and the unprecedented insult to the sovereignty and authority of the Soviet government inflicted by Chang Tso Lin."

The message referred to the raids made upon the Soviet embassy continued by Peking police and troops acting under the orders of the Manchurian war lord. Chen's message added that "Chang Tso Lin, although a lawless robber, is nevertheless a Chinese."

The Soviet foreign office in its reply stated that it did not doubt "that the assaults and the robberies committed by the Peking police will arouse the highest indignation on the part of the Nationalists."

Soviet Congress Endorses Peace.

Fully endorsing the government's peaceful policy in China, the All Russian Congress of Soviets expressed the hope that it "would lead to greater friendship with the people of China."

A big demonstration against Chang's raids on the embassy in Peking was held today outside of the theatre where the congress met.

Cal Plans China War

WASHINGTON, April 12. — The perplexing question of what "measures" will be taken by the United States and other foreign powers in China to enforce the demands made upon the Nationalists—in the event the Nationalists' response to the powers' notes is unsatisfactory—occupied the attention of administration officials today.

China was again the most important subject before the cabinet at its regular Tuesday meeting.

Although the powers' notes concluded with a warning that "unless the Nationalist authorities demonstrate to the satisfaction of the interested governments their intention to comply promptly with these terms, the said governments will find themselves compelled to take such measures as they consider appropriate." There exists no agreement between the powers upon a course of action, it was stated here.

Britain Threatens Bombardment.

In the absence of a joint agreement or policy, the belief prevails in Washington that the powers will be left free to take such "measures" as they individually deem appropriate.

Britain has already hinted at a naval blockade of the treaty ports, and reprisals in the way of gun-fire upon Chinese cities.

Organize the Traction Workers

ARTICLE XVII.—BACK TO THE BEGINNING.

By ROBERT MITCHELL

The men renewed the battle against the Interborough with increased ardor and vitality. The leaders were not deceived by the circumstances, however. It would have been easier to fight on even without funds and without the support of the labor movement than to seek ways of getting the men back for a later struggle. But Lavin, Walsh and the others had the courage to face the facts realistically.

The plan was accordingly conceived of launching a general strike in order that the advantage might again be gained over the Interborough. This was done. Every detail and move of the proposed walkout was executed as announced. Suitable propaganda was secured even from the capitalist press. At the proper moment when the company in spite of its claim that "we are not worrying" was really pretty well worried, a move for peace was instituted.

The company again agreed to take back all the men. This was carried out. Every man who so desired was able to return to the Interborough. The leaders did not apply for their positions, however, since they had other work to do!

Immediately there began in earnest the task of organizing the men on the road. The odds which the leaders had to face in the process of organizing the workers were, if possible, even greater than those faced during the strike.

In the first place, organization had to be carried out in secret in order to protect the men against discrimination. This is always a great disadvantage and should not be resorted to except when absolutely necessary. More difficult still was the condition of having to work towards organization without funds and without the support of organized labor. The leaders of the movement, it is reliably reported, often went for days without sufficient food. Some of them sought part time work on buildings and in other trades.

During this time they were never left free from the attention of spies and company "bankies." Their homes were watched and their every movement reported. On several occasions some of them were arrested either for distributing literature to the men or for speaking to them on the job. Also the company instituted a reign of terror with the purpose of destroying the union.

In spite of these almost superhuman difficulties the union continued to grow until within two months, it is said three full departments of the Subway, two or three "L" and two in the Power House departments were completely signed up. In addition there was a lesser number coming in from the B. M. T. and the surface lines.

At this moment a new situation arose: The Amalgamated Association of Street & Electric Railway Employes of America whose representatives had remained on the scene now made an attempt to take over the new union. The prospect of dues was too much to resist. Now that the strike was over and the income of the union assured it was to be expected that an attempt would be made to get in on the second floor.

In the light of events which have since developed, it is important to note here that the men on the lines were at first entirely opposed to the move. Lavin and the other leaders consulted in person and by letter hundreds of the new union members. The memory of the inefficient manner in which the 1916 strike had been conducted, and the failure of the Amalgamated to come to the support of the 1926 strike were still fresh in their minds. But again Lavin, Walsh and the others did, not the easier, but the better thing. In spite of the incompetence of the old line labor officials, it is essential that the workers join with their comrades in the organized labor movement. The leaders of the new union were not long in recognizing this necessary principle.

Accordingly the men were at last won over and the original Consolidated became The Amalgamated Association of Street & Electric Railway Employes of America, Division No. 977.

The move as such soon justified itself. The men came into the union in greatly increased numbers. So much so that the difficulty was soon faced of preventing a new strike, now urged, it is believed, by some of the more impatient men of the road and even by some of the Amalgamated officials.

But the incompetence of the Amalgamated organizers again asserted itself at the first test.

The Interborough had applied for an injunction to restrain the formation of the new union. At the same time the leaders were being sued for $240,000 damages. This injunction should have been fought immediately and in the only way such an instrument can be defeated, by the mass power of the aroused workers in the labor movement. Instead the Amalgamated organizers chose to fight it in the courts from which, as we have already seen the workers have nothing to expect. Also they waited until the day before the injunction was to have been granted before taking up the issue.

Under pressure from the leaders of the local, the Amalgamated organizers finally attempted to secure some support in the Central Trades and Labor Council for the fight against the injunction. Numerous delegates to this body are witnesses to the fact that the chief representatives of the Central Trades and Labor Council tried in every way to sabotage action on this important matter.

Their support of Al Smith and their Tammany connections prevented them from truly serving the interests of the workers. One of the vice presidents of the New York State Federation of Labor did his best to refer the whole matter to a committee in which all action would have been killed. It was only through a rush of the militant Central Trades that any action was secured on the issue.

When finally the meeting to discuss injunctions was held, the grand joker of the occasion was the report of a bill introduced into the assembly to "regulate" injunctions!

More Miners to Strike In Non Union Field

Powers Hapgood and many local miners of Windber.

Miners from other parts of county, attended meeting representing Boswell, Ralphton, Bell, Hooversville, Garrett and asked speakers to organize rest of the county. Very likely spontaneous strikes will start in other sections.

Key Position

The Todd-Berwind-White mines are in the gateway of Somerset County to the North.

As Berwind-White goes so goes Somerset county, it was said in 1922 when the union drove into the company's big operations in the north of the county.

The Berwind-White mine struck, and the strike then rolled on like a snowball through the region till all the men of the Rockefeller Consolidation Coal Co., the Quemahoning Coal Co. and the rest were out also.

To Build Union

The United Front Committee of Windber miners which is leading the present movement seeks to enroll the men under the banner of the United Mine Workers of America.

The leaflets issued by the United Front Committee appeal to the miners as follows:

"Now Is The Time"

NOW IS THE TIME to demand your old wages of $7.50 a day, $1.28 a ton pick coal, and 86 cents a ton machine coal.

NOW IS THE TIME to demand pay for dead-work and fair weight on your coal.

NOW IS THE TIME TO ACT! If you wait until strike is settled it will be too late. The company needs now because the coal market is good and would not dare risk a strike, if you organize and send a committee to present your demands of UNION WAGES, PAY FOR DEAD-WORK and HONEST WEIGHT.

Evicting Unionists

COVERDALE, Pa.—Eighteen miners who have been most active members of the union received notices to move out of the company houses within 10 days time. This is the first step taken by the company in preparation for the opening of the mine under nonunion basis. The company is also building temporary barracks apparently for the purpose of accommodating the scabs which it intends to import.

Picket Library Miners

The union has not yet decided upon a course of action in the case which are owned by the Pittsburgh Coal Co. According to orders from the sheriff no more than 4 pickets are allowed at a time and these must not come within one-half mile limit from the scab mines.

"Hands Off China" Meet at San Jose

SAN JOSE, Calif., April 12.—Under the auspices of the Workers' Educational Club of this city, a large meeting was called to protest against foreign interference in China. T. S. Tolanc, Chinese students at Stanford University of Palo Alto, and editor of the Chinese Guide in America, was the main speaker of the evening.

Many questions greeted the speaker at the conclusion of his remarks and in the speeches in which the audience participated, sympathy was expressed for the struggling masses of that distressed land. The entire collection was turned over to the speaker and in addition, a resolution of protest was adopted.

Mussolini Begins Trial of Zaniboni, One Time Adherent

ROME, April 12. — Major Zaniboni yesterday went on trial before a special military tribunal, recently created by a new Italian law, charged with an attempt upon the life of Premier Mussolini.

Major Zaniboni is charged with having engaged a hotel room opposite the Chigi Palace and to have planned to shoot Mussolini when he appeared on the balcony of the palace to make a speech. It is alleged that Major Zaniboni aimed to provoke an insurrection creating a military dictatorship after the death of Mussolini.

General Accused

General Capello and five others are accused of strengthening Zaniboni's resolve and of supplying him with financial aid and weapons.

Evidence was put in detailing Zaniboni's connections with the fascist movement and against it. Statements made by Zaniboni to the police showed that he had cooperated with Mussolini in 1922 for a peace movement to join the socialists and fascists in a peace pact.

Asked King to Intervene.

When this movement was checked by extremists in the fascist party, Zaniboni went to the king and declared he knew of a plot to forcibly cow opposition deputies in the chamber. He also called upon the king at the time of the Matteotti murder and declared that it was incumbent upon the crown to intervene. He said he offered to form a league of voluntary officers to defend the crown in case an attack should be made upon the monarchy.

Says These efforts

Zaniboni said his position became untenable and he withdrew to his native town where he became the butt of fascist persecution, volleys of bullets being fired at his house at night.

F. of L. to keep their hands off the Chinese situation, and the bureaucrats are glad to obey.

THE struggle taking place in China today is no ordinary revolution involving the attempt of an oppressed people to free themselves from foreign rule. It is a struggle between two social concepts. On one side are arrayed the brigands of the capitalist world whose aim is to hold China as a sphere of exploitation; on the other side we see the Soviet Union, like an oasis in the desert, giving aid and comfort to all oppressed peoples. In striking at China the powers are also striking at the Soviet Union, because they know that the Soviet Union is the nucleus of the world socialist state of the future.

Attack Against Mexican Soviet Embassy Exposed

The international capitalist reaction that is trying to incite raids of various Soviet embassies, after having staged the affair at Pekin in China, and at Paris in France, is now endeavoring to expel Mme. Alexandria Kollantai from Mexico City. As a pretext for a raid on the Soviet embassy in Mexico the kept press circulated the report that Bertram D. Wolfe, the American Communist, who was deported from Mexico in 1925 is now secretly hiding in Mme. Kollantai's home. A DAILY WORKER representative interviewed Comrade Wolfe at the Workers School, 108 East 14th Street, and he authorized us to state, paraphrasing Mark Twain, that the report of his presence in Mme. Kollantai's home in Mexico City is greatly exaggerated.

Corrects Times Report.

He also gave our representative a copy of a letter he mailed to the New York Times, refuting the story they carried yesterday morning to the effect that he was in Mexico City. The letter follows:

"April 12, 1927.

"Editor, The New York Times,
"239 West 43 Street,
"New York City.

"Sir:

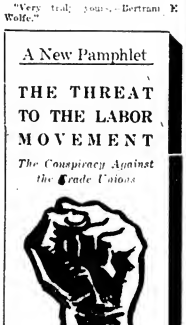
"On page 23 of the Times of today's date, which appears to be the page devoted to radio news, I find one of the most remarkable examples of salivation on record, in the shape of a special cable from your reporter in Mexico City to the effect that I am in hiding in the home of Mme. Kollantai, the minister to Mexico from the Soviet Union, in Mexico City. The matter appears, from the news dispatch, to be so serious that the Mexican government is taking under advisement a proposal to deport Mme. Kollantai for sheltering me.

"The only explanation that I can imagine for this remarkable discovery is the fact that I was deported from Mexico in June, 1925, for participation in a general railway strike movement then in progress. There is now another railway strike in progress in Mexico because of the grievances of the railway men left unsettled at that time and additional ones since accumulated, and apparently your reporter, or his source of information, seemed to believe that a railway strike in Mexico is impossible without my mysterious presence behind the scenes.

"I wish to assure the Editor of The New York Times that I am to be found, any hour of the day or evening, at the headquarters of the Workers School, 108 East 14th St., where a representative of your paper can visit me and ascertain the incorrectness of your cable with date of April 11. It seems to me that if Mme. Kollantai is to be deported from Mexico, under pressure from the American government, that a more compelling reason must be given than the fact that I am supposed to be hiding in the legation of the Soviet Union in Mexico City. My alibi is too overwhelming.

"I trust you will give such publicity to this letter as will enable such of my friends as are readers of The New York Times to know that they can still see me in the country of my birth.

"Very truly yours, Bertram D. Wolfe."



Sailor Framed Up; Active Fighter for The Labor Movement

PORTLAND, Me., April 12. — Danny Fallon, member of Seamen's Union, who was recently released from the Thomaston Maine prison after serving a term in connection with trouble arising from the 1921 seamen's strike, was again arrested on February 17, 1927 at Portland Maine, on an intoxication charge. Two other seamen with him, who had just come into port, were released. Fallon, however, was held over under $5,000 bond for the May term of the superior court. He is charged, now with "assault with intent to kill." Fallon claims that he is being framed because International Labor Defense literature was found on him. He is being held at the county jail.

SHIPSTEAD SAYS LATIN AMERICA SUSPECTS U. S.

Senator Henrik Shipstead of Minnesota, returning yesterday on the Panama Railroad liner Ancon, contradicted the rosy picture of conditions in the Caribbean presented by Secretary of War Dwight F. Davis, returning on the same ship.

"The people of the Caribbean will always suspect us while we have our marines down there," Senator Shipstead said, "I believe that we have a great opportunity for making friends in that area, and the time is coming when we will need friends."

When asked about conditions in Haiti, Secretary of War Davis maintained a discreet silence.

What's Happen in Washington

Washington Alive With Politics for Presidential Drive

(By A Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Republican party leaders are watching with keen interest the impending fate of two of their number, Secretary of State Frank Kellogg and President Coolidge's "Great White Father" William M. Butler, erstwhile United States senator from Massachusetts before being trimmed by David I. Walsh, democrat, and chairman of the republican national committee.

In Bad With Boys.

Both are in office solely because they are kept there by Coolidge. Both are venomously hated by republican leaders and their retirement will be an occasion among them for loud cheers and deep thoughts.

The causes for this widespread contempt and hatred among republican chiefs are interesting. They displse Kellogg because he was one of them for many years and they know only too well his genius for stupidities and they hate Butler because he is a rank outsider and will have none of them.

The sole topic of party politics these days among republicans is when Kellogg and Butler will be given the bounce. There are many who say Butler will be out by September 1. This is certain, neither will quit unless invited to do so by Coolidge.

Their jobs mean too much to them. Both are dissatisfied politicians in their home states.

Without their present positions they would sink into utter oblivion and both they are frantically desirous of avoiding.

Kellogg Stands Pat.

At a press conference the other day Kellogg was asked the inevitable question.

"I have no intention of doing so," he answered curtly.

Likewise Butler who, he was in Washington a few days ago, repeatedly denied that he had any intention of quitting. It is known that among the republican national committee there is much feeling against Butler, some he was defeated last fall he has been. Washington only a few days. It is said that his communications with the national republican headquarters have been no more frequent than they has been that is not at all frequent.

This is particularly true in the south. There, republican affairs are in the hands of Negro politicians who, as one southern democrat put it, "are not worth a damn."

In this connection it is interesting to note that for the past several weeks Coolidge has secretly been conferring with New York and other republican leaders from the south. His visit and Butler's tour through the west certainly have much bearing on his future plans.

There is no question but that Coolidge wants to run again. He will run if he can obtain the nomination without undue fight. If he has to fight for it he will quit. But he never had to fight for anything, simply because if he can't get what he wants without a fight he gives it up. So in this third term business, if he can get the nomination without a bitter struggle he will back the usual bull about traditions and so forth and quit. If however, Davies and some of the others, like Moses, of New Hampshire, take him and put up a battle, he will come out with some imposing statement about maintaining "sacred traditions" and give way.

Dawes Backs Lowden.

Insiders decline that Lowden is Dawes' stalking horse. They say that he is trying to force Coolidge's hand.

The western banking group of which Dawes is leader is now none too friendly to Coolidge.

Press Support Dubious.

As long as the administration press persists in maintaining the Coolidge myth—"great, strong, silent man in the White House," he will be able to make headway. But when he is unbeatable within the party, and perhaps in the country. But if such papers as the New York Herald-Tribune, The Philadelphia Public Ledger, The Kansas City Star, The Chicago Tribune, and other of the big journals start letting him down, he is through.

This summer Coolidge is going to labor strenuously to fix his political fences. He will no doubt take up a summer residence somewhere in the middle-west and put in the summer calling in strategic leaders, feeding them and pose them before the press, while assiduously lining things up.

His great problem is the coming congress. The senate will be hostile. The house practically evenly divided. It has ruined other third-term candidacies—such as Grant's in 1875—and it may blow up him. He has had little luck with congress even when republican by a large majority. With a hostile congress he will have even less—all of which is a matter of deep pain and anguish to him.

STIMSON TO GET CANAL PROJECT THRU NICARAGUA

To Delay Construction St. Lawrence Canal

(By A Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of War, who goes to Nicaragua as President Coolidge's so-called "peace" emissary, is not going so much for the purpose of patching up harmony in the war-torn nation as to put through a deal with the American supported puppet, President Diaz, for another canal.

Coolidge and the state department in making known Stimson's mission said much about his mission being one of peace and harmony. This is palpably a lot of bunk. Diaz is president solely by grace of the support of American marines and American money. If Kellogg had not sold him American army weapons and ammunition, and Wall Street banking houses had not furnished him the money with which to buy these supplies, he would be killed or driven out of Nicaragua in 24 hours.

Will They Need Diaz.

Diaz has been supported by the Coolidge - Kellogg administration strictly by American force of arms. Just why he was installed and being president has long been a controversial matter. Coolidge and Kellogg from time to time issued various alibis but now baronas apparent that the real reason is the proposal of a canal through Nicaragua. The Panama Canal is not meeting commercial demands. Army and navy officials have long insisted that for military purposes a second and auxiliary canal through the Isthmus was desirable.

Playing a role in the background is the determined demand by western farmers and manufacturers for the St. Lawrence-to-the-sea outlet. This project is being bitterly opposed by the railroads, who see in it a fatal blow to their domination of western freight movements. They have stalled it off for years, but the demand has become so strong that it is likely that unless they can create a diversion that the next congress may authorize the beginning of the waterway.

To Fool Middle West

It is obvious therefore that Coolidge and the railroads can develop a Nicaraguan canal scheme as a diversion on the St. Lawrence proposal. With Diaz the creature of the state department, and the national legislature under his control, the time is ripe to ram through a deal that will make the construction of a canal down there. The entire situation fits in with the revised of the Coolidge-Kellogg administration.

The Alibi.

The canal racket gave them an alibi for their imperialistic intervention in Nicaragua and will help to fool the grumblings of the liberal reactionary journals have indulged in concerning the Central American policy. Again, it is believed, it will put a quietus to the demands of the western farmers and manufacturers for the St. Lawrence canal, so bitterly opposed by the railroads.

Coolidge and Kellogg are confronted with the necessity of clearing their skirts in Nicaragua, before the next congress meets. Unless they do so, they are in for grief. The senate will be in control of the democrats and insurgent republicans who would like nothing better than venting their hatred on Coolidge and Kellogg. To meet this problem Mr. Stimson, an old republican war horse, he was war secretary under Taft, was asked to step aside and put through a deal with Diaz. It can be said right now that Mr. Stimson will be successful.

Will Be Trouble.

That the game is no sure is evidenced by the fact that the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater Association, which consists of numerous farmers, business and civic organizations pushing the St. Lawrence canal project, have notified Coolidge that any attempt to sidetrack their canal for a Nicaraguan one will be bitterly fought. They informed him that they would meet any such deal with reprisals, and it is probable that they can make their threat good over night. Coolidge revealed they have the courage of their convictions.

The Nicaraguan canal deal has been in the air for some time. Several weeks ago, officials of the army and navy made known some ideas on the matter, declaring that its realization was a long cherished ambition of the militarists. A week later, Senator Edge of New Jersey, reactionary republican, returned from a trip to central America and talked at length about the necessity of another canal.

Now Stimson is off as a so-called "peace" emissary. The under-surface information in Washington is that he will return with a canal deal in his pocket. Once this deal is underway, Coolidge can ship in a few more boatloads of mariner, Cuhenize the country, crush all opposition by murder or exile and be all set to meet the criticism of the next congress with the piously hypocritical statement,—"Protection of our canal property."

U. S. Gun Boats In China Cause Business Slump

(By A Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The Coolidge-Kellogg blundering in China is beginning to hurt the American business man.

The department of commerce in a report on Chinese trade finds that the United States has suffered severe curtailment and losses in its Chinese business. Last year China was America's eleventh best customer. The situation is such at present as to indicate that American business men will experience millions of dollars worth of losses.

Business Ends.

The commerce department reports that American business houses throughout China are closing their places and evacuating their establishments. The department does not comment on the reason for this, other than to observe that the development is quite recent. It takes little understanding of the situation to realize that not until recently has the Coolidge-Kellogg gang openly backed the British "forceful policy," and that this pro-British stand has caused the change in attitude toward Americans by the Chinese.

Up until early this year Americans on the strength of traditional friendship were not molested by the Chinese.

Chinese Hit Back.

With the gradual involvement, by crafty British diplomacy and the eager aid of our minister and military and naval officials, in the front put forward China, the Chinese have come to the conclusion that Americans, regardless of the past, were just as different now from other self-seeking foreigners. The result of this change of attitude has been staggering blows to American business.

If in these losses which in the long run will have most effect on our money, Rentonnary journals, jingoes and militarists, professional British tobacco, may shriek and cry intervention, but if it digs down into the money pocket of American business, it may reliably be sure that Mr. Coolidge, in spite of himself, will be forced to go slow.

Separate Notes.

There is very significance that the reports of returns have already had effect. It is being reliably said that the United States will not join Great Britain in a joint note to the Chinese. It is learned that the notes may be quite similar in tone and content, but they will be separate notes. This may not appear to be much on the surface, but if it really is a tremendous victory. There can be no question but that for a time Kellogg at least was all set to line up with the British, but for no other reason than that he didn't know what to do and felt that the British might have some program.

The commerce department's figures are highly illuminating. They are vivid evidence of the power of the Chinese revolt and the effectiveness of "economic intervention." In 1926 China bought $110,205,014 worth of merchandise from American manufacturers and in 1925 $94,442,189. China exported to the United States goods worth $143,146,165 in 1926 and $168,939,009 in 1925. In the first quarter of this year this business has sustained losses amounting in some instances to as much as 50 per cent.

Then too, even aside from losses on these imports and exports, American business will suffer other setbacks by falling American prestige.

Warren Wants Kosher Democrats for Juicy Jobs in Department

The first official act of Joseph A. Warren, who succeeded George V. McLaughlin as police commissioner by Mayor Walker, is a purge of 1,200 recruit policemen from the steps of City Hall. His second job was a search for kosher Tammany satellites to whom he wished to award jobs in the department carrying juicy salaries.

"I am having difficulty getting the men I want for deputies at a salary of $6,500 the city is willing to pay," the new commissioner explained. "Whenever possible I shall appoint organization men, not because I believe in party organization."

Explaining that $6,500 is too meagre a salary to attract the men he "wants and knows," the new commissioner proposes to abolish one deputyship and the position of confidential investigator to increase the salaries of the other deputies.

CASH vs. The Daily Worker

Do you know that one of the leading figures in the attack upon The DAILY WORKER is Jacob Cash? Do you know that Jacob Cash, the President of the American Patriotic Society, is at the same time the Vice President of the International Tailoring Company, one of the foremost foes of organized labor and a notorious enemy of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America? Do you know that Jacob Cash is spending hours of his time in the courtroom, and many, many dollars in his vulture-like eagerness to "get" The DAILY WORKER.

Why this ferocious hate against our paper? It can only be because this class-conscious employer recognizes that The DAILY WORKER is a menace to the security of Mr. Cash and his class.

As a class-conscious worker of America, as a militant follower of Comrade Ruthenberg, you must with equal clearness recognize the importance and power of The DAILY WORKER in the class struggle. You must rally with even greater determination behind your class organ. You must heed the clarion call of Comrade Ruthenberg to "CLOSE THE RANKS." You must support the fight for your paper. INSURANCE SWINDLE GOT APPROVAL OF COOLIDGE cannot lose a single dollar in a state supervised bank, scores of millions of dollars are lost every year in State supervised industrial life insurance companies.

The needlessly lost money that flows into the coffers of the "Big Four" through forfeitures is positively appalling. If it were money that was not taken from the feeling we lies of America one could say that one "views the situation with alarm" or "we note with disapproval." But this money is shredded and seized out of a class which is forced by a cynical land of financial hi-jackers—and that puts an entirely different complexion on the matter.

No official figures are available on the subject, but conservatively estimated "industrial" forfeitures in the "Big Four" are upwards of 50 million dollars a year.

Last year 5 million policies were dropped involving over one billion dollars of weekly payment insurance. These people do not like to incur a financial loss any more than the next man, but unemployment, illness and urgent lack of funds are powerful incentives and so the policies are allowed and the pile of "assets" keeps mounting higher and higher.

The Life insurance business, whether it be "industrial" or "ordinary," is based upon simple addition and subtraction. But it has been so confused by mathematical black magic that even the "best minds" have been taken in by its actuarial flimflam. At the mere mention of the word "insurance" a general nodding of heads begins indicating wholesale approval. "Industrial" life insurance company's have not been slow to capitalize this universal approbation little deserved as it is.

Cost Too High.

Life insurance is a good thing so is bread. But imagine what a racket there would be in a loaf of bread cost a dollar. This comparison is perfectly legitimate. "Industrial" life insurance is exorbitant in cost, ineffective as life insurance protection, due to the "persistency" of the whole "mutual" business is controlled with a clique of Wall Street financiers, who manipulate and misuse the "savings" of the 10 million workers insurees for their own private benefit. Otherwise weekly payment insurance is a good thing.

Charles L. Schwab Involved.

Later on we will deal specifically with these high finance-directors of the "Big Four," but just now as a hint as to the disclosures which will follow we will mention that Charles Schwab of the Bethlehem Steel type, he of Dollar a Year Fame) is a director of the Metropolitan Life at a measly salary of $15% a year. Now what would Charley Schwab be doing working for the Met for $15% while a good check in the home office gets $500 a year? But more of this anon.

In recent years, and Presidents from Cleveland down, have been very profuse in their praise of the benefits to be derived from life insurance.

Coolidge Okays "Big Four"

These impressive statements are done into attractive pamphlets—the last one showing the dour visage of the Thrifty Vermonter—and are distributed by the million. All of which is done in the name of Thrift and to minimize the sales of a type of life insurance of which only 3 per cent of all terminated policies each year are paid to claim—and only 1 per cent in endowment maturities!

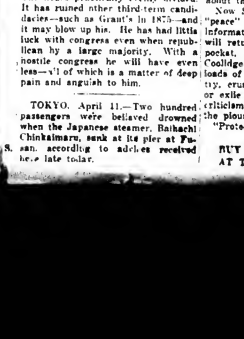
What chance, then, has poor Mr. Jones," when her agent tells her insurance is a "deep subject," and the best thing she can do is "buy this wonderful policy on faith"?

Accounts Faked.

Any life insurance policy whether it be "ordinary" (yearly premium) or "industrial" (weekly payments) consists of two debits and two credits on the debit side, we find death losses and expenses, and on the credit side there are premiums and the interest earned on assets.

After all claims and expenses have been paid and deducted from the gross premium income and interest returns, the balance, less a small "reserve" is surplus and should be rightfully distributed among the mutual policyholders. This, in theory, is all there is to the much vaunted science of life insurance. But this simple statement could be expressed in algebraic terminology by a $50,000 a year actuary, so that not even another actuary gloriful hook-keeper could understand him unless previously let in on the secret.

Smith's Opportunity.



Rates of interest, premiums and the compilation of death statistics are matters of simple addition. But business expenses have been made to do tricks of flight which would put the fabled magic carpet to shame.

During the past few years claims paid to policyholders have increased from one hundred million in 1920 to one hundred and fifty million in 1925.

Assets in the same period have increased from one billion six hundred million to over three billion six hundred million, and the amount of it not paid out increased 55—and the assets pyramided 110%. How this could possibly happen under an equitable and "mutual" system of operation and accounting is inconceivable and will bear looking into.

Will someone please page "Al" Smith, the good little debutante from Oliver Street and see what he knows about this swindle that has been perpetuated on no other than "his friend the workingman"?

How to Evade the Issue.

While workers everywhere throughout the world are incensed at the shameful act of the antediluvian Judge Thayer of Massachusetts in imposing the death sentence upon Sacco and Vanzetti, the prominent leaders and officials of the Socialist Party refrain from participating in that militant tide of denunciation that rolls wave after wave against the citadels of the manufacturing interests in Massachusetts who are striving to carry out the execution of these two workers.

Instead of exposing the palpable fraud of capitalist justice the socialists indulge in insipid lamentations over the demise of justice. Judge Jacob Panken issued a statement in which he said the "greatest blow to the respect of (sic) law has been dealt by the supreme court decision in the Sacco-Vanzetti case." This legalistic observation is followed by August Claessens, secretary of the local branch of that party, who urges the observation of July 10, the first day of the week "in which Sacco and Vanzetti are to be executed as a day of national mourning for the death of American justice." This is language that is even abjured by the capitalist press, and thus far the socialist spokesmen are the only ones in the country who have conceded that the savage sentence will be carried out on the date set by the malignant Thayer.

Intelligent workers have long ago ceased to have respect for that travesty known as capitalist law, but Judge Panken, being charged with enforcing capitalist law, naturally endeavors to perpetuate the illusion that law operates alike for the rich and the poor. Claessens, the slap stick comedian of the vanishing forces of yellow socialism, cannot be expected to be aware of the fact that justice exists only for the master class. Such an attitude would be too revolutionary, too Marxian. It would demand action instead of petty bourgeois platitudes.

Serious fighters for Sacco and Vanzetti indulge in no mournful dirges over the rotten and stinking corpse of justice, but will exert every ounce of energy to mobilize the mass power of the workers to save these victims of class vengeance from the electric chair and open for them the prison doors that they may again take their place in the labor movement.

An Imperialist Plot That Failed.

The desperation of the powers because of the definitely anti-imperialist character of the Chinese liberation movement was clearly manifested in the irresponsible bandit raid on the premises of the Soviet embassy in Pekin. Chang Tso Lin, the Manchurian brigand and his retinue of Russian white-guard hirelings would never have dared, on their own initiative, to violate the Russian consular property. He was the pliant tool in an international conspiracy to provoke the Soviet Union to war.

But the leaders of the proletarian revolution in Russia are too familiar with the chicanery of capitalist diplomatic intrigue to permit themselves to be incited by a plain bandit chieftain. Their sense of responsibility to the working class and to the Chinese nationalist movement is too keenly felt by them to fall into such a crude trap. Even if Chang Tso-Lin represented a government, which he does not, his act would not provoke the Soviet Union to war, which would immeasurably complicate the present situation, and lead to a world conflagration.

The affair is now definitely settled as far as Moscow is concerned. The responsible government of China, the Nationalist government, through its foreign minister, Eugene Chen, has officially expressed profound regret for the raid on the embassy made by the Northern hirelings of imperialism and promised to take strong action against Chang Tso-Lin's wanton violation of the sovereignty of the Soviet Union. This is a slap in the face for the imperialists who ordered the bandit raid.

But although the incident is closed for Russia and is now in the hands of the Canton government which, in due time, will mete out punishment to the bandit leader, the working class of Britain and of other nations involved in the plot are challenging and will continue to challenge the mad policy of their ruling classes who dared conspire to kindle flame that would start new world slaughter.

The Pekin plot has failed, but the capacity for underhanded treachery against the working class of the world and against the workers' and peasants' government of Russia is incalculable and the working class of this and other countries must always be on the alert to hurl their might against the war-makers who are so desperate they would provoke an unprecedented slaughter in which millions would perish in a desperate effort to maintain their power.

What Our Readers Can Do to Assist in Exposing "Industrial" Insurance Evil.

The exposure of the methods by which the "Big Four" companies—Metropolitan, Prudential, John Hancock and Colonial—plunder millions of worker policyholders thru "industrial" insurance schemes and pile up enormous sums of liquid capital which enable their owners to control other gigantic profit making enterprises, is the first attack on these leeches made in 20 years.

It has cost The DAILY WORKER a considerable sum of money and much energy to obtain this material. It is not being published merely to make public the startling facts which compose it. The DAILY WORKER believes that the co-operation of its readers a government investigation of these companies can be forced which will disclose still more abuses.

It is also possible to begin a movement for nationalization of insurance which can be linked up with other demands such as nationalization of mines, etc.

The DAILY WORKER does not expect to revolutionize American finance and industry by the publication of these articles but it does believe that if our readers will write to congressmen and senators from their districts and states, to the capitalist press, and use other publicity channels, that a demand can be aroused for a sweeping investigation and legislation against the "industrial" insurance evil.

We ask our readers to assist along the lines indicated so that the maximum results can be secured for our press and the American working class.

Blast Against American Imperialism

EDITOR'S NOTE:—The following declaration presented to the World Congress against Imperialism at Brussels, Belgium, February 1927, by the Latin-American, Chinese and American delegates, and later approved by the Philippine delegata who did not arrive until after the conference is important at this time inasmuch as President Coolidge has proven to the world that American imperialism does not dare permit the suppressed peoples of the Islands to express their sentiments for independence from the bestial regime this nation has set up in order to guarantee super-profits to Wall Street investments in that part of the world.

The document is as follows:

"We, the undersigned members of the United States, Latin-American, Philippine and Chinese delegations, declare it to be the task of all labor, farmer and other progressive forces in the United States:

"1. To fight side by side with the nationalist and national liberation movements of the countries under the heel of United States imperialist domination, for:

"a. Immediate, complete and absolute independence for the Philippine Islands and Porto Rico; self-determination for all colonies and semi-colonies;

"b. Abrogation of the unequal treaties making virtual protectorates of Panama, Cuba, and other countries of the Caribbean area;

"c. Withdrawal of United States military and naval forces from Caribbean, Central and South American territory, and from China; yielding up of all extra-territorial and other special privileges.

"2. To oppose all attempts to use coercive force against the Latin-American nations.

"3. To expose the systematically imperialistic character of United States foreign policy, beneath democratic-pacifist pretenses; to expose the Monroe Doctrine as a doctrine of imperialistic aggression in Latin-America.

"4. To give wide publicity to the outrages accompanying U. S. imperialism in Haiti, Santo-Domingo, and elsewhere.

"5. To carry on propaganda against imperialism not only among the civil population of the United States but also among the military and naval forces called upon to do the bidding of imperialism.

"6. To insist upon and support strikes against the sending of troops or munitions for repressive use in Latin-America and the Far East.

"7. To support the tendency toward Latin-American unity against United States imperialism; to support an intimate relationship between the nationalist movements of the Philippine Islands and the Chinese nationalist-revolutionary forces.

"In the face of the present United States aggressions against Mexico and Nicaragua, demands must be raised for:

"1. With regard to Nicaragua:

"a. Immediate withdrawal of U. S. military and naval forces;

"b. Recognition of the popular Sacasa government;

"c. Cancellation of the right-of-way privileges wrung from Nicaragua during a period of military occupation, for a U. S. owned canal across Nicaraguan territory; cancellation of the similarly secured naval bases.

"2. With regard to Mexico:

"a. Hands off Mexico! Support of the national-revolutionary conquests of the Constitution of 1917; opposition to the U. S. diplomatic and economic offensives undertaken in the interests of U. S. oil, mining and financial magnates against the efforts of the Mexican people to protect their national resources from foreign monopolization.

"b. Affirmation of Mexico's right and necessity to draw about her other countries of Latin-America against United States imperialism.

"We call upon the American Federation of Labor, with which the labor movements of Nicaragua and Mexico are associated, to initiate a movement looking toward concrete strike action by U. S. workers in the event that the military forces in Nicaragua are not withdrawn.

DAILY WORKER CLUB OF LOS ANGELES TO HOLD A CONCERT SAT., APRIL 16TH

By ROSE KAPLAN.
(Worker Correspondent.)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 12.—The Daily Worker Builder's Club of Los Angeles announces to the world and in particular calls the attention of the bay district comrades that it has reorganized its forces and means business from now on.

Some time ago an article signed by "Adonis" a Worker Correspondent of San Francisco, appeared in The DAILY WORKER entertaining our best builders and throwing shady suggestions on the sunny south such as "home town of Aimee McPherson." We wish to emphasize that Aimee McPherson is not a member of our club and though her application was suggested by some of our good friends, the club unanimously has turned it down.

At our last meeting, March 14th, a committee of five was elected to arrange plans for the Workers' and Peasants' Concert and Entertainment to be held Saturday, April 16th at 8:00 P. M. at Forester's Hall, 831 South Olive Street. This will be something that Los Angeles has never seen before. Workers' and peasants' struggles, feelings and life expressed in songs, music and drama. Artists will appear in their national costumes. Music of different nations and the all for thirty-five cents.

Splendid Program.

Comrades Rudolph Liebich and Douglas Robson, both members of the club have volunteered to organize this splendid program. The concert will be the closing call for the present Annual Lenin Drive. Besides other routine business of the meeting of March 14th, Comrade Fisher dwelt on the importance of the correspondents' class and Paul U. Reiss reported on the progress of the present drive in the southern part of the state. Comrades and sympathizers willing to participate in the correspondents' class are asked to get in touch with the Secretary, Queen Silver at 222 West Second Street or with the local representative, Paul U. Reiss.

All Sections Meet Beginning April 18

Section Membership Meetings will be held in all Sections thruout the city during the week of April 18th as part of the general campaign of the Ruthenberg Drive.

These meetings are the first step in the general campaign to raise the ideological level of the Party membership and also to promote the BUILD THE PARTY, RUTHENBERG DRIVE.

The Section Membership Meetings have been arranged as follows:

Section 1.—Monday, April 18th at 6:30 p. m., at 66 East 4th St.

Section 2.—Monday, April 18th at 6:30 p. m., at 100 West 28th St.

Section 3.—Thursday, April 21st, at 6:30 p. m., at 100 West 28th St.

Section 4.—Friday, April 22nd, at 8 p. m., at 81 East 110th St.

Section 5.—Tuesday, April 19th, at 8 p. m., at 1347 Boston Rd.

Section 6.—2 meetings, Williamsburg and Brownsville).

6-A & 6-B.—Tuesday, April 19th, at 7 p. m., at 29 Graham Ave.

6-C & 6-D.—Wednesday, April 20th, at 8 p. m., at 63 Liberty St.

Section 7.—Wednesday, April 20th, at 8 p. m., at 1940 Benson Ave.

Pioneer Convention in Detroit

Nothing Rough.

Sacco and Vanzetti stand in the shadow of the electric chair, world imperialism is organizing to crush the Chinese liberation movement, another world war is in preparation, 300,000 coal miners are on strike in an effort to secure decent living standards and recognition of the United Mine Workers of America. The union is threatened with destruction.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, spoke on April 10 to the Conference on Elimination of Waste in industry and pledged American labor's co-operation.

This is what the capitalist press calls "constructive labor leadership."

Play Ball!

By WALT CARLON.

The season has opened. The papers announce "Coolidge Despite Lame Wrist, Will Throw Out First Ball." A noble sacrifice! For the sake of Democracy Coolidge makes the sacrifice of the baseball season.

"Hurray for Coolidge!" Twenty thousand baseball bugs come out to see him do it. The flag is there. The Church is there. The politicians are there. The baseball fans are there. Everybody is there. My gawd how the money rolls in!

All over the country, the baseball season has opened. Governors, Mayors, Political Heros out the first ball. Hurray! "Ain't those guys democratic?" The flag will fly. The band will strike up "The Star Spangled Banner." One bug will yawn another: "Get up ya bum. Take ya hat off!" The American Legion will be there. The soldiers will march around the park. My gawd, how the patriotism rolls in!

Rogers Hornsby gets a hundred thousand dollars for his stock in the Louis ball club. "That guy didn't have a bean when he started!" Hornsby demurely accepts a salary which is half of what the President needs to keep body and soul at the service of the nation. "Hurray for Rajah!"

Babe Ruth demonstrates the earning power of matter over mind. He autographs baseballs and score-cards. He lends his blessings to peanuts, collar-buttons, suspenders and beef stew. He hits 'em a mile and knocks his salary over the head of Coolidge. "Boy, I tell ya, anybody can make money in this country!" The bugs come from six counties to see him sock that old apple. "Hurray for Babe Ruth!" The admission turnstiles turn up the bearings. My gawd, how the money rolls in!

The baseball season has opened.

"Ladies and gentle-men. The battery for today's game will be—For the New York Giants—Small Investment and Big Profit.

For Philadelphia—Patriotic Hop and Anti-Labor Bunco.

BATTER UP!"

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Suggestion For Worker Correspondents.

Editor, DAILY WORKER:

As The DAILY WORKER is the only newspaper that workers can look to for enlightment of their affairs, I would suggest to The DAILY WORKER correspondents the great need of keeping their readers informed on workers' conditions in their localities, especially on the unemployment situation.

The majority of the workers don't know about the deplorable conditions that exist in this country. Of course they cannot help but observe their own surroundings and needs, but in most cases the workers imagine that it is their lack of ability that keeps them from gaining better conditions. They don't seem to realize that the greedy monster of capitalism is hanging on their backs, keeping them from getting a decent livelihood.

When workers become better informed they will realize that all workers have the load to carry and instead of entertaining illusions about securing a better life by fighting individually, they will see the necessity of organizing and fighting their battles collectively. No lone soldier ever won a battle.

CLEVELAND, April 12.—"Breaking China," the movie of re-born Russia, which has been shown twice in the city of Cleveland, will be shown again at the New Lorain Theatre, 4601 Lorain Avenue, on Friday, April 15, beginning at 7:00 P. M.

This movie which has received an unusual amount of publicity because of the attempts on the part of the American Legion to have it outlawed in this state, has again been released by the Board of Censors.

Read The Daily Worker Every Day

Editor, The DAILY WORKER:

After a short rest since the production of "The Biggest Book in the World" by Axel Christensen, the Workers Drama League has again rallied its forces, and is working to produce "The Machine Wreckers" by Ernst Toller, before the summer.

There are still a few long parts for men to be filled, and some short parts for both men and women, which will require only one night's rehearsal a week. The rehearsals on Friday nights will be chiefly given over to the mass scenes.

This play should be of great interest to all workers, in that it deals with the theme of the organization of the workers for the control of machinery for their collective use and benefit. Toller shows that the machine when taken over by the workers and rightly used for the collective good, will become a new creator of life; when not rightly used, machinery becomes a power for destruction and exploitation, a thing without a soul or a conscience.

Toller's play can be set to rest the question as to whether art can also be propaganda. The "Machine Wreckers" is both great art and great propaganda.

Rehearsals for the play take place Wednesdays and Fridays at 8 P. M., at the studio of the Workers Drama League, 64 South Washington Square. Those who are interested in taking part in the production are welcome.

Painters Demand That Wright Act Against Grafters

Considerable comment is being made by progressive members of the Painters' Union, who are wondering what is being done about the graft case of their former officials.

The fourth month is now elapsing since the inauguration of a new regime in the office of the district council of painters in New York, with Thomas Wright as the new responsible secretary. The thing which made it possible to oust the former officials, Phillip Zausner and Charles Koenig, from their well entrenched stronghold, was the expose of the latter's maladministration and their defrauding of the council's treasury, estimated to be between $25,000 and $35,000. Two audits of the council's minutes and books proved the charges to be true.

Membership Aroused.

It is acknowledged among painters that the credit for the expose falls to Local 905 and its secretary Thomas Wright, which made it possible to challenge the Zausner regime, to oust them from office and to have Wright elected to the council as responsible secretary.

Be it understood, however, that Wright's election resulted because the membership was thoroughly aroused about the corruption within the council, and demanded that the successors should prosecute the ousted grafters for their fraudulent activities.

Want Results.

Of course, it is easier to accuse than to convict, and the machine of justice works slow (sometimes). No doubt the ousted gang is resourceful and cunning enough to try to prevent their conviction; but nevertheless, this is a clear case; the evidence of robbery is at hand and all that is necessary is to see to it that action is obtained.

No direct pressure has yet been brought against Wright, but it has been pointed out in THE DAILY WORKER, that Thomas Wright's record will be judged by his efforts to live up to the membership's expectation. If he should become lax in his duty and permit the grafters to escape punishment, then his days as secretary of the district council are counted. He was elected on the promise to clean the house, failing in this, it is stated, his reelection for another term is doomed.

The Freed-Eisman Radio Corporation employs 5,000 to 10,000 young workers, mostly between the ages of 17 to 25. They work under the most horrible conditions that can exist getting very little pay and working under very rotten, unsanitary conditions.

Speed-up System.

The speed-up system is one of the worst. Workers have to rush their heads off in order to work. In the first place, you have the "bonus." That is, if you make over a certain number of sets you get one of two cents extra for each set. At times it is impossible to reach the goal of making a bonus. Yet the foremen come over to you every few minutes and tells you (no matter how fast you work) that if you don't hurry up you will get fired. Sure enough, you do get fired if you don't make any bonus.

In the second place, you have the "foremen system," with about ten foremen to each worker. A foreman is assigned to a group of workers, then another is assigned to a group of these foremen. Another foreman higher than these, and so on. Each one comes over every few minutes to examine your work and find how many sets you have made, telling you to hurry up and make as many sets as our neighbor. If you have more sets they tell you to make a higher number up to 176, imagine, they expect you to make 176 sets at your operation. On this you have to put the number of each set you operate on. If there is anything wrong they check up and then they get somebody else.

Low Wages.

There are as many girls as there are boys and they do the same rotten work. Yet the girls get less pay. Some of the girls work harder than the boys in order to make a higher hours, because of the low wages. The girls are making between 30 and 35 cents an hour and the boys from 34 to 40 cents and about 5 cents more during the rush season.

Lunch.

At first we worked from 8 to 5:30 and one-half hour for lunch, from 12 to 12:30. Being that there are only two narrow stairways, it takes, at times, about ten minutes to go down, leaving only ten minutes to eat. The workers started in to kick. On the way down you could hear something like this:

"Give us an hour for lunch."

"A lunch room on each floor," etc.

Several days later the company gave us three-quarters of an hour for lunch, but we had to work fifteen minutes later every night, to 5:45. The workers did not realize that they gained practically nothing, but for the moment were satisfied. A week later they cut the lunch hour to 40 minutes.

At the exit a peddler stood with sandwiches, which were sold at ten cents apiece, not being worth two cents. He sold milk (if you want to call it that) at ten cents. The workers had to buy it or else walk two blocks and then be "docked" fifteen minutes. Most of them went up to work hungry.

Unsanitary Conditions.

The conditions in the factory are far from sanitary. About fifteen boys and girls are working on a bench where only five should work. When anybody tries to pass the narrow aisles, nine out of ten cases they tear their clothes or bruise themselves on the sets that are piled up in the racks far above your reach.

There nee absolutely no flue ventilations for the smoke from the soldering and poison gases to go into and you have to breath all that into your lungs. At the end of the day you feel sick and dizzy. Added to this, all windows are shut tight; the foremen won't allow anybody to open them on account of the draft (appiaususe, there is no draft, only they are afraid that things will fly off the tables).

The toilets are absolutely unsanitary and the windows there are also shut. You can hardly stay there more than a few seconds. There is absolutely no place to wash and the workers have to go home dirty. The stairs are too narrow to let so many workers out of the shop at once. In case of a fire the building cannot be cleared of employes in less than half an hour. If you are not satisfied, there are plenty of others to take your place.

Who Steals Our Tools?

You have to buy tools yourself and you can't buy them from anybody else but the company. The company charges, to say the least, about three times the actual selling price. For instance, a pair of long-nosed cutting pliers they charge 94 cents for, and you can get a pair for about 30 cents. You cannot return the tools after you are fired or layed off.

The company is not responsible for tools lost in the factory and they stolen at night. There are no workers in certain departments at night (as there is a night shift, also) yet when tools are left on the bench "you niwaya find something missing," as one of the workers said. It's funny—no workers there, yet when tools are gone they disappear.

A set fell on my foot, so I went down to the nurse (maybe). While wanting a man brought down a girl from the sixth floor who had fainted. A fellow from the third floor had his foot burned when a pot of solder tipped over. While being bandaged another girl came in. She looked very pale. She claimed that a gas pipe was loose in her department on the fourth floor and she felt sick and dizzy. All this happened in about three minutes.

It's easy to get hurt, but when slight must you just keep on working. You get cut at least 100 times a day and not bothey about it little realizing that blood poison is very easy to get from these scratches.

Searching Us.

The company has a right to search us. They do. Whenever we have any packages we have to open them for inspection. Our lockers are searched. Being that we had to buy a ten-cent lock from the company for sixty cents, the company has duplicate keys. We are being searched when we come in and go out. Why is it so? Is the company afraid that somebody might stick a radio set in their vest pocket and walk off with it? Or what? Does the company think that the workers are crooks? Or maybe they are afraid that somebody might want to bring in literature urging the workers to organize? To organize for a better livelihood!

Are the Workeers Satisfied?

The workers are far from satisfied with these cotten conditions. Some of the workers even go to the extent of organizing their individual departments. For instance in a certain department the workees have to make 70 sets in order to make a bonus. The workers make up among themselves not to make more than 70 sets and they carry it out. This is very good until the foremen finds out. When they do find out they just go ahead and fire all the workers at this department. They get a new set of workers who make 100 sets or more.

Organization Necessary.

There is only one way the workers can and should better their conditions and that is through organization. When all the workees would organize and put up their demands they would get them.

The demands should be as follows:

1. A 44-hour week and an 8-hour day.
2. Equal pay for equal work for boys and girls.
3. Real raises instead of the fake bonus.
4. Flue vevtiiations.
5. Wash-rooms with soap and towels.
6. Lunch room with food at cost price and one hour for lunch.

Globerman, Labor Candidate, States Political Policy

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 12.—Sam Globerman, Independent candidate for Board of Education who is endorsed by the Workers' (Communist) Party—of Los Angeles, has sent a circular letter to all unions and the Central Labor Council asking for their endorsement and announcing the platform on which he will run.

"Dear Sirs and Brothers: I ask the endorsement of your organization for my candidacy to the Board of Education. I am a member of the Cigarmakers Union for the last 20 years, and am President of Local No. 225 at the present time, and delegate to the Central Labor Council.

"My platform is strictly pro-labor. Organized labor has no voice or influence in shaping the policies of our school systems, which at present is used to antagonize the school children, even the sons and daughters of union men, against the labor movement.

No Consideration for Labor.

No consideration is given to organized labor in the construction of school buildings and the purchase of equipment. Union labor and the union label must be given the first consideration, in my opinion, by the school authorities.

Teachers must be allowed to join a trade union or hold views sympathetic to labor without fear of persecution. I am strongly opposed to bringing religious training and influence into the public schools, and to segregation or discrimination because of race, color, or creed.

Compulsory military training in the schools as a means to propaganda and preparation for war must be abolished. Child labor laws and compulsory school attendance laws must be strictly enforced.

Would Fight Open Shop.

If elected, I will do all in my power to fight against the openshop propaganda and influence of the Chamber of Commerce in the public schools, and to advance the cause and influence of Organized Labor.

At an open forum held by the City Club, Globerman outlined the progressive labor platform on which he is running as endorsed by the Workers' (Communist) Party.

Five Day Work Week Is Demand of the Lynn Shoe Workers Union

Lynn, Mass., April 12.—Lynn shoe workers are negotiating with manufacturers for the restoration of the 5 day week, which they lost several years ago. With the prevailing unemployment there is no reason why any of the shoe workers should work more than 5 days a week. It is expected that if the union is successful in restoring the 5 day week term that it will react to the advantage of the trade.

The bricklayers of this city have established an 8 hour day, 5 day week and at the rate of $12.00 a day. It is understood that a contract will go into effect on April 1st and will benefit about 80 bricklayers.

The carpenters have established a 44 hour week at the rate of $1.75 an hour.

Milwaukee Socialists Are Supported by the Capitalist Newspapers

MILWAUKEE, April 12.—That the socialist party here is no different than either the republican or democratic parties is again testified to by the election for the school board that just took place.

Victor L. Berger's wife was one of the socialists elected due to her support by the local capitalist press. The program of the socialist party is not a working class in character but is acceptable to any supporter of capitalism.

Many people who are elected by the local socialist party are expelled from the organization after they take office, their only interest in the party is being elected to office.

Seriously Burned On Boat.

YONKERS, N. Y., April 12.—Mrs. Macy Miller, 33, living in a houseboat off Saunder's Dock in the Hudson River here, was seriously burned today when an oil heater exploded in the kitchen of her floating home. Louis Crain, 65, a relative, also was badly burned when he tried to rescue the woman.

Air Service Increases.

BERLIN, April 12.—German passenger planes will cover 33,000 miles daily when the summer schedule is opened on April 18. This is 50 per cent. higher than last years' milage and six times that of four years ago.

Thompson Is Not Friend of Negro Or the Workers

CHICAGO—(By mail)—One of the methods used by Mayor Dever to antagonize the Negroes and at the same time hoping that it might be a basis for his victory, was to distribute leaflets with headings such as "Don't vote yourself Nigger Wages."

That is an eloquent example of the vicious methods of exciting racial prejudices among the workers of Chicago and utilising them as means to secure votes in the mayoralty campaign.

But this is also an eloquent testimony of the growing power of the colored electorate in the great industrial centers and of the fear of this electorate on the part of the enemies of labor.

Thompson Not Labor's Friend.

Wm. H. Thompson is by no means a sincere champion of the interests of labor, but he poses as such.

He is by no means a sincere champion of the rights of the oppressed Negro race but he is clever enough to appear as such.

He defeated Dever due to the support of the Negro voters. Dever was defeated because he has proven himself the champion of racial discrimination, oppression and persecution. But the great problem of welding together the great political power of the colored and white workers will remain. It is the most urgent problem of the advanced, most farsighted and intelligent elements among both colored and white workers to carry on a campaign of education.

Guard Helped Prison Escape, Is Captured

KANSAS CITY, Kan., April 12.—Charles M. Thompson, former guard at Waupun, Wis., state prison, was returned to Kansas today from New Orleans and placed in the Dyandotte County jail here.

Thompson disappeared seveeal weeks ago after he aided John Carroll to escape from prison in a shoe packing box, according to officers.

Thompson was assistant superintendent at the prison shoe factory.

Carroll's offer to split a $65,000 cache of negotiable securities was the inducement upon which Thompson gave his aid, according to federal officers. Carroll is still at large.

Dispatchees Record Increases.

CHICAGO — (FP). — Train dispatchers on the Detroit & Toledo Shore line are receiving $225 a month since March 1, a $30 raise, negotiated by the American Train Dispatchers Assn. Chief dispatchers get $245 a month, also a $30 raise.

Pere Marquette railroad dispatchees won a $10 monthly raise, effective since March 15.

Maybe No Atoms, Says Prof. Chas. G. Abbott

Science proceeds, not on religious dogma basis, by which certain things must be believed, whether or no, but by means of hypotheses, guesses at explanations that fit all the known facts. Now that the Einstein theory, and the tests of that theory seem to explain gravitation better than Newton's old, established doctrine, scientists seriously weigh one against the other, mass the evidence for each, and decide.

CHARLES ABBOT

The latest thing to be challenged is the atom. Prof. Chas. Abbott of Smithsonian Institute admits there is a possibility it doesn't exist. Most physical scientists think it does.

"THE NATION"—IT DEPLORES.

The current issue of The Nation (April 13) contains a number of articles of exceptional interest and value. The press has already carried the news of the cable which was received from C. A. Kennedy, a Chinese-speaking American, stating that J. E. Williams, the American missionary and other foreigners killed in Nanking were killed by retreating Shantungese troops and that the soldiers of the People's Nationalist army were in no way responsible. "It has been proved," reads the cable to The Nation, "that four other Americans were with Williams at the time the soldiers threatened. Williams drew his revolver and was immediately shot dead."

Imperialist "Rights."

In the International Relations section of this issue (usually the most valuable feature of the paper), Lewis S. Gannett, one of the associate editors, describes the origin and development of the "rights" of French, English, Americans and other foreigners in the international settlement of Shanghai.

Gannett, a keen student of China, points out that the "rights" which the troops of the foreign imperialist powers are today defending have been acquired simply by use and not by negotiation.

"To the foreigner in Shanghai," he writes, "today as throughout eighty years of the foreign city's growth, foreign might is right, and nothing else counts."

Baldwin Turns To The Left.

A report of the Brussels Conference Against Imperialism is contributed by Roger Baldwin, now enroute to Soviet Russia. Baldwin is surprisingly enthusiastic about the fact that "behind all the speeches and resolutions burned the fire of the class struggle." The article is interesting, but suffers from the Nation's characteristic inflated optimism.

Likes To Look At Bright Side of Life.

There are the usual number of editorial paragraphs "deploring" this, and "expressing gratification" at that. One is therefore not surprised to read that "President Coolidge has appointed five men of distinction to represent the United States at the Economic Conference to be held in Geneva in May. There are Henry M. Robinson, etc., etc. . . . The country is therefore assured of a . . . powerful delegation." How can one share this naive radiation? Henry M. Robinson happens to be a rabid labor-hating, open-shop bank president of Los Angeles. The other members are Norman H. Davis, assistant secretary of the treasury and of state in the Wilson administration, and . . . .

Interesting Features.

Henry Van Loon's cartoons continue to be dull; the Drifter is ever engaging; Mark Van Doren is still preoccupied with his rare Oxford reprints; and the Positions Wanted ("secretary seeks opportunity for European travel—cultured, etc."; "Young college man wants literary work—compensation secondary") remains one of the most poignant, dramatic, and intriguing departments of the magazine.

"THE NEW MASSES"—SIGNS OF SPRING.

"Something has happened to The New Masses since the last issue went to press. . . . It has died miserably, and gloriously been born again." So announce the editors of the magazine in the April issue.

Lack of Finance Capital.

The resurrection was apparently not in vain. The New Masses for this month is indeed revolutionary. Whether it is the result of a sudden sociological conversion of its editors or whether the basic cause for its insurgency is to be found in the New Economic Policy which calls for non-payment to contributors, it is difficult to say. But this much is certain: The much-maligned symposium on "the correct, proletarian, revolutionary attitude on sex" has happily disappeared.

How About China?

The article on the present situation in China for which the crowd in the New Masses bleachers have been calling so insistently is still missing. At the same time, however, the April number contains by far the most brilliant collection of radical cartoons that have ever appeared in the magazine.

An Historic Document.

A stirring challenge, "Where Are We Going?" by Henri Barbusse is translated by Mary Reed. This is a fragment of a pamphlet called, "An Appeal To The Intellectuals." Says Barbusse:

> "The intellectual world is going through a stage of uncertainty, of fumbling around, of restlessness. This restlessness is an organic reaction, the pangs of approaching death. . . . A change is coming. Let him ignore it who will."

For Fumbling Intellectuals.

And,

> "The principles of Marxism enable us to straighten out the disorder of our transition stage, to get at its causes and to recognize that it is the result of a perfectly logical sequence of events. It enables us to realize the role and importance of ideology in rallying together a substantial number of the restless spirits of today.
> "It must be said once and for all that parasites and moralists who dream of perfecting the human nature, who idolize love and kindness, are allies of the old order.
> "The conservatives may say: 'He who is not against me is with me.' But the revolutionists must say: 'He who is not with me is against me.'"

The Vanguard Press is to be commended for its revolutionary service by republishing Barbusse's masterful complaint in the United States.

George Grosz and Others.

Julian Gumperz, a former editor of "The Rebel Fahn," and at present in New York, has written an extremely interesting, though somewhat sketchy, account of the evolution of Georg Grosz, master caricaturist of the German Communists. "The New Ways Is Still Up" is a series of graphic snapshots of . . . petty minions, false brotherhoods, and other poorly organized schemes for holly class collaboration in the U. S. A. The photography was skillfully accomplished by Robert Dunn.

* * *

Mary Reed describes fascism in Italy, the white terror in Horthy's Hungary, reaction in France, social-democratic betrayals of workers in Germany, and bloodlines and over Europe.

"The Liberator."

Max Eastman, glorious Apollo, who just blew into town after a five-year wander-jahr, in Soviet Russia and very-southern France, has contributed to the April issue a somewhat mysterious poem entitled, "Morning Song of the Proletarian Poet."

The Assault on China

Wife . . Mother

You dreamed dreams . . . as a working-girl.

Then your dreams came true . . . you married. Out of the frying-pan into the fire! your slavery is now many times greater than it was. A shop girl gets organized. But what power have you, a wife and mother —isolated in the kitchen, alone in your struggle?

A STRIKE: perhaps you don't understand your husband, the father of your children. What is he striking about . . . starving his family? perhaps you dont see that he downs tools to make the boss give you and yours a little more bread, a little more life. You would drive him back to the shop . . . to scab! you don't know what organization means to the workers. An isolated kitchen-woman, you make it harder for your husband instead of helping to fight his class battles. Your voice nobody hears—except your husband . . . he hears a nagging wife.

And supposing you do understand a little.

The struggle to feed your children in strike time is a bitter struggle. For every pang of hunger your child feels you feel too. In the night, for every restless moment, every faint cry, you have an hour of heartache, tears . . . you would do . . . but what are you able to do? nothing!

* * *

OR THE BUSY SEASON with its overtime: the long evenings alone . . . the children too scarcely seeing their father . . . the exhausted man staggering in late at night his body broken with pain . . . out of bed at dawn still broken, to drag himself to the slave-pen . . . while your whole being cries out in revolt, . . . But who hears you—who?

* * *

OR HARD TIMES: no work! weary weeks, . . . despairing months! No work . . . anywhere — anywhere! The machinery the workers made . . . the factories they built . . . the mills, the mines, are there . . . all there. The raw material waiting to be used . . . the hates to work, ultimate conquerors for you and your child . . . shut . . . idle! The lessons that you must not eat, you, your children, your men. Plenty, plenty for you . . . made and piled up by the workers' own hands . . . But you—you starve, all of you!

You go to the corner grocer . . . the butcher . . . the baker . . . Torn like one going to the gallows . . . but you go . . . you must! you beg a little credit . . . .

And then they stop giving . . . poor slaves too, they are . . . Your children starve before your very eyes . . . and you have no power to help them. You would give them of your flesh to eat, of your blood to drink . . . but bread you cannot give them!

The fires of revolt burn fiercely in you . . . Hunger, despair, misery, torment! But you stand alone . . . to scab! you don't know what organization means to the workers, An isolated kitchen-woman, you make it harder for your husband instead of helping to fight his class battles. Your voice nobody hears—except your husband . . . he hears a nagging wife.

OR WAR TIME: you come to see that shut factories mean open guns: that bosses make war for fear workers will make revolution. You see your husband, your son, marched away to other lands to kill workers like themselves—to be killed. Your heart cries: If only I could do something—do something? but no one hears you . . . no one . . . .

Wife . . . mother! I am not talking to you . . . you do not hear me. I am talking to those who can hear me talking to you. I am talking to my comrade:—to those who can organize you . . . YOU! the fiercer half of the working class. . . .

I am talking to those who can and must make your cry heard. FOR UNTIL YOUR CRY IS JOINED TO OTHER CRY theirs is a voice crying in the wilderness . . . and your life a life robbed of hope.

No, wife! mother! unorganized, only conscious: I am not talking to you. I am talking to those who hear you when you do not hear yourself . . . when you are only a dumb ache . . . a dry wound . . . a sealed agony. . . . I am talking to the communists . . . the haters of wars, the enemies of exploitation, the fierce haters of the poor and down-trodden . . . the vanguard of the working class . . . the fighters, the doers, the all those. The raw material waiting to be used . . . the builders . . . the path-finders . . . the leaders . . . the factories they built . . . the mills, the mines, are there . . . all there. THE NANKING BOMBARDMENT AND ITS SIGNIFICANCE

By E. ETTLINGER

With the bombardment of Nanking and the feverish war preparations of the imperialists in China, the Chinese revolutionary struggle enters a new phase.

Hitherto the capitalist groups in China relied to a great extent on the various war lords to crush the Chinese revolution, and liberally supplied them with money, arms and men. With the capture of Shanghai and Nanking, and the collapse of the northern armies, the imperialists have lost all faith in the power of the war lords and have decided to come to open grips with the Cantonese army.

Two Wrong Ideas.

In this connection we must get rid of two erroneous ideas. The first is that the capitalist powers in China have experienced a change of heart and after four decades of the most ruthless exploitation and oppression are now chastened and will make concessions to the New China. This belief is held in pseudo socialist and liberal circles and is sponsored by the Chamberlain memorandum on China and the vague proposals of Secretary Kellogg of his willingness to enter into a conference with a united China. This ideology sedulously cultivated by the capitalist powers hides behind fair words their real policy of aggression in China.

The second mistake which we must guard against is that the capitalist powers are beaten in China and are now ready to withdraw their military forces and to abandon their system of economic exploitation in that country.

The real facts of the situation are that the imperialists in China are now openly preparing to fight by force the further progress of the Chinese revolution. That is the meaning of the Nanking bombardment, of the screaming headlines of war, Chinese atrocities, of the necessity of quelling "CHINESE MOBS" by steel, of the incessant anti-Chinese propaganda now filling the capitalist press. The basis of this campaign is to create a war psychology to develop the ideological campaign for foreign intervention. The sending of additional troops, the hatching of new entanglements, the setting up of barricades in the international settlements, the provocative tone of the imperialists in China all mean that the issue between the Chinese revolution and imperialism will be settled by force.

Atrocity Stories.

In order to hide the real significance of the struggle in China, that is to build at all costs their economic and political privileges to exploit ruthlessly the Chinese masses, the capitalist press is spreading the atrocity . . . are headlines about the massacre of women and children, about the fear of a foreign uprising, etc. What the imperialists are aiming at is to provoke an uprising of the Chinese which will give them an excuse to conduct war on a large scale.

In this new development we must understand the part being played by American imperialism. With the rushing of warships, marines and warships to China, with the American bombardment of Nanking and the defense of the international settlement at Shanghai, the United States government has dropped its pretense of friendship for China and has embarked on a united front against China. The policy of British imperialism, the policy of the mailed fist, of a strong display of force has triumphed and imperialism is endeavoring to close its ranks and arrange the Chinese nationalist movement before it becomes too powerful. Can it do this? The answer is, "Not if the Working Class of the World prevent it."

The Mass Front.

The fate of the Chinese revolution will be decided not only in China but also by the action the working class take to support the Nationalist movement. The theeie of Lenin that the fate of the World Revolution is inseparably bound up with the struggles of the exploited colonial peoples for freedom is clearly born out by the Chinese events. More and more the struggle becomes one between Capitalism and the forces of World Revolution. In order to assure the success of the Chinese revolution the working class must mobilize against the imperialist policy of intervention.

FOOTNOTES TO THE NEWS

By EUGENE LYONS

JUDGMENT.

For the great epic of the class struggle, if ever it is written, there is a prologue ready-made: Bartolomeo Vanzetti and Judge Webster Thayer facing each other in a courtroom in the town of Dedham, Massachusetts.

Judge Thayer on the rostrum of authority. A narrow, shriveled figure, mumbling dead words. Words cold and precise as corpses. Words disinterred from the morgues of statute and precedent. Words that evoke a musty ingrown past.

And Vanzetti in the prisoner's cage. Alive, farseeing, reaching out for words to express a new vision, groping for electric words to light up new vistas. Finding words that touch off the imagination and explode the walls of the narrow courtroom.

Behind Thayer, the dead accumulations of precedent and wealth and privilege, guarded by bayonets. A narrow world that is organized, rigid and unfeeling. Behind Vanzetti, the multitudes, as yet unorganized; the amorphous multitudes, surging forward and retreating and surging further forward, their live bodies and their live hopes against the dead past and its bayonets.

Thayer barricaded by statute books and surrounded by bayonets is yet a weak shrinking figure, frightened by his own black cowl, by the sinister memories of witch-burners, by the sting of light on eyes accustomed only to shadow. He rises to pronounce the verdict of death upon two workingmen and there is neither fire nor power in his pronouncement. Only the clatter of a dead formula.

"The jury did it," he mumbles, "the jury, not I. The jury and the law and the court—not I."

And Vanzetti standing, it seems alone, but erect and unafraid, speaking with the voice of millions. He too pronounces a death verdict. It is directed against the decaying past; not against the lonely frightened figure on the rostrum of authority but against the whole putrid foundation on which it rests. He speaks for millions of workers everywhere. He speaks for the millions who have been drawn to America from other lands and pressed into the mold of industry. For the despised and the intimidated aroused to a sense of their own invincible strength.

Vanzetti does not explain or apologize. He condemns with words of fire and challenges with the resonance of a million throats.

Thayer—old, worn, dyspepsic, bitter—has come to judge the men in the prisoner's cage. But he shrinks from their words and their gaze. The skeleton clatter of his formula is lost in the echoes of Vanzetti's verdict. For it is Vanzetti—calm, hopeful, eloquent in the awareness of the multitudes speaking through his voice—who does the judging.

The scene in the town of Dedham will bite deep and clear into the memory of mankind. The verdict will not be erased.

There Is No Ill Wind, Etc.—The disorders in China which are depriving that unfortunate country of the ministration of several thousand missionaries are bringing unexpected benefits to the peoples of other lands. Many of the missionaries, an A. P. cable advises, "are being diverted to the Philippines, Siam, Korea and Japan, where they will continue their efforts pending re-establishment of order in China." Great demonstrations of joy and feasts of thanksgiving will doubtless convulse these lucky lands as soon as news of their good fortune reaches them.

Millinery Patriots.—Maybe you haven't heard of J. C. Beckman. Neither did we until Carl Haessler sent us some of his stuff. But now we know. J. C. is vice-president of D. B. Fisk & Co., a millinery concern in Chicago. And he is a champion of American womanhood. There is something really olympian about his courage. Sooner or later the women of this great republic will put up a statue to him. We excerpt only few sentences but you'll get the drift:

"In former years," this millinery patriot declares, "we always looked to Paris to create our styles. . . . But a decided change has come about in recent years. . . . Our American girl selects a hat or dress that suits her taste and her type and doesn't care whether it bears the Paris stamp or not. . . . The American women . . . had ideas of their own, and they wanted to see them carried out. . . . This movement created such headway Gods word for a millinery revolution.—Eds.) that today American styles set the pace for the rest of the world. . . . The day is past when we wait for Paris to tell Milady what to wear. Now Milady decides for herself what is best suited to her and the ideals she represents, and Paris has to follow her. . . . She is simply wearing the creations of her own mind."

The Princess And The Papers.—What the American papers did to her is no fault of Miss Alexandria Kropotkin. If anything, she deserves our sympathy. She is a nice, harmless and insignificant woman well over 40 who was seized upon by the sob sisters a she entered the port of New York for the reason that her father was a Russian prince.

One of these wet sisters, Elizabeth Custer, has a piece in the New York Telegram which is really a masterpiece of misinformation. "Princess Kropotkin," she recounts, "has come to America to learn how to wear a crown," namely the crown of charm. A title does not mean much to her, since she has no "love of the pomp to which she was born." And towards the end, by way of a historical note, Miss Custer records that:

> "In 1915, when Kerensky established the provisional government the princess and her father, Prince Peter Kropotkin, returned to Russia from exile and shared in the destinies of Kerensky. In 1919 Prince Peter died and Princess Alexandria remained in Russia until 1921, imprisoned a good part of the time."

Maybe Miss Custer won't mind being set right on a few details. First, Miss Kropotkin is not really a princess. While in exile her father, the great anarchist theoretician, united his life with a Jewish comrade. Of this union Alexandria was born, and as the illegitimate daughter of a Jewess she did not inherit the title. Second, she is not really a Russian, having been born outside of that country and having remained outside of it almost all her life. Third, she was born into the poverty of a radical home and knew nothing of pomp. Fourth, having taken no part in the labor movement, she was never in prison either in or outside of Russia. Fifth, Kropotkin never shared the fate of Kerensky because he never had anything to do with Kerensky and remained in Russia after Kerensky beat it. Sixth, Kropotkin was not imprisoned after his return to Russia; on the contrary the ancestral lands, confiscated by the Czar were returned to him by the Soviet government and he lived there in peace and quiet. Seventh, the woman is not in exile, having lived outside of Russia anyhow.

Aside from these and a few more details, the Telegram story is O K.

Did you see the dispatches from Mexico, about the Cror wanting to deport Bertram Wolfe, who is in New York? It is another case (as Kenneth Durant points out) of labor fakers crying "Wolfe! Wolfe!"

HUNDRED THOUSAND SHANGHAI WORKERS STRIKE

Organizing New Local Of Miners' Union in Moundsville, West Va.

DILLES BOTTOM, Ohio, April 13.—A meeting of 300 unorganized miners was held here, just across the river from Moundsville, W. Va. The meeting was held in Ohio to avoid an attack by West Virginia police.

The miners took up a collection of $1685 to help pay for the charter of a new local, United Mine Workers of America.

Among those who spoke at the meeting were William Cooper, J. J. House and J. I. Powell, members of Local 1256, United Mine Workers.

Passaic Labor Asks For Help From City; Get Vague Promises

(Special To The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., April 13.—The unemployment committee selected by the conference of labor organizations held in Carpenters Hall, when it appeared before the city commissioners were told in good old fashioned political campaign time language, that "they would do what they could to improve the situation."

They presented the following program to the city commissioners: the formation of an unemployment bureau, equal division of labor in the mills, the calling of a citizens' committee to consider the entire question and the appointment of a representative of the United Textile Workers' Union in the poormasters' office.

The city fathers were very polite and promised to "do their best" on all points except that which refers to division of work, claiming they have no control over the mills' actions.

Situation Getting Worse.

Speaking at the Carpenters Hall conference, Gustav Deak, president of the district textile council of Passaic and vicinity, reported the situation as getting worse daily.

"The unemployment situation is not getting better. It's worse than it was last week. The mills continue to lay off workers. More than one third are now at work.

"The unemployment situation affects not only Passaic, but Garfield, Clifton and Lodi, and steps should be taken to help the unemployed in those cities, as well."

Workers Not Seeking Charity.

The workers were not seeking charity, Chairman Johnson told George Aldhouse, of the chamber of commerce after the latter had reported having conferred with the state commissioner Mellride, and been told that the state had used up all its appropriations, and with Mayor McGuire who expressed his usual passive interest in the welfare of the workers. The city officials' attitude, Aldhouse told the meeting, was that there were enough charitable organizations already in existence.

"These people are not seeking charity," Chairman Johnson, flung back. They merely ask a chance to earn their daily bread. What about contract work? We know there will be work opened up this summer. There's no good reason why this work could not be started at once. The city would thus save money in two ways, saving on contractors, and saving on money it would have to put out for relief. This work could be done under the supervision of the city's own bosses. They have enough bosses doing nothing but dodging each other. Why not put them to work?

"The relief given by labor was not looked upon as charity. That was labor solidarity—a case of workers aiding those on strike."

Earl Carroll Unconscious.

On receipt of a telegram from Greenville, S. C., telling of Earl Carroll's collapse and removal to a Hospital, his wife, Mrs. Marcel Carrol, fainted at the Earl Carroll offices and was attended by Dr. Edgar Wolf, the house physician.

At 3:30 p. m. Carroll was still unconscious. Marshal Hecht later said he was "quite certain" Carroll did not take poison.

WALL STREET BEHIND "BIG FOUR" INSURANCE SWINDLING OF WORKERS

Company Official Exposes Big Grafters; Governor Smith Silent on Huge Fraud

Previous Events of Insurance Exposé

The following is the fourth of a series of articles written for The DAILY WORKER exposing the fraud of industrial (weekly payment) life insurance. The attack centers on the "Big Four," i. e., the Metropolitan, Prudential, John Hancock and Colonial Life Insurance Companies. This powerful combine, supposedly "mutual," is in reality the most corrupt quasi-public service organization that ever disgraced a country. The "Big Four" insure upwards of 40 million American workers. Huge reserve funds, in reality the property of "mutual" policyholders are actually manipulated by and for the benefit of a crooked Wall Street gang of high financiers. Names prominent in the exposé are: Charles M. Schwab, Charles Evans Hughes, ex-Senator William J. Tully, Haley Fiske, Joseph P. Day and others.

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON

How often does one hear the cynical American business refrain, "I'm not in business for my health?" And when one has heard it frequently enough, the question naturally arises as to whose health the modern service-rendering Rotarian is in business for.

The "Big our" industrial (weekly payment) life insurance companies are continually prating about the "service" they render to their 40 million policyholders. The point is insistently stressed that they are "mutual" companies. "Every policyholder shares in the profits of the company," reads an announcement sent out by the Prudential.

Let us go back to 1905, the year that the "Big Four" bought their way out of the famous Armstrong Insurance Investigation. In that year they had a total of THREE BILLIONS of DOLLARS of insurance on their books. Twenty years later this insurance coverage had increased to Twenty Billions of dollars. It had, as will be seen, increased six and a half times.

Assets twenty years ago were 245

THE divergence American is just beginning to learn that there is such a place as China. But he does not know what all the fighting is about. Frederick Moore, Shanghai correspondent of the New York Times tells him that the Soviet Union is back of the trouble. If he is a one hundred per centerhe believes it. If he is not that, and does not read the DAILY WORKER he wants to be informed. And there are millions of American workers who want to be told the truth.

THE biggest news is coming from China today. There is the cockpit of the battle between imperialism and labor or between the economic system that is based on the exploitation of the many by the few versus the many led by a few of the many who wish to transpose things and establish a social order where the producers will dominate. Surely nobody will seriously advance the theory that the non-producers should rule the producers. Thousands of American wage slaves believe that United States gunboats are anchored in the Whangpoo River to protect American citizens from the revolutionary Chinese. If they knew that those gunboats were stationed there to protect the investments of Wall Street bankers they would be so enthusiastic about endorsing the belligerent attitude of the government towards China.

THEY don't. Thinking is not among the five leading industries of the United States. If the working class were addicted to thiluk there would be no need for a column of this nature. They are not. They have been trained to have their thinking done for them. The priests do it for them. The newspapers do it for them. I know people in this city who would do penance if they were compelled to read the New York Tribune instead of the New York World. For the special benefit of those who were not brought up in the catholic faith, penance means saying a prayer to

VICTIM OF "RED" HYSTERIA FREE AFTER 5 YEARS

U. S. Thwarted in Desire To Deport Engineer

The details of one of the most brutal examples of American post-war red-hating hysteria were learned last night by The DAILY WORKER.

Nicholas R. Kamisaroff, 14, a mechanical engineer, and temporarily living at 54 West 124th St., is now free after more than five years of confinement at hard labor at the New Jersey state penitentiary in Trenton.

Hysteria Victim.

Kamisaroff, at the time a member of the Novy Mir branch of the socialist party, was arrested in Jersey City on May Day, 1922, charged with "criminal anarchy." An active member of the International Association of Machinists' Union, Kamisaroff had been making talks before Russian workers at clubs, forums, and at street meetings.

Held Incommunicado.

Held incommunicado in $25,000 bail for more than nine months, Kamisaroff, was not permitted to communicate with friends nor to attempt to retain counsel. He was assigned to defend him a former district attorney of Sussex county, the county in which he was being tried.

Induced to plead "guilty" on the promise of the state prosecutor that he would receive "a light sentence, and maybe a suspended sentence," Kamisaroff drew down upon himself a sentence of from 14 to 7 years at hard labor in the state penitentiary.

Can't Deport Him.

Last April, according to Kamisaroff, inspectors of the U. S. department of labor visited the penitentiary and questioned him with the view to arranging his deportation to Soviet Russia, where he was born. When he was released from prison, after serving the minimum sentence, Kamisaroff was handcuffed and sent to the U. S. detention prison at Gloucester, N. J., pending his deportation.

It has been impossible to deport Kamisaroff to Soviet Russia, inasmuch as that government will not accept deportees from this country. The present lack of diplomatic relations between the two countries also make it difficult to exchange courtesies of this kind.

The government thwarted in this respect, Kamisaroff was finally released on March 10th.

In U. S. Many Years.

The victim of the Americanization program of the United States came to this country in 1906, when he was 25 years old. Since that time, and up to the time that he was railroaded to jail he was employed by a number of large corporations in this city, including the Mechan Engineering Co., Robert Howe Co., E. W. Blias, American Foundry and Machine Co., and the American Can Cy.

Storm Kills Spanish Sailors.

Demand Right to Bear Arms

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE CHINESE STRUGGLE

1.—Fighting in streets of Shanghai between right wing elements and organized workers, who demand arms for protection against employers.

2.—Soviet Union capital scene of great demonstration by workers against imperialist invasion into China. Commissariat of foreign affairs indicates soon will recognize Nationalist Government.

3.—Washington continues to rush transports, but meets with great dissension among even reactionary groups, who insist that England is using Coolidge as catspaw.

4.—Chinese Aid appeals to American workers thru DAILY WORKER to prevent Chang Tso-Lin's continued terrorism against Nationalist sympathizers in North China.

Chinese Ask Aid of U. S. Workers Against Terror Reign by Chang Tso-lin

In a cable from Shanghai addressed to The DAILY WORKER, the Chinese Aid Society appeals to American friends of the Chinese liberation movement to help save northern Nationalist leaders from death at the hands of Chang Tso Lin, Manchurian war lord. The cable follows:

Shanghai, April 12. — Li Tai Chow, Chinese Nationalist leader, and many students who have been arrested in Peking by Chang Tso-lin face execution. Their only crime is sympathy for the Chinese liberation movement.

Protest meetings are being organized throughout southern China. We appeal to our American friends to protest against Chang Tso-lin's terrorism; to demonstrate against the attempt of Chang, who is backed by the foreign powers, to drown the Nationalist movement in a sea of blood.

BRITAIN HANDS CHANG TSO LIN HUGE WAR CHEST

Pays 400,000 Pounds to North China Ruler

PEKING, April 13.—The first installment of Great Britain's reward to Chang Tso Lin for his raids on the Soviet embassy was paid in the form of a note for £500,000 sterling.

It has been definitely learned that the note was handed to Chang by the Shanghai-Hongkong Banking Corporation, which had in turn received it from the British inspector general of the Shanghai customs.

The situation at the Soviet consulate at Shanghai remains unchanged according to reports received here. The local British press continues to insist upon the occupation of the consulate and the expulsion of the Kuomintang from the settlement.

Oppose Intervention.

Denying the report that workers contemplated any attack on the international settlement, and asserting that the military preparations of the British were for offensive rather than defensive, the Shanghai Council of Trade Unions issued a public appeal protesting foreign intervention.

U. S. S. R. Spend 700 Million Roubles For New Mines, Factories

MOSCOW, April 13.—The Supreme Council of People's Economy of U. S. S. R. has published a list of new works and mills, mines and other industrial plants. The construction has begun or the foundation is being laid in the current year of 391 new works and mills for a total value of 694.5 million roubles, including six metallurgical, six electrotechnical, nineteen chemical, twenty-six textile and twenty-six wood working plants.

The largest amount of new construction in the current year falls to the share of the coal industry where the construction has begun of 226 plants, whose total cost will exceed 270 million roubles. In the oil industry seventeen new plants are being constructed, as well as the big oil pipe connecting Grosnyl and Tuapse. Important construction work has also been started in the glass and paper industries.

CONSERVATIVES OF WASHINGTON SPLIT ON CHINA

Many Dislike Coolidge's Trailing of Britain

By LAURENCE TODD.
(Federated Press).

WASHINGTON.—What does President Coolidge mean when he says, in the joint note of the foreign powers to the Chinese Nationalist government: "Unless the Nationalist authorities demonstrate to the satisfaction of the interested governments their intention to comply promptly with these terms, the said governments will find themselves compelled to take such measures as they consider appropriate"?

When the powers were about to pounce upon China in reprisal for the Boxer killings and lootings a generation ago, John Hay, then secretary of state, sent a note warning the powers that China must not be treated as a conquered country. Since that time American prestige in China has been shattered by—until Kellogg and Coolidge fell in line with British policy in this Nanking ultimatum.

Post Criticizes.

In an editorial expressing bitter disappointment at the failure of the administration to take a friendly and independent attitude toward China, the otherwise reactionary Washington Post says:

"Secretary Kellogg has made a serious mistake—a mistake that may have appalling consequences—in associating the United States with other powers in making demands upon the Chinese. The Chinese people, both north and south, cannot but regard the United States as arrayed with the other powers against them.

People Will Object.

"The United States in dealing with China has nothing in common with other powers. Its interests are not their interests, and its purposes are not their purposes. They may resort to force if they wish—the United States cannot resort to force without arousing a furore of protest from the American people."

When the White House spokesman was asked whether he would take joint or separate action, if the threat had to be made good, he replied that he anticipated that the Chinese would make a satisfactory response, and so he had not considered further measures.

Administration Bluff.

Administration press agents have spread the story that Kellogg and Minister MacMurray persuaded the British to abandon their plan of threatening an immediate blockade of Chinese ports held by the Nationalists.

Politicians and diplomats in Washington say that the fact is that Coolidge, Kellogg and MacMurray have been used by the British as agents for an attempt to ruin the Nationalists and to "save face" for the British in the Orient.

It is held significant that the joint demand upon the Nationalists by the British and their associates did not provide for investigation as to whether the Nationalists were in fact responsible for the outrages against foreigners in Nanking. It is also pointed out that if the Nationalists had wanted to kill the foreigners they could have exterminated them all within a few minutes. Instead, after the first mob violence, most of the foreigners went out unharmed.

Injunction Forbids Strike

COVINGTON, Ky. (FP)—Under a temporary injunction union carpenters, sheet-metal workers, bricklayers, hodcarriers and painters are forbidden to strike the Covington high school job. The sheetmetal workers' international is also named.

Soviet Union About to Recognize Nationalist Government of China

MOSCOW, April 13.—Early recognition of the Nationalist government in China by Soviet Russia is possible, the People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs said today.

Rumors are current here that Japan also contemplates early recognition of the Nationalists.

More than one hundred thousand workers gathered before the big theater where the Soviet Congress is in session to demonstrate against the provocatory raids on the Soviet embassy at Peking.

Speakers declared that the attempts of the imperialist powers to draw the U. S. S. R. into a war are doomed to failure. They voiced their full approval of the peaceful note sent by the Soviet government to Peking.

Kalinin, presiding at the congress, declared that the imperialist powers would find Russian workers ready to defend the proletarian state when the proper time came.

SACCO - VANZETTI DRIVE URGED BY BOSTON WORKERS

52 College Teachers Ask New Trial

BOSTON, April 13.—With the announcement that the Central Labor Union of this city will take action on the Sacco-Vanzetti case at a special meeting called for the purpose next Sunday, organized labor throughout Massachusetts is being mobilized in an effort to save the two framed-up Italian workers from the electric chair.

College Teachers In Protest.

Rev. Fuller today received a petition signed by Mary S. Wolley, president, and 51 members of Mt. Holyoke College asking him to appoint an impartial commission to investigate the vital facts in the case of Nicola Sacco and Bartholomeo Vanzetti. Hundreds of other messages,—cables, telegrams, and letters,—are continuing to pour into the executive chamber, urging a new trial for the two victims of a class verdict.

* *

Swedes Demand Justice.

The Swedish social democratic labor party today appealed to Gov. Alva T. Fuller to pardon Sacco and Vanzetti.

The Swedish message, received by radio and signed by Hansson Moelier of Stockholm, said:

"The Swedish social democratic labor party, the greatest political party in Sweden, joins with those who are convinced that Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent and have appealed to you to prevent the execution and thereby also prevent a deep offense of the general sense of justice."

Washington Fears.

WASHINGTON.—Police are now guarding the person and home of Secretary of State Kellogg, the department of justice offices and various other federal department buildings, because of fear that sympathizers with Sacco and Vanzetti may seek to demonstrate.

The psychology produced for the press by these police precautions is similar to that created by Atty. Gen. Mitchell Palmer in 1920 when he laid the basis for the Sacco-Vanzetti case by his "red raids" and tales of bomb plots. It tends to divert press attention from the wrong done to the prisoners.

CHINESE SEAMEN ISSUE CALL FOR COMPLETE STRIKE

Tell of Workers Shot By Right Wing

SHANGHAI, April 13.—Approximately 100,000 workers have answered the strike call issued last night to protest against the raids on the labor union halls by right wing elements here.

Organized labor is fighting for its right to hold meetings and to bear arms, as well as to protest against the raids on union halls and the execution of a number of labor leaders.

Cotton mills, street car lines and shipping have been completely tied up by the strike. The postal service, bus lines and stores have only been slightly affected by the strike thus far.

In an appeal to seamen and dockworkers to join the strike, the Seamen's Union says:

"Make haste, all Chinese on ships. The workers of Shanghai have obtained arms by the sacrifice of their blood. These arms have been taken

GOLD, TEN OTHERS TRIED TODAY IN KLAN STRONGHOLD

Brooklyn Judge Denies Venue, Bail Release

Release on bail of Ben Gold and 10 other members of the New York Joint Board of the Furriers and a motion to postpone their trial on frame-up charges of "assault" were both denied by Justice Stephen Callahan in Brooklyn yesterday.

The trial of the fur workers, the result of a conspiracy by the employers and A. F. of L. officials to crush the union which has repudiated their corrupt brand of trade unionism, will begin this morning before County Judge Lewis J. Smith at Mineola, L. I.

Judge Prejudiced.

Application of defense attorneys, who sought a change of venue on the ground that the circumstances of the case did not enable Judge Smith to remain unprejudiced, was denied by Callahan in the Brooklyn court who said that Smith "was fully capable of determining his own qualifications to preside at the trial."

Defense lawyers also expressed deep resentment against the handcuffing of Ben Gold, and the other leaders of the New York fur workers, whose bail, $10,000 each, had previously been revoked by Judge Smith at Mineola. They have been in jail since Monday afternoon. The action of the judge has been characterized by lawyers in this city as a most flagrant violation of legal procedure. Even in cases of the most serious kind, defendants are not denied the right of bail.

Like Sacco Case.

The remarkable similarity of the action of the notorious Judge Thayer in the Sacco-Vanzetti case and the prejudiced attitude of Judge Smith at Mineola is becoming more evident each day.

In both cases the judges, before and during the trials, abrogated rights such as refusing to hear relevant evidence, ignoring vital witnesses, besides at all times passing on their own fitness to act as impartial judges.

Walsh, Chief Counsel.

At the trial this morning, Frank P. Walsh will act as chief defense counsel.

WALL STREET BEHIND "BIG FOUR" INSURANCE SWINDLING OF WORKERS

million dollars. In 1925 they were Three Billion, Six Hundred Million. During these two decades the "Reserve" has pyramided 14 times.

Statistical Proof

These are significant figures. Here is where the gigantic swindle of industrial life insurance is fully exposed. It is on the question of the increase of assets that every life insurance official hems and haws.

"Ordinary" life insurance company assets have always increased in ratio with the increase of their business. If another hundred million of insurance went on the books of an "ordinary" company, the increase of assets was proportionate. Not so with the "Big Four"—as the above tell-tale figures show.

Expert Gives Lie to Big Four

According to William Alexander, secretary to the Equitable Life Insurance Company, a prolific writer on insurance matters, "the reserve represents only the present insurance liability of the company." How then, do the "Big Four" officials account for the fact that the figures of income over and above total expenditures were as follows during 1925:

Metropolitan	$220 Million
Prudential	172 Million
John Hancock	25 Million
Colonial	1 Million

It has been shown that these companies hold in "reserve" more than three and a half BILLIONS of dollars for their alleged "mutual" policyholders. This tremendous sum of money invested at 5½ per cent. will yield, and it does yield, more than sufficient income, to pay all claims, whether they be death claims, matured endowments or cash surrender values as they come due each year.

Big Four Steal Two Billion.

From the above statement it is apparent that the "Big Four" utilize the entire premium income for extravagant expenditures and to swell the already too large "reserve."

Figures for the past twenty years show us that assets double every five years. Continuing at this rate, in 1965 unforseen events being discounted for the moment, they will be over ONE TRILLION DOLLARS. And that is a lot of money even in the hands of a Wall Street clique.

If, as Mr. Alexander contends, the "reserve" is required "to meet the present insurance liability" it claims exist, it would appear logical that the assets should increase in ratio with the increase of insurance in force. But this is not the case.

If a quarter of a billion dollars was spent enough in 1925 to guarantee 4 billions of insurance, then, by the same token, assets in 1925 should be One Billion, Six Hundred Dollars. But they were not, they were THREE BILLION Six Hundred Million. More than TWO BILLION more that which was required.

What are the shell-game officials up to with this colossal sum of money?

Why do they guard it jealously—fiercely?

Why do they combat every attempt to inquire about its disposal?

Because it is through the manipulation of this enormous fund that they are content to work as directors for a nominal few paltry dollars a year.

This excess TWO BILLION DOLLARS belongs to the workers who have fallen for the smooth words of the "mutual" directors who control this powerful pile.

The concentration of such tremendous economic power in the hands of a small group constitutes a decided menace to the economic life of the nation.

Unless effective legislative measures are taken, this pyramiding will doubtless continue, because, the insurance saturation point is still a long way off.

The average worker's life is insured with the "Big Four" for the handsome sum of $400.

Scandal of Decade.

The enormous "reserve" is accumulated through three general resources: excessive premium charged for this petty hold-up insurance, forfeitures (money made on lapsed policies) and the interest earned on the "reserve."

If every policy matured for its face value, either as a claim or as an endowment, and if the excess earnings on the company's investment were returned pro rata to its "mutual" policyholders (as it is popularly supposed to do) this terrific pyramiding of assets would, so it seems, be impossible.

But the policies are not kept until maturity or death. A surprising small number do so. Only 1 per cent of all terminated policies are paid as endowments and but 9 per cent are paid as death claims. 75 per cent of all terminations are lapsed. As an industrial lapse is a total loss to the insurer.

If these figures in themselves, regardless of the exposures which will follow, do not constitute the smelliest financial scandal that ever assailed the nostrils of our citizenry then Charley Schwab is in business for his health and Judge Gary is a member of the Communist Party.

Naturally, the "Big Four" are very loud in voicing the good they do in "spreading the mantle of protection over the poor who cannot afford 'ordinary' insurance rendering Service where service is most needed." Possibly it was nonsense similar to this which impelled Abe Martin to remark, "What we want nowadays is less Service an' more of what we're payin' for."

Legislature Aids "Big Four."

Hiding behind technical and meaningless jargon such as "net premiums," "terminal reserve" and "select and ultimate methods" to which there are no clear and well defined meanings, the "Big Four" have written the insurance laws for the craven legislatures who have legalized this outrageous robbery.

Employing double back action bookkeeping which makes possible numerous cross entries in the drawing up of annual reports to their "mutual" policyholders, the "Big Four" secretly keep on piling up the "reserve."

Nationalization Only Cure

"Mutual" industrial life insurance companies, if they were mutual in spirit as well as in name, should give their policyholders insurance at cost. Gigantic assets, quite unnecessary, should be cut to a practical minimum and the balance returned to their mulcted members.

Dont worry, nothing of the sort will ever happen. These boys are out in business for their health.

Only one solution presents itself in the face of this gigantigated fraud —and that is State Ownership of the "Big Four." Lets go!

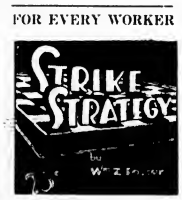
Big Business Plans Booster Confab

WASHINGTON, April 12 (FP). — Expansion of American trade and manufactures to meet the new impetial scope of American influence is the purpose of the 15th annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, which is being elaborately advertised to hold its sessions in Washington on May 3 to 5.

"American business," reads the official announcement, "sweeping forward under the play of new economic forces, finds it more necessary than ever to look into the future. What do changes that are taking place foretoken? How sharp is the break from conditions before the war? In what direction are we headed? Are we approaching more striking readjustments than we have seen in the recent past?"



The only mention of industrial relations in the program is that on "Wages in Relation to Costs," and "A Forward Look in Industrial Relations," promised by the manufacturers section, of which S. J. Broseau of New York, president of Mack Trucks, is chairman.

In the transportation and communications section, over which A. L. Humphrey, president of the Westinghouse Air Brake Co., will preside, one paper will be devoted to "The Fallacy of Government Ownership of Merchant Shipping."

Suspend Sentence On Dorn, Salesman Of the Means Case

The famous "Glass Cracker Company" case, the investigation of whose operations led to the conviction of the late Col. Thomas B. Felder and Gaston B. Means on charges of conspiracy to obstruct justice, came back into notice yesterday, when Federal Judge A. N. Hand yesterday afternoon suspended sentence on Joseph Dorn, convicted as one of the "high-powered salesmen" in the historic mail fraud stock scheme, which was alleged to have resulted in a $500,000 loss to investors. The alleged fraud scheme was worked from Altoona, Pa.

Pardoned By Coolidge.

With the suspension of sentence was extended that Samuel Salus, Samuel Rosenblatt and Harry Seidelman, all of Chicago, who were tried and convicted as the chief figures in the alleged fraudulent enterprise, have been pardoned by President Coolidge. Taking notice of the pardon, Judge Hand declared it would be "grotesque" to inflict a new sentence on Dorn, when the central ringleaders had been granted a prison term by Presidential order.

To Keep Out Of Jail.

Thirty men were indicted after an investigation into the glass cracker case, and, according to the government, the defendants engaged Felder to defend them. Felder, it was alleged, promised that they would never be brought to trial, and accepted a $25,000 fee for this favor, then enlisting the aid of Means, who was formerly a department of justice agent.

When the defendants were brought to trial and convicted, they informed the government of the alleged bargain between Felder and Means and themselves, and the conspiracy indictment resulted. Means at present is serving a term in Atlanta federal penitentiary. Felder was also convicted, but died before starting sentence.

Chicago Workers Now Participating in Three Strikes, Get Support

CHICAGO, April 13.—Sympathetic strikes to revoke the discharge of workers for union affiliation have spread from the millinery workers, who are still out, to the new federal union of Dental Laboratory Mechanics, Local 17,927. When employes were dismissed by the American Dental Laboratory and the Central Dental Laboratory because they had joined the local, 75 fellow workers walked out in sympathy. They are receiving the support of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

A strike of Amusement Park & Dance Hall Employes Local 17,921, another federal union, may follow demands for wage boosts. Ushers, gatemen, ticket sellers and allied workers are asking the increases.

Disarmament Under General Control Fought by America

GENEVA, April 13.—The troublesome question of international control of disarmament came up again today before the League of Nations preparatory disarmament conference, when the United States delegates announcing their opposition to such control.

No Control.

"The United States is willing to cooperate in seeking a solution of this problem," said Hugh Gibson, American delegate, "but I must state again that the United States can sign no convention which does not limit itself to pure and simple questions of disarmament, leaving the exception of the competition to the good will of the signers and their respect for treaties."

Don't Trust U. S.

In view of the fact that the United States is much the richest and potentially powerful nation, in a military sense, of all those represented at the conference, causes black looks of suspicion on the other delegates' faces. If the United States is to break promises in disarm, international control would be badly needed. And this is just what the U. S. representative specifically objects to.

A. & P. Must Employ Union Bakers

CHICAGO, April 13.—No union bakers will work for the proposed Atlantic & Pacific chain meat markets so long as the corporation refuses to unionize its existing bakeries. This is the ultimatum given the A. & P. when it sounded out Local 546 of the meat cutters on the possibility of union cards in its butcher shops. Chicago people are pretty well educated to the game of associating cards with sanitary shops and wholesome meat. They fear that the absence of the card means disease germs and questionable meat.

Reed Demands All Books of Sapiro In Detroit Suit

DETROIT, April 13. Attorneys for Henry Ford entered a stir at the [illegible] Aaron Sapiro libel suit today by filing a petition asking complete possession of the account books kept by Aaron Sapiro, while he earned [illegible] per year from American [illegible] in the last eleven years.

The petition was held under advisement by Federal Judge Fred M. Raymond after Wm. H. Gallagher, Sapiro's counsel, declared the books had been given to Ford representatives for examination.

Gallagher said his client would personally permit examination of the books [illegible] time.

The Ford attorneys, headed by Senator James A. Reed, declared in their petition that the examination was necessary to prove that Sapiro charged the farmers "exorbitant and unreasonable fees." They also filed an affidavit by Arvel E. Hosmer, an accountant, who charged Milton Sapiro, brother of the plaintiff, had blocked an "adequate examination" of Sapiro's books over the last week end.

Hosmer swore that he was not given access to the books.

In their petition, the Ford attorneys explained why they desired possession of the Sapiro books.

"The plaintiff has given in evidence figures purporting to be his net earnings from the years 1916 to 1926, inclusive," the petition declared, "and the only practical manner by which the truth of the plaintiff's testimony can be decided is by an examination of all of his said books."

Aaron Sapiro also denied the fee charges. The petition was signed by Senator James A. Reed, Stuart Hanley, Clifford B. Longley and Ward N. Choate, Ford attorneys.

Gallagher opposed the move. He said that Ford was permitted an examination only in the courtroom but that Sapiro was willing to permit an inspection elsewhere. He also filed affidavits from both Aaron Sapiro and his brother, Milton, denying the charges.

British Co-op. Members Rap China Policy Tho Officialdom Lauds It

LONDON, April 13.—Among the labor organizations which support the proletarian anti-war campaign of the left wing of the British labor movement there are also many local consumers' cooperatives and local organizations of the cooperative women's guilds, according to notices appearing regularly in the "Daily Herald."

Yet this gives but an incomplete picture of the sentiment of the masses of the cooperative membership, since the central units do not support the movement, and do not permit favorable sentiment to express itself in their publications. On the contrary, the official organ "Cooperative News" continually prints tendencious articles which consciously and systematically falsify the imperialist war policy of the Baldwin govergment into a peace policy, justifying the sending of warships and troops to China, and laying the blame, in advance, for any armed clash, upon the national-revolutionary Canton government.

American Economic Life

By WALLPROL.

Cheap Advice on How To Get Rich Quick

"The world's ignorance in the face of a real "service" giving the absolute and final lowdown on affairs economic, political and financial is simply astounding. It's getting so now that for a mere $100 a year, the groping seeker after the real Truth can have the lady for his very own. She will come to him in the guise of "confidential information" from Washington, "inside tips" straight from Wall Street and "economic advice" than which there is no more reliable, right straight from the pen of Professor Seasick, the renowned economist of Yalard University.

Bureau Gives Dope

The latest to favor Wallprol is the so-called Bureau of Business Conditions. For a mere $48 a year (special three months trial subscription, $10) the Bureau will give me:

1. Business Conditions Weekly Bulletin and Cycle Chart—52 issues.
2. Monthly Credit and Sales Bulletin—three issues.
3. Bi-Weekly Investment Bulletin—5 issues.
4. Monthly Trade Bulletin—3 issues.
5. Personal Service of the Bureau of Business Conditions.

(And a serviceable binder in which to file the Bulletins).

This redoubtable Bureau is operated as a branch of the Alexander Hamilton Institute, but other bureaus are connected with Harvard Graduate School of Business, New York University, Babson and a dozen other institutions. In general, these services will tell their readers what any well-informed person can find out for himself by following the half dozen most important economic and financial journals.

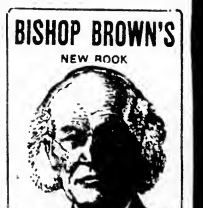
Gambling Stuff

In addition some of them sell "hunches" for playing the stock market, carefully prepared lists of stocks which are bound to rise, of others which are bound to go down, me sent to subscribers. Just what sort of legerdemain is used in developing these "hunches" Wallprol knows not, but certainly if any very wide number of speculators followed their advice, the main purpose of the bunch seems bound to be defeated.

The Bureau's findings are simply amazing. They puncture once and for all the claim of certain pious old codgers: rolling in gold, that they have done wealth only as "custodians for the people." The pitiful five and a half millions doled out for enchantine charity in 1926 was less than America's leading class turned out non-charitably in one day in the Florida frenzy of the same year. It is no more than a dozen millionaires would spend for the construction of private yachts or country estates. In the same year 207 millionaires grabbed $400,000,000 of the national income for themselves. At least seven of them could each have thrown in the total amount given charity in 1925 out of their income for the year.

And that settles the myth about the generosity of America's millionaires.

Economic Chart for 1927 Prepared Here



Redmond & Co., 31 Pine St., New York City, have just published a concise and very informative World Economic Chart for 1926. Condensed on a sheet of heavy paper three feet long are the statistics of finance, government and national economy of 38 important countries, including the Soviet Union. The tabulated information for 1926 is not available in any other form yet, so far as Wallprol knows.

Accompanying the chart is a brochure outlining the Redmond firm's purpose in publishing the chart. "The United States," it is remarked, "has become the world's largest exporter of capital and as such has contributed materially to the economic rehabilitation which has succeeded the chaos of the early post-war years. Export of additional capital as well as refunding of existing foreign debt will continue and become of increasing importance to us year by year."

America as the main prop of tottering capitalism in the past few years and the mainstay of the "rehabilitated" capitalist economy of western Europe is the reality seen by the optimistic Redmond people. Never has the need been so urgent for American workers, under the leadership of the Workers (Communist) Party, to hold back the ruthless arm of American capitalism.

2000 Consumers' Co-ops In U. S., Says League

Cooperative enterprises are spreading into old and more fields formerly entirely dominated by private enterprises, the Cooperative League states.

"Today there are approximately 2000 consumers' enterprises functioning from coast to coast," says the league, "and these include meat markets, milk and distributing, restaurant, bakeries, laundries, housing societies, credit unions, life and fire and pension insurance societies, book stores, libraries, garages, pool rooms, recreation centers, schools, etc."

The cooperative league of New York is the central educational union for the many cooperatives. The league offers correspondence course to workers in all parts of the country to prepare them for more intelligent participation in cooperative undertakings.

In addition the eastern league has raised funds for a cooperative training school to be held in New York from April 18 to May 28. This is its first full time school for intensive preparation of managers for cooperatives. Several scholarships are still available, the league announces. Similar schools will be held in Minneapolis and Superior.

WALL ST. TELLS HOW BANKERS OF WORLD COOPERATE

More Potent Than the League of Nations

One of the most questions of international finance and politics is the amount of "cooperation" among the ruling capitalist powers.

According to one theria, they have achieved practical harmony what with the governor of the Federal Reserve Board lobbedding with the head of the Bank of England, the two of them paying visits to the French financial and political lords and the whole mess of them collaborating with the Herr Schachtman of the German Reichsbank. Another thesis holds that national and sectional rivalries are too strong to permit effective permanent collaboration.

Confesses Ignorance

Waltpad withholds his opinion, candidly asserting that he doesn't know. But there is submitted herewith a report on the subject by Harvey Fisk & Sons, 120 Broadway, one of the big bookerage firms. Wallprol by no means underwrites the statements:

Organized Lending

Never before in the history of modern business have banking resources here and abroad been so thoroughly organized and integrated as now. The initiative in this international co-operative movement is to be credited to American and British banking interests. A yenr or more ago, the Central Banks of the Germanic peoples "joined up" and within recent months the Bank of France has been brought into almost complete cooperation.

The internationalization of credit which now has been effected appeals to me as being a more practical programme for international peace than such political organizations as the League of Nations.

Being strictly commercetal, this league of banks and bankers and business men throughout the world is non-political in character, and slowly but surely the days of the old diplomacy appear to be passing.

The highfalutin talk about "peace" is to be taken in a piewickian sense. What is meant is peace among the western powers to enable them to loot the rest of the world better. But all talk of peace between western capitalism and the rising workers and peasants' republics of the Soviet Union and China is so much hogwash and you can be quite sure that Harvey Fisk & Sons realize it.

Chinese Labor Pushing Ahead

Bring In the Shekals By Selling Cal's Nails

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Workmen engaged in repairing the White House have struck upon a unique scheme for increasing their weekly stipend. They sell nails from the job to tourists at four for $1.

With the nails from the old part of the structure, the tourists receive an interesting and intriguing story of their historical background. The nails are claimed by the carpenters to be more than 100 years old and of the old hand-made variety imported from England before nail making thrived in its own right in the United States.

The black spots on the nails are explained by the fact that the White House was destroyed by the British fire in 1814. Some of the workmen have built up a lucrative business with the souvenir sideline.

Immigration Departm't Compared to Ku Klux Klan by Boston Judge

BOSTON, April 13.—Federal Judge George A. Anderson has likened the tactics of the immigration department to those of the Ku Klux Klan when he rebuked federal officers during a hearing today in the case of Moy Ah Laf, a former Back Bay laundryman, fighting deportation to his native China.

The rebuke was delivered by Judge Anderson following testimony that the raid on which the Chinese was arrested was made upon his premises without a warrant.

Seeing the immigration inspectors, Judge Anderson said: "It shows no more law than in a Ku Klux Klan raid. Maybe a government can be carried on faithfully by people who have learned disregard of the fundamentals of constitutional liberty which we supposed we had established 150 years ago, but I am not convinced of it."

Three Cycles Seen in Railroad Stock Prices

If you're one of those workers who likes to speculate on the date of the next big crash, you can chew over the figures just published by the National Bureau of Economic Research in regard to railroad stock prices. The bureau's statisticians, after poring over innumerable musty tomes of the dead past, have discovered three big periods in railroad stock speculation, each of which terminated in the grand tumble of "values."

The periods are 1868-1875, 1876-1897 and 1897-1922. Since 1922 the stock prices have soared again to unheard of heights of which the end is not yet. The forthcoming tumble is bound to be a nasty one however, if only because the pyramid is so immensely greater than ever before.

from the workers by the forces of the right wing of the Kmomintang. To affect this latter they besieged workers' clubs and shot down comrades.

"Acting in accord with orders from the Shanghai General Labor Union we now appeal to you to leave your ships. You must be prepared to sacrifice your lives for the cause. This is a struggle of life and death for the workers. You must decide if your class lives or dies."

French Arrest Leader

Wang Shou-hua, chairman of the General Labor Union, has been attested since a plot by the French a corporation on the order "dead torpedoes" within the French concession, according to police reports.

Workers are reported to have rushed to the Municipal Press Compound with the object of recovering the arms seized by the Nationalist troops yesterday.

Then Will Ask Investigation.

According to dispatches received here, Eugene Chen, Nationalist foreign minister, will reply to the notes of the powers relative to banning unions on Friday and the reply will probably declare that the powers protest their charges. Nationalist especialists, it is said, will decidedly suggest an international inquiry.

In the meantime plans for the anti-British boycott are being mapped out in Shanghai, Canton and Hankow. The action of British officials at Hongkong who have declared the Office Workers' Union illegal has aroused a great deal of anti-British feeling.

MANILA, April 13. — American naval reinforcements continue to steam for China waters. The two nine layers Hart and Read, stationed here, have been ordered to China immediately. Five destroyers still remain at Manila but they will leave next week on their "annual summer cruise" in Chinese waters.

Negroes Protest To Coolidge on Army Color Ban

WASHINGTON (FP)—Secretary of the annual Race Congress of American Negroes have begun in a church in Washington, with discussion of political and economic problems of the race in the country. Perre Howard, republican national committeeman from Mississippi and an assistant in the Office of Attorney General Sargent, was one of the first day's speakers. Howard has been accused by Mississippi congressmen, in speeches in the House, of offering for sale to the highest bidder the appointment of federal district attorney in that state. These charges were subsequently made to special investigators for the Department, but Howard had left his job in Washington.

Worry Over Blacks

Delegates to the race congress were disturbed, on the opening day, by the "leakage" of the contents of a Negro from the Army War College. Facing Congress in the New York area. Their feeling was not diminished by the publication of a letter by a Negro soldier in New York to President Coolidge, denouncing this action by an army officer as a matter insult to the race.

"If the U. S. Army is to draw the color line against colored boys anywhere is not only a ridiculous outrage but wantonly unjust," this letter signed by Rev. W. Harris read. "The nation is putting rumors in the vessels of its peace when it proclaims this monstrous policy against the coming colored generation. We can say to the nation very frankly that this they will not stand for."

Predicts World War

"The white world is on the verge of war with the colored world. America has not a friend among any right."

Eight-Hour Day for All Labor Will Be Issue of Netherland Workers

AMSTERDAM, April 13. (FP). — Growing violation of the eight-hour day were protested by a recent special congress of the Netherlands Federation of Trade Unions, where it was known that "normal" working hours in some trades of 90 to 100 hours per week were not exceptional. It was under 'ed 9 voted to start a campaign to bring under the right hour law a number of additional classes of work including clerks and shop assistants, transport workers, cabbies, etc.

The president of the federation declared that ratification of the Washington eight-hour convention is an absolute necessity, "but this tremendous achievement will not have been finally safeguarded for labor until the whole of the working class is united in demanding it from the governments of the various countries."

Engineers' Militancy Brings Victory—The Government and Child Endowment—Hands Off China Decision at N. S. W. Conference—Duke and Duchess of York's Trip Boycotted—Building Workers' 40-Hour Week—Slap For Fake Industrial Delegation.

By J. RYAN

The Commonwealth Arbitration Court has at last given its decision regarding the Engineers case, for the forty-four hour week. The forty-four hour week has been granted. The Judges in delivering the judgments made it perfectly clear that they had been influenced by the possibility of industrial unrest, if the claim was not granted. As a matter of fact, the whole of the metal trades in N. S. W. had stated definitely to the iron masters, that they would not work more than 44 hours irrespective of the decision of the Court. This argument carried more weight than all the talk of the advocates during the six months that the case was discussed.

Last year in N. S. W. the Labor Government set, appointed a Commission to investigate and determine a basic wage that would ensure a reasonable standard of living for workers in this state. After about five months of enquiry, the Commission decided that a reasonable wage for a five unit family was 25/6 per week. This wage was not given to the workers; but a Child Endowment scheme was put forward.

The Government adopted the Child Endowment scheme, which is calculated to cost the employers 6½ per cent on their wages bill. The Legislative Council has not yet passed the bill, and there is still a chance that it will not become law.

There is a large section of the working-class, who are dissatisfied with the Child Endowment scheme, not because they dislike Child Endowment, but because they resent it being brought forward as an alternative to an increased basic-wage. The existing basic-wage is 44/4 per week. An increase to 45/6 would mean an increase of 2½%, whereas the Child Endowment scheme will only cost the employers 6½% on their wages bill, and the single men and childless married men will not benefit at all. Many workers regard the whole affair as an opportunistic concession to the owners of industry.

A Congress of N. S. W. Trade Unionists was held at the Trades Hall, Sydney on Saturday, February 19th. The Congress dealt with several matters, the most important be ing the Basic-wage, and Child Endowment, China, and the Delegation to Canton. In regard to the basic-wage and Child Endowment, the Congress left resolution exonerating the above point of view. A "Hands off China" policy was adopted and congratulations and fraternal greetings were sent to the Cantonese. It was also decided to send a Delegation to Canton to attend the Pan Pacific Congress on May 1st. A Committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements.

* * *

The "Hands off China" Committee has been carrying on great work. It even got a speaker delivers a lectrettf on this matter over the Labor Council's wireless station (2 K. Y), and on Sunday a combined demonstration is held on the Domain, also thousands of leaflets are being distributed urging the workers to resist intervention. A "Labor Volunteer Army" is being organized for the purpose of defending free speech, free press, and the right of assembly. A good deal of rubbish is being poured on this story, but we hope to have the army organized, when the struggle becomes keener.

* * *

At a mass meeting held yesterday of building workers who have been locked out for refusing to work more than 40 hours a week, it was decided to continue the fight. This resolution was decided on by an overwhelming majority, and reflects great credit on the men concerned. As they have been locked out since January 15th, and the "Labor" government has been fighting them tooth and nail. A few days ago the Premier (Mr. McGorgmack) stated openly that "The Government is fighting the Union on this matter." The executive of the Queensland branch of the Australian Labor Party endorsed the actions of the Government because the A. L. P. stands for Arbitration and Conciliation, and the building workers were using direct action.

I explained the whole position in my last letter.

$200,000,000 Loaned To Mussolini by U. S. Capitalists

WASHINGTON, April 14. (FP).—More than $200,000,000 of American money has been loaned to the Italian government or to business enterprises in Italy during the past year, according to Federal Reserve Board experts. Every dollar of these loans is at the disposal of Mussolini's dictatorship as soon as he lists a negotiated, because all business enterprises in Italy are within the fascist organization.

In spite of the fact that Prof. Salvemeni and other exiled liberal leaders have warned foreign bankers that when fascism is overthrown these loans to Mussolini and his gillerents will be repudiated, American bankers continue to pour money into Mussolini's hands. They believe that his lease of power will be extended indefinitely as long as the money continues to flow into his treasury. Moreover, American money awaiting investment is piling up in New York, and the bankers are tempted to take long chance.

INDIAN REPERCUSSIONS OF THE CHINESE REVOLUTION

By E. LIHAM.

THERE is a co-terminous boundary line of about one thousand miles between Burma, the easternmost province of the British Empire in India, and Yunan, the southernmost province of China. The communder in chief of the British army in India has recently developed a great curiosity about this boundary line. More than a month ago when the continued advance of the Nationalist Army in the Yangtze Valley and put a new complexion on the Chinese situation the British commander in chief in India made a certain change in his usual official itinerary of visits to the outlying military posts on the frontiers of India.

As a matter of a long and usual routine, the general staff of the British army in India has been giving exclusive attention to the north-western frontier of India, that is the boundary between India and Afghanistan. This time, however, the British commander in chief instead of going to the north-western frontier went to the Burma-Chinese frontier on the north-east. It was a visit of reconnaissance to find out the state of affairs on the indeterminate frontier, inhabited by a number of tribes, between Burma and Yunan.

THE reconnaissance visit has been followed up and a "Burma Frontier Expedition" has been got ready and it appears that it will be on its way by the end of January. The "Daily Herald" of January 14, says in reference to this expedition:

"This country—referring to the frontier between Burma and Yunan—nominally claimed as British when Upper Burma was annexed 40 years ago—has never been occupied or administered. Its tribes have been left in full independence. During the last year the Government of India has been displaying a great interest in this area and a great concern at the continued existence of slavery among the hill tribes. THE BURMA PAPERS, HOWEVER, REFRANKLY AVOW THAT THIS NEW INTEREST IS NOT IN CONNECTED WITH EVENTS IN CHINA. . . ."

This is, however, a repercussion in India of the Chinese events, only so far as the general staff of the British army is concerned.

The political repercussions are even more interesting.

IN the third week of December, a prominent British capitalists in Calcutta entertained the Viceroy Lord Irwin at a dinner at which a certain Langford James, described as the president of the European Association of Calcutta, gave expression to the folowing imperialist formula:

"Apart from all other considerations, I think we have a right to be in India on moral, but equally strong, grounds. The British people have very largely made India. Their continuance in the country is, in my opinion, necessary to the future welfare of the country."

THE entire nationalist press in India took strong exception to this formulation of the imperialist position with regard to India. Mr. J. N. Sen Gupta, the Swarajist leader, answered Langford James in the following terms:

"I feel it is my duty, as a member of the Indian National Congress, as the leader of the Swaraj Party in Bengal and also as the Mayor of the City of Calcutta, to record a note of warning. I say with all the emphasis that I can command and in full sense of responsibility that if Mr. Langford James and his countrymen contemplate the use of our style of which we had a specimen last Tuesday night it would not be long before the challenge of the European community was taken up by the people of India. An elementary fact which should not be overlooked by Europeans in India is that the total at the outside two and a half or three lakhs. Half a million men sufficiently desperate would be more than enough to give them such trouble as to make them realize their singularly precarious footing in this country. The Congress is pledged to non-violence and its members are sincerely anxious that the struggle for Swaraj should be carried on on non-violent lines. It point me to think that our efforts should be frustrated by gentlemen of the ilk of Mr. Langford James."

BUT the most significant part of Sen Gupta's rebuke to the spokesman of the British imperialists is contained in the following sentence:

"THE EVENTS IN CHINA OUGHT TO BE AN EYE OPENER TO THE MORE SANGUINARY SECTION OF THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITY."

This is the first time that a prominent Swarajist leader in his official capacity has referred to the events in China as a warning cloud on the horizon to British imperialism in India itself.

The nationalist press in India gave during December a more than usual amount of space to news from China. The editorial comments of the right wing section of this press were more or less colorless.

BUT "Forward," the principal organ of the Swaraj Party, has expressed itself on the Chinese situation more fully than the other nationalist papers. In its issue of December 18, "Forward" entitles one of its leading articles "Well Done China!" In the course of the article it refers to the success of the Chinese nationalists with undisguised "delight." It says:

"The reports from Shanghai and Hankow, we must confess, are most reassuring. The public will be delighted to learn that the Chinese nationalists have practically occupied the whole of the Fukien province which lies between the two most important "treaty ports" of Hongkong and Shanghai. . . . It is the atrocious Shanghai massacre that has roused 'the most pacifist people on the earth' against British imperialism. It is only natural that the Chinese nationalists should be seized with a stern determination to avenge the brutal shooting of innocent Chinese boys and girls by foreigners. The sympathy of all lovers of humanity and justice will naturally be with the Chinese who are determined to force the foreigners to relinquish 'extra-territoriality' and other privileges extorted at the point of the bayonet."

DISCUSSING the methods of the Chinese revolution, the "Forwards" says:

"One of the most potent instruments which the Chinese nationalists have pressed into requisition for breaking the backbone of British imperialism in China is the economic boycott. How powerful this instrument has proved has already been demonstrated at Hongkong. . . . With pardonable pride a Chinese statesman thus referred to the efficacy of the boycott movement: 'How powerful the strike is! We have never had anything like it in our diplomatic history since the famous opium war.'

"Though the boycott is no doubt one of the main instruments in the hands of Chinese nationalists for bringing the foreigners to their senses, it is not the sole weapon in their armory. They also appreciate the wisdom of keeping their gun-powder dry. The Chinese Army has been reorganized more or less on the modern basis and equipped with modern weapons. China has closely watched the process by which Japan has come to be recognized as 'a civilized' power worthy of entering into a friendly alliance with the most powerful imperial Government on perfectly equal terms. She has realized that nothing appeals so much to European nations as force. China has, therefore, steadily formed a well-drilled, well equipped army of nearly a million soldiers. Foreign intrigue and foreign gold have long held her in subjugation by exploiting prominent jealousy in China and by setting one nationalist Chinese group against another. China seems at last to have awakened to the consciousness of what does or might has been done in the case of national freedom by foreign energies."

FURTHER on in the article, Forward" seems to take the present neutrality of Japan, America and France as indicative of sympathy with the Chinese cause for emancipation.

Discussing the attitude which the Indian nationalist class in the Chinese "Revolution, the "Forward" organ says:

"The classes in India are orderlouts of a sinister and ghoulish civilization. Clear to the disciple of our Buddha, India is, therefore, naturally destined to play in the freedom movement in China. The outcome of the present struggle against the forces of foreign imperialism is being keenly watched by India."

The reference to China as "the disciple of our Buddha" as a whole commentary in itself on the ideology of Indian nationalism. "Forward" closes the article with the assurance that very soon the "last remnant of foreign domination in China will have gone."

It is the Atrocities of the Imperialists That Are the Issue in China

Imperialist hatred for the Chinese liberation movement has again provoked it into excesses which solidify sentiment against it.

The raid on the Soviet Union embassies and consulates and the continual provocation which is conducted by means of the "volunteer" corps in Shanghai patrolling the grounds of the Soviet Union offices, has drawn sharply the distinction between the imperialist nations and the Soviet Union for the Chinese masses.
